Congressional Quarterly Service is primarily for newspapers and broadcasters at standard rates based on circulation and radio time rates respectively. Services are also available at standard rates to other media such as general magazines, forums, and publications of all political parties, civic groups, educational groups, veterans organizations, trade unions and trade associations. A school and library rate provides no publication or broadcasting rights. Written or oral use, direct or indirect, is reserved for current clients who pay for such rights in their regular editions, broadcasts, newsletters, bulletins or other releases. Special permission must be obtained before CQ may be used in special supplements, hand books, etc. Congressional Quarterly sources must be indicated if lack of credit jeopardizes any part of copyrights to any of its material.

Congressional Quarterly reserves second and subsequent rights in its services. Hence clients are not entitled to use back CQ material in any way that would cause Congressional Quarterly Inc. to lose its rights and values in its own material. Non-clients wishing to quote or use material from any of its services must obtain written permission from Congressional Quarterly Inc., 1735 K Street N.W., Washington, D.C., 20006, 202 296-6800.

Policy Statement . . .

"By providing a link between the local newspaper and Capitol Hill we hope Congressional Quarterly can help to make public opinion the only effective pressure group in the country. Since many citizens other than editors are also interested in Congress, we hope that they too will find Congressional Quarterly an aid to a better understanding of their government.

"Congressional Quarterly presents the facts in as complete, concise and unbiased form as we know how. The editorial comment on the acts and votes of Congress, we leave to our subscribers." Foreword, Congressional Quarterly, Vol. 1, 1945 - Henrietta and Nelson Poynter.

ALMANAC CORRECTIONS

The following corrections should be made in the 1963 and 1964 CQ Almanacs:

1963 CQ Almanac, Page 648 (House chart) -- Under Illinois, Chicago -- Cook County, Rep. Rumsfeld should be given a Y (not an N) for House Vote 104. The party breakdown in the vote caption is correct.

1964 CQ Almanac, Page 655 (House chart) -- Under Michigan, Rep. Hutchinson should be given a Y (instead of a check) for House Vote 101. The party breakdown in the vote caption is correct.

1964 CQ Almanac, Page 727 (House Voting Participation chart) -- Under New York, Rep. Pike should have the score of 98 percent in both columns 1 and 2 (not 97 percent in each).

What is Congressional Quarterly Service?

How to Use This Almanac and Other CQ Elements To Check a Congressman's Record and Follow Legislation

Congressional Quarterly Service is a privately owned news research service which places the full facts on Congress and politics at the command of any interested newspaper editor, scholar, reference librarian or citizen.

Congressional Quarterly Service is objective and politically impartial. The sure guaranty of objectivity is that most of the principal newspapers of the nation, including those of every political persuasion, and most of the educational institutions and reference libraries of the highest standing have subscribed for Congressional Quarterly Service for many years.

Elements

Congressional Quarterly Service includes:

The Weekly Report, digesting in condensed magazine format Congressional and political activity for the current week - mailed every Friday night. It includes the full texts of Presidential press conferences, major statements, messages and speeches.

The Quarterly Index indexes by names and subjects the contents of all preceding issues of the Weekly Report for the year. It is the only current cumulative Index to the full range of activities concerning Congress and politics and to the actual words of the President.

The Almanac, published in the Spring and covering the previous calendar year, is a volume of about 1200 pages which distills, reorganizes and cross-indexes the full year in Congress, politics and lobbying for permanent reference.

Tri-Weekly News Stories of about 450 words are mailed Monday, Wednesday and Friday in mimeographed form suitable for publication. These timely, exclusive stories are accompanied by fact sheets which treat the subject more fully and are advance proofs from the forthcoming Weekly Report, for editorial subscribers.

CQ Query Service, available to subscribers by telephone, telegraph, mail or through personal visits, answers questions about matters of fact in CQ's field of coverage.

What the Service Brings

Currently and continually updated - well indexed for permanent reference:

Major issues fully explained - pros - cons - history - pressures - politics - outlook.

How Congress is organized for work - all members by party - seniority - committee assignments - leadership posts - full background of members in influential positions.

Politics and elections - the full analyzed details.

Investigations - fully and clearly explained.

The lobbyists - who they are - what they want - what they do about it - what they spend - what they get.

Court decisions and administrative rulings affecting legislation before Congress - explained in detail.

The President's press conferences, major statements, speeches and messages - the full texts, thoroughly indexed.

Presidential legislative requests and subsequent Congressional action catalogued.

The record of action on bills:

- Bills introduced - subject matter - sponsors
- Committee hearings - conclusions
- Floor action - debate - amendments - voting
- Results of Senate-House conferences

All roll-call votes of all members - pinpointed for each member to show:

- How often he votes
- How he votes on key issues
- How he votes on the President's requests
- How he votes with or against his own party
- Stand (or confirmation of desire not to take a stand) whenever a member does not vote.

Voting Yardsticks

Congressional Quarterly Service offers exclusive statistical analyses of roll-call voting that show:

Support of the President -- How frequently each Member voted "for" and "against" the President on roll-call tests of his domestic and foreign policy programs and leadership.

Congress and the Nation

In June 1965, the editors of Congressional Quarterly published a distillation of the 20 CQ Almanacs, summing up the legislative and political events of the postwar years. The book is called Congress and the Nation. It is available at $27.50.

Party Unity -- The frequency with which a Member voted in agreement with, and in opposition to, the majority of his own party on roll calls on which a majority of Democrats voted in opposition to a majority of Republicans.

Bipartisan Voting -- The incidence of roll calls on which the majorities of Democrats and Republicans agreed, and the frequency with which a Member supported, or opposed, the majority position on these votes.

Voting Participation -- Frequency with which each Member voted.

On The Record -- How often each Member voted, entered into "live" pairs, announced his stand, or answered the CQ Poll.

Conservative Coalition -- The percentage of each Member's votes with or against the majority of Southern Democrats and Republicans on roll-call votes on which the coalition lined up against a majority of Northern Democrats.

North-South Split -- The number of times individual Southern Democrats voted "with" or "against" the Southern position on issues that split a majority of Northern and Southern Democrats.

Federal Role -- How often each Member voted in support of a larger or a smaller role for the Federal Government on selected issues that presented a clear choice between the two alternatives.

Same-State Senators -- How alike or unlike Senators from the same state voted during the year.

A Congressman's Record

To gauge a Congressman's record, locate his name in the Index. Here are listed Congressional committees on which he served and the major legislation in which he played a significant role during the year. Page references to important investigations that he took part in also are included. For his personal data, see the "Ages and Professions" chart for his chamber.

Voting Record -- For a quick survey of the Congressman's voting on the crucial issues of the year, check for his name in the charts entitled "Key Votes."

For a complete record of his voting in any comprehensive field -- such as Agriculture or Foreign Policy -- check the list of Roll-Call Votes (p. 6) that were taken in the House or Senate. Then turn to the vote chart on the page indicated.

CQ lists every record vote for every Member of Congress. Senate votes appear together in chronological order, as do House votes. To find a Congressman's complete record on roll-call votes for the year, check all the charts for the appropriate chamber. Also check his performance by CQ's "Voting Yardsticks" (above).

Bills Sponsored -- Find out what bills he introduced. To do this, refer to the Index of Bills Introduced at the back of the volume. Measures the Congressman introduced will be listed by bill number under his name, together with the general field to which they pertained. For a summary of each bill's purpose, and the name of the committee to which it was referred, turn to the "Bills Introduced" section and locate, under each of the categories in which he submitted legislation, the bills he sponsored. There is a special "Bills Introduced" index.

To discover whether Congress acted on the bills he introduced, check the "Bills Acted On" section, which lists bills that received committee or floor action.

Past Record -- Check the Congressman's past record. Key votes for each year since 1951 appear in the Almanacs for those years. Key votes of 1945-1951 are in the 1951 Almanac, p. 722-43. The most significant roll calls for 1919-1944 are in the 1949 Almanac, p. 100-116. Other actions by the Congressman, beginning with the 79th Congress, may be found in the 1945 Almanac and succeeding volumes.

Checking a Bill

CQ Almanac offers these three main sections for checking legislation:

- Bills Introduced
- Bills Acted On
- Major Legislation

In the Bills Introduced and Acted On sections, information on legislation is broken down into Congressional Quarterly's eight regular categories: Agriculture; Appropriations; Education and Welfare; Foreign Policy; General Government; National Security; Public Works and Resources; Taxes and Economic Policy.

Bills Introduced -- Every public bill and resolution introduced during the year is listed under subject categories, chronologically by bill, and then resolution, numbers.

Bills Acted On -- Every public bill reported from committee or acted on by House or Senate during the year is listed under subject categories and divided into "Action Completed" and "Unfinished Business" sections.

Public Laws -- All public laws enacted during the year are listed.

Major Legislation -- The legislative history of major bills acted on during the year is presented in the following sequence:

The bill's number, significant dates in its passage through Congress, final public law number, if any.

Summary of the bill's primary purpose and most notable provisions.

Background and history of issues involved, keyed to previous Almanacs for past developments.

Committee testimony, votes and reports.

Floor debate pro and con, highlighting major arguments of both sides before passage or rejection.

All roll-call votes and principal amendments.

Conference proceedings in the case of differing House and Senate versions; outstanding points in dispute and how they were reconciled.

Presidential comments upon enactment of the bill.

Lobby pressures for and against the measure.

How a Bill is Passed

Note: Parliamentary terms used below are defined in the Glossary, which follows.

Introduction of Bills

A House Member (including the Resident Commissioner of Puerto Rico) may introduce any one of several types of bills and resolutions by handing it to the Clerk of the House or placing it in a box called the hopper. A Senator first gains recognition of the presiding officer to announce the introduction of a bill. If objection is offered by any Senator the introduction of the bill is postponed until the following day.

As the next step in either the House or Senate, the bill is numbered, referred to the appropriate committee, labeled with the sponsor's name, and sent to the Government Printing Office so that copies can be made for subsequent study and action. Senate bills may be jointly sponsored and carry several Senators' names; in the House each bill carries the name of one sponsor only; however, other Members may file identical measures. Bills written in the Executive Branch and proposed as Administration measures usually are introduced by the chairmen of the Congressional committees that have jurisdiction over the subjects involved.

Types of Congressional measures:

Bills -- Prefixed with "HR" in the House, "S" in the Senate, followed by a number. Used as the form for most legislation, whether general or special, public or private.

Joint Resolutions -- Designated H J Res or S J Res. Subject to the same procedure as bills with the exception of joint resolutions proposing an amendment to the Constitution which must be approved by two-thirds of both houses and are thereupon sent directly to the Administrator of General Services for submission to the states for ratification rather than being presented to the President for his approval.

Concurrent Resolutions -- Designated H Con Res or S Con Res. Used for matters affecting the operations of both houses. These do not become law.

Resolutions -- Designated H Res or S Res. Used for a matter concerning the operation of either house alone and adopted only by the chamber in which it originates.

Committee Action

A bill is referred to the appropriate committee by the House parliamentarian on the Speaker's order, or by the Senate President. Sponsors may indicate their preferences for referral, although custom and chamber rule generally govern this. An exception is the referral of private bills, which are sent to whatever group is designated by their sponsors. Bills are technically considered "read for the first time" when referred to House committees.

When a bill reaches a committee it is placed upon the group's calendar. At that time it comes under the sharpest Congressional focus. Its chances for passage are quickly determined -- and the great majority of bills fall by the legislative roadside. Failure of a committee to act on a bill is equivalent to killing it; the measure can be withdrawn from the group's purview only by a discharge petition signed by a majority of the House membership on House bills, or by passage of a special resolution in the Senate. Discharge attempts rarely succeed.

The first committee action taken on a bill usually is a request for comment on it by interested agencies of the Government. The committee chairman may assign the bill to a subcommittee for study and hearings, or it may be considered by the full committee. Hearings may be public, closed (executive session), or both. A subcommittee, after considering a bill, reports to the full committee its recommendations for action and any proposed amendments.

The full committee then votes on its recommendation to the House or Senate. This is called "ordering a bill reported." Occasionally a committee may order a bill reported unfavorably; most of the time a report, submitted by the chairman of the committee to the House or Senate, calls for favorable action on the legislation since the committee can effectively "kill" legislation by simply failing to take any action.

When a committee sends a bill to the chamber floor, it explains its reasons in a written statement, called a report, which accompanies the bill. Often committee members opposing a measure issue a dissenting minority report.

Frequently, the committee proposes amendments to the bill. If they are substantial and the legislation is complicated, the committee may order a "clean bill" introduced, which will embody the proposed amendments. The original bill then is put aside and the "clean bill," with a new number, is reported to the floor.

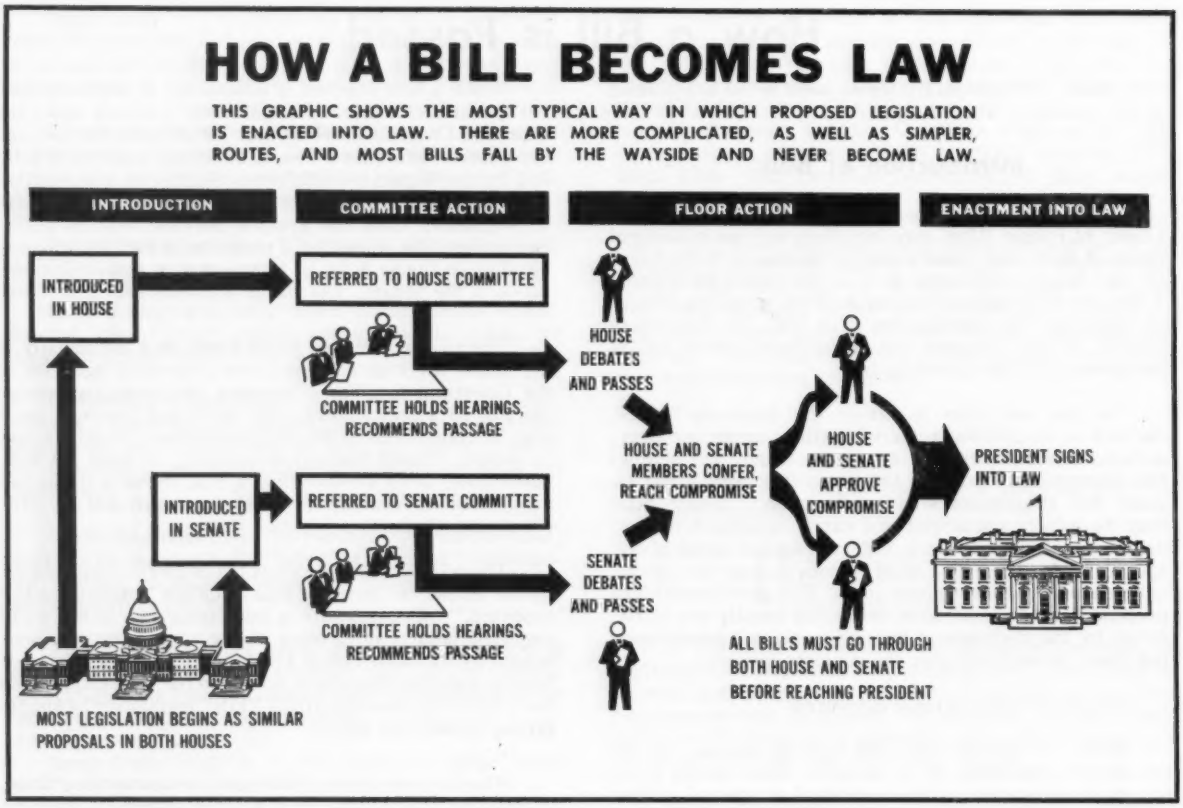
The chamber must approve, alter, or reject the committee amendments before the bill itself can be put to a vote.

Floor Action

After a bill is reported back to the house where it originated, it is placed on the calendar.

There are five legislative calendars in the House, issued in one cumulating calendar titled Calendars of the United States House of Representatives and History of Legislation. The House Calendars are:

The Union Calendar to which are referred bills raising revenues, general appropriation bills and any measures directly or indirectly appropriating money or property. It is the Calendar of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.



The House Calendar to which are referred all bills of a public character not raising revenue nor appropriating money or property.

The Consent Calendar to which are referred bills of a noncontroversial nature that are passed without debate when the Consent Calendar is called on the first and third Mondays of each month.

The Private Calendar to which are referred bills for relief in the nature of claims against the United States or private immigration bills that are passed without debate when the Private Calendar is called the first and third Tuesdays of each month.

The Discharge Calendar to which are referred motions to discharge committees when the necessary signatures are signed to a discharge petition.

There is only one legislative calendar in the Senate and one "executive calendar" for treaties and nominations presented to the Senate. When the Senate Calendar is called, each Senator is limited to five minutes debate on each bill.

DEBATE

A bill is brought to debate by varying procedures. If a routine measure, it may await the call of the calendar. If it is urgent or important, it can be taken up in the Senate by unanimous consent, or by a majority vote. The Policy Committee of the majority party in the Senate schedules the bills that it wants taken up for debate.

In the House, precedence is granted if a special rule is obtained from the Rules Committee. A request for a special rule is usually made by the chairman of the committee that favorably reported the bill, supported by the bill's sponsor and other committee members. The request, considered by the Rules Committee in the same fashion that other committees consider legislative measures, is in the form of a resolution providing for immediate consideration of the bill. The Rules Committee reports the resolution to the House where it is debated and voted upon in the same fashion as regular bills. If the Rules Committee should fail to report a rule requested by a committee, there are several ways to bring the bill to the House floor -- under suspension of the rules, on Calendar Wednesday, by a discharge motion or by use of the 21-day rule.

The resolutions providing special rules are important because they specify how long the bill may be debated and whether it may be amended from the floor. If floor amendment is banned, the bill is considered under a "closed rule" which permits only members of the committee that first reported the measure to the House to alter its language, subject to chamber acceptance.

When a bill is debated under an "open rule," amendments may be offered from the floor. Committee amendments are always taken up first, but may be changed, as may all amendments up to the second degree, i.e., a changed amendment cannot be further altered.

Duration of debate in the House depends on whether the bill is under discussion by the House proper or before the House when it is sitting as the Committee of the Whole on the State of the Union. In the former, the amount of time for debate is determined either by special rule or is allocated with an hour for each Member if the measure is under consideration without a rule. In the Committee of the Whole the amount of time agreed on for general debate is equally divided between proponents and opponents. At the end of general discussion, the bill is read section by section for amendment. Debate on an amendment is limited to five minutes for supporters and five minutes for opponents.

Senate debate is usually unlimited. It can be halted only by unanimous consent or by "cloture," which requires a two-thirds vote.

The House sits as the Committee of the Whole on the State of the Union when it first considers any tax measure or legislation dealing with public appropriations. It can also resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole if a Member moves to do so and the motion is carried. The Speaker appoints a Member to serve as the Chairman. The rules of the House permit the Committee of the Whole to meet with any 100 Members on the floor, and to amend and act on legislation with a quorum of the 100, within the time limitations mentioned previously. When the Committee of the Whole has acted, it "rises," the Speaker returns as the presiding officer of the House and the Member appointed chairman of the Committee of the Whole reports the action of the Committee and its recommendations.

VOTES

Voting on bills may occur repeatedly before they are finally approved or rejected. The House votes both on the rule for the bill, and various amendments to it. Voting on amendments often is a more illuminating test of a bill's support than is the final tally. Sometimes Congressmen approve final passage of bills after vigorously supporting amendments which, if adopted, would have scuttled the legislation.

The House and Senate vote both by untabulated voice votes and a recorded roll call of their names, to which they answer "yea" or "nay." The House also uses a standing vote, called a division, and a teller vote, when Members file up the center aisle past counters. The Senate also has a division, or standing vote. It does not employ the teller vote. House totals on division and teller votes are announced. Division vote totals in the Senate are not announced. Only a roll-call vote reveals the yea or nay vote of a Member.

After amendments to a bill have been voted upon, a vote may be taken on a motion to recommit the bill to committee. If carried, this vote removes the bill from the chamber's calendar. If the motion is unsuccessful, the bill then is "read for the third time." An actual reading usually is dispensed with. Until 1965, an opponent of a bill could delay this move by objecting and asking for a full reading of an engrossed (certified in final form) copy of the bill. After the "third reading," the vote on final passage is taken.

The final action vote may be followed by a motion to reconsider, and this motion itself may be followed by a move to lay the motion on the table. Usually, those voting for the bill's passage vote for the tabling motion, thus safeguarding the final passage action. With that, the bill has been formally passed by the chamber. While a motion to reconsider a Senate vote is pending on a bill, the measure cannot be sent to the House. Once a bill has been passed by either chamber, it becomes, officially, an "act," though it continues generally to be referred to as a bill.

ACTION IN SECOND HOUSE

After a bill is passed it is sent to the other chamber. This body may then take one of several steps. It may pass the bill as is -- accepting the other chamber's language. It may send the bill to committee for scrutiny or alteration, or reject the entire bill, advising the other house of its actions. Or it may simply ignore the bill submitted while it continues work on its own version of the legislation. Frequently, one chamber may approve a version of a bill that is greatly at variance with the version already passed by the other house, and then substitute its amendments for the language of the other, retaining only the latter's bill designation.

Often the chamber makes only minor changes. If these are readily agreed to by the other house, the bill then is routed to the White House for signing. However, if the opposite chamber basically alters the bill submitted to it, the measure usually is "sent to conference." The chamber that has possession of the "papers" (engrossed bill, engrossed amendments, messages of transmittal) requests a conference and the other chamber agrees to it.

Conference

A conference undertakes to harmonize conflicting House and Senate versions of a legislative bill. The conference is staffed by interested senior Members, appointed by the presiding officers of the two houses, from the committees which managed the bills. This charges the Members of one house, who are most familiar with the bill, with the duty of maintaining their chamber's position in the face of amending actions by the conferees (or "managers") of the other house.

The number of conferees from each chamber may vary, the range usually being from three to nine Members in each group, depending upon the length or complexity of the legislation involved. There may be five Representatives and three Senators on the conference committee, or the reverse. But a majority vote controls the action of each group so that a larger representation does not give one chamber a voting advantage over the other chamber's conferees.

Theoretically, conferees are not allowed to write new legislation in reconciling the two versions before them, but this curb sometimes is by-passed. Many bills have been put into acceptable compromise form only after new language was provided by the conferees.

Frequently the ironing out of difficulties takes days or even weeks. Conferences on involved appropriations bills sometimes are particularly drawn out.

As a conference proceeds, conferees reconcile their differences, but generally they grant concessions only insofar as they remain sure that the chamber they represent will accept the compromises. Once in a while uncertainty over this, or the positive refusal of a chamber to back down on a disputed amendment, results in an impasse, and the bills die in conference even though each was approved by its sponsoring chamber.

Conferees sometimes go back to their respective chambers for further instructions, when they report certain portions in disagreement. Then the chamber concerned can either "recede and concur" in the amendment of the other house, or "insist on its amendment."

When the conferees have reached agreement, they prepare a conference report, explaining why they did -- or did not -- retain some amendments, and cut out others. The reports are the justifications to their respective houses of the actions of the conferees, and the explanations, in document form, must be submitted to each house. Conference reports, with an explanation by the House conferees, are always printed in the House. In the Senate an explanation is often made orally by one of the conferees.

The conference report must be approved by each house. Consequently, approval of the report is approval of the compromise bill. In the order of voting on conference reports, the chamber which asked for a conference yields the other chamber the opportunity to vote first.

Final Steps

After a bill has been passed by both the House and Senate all of the original papers are sent to the enrolling clerk of the chamber in which the bill originated. He then prepares an enrolled bill which is printed on parchment paper. When this bill has been certified as correct by the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House, depending on which chamber originated the bill, it is signed first (no matter whether it originated in the Senate or House) by the Speaker of the House and then by the President of the Senate. It is next sent to the White House to await Presidential action.

If the President approves the bill he signs it, dates it and usually writes the word "approved" on the document. If he does not sign it within 10 days (Sundays excepted) and Congress is in session, the bill becomes law without his signature.

VETOES

However, should Congress adjourn before the 10 days expire, and the President has failed to sign the measure, it does not become law. This procedure is called the pocket veto. Occasionally a President vetoes a bill by refusing to sign it and returning it to the Congress with a message stating his reasons. The message is sent to the chamber which originated the bill. If no action is taken there on the message, the bill affected dies. Sometimes, however, Congress attempts to override the President's veto and enact the bill, "the objections of the President to the contrary notwithstanding." This requires a two-thirds vote of those present, who must number a quorum and vote by roll call.

Debate can precede this vote, with motions permitted to lay the message on the table, postpone action on it, or refer it to committee. If the President's veto is overridden by a two-thirds vote in both houses, the bill becomes law. Otherwise it is dead, and can be revived only by reintroduction and routing through the process all bills undergo.

When bills are passed finally and signed, or passed over a veto, they are given law numbers in numerical order as they become law. There are two series of numbers, one for public and one for private laws, starting at the number "1" for each two-year term of Congress. They are then identified by law number and by Congress -- i.e., Private Law 21, 89th Congress; Public Law 250, 89th Congress (or PL 89-250).

GLOSSARY OF CONGRESSIONAL TERMS

Act -- The term for legislation which has passed both houses of Congress and has been signed by the President or passed over his veto, thus becoming law.

Also used technically for a bill that has been passed by one house and engrossed.

Adjournment sine die -- Adjournment without definitely fixing a day for reconvening; literally "adjournment without a day." Marks the official end of a Congressional session. A session can continue until noon, Jan. 3, of the following year, when a new session usually begins.

Adjournment to a Day Certain -- Adjournment under a motion or resolution which fixes the next time of meeting. Neither house can adjourn for more than three days without the concurrence of the other. A session of Congress is not ended by adjournment to a day certain.

Amendment -- Proposal of a Congressman to alter the language or stipulations in a bill or act. It is usually printed, debated, and voted upon in the same manner as a bill.

Appeal -- A Congressman's challenge of a ruling or decision made by the presiding officer of the Senate or House. The Congressman appeals to Members of the chamber to override the decision. If carried by a majority vote, the appeal nullifies the chair's ruling.

Appropriation Bill -- Grants the actual monies approved by authorization bills, but not necessarily to the total permissible under the authorization bill. Normally an appropriation bill originates in the House, and is not acted on until its authorization measure is enacted. Regular appropriations are supposed to be passed before the start of the fiscal year to which they apply, but in recent years this has rarely happened. (See Continuing Appropriations.) In addition to general appropriation bills, there are two specialized types. (See Deficiency and Supplemental.)

Authorization Bill -- Authorizes a program, specifies its general aim and conduct, and unless "open-ended," puts a ceiling on monies that can be used to finance it. Usually enacted before appropriation bill is passed. (See Contract Authorization.)

Bills -- Most legislative proposals before Congress are in the form of bills, and are designated as HR (House of Representatives) or S (Senate) according to the house in which they originate and by a number assigned in the order in which they were introduced, from the beginning of each two-year Congressional term. "Public bills" deal with general questions, and become Public Laws if approved by Congress and signed by the President. "Private bills" deal with individual matters such as claims against the government, immigration and naturalization cases, land titles, etc., and become Private Laws if approved and signed.

The introduction of a bill, and its referral to an appropriate committee for action, follows the process given in "How A Bill Is Passed." (See also Concurrent Resolution, Joint Resolution, Resolution, in this Glossary.)

Bills Introduced -- In the Senate, any number of Senators may join in introducing a single bill. In the House, no more than one Member's name may appear on a bill. The result is that in the House many duplicate bills are introduced, only one of which is passed.

Many bills in reality are committee bills and are introduced under the name of the chairman of the committee or subcommittee as a formality. All appropriation bills fall into this category, as do many other bills, particularly those dealing with complicated, technical subjects. A committee frequently holds hearings on a number of related bills, and may agree on one of them or on an entirely new bill. (See Clean Bill and By Request.)

Bills Referred -- When introduced, a bill is referred to the committee which has jurisdiction over the subject with which the bill is concerned. The appropriate reference for bills is spelled out in the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946. Bills are referred by the Speaker in the House and the Presiding Officer in the Senate. Appeals may be made from their decisions.

Budget -- The document sent to Congress by the President in January of each year estimating Government revenue and expenditures for the ensuing fiscal year and recommending appropriations in detail. The President's Budget Message forms the basis for Congressional hearings and legislation on the year's appropriations.

By Request -- A phrase used when a Senator or Representative introduces a bill at the request of an executive agency or private organization but does not necessarily endorse the legislation.

Calendar -- An agenda or list of pending business before committees or either chamber. The House uses five legislative calendars. (See Consent, Discharge, House, Private and Union Calendar.)

In the Senate, all legislative matters reported from committee go on a single calendar. They are listed there in order, but may be called up irregularly by the Majority Leader either by a motion to do so, or by obtaining the unanimous consent of the Senate. Frequently the Minority Leader is consulted to assure unanimous consent. Only cloture can limit debate on bills thus called up. (See Call of the Calendar.)

The Senate also uses one non-legislative calendar, for treaties, etc. (See Executive Calendar.)

Calendar Wednesday -- In the House on Wednesdays, committees may be called in the order in which they appear in Rule X of the House Manual, for the purpose of bringing up any of their bills from the House or the Union Calendars, except bills which are privileged. General debate is limited to two hours. Bills called up from the Union Calendar are considered in Committee of the Whole. Calendar Wednesday is not observed during the last two weeks of a session, and may be dispensed with at other times -- by a two-thirds vote. It usually is dispensed with.

Call of the Calendar -- Senate bills which are not brought up for debate by a motion or a unanimous consent agreement are brought before the Senate for action when the calendar listing them in order is "called." Bills considered in this fashion are usually non-controversial and debate is limited to five minutes for each Senator on a bill or on amendments to it.

Chamber -- Meeting place for the total membership of either the House or the Senate, as distinguished from the respective committee rooms.

Clean Bill -- Frequently after a committee has finished a major revision of a bill, one of the committee members, usually the chairman, will assemble the changes plus what is left of the original bill into a new measure and introduce it as a "clean bill." The new measure, which carries a new number, is then sent to the floor for consideration. This often is a timesaver, as committee-recommended changes do not have to be considered one at a time by the chamber.

Clerk of the House -- Chief administrative officer of the House of Representatives with duties corresponding to those of the Secretary of the Senate. (See Secretary of the Senate.)

Cloture -- The process by which debate can be limited in the Senate, other than by unanimous consent. A motion for cloture can apply to any measure before the Senate, including, under a 1959 revision, a proposal to change the chamber's rules. It requires 16 Senators' signatures for introduction and the votes of two-thirds of the Senators present and voting. It is put to a roll-call vote one hour after the Senate meets on the second day following introduction of the motion. If voted, cloture limits each Senator to one hour of debate.

Committee -- A subdivision of the House or Senate which prepares legislation for action by the parent chamber, or makes investigations as directed by the parent chamber. There are several types of committees. (See Standing, and Select or Special). Most standing committees are divided into subcommittees, which study legislation, hold hearings, and report their recommendations to the full committee. Only the full committee can report legislation for action by the House or Senate.

Committee of the Whole -- The working title of what is formally "The Committee of the Whole House (of Representatives) on the State of the Union." Unlike other committees, it has no fixed membership. It is comprised of any 100 or more House members who participate -- on the floor of the chamber -- in debating or altering legislation before the body. Such measures, however, must first have passed through the regular committees and be on the calendar.

Technically, the Committee of the Whole considers only bills directly or indirectly appropriating money, authorizing appropriations, or involving taxes or charges on the public. Actually, the Committee of the Whole often considers other types of legislation. Because the Committee of the Whole need number only 100 Congressmen, a quorum is more readily attained, and business is expedited. None of the group's votes can be the time-consuming roll calls which require yeas and nays for the record.

When the full House resolves itself into the Committee of the Whole, it supplants the Speaker with a "chairman." The measure is debated or amended, with non-roll-call votes as needed. When the Committee completes its action on the measure, it dissolves itself by "rising." The Speaker returns, and the full House hears the erstwhile chairman of the Committee report that group's recommendations. The full House then acts upon them.

At this time Members may demand a roll-call vote on any amendment adopted in the Committee of the Whole.

Concurrent Resolution -- A concurrent resolution, designated H Con Res or S Con Res, must be passed by both houses but does not require the signature of the President and does not have the force of law. Concurrent resolutions generally are used to make or amend rules applicable to both houses or to express the sentiment of the two houses. A concurrent resolution, for example, is used to fix the time for adjournment of a Congress. It might also be used to convey the congratulations of Congress to another country on the anniversary of its independence.

Conference -- A meeting between the representatives of the House and Senate to reconcile differences between the two houses over provisions of a bill. Members of the conference committee are appointed by the Speaker and the President of the Senate and are called "managers" for their respective chambers. A majority of the managers for each house must reach agreement on the provisions of the bill (often a compromise between the versions of the two chambers) before it can be sent up for floor action in the form of a "conference report." There it cannot be amended, and if not approved by both chambers, the bill goes back to conference. Elaborate rules govern the conduct of the conferences. All bills which are passed by House and Senate in slightly different form need not be sent to conference; either chamber may "concur" in the other's amendments. (See Custody of the Papers.)

Congressional Record -- The daily, printed account of proceedings in both House and Senate chambers, with debate, statements, and the like reported verbatim. Committee activities are not covered, excepting their reports to the parent body. Highlights of legislative and committee action are embodied in a Digest section of the Record, and Congressmen are entitled to have their extraneous remarks printed in its Appendix. They may edit and revise remarks made on the floor, and frequently do, so that quotations reported by the press are not always found in the Record.

Congressional Terms of Office -- Begin on Jan. 3 of the year following the general election.

Consent Calendar -- Members of the House may place on this calendar any bill on the Union or House Calendar which is considered to be non-controversial. Bills on the Consent Calendar are normally called on the first and third Mondays of each month. On the first occasion when a bill is called in this manner, consideration may be blocked by the objection of any Member. On the second time, if there are three objections, the bill is stricken from the Consent Calendar; if less than three Members object, the bill is given immediate consideration.

A bill on the Consent Calendar may be postponed in another way. A Member may ask that the measure be passed over "without prejudice." In that case, no objection is recorded against the bill, and its status on the Consent Calendar remains unchanged.

A bill stricken from the Consent Calendar remains on the Union or House Calendar.

Continuing Appropriations -- When a fiscal year begins and Congress has not yet enacted all the regular appropriation bills for that year, it passes a joint resolution "continuing appropriations" for Government agencies at rates generally based on their previous year's appropriations.

Contract Authorizations -- Found in both authorization and appropriation bills, these authorizations are stop-gap provisions which permit the Federal Government to let contracts or obligate itself for future payments from funds not yet appropriated. The assumption is that funds will be available for payment when contracted debts come due.

Correcting the Record -- Rules prohibit Members from changing their votes after the result has been announced. But frequently, hours, days, or months after a vote has been taken, a Member announces that he was "incorrectly recorded" and requests -- and almost always receives -- unanimous consent to have the vote corrected in the permanent edition of the Congressional Record. This occurs more frequently in the House than in the Senate. Errors in the text of the Record may be corrected in the same manner.

Custody of the Papers -- To reconcile differences on a bill between the House and Senate, a conference may be arranged. The chamber in "custody of the papers" -- the engrossed bill, engrossed amendments, messages of transmittal -- is the only body empowered to request the conference. That body then has the advantage of acting last on the conference report when it is submitted.

Deficiency Appropriation -- An appropriation to cover the difference between an agency's regular appropriation and the amount deemed necessary for it to operate for the full fiscal year. In recent years deficiency bills have usually been called supplemental appropriations.

Dilatory Motion -- A motion, usually made upon a technical point, for the purpose of killing time and preventing action on a bill. The rules outlaw dilatory motions, but enforcement is largely within the discretion of the presiding officer.

Discharge a Committee -- Relieve a committee from jurisdiction over a measure before it. This is rarely a successful procedure, attempted more often in the House than in the Senate.

In the House, if a committee does not report a bill within 30 days after the bill was referred to it, any Member may file a discharge motion. This motion, treated as a petition, needs the signatures of 218 Members (a majority of the House). After the required signatures have been obtained, there is a delay of seven days. Then, on the second and fourth Monday of each month, except during the last six days of a session, any Member who has signed the petition may be recognized to move that the committee be discharged. Debate on the motion to discharge is limited to 20 minutes, and, if the motion is carried, consideration of the bill becomes a matter of high privilege.

If a resolution to consider a bill (see Rule) is held up in the Rules Committee for more than seven legislative days, any Member may enter a motion to discharge the Committee. The motion is handled like any other discharge petition in the House.

Occasionally, to expedite non-controversial legislative business, a committee is discharged upon unanimous consent of the House, and a petition is not required. (For Senate procedure, see Discharge Resolution.)

Discharge Calendar -- The House calendar to which motions to discharge committees are referred when they have the necessary 218 signatures and are awaiting action.

Discharge Petition -- In the House, a motion to discharge a committee from considering a bill. The motion, or petition, requires signatures of 218 House Members. (See Discharge a Committee.)

Discharge Resolution -- In the Senate, a special motion any Senator may introduce to relieve a committee from consideration of a bill before it. The resolution can be called up on motion for approval or disapproval, in the same manner as other matters of Senate business. (For House procedure, see Discharge a Committee.)

Division Vote -- Same as Standing Vote. (See below.)

Enacting Clause -- Key phrase in bills saying, "Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives..." A successful motion to strike it from legislation kills the measure.

Engrossed Bill -- The final copy of a bill as passed by one chamber, with the text as amended by floor action and certified to by the Clerk of the House or the Secretary of the Senate.

Enrolled Bill -- The final copy of a bill which has been passed in identical form by both chambers. It is certified to by an officer of the house of origin (House Clerk or Senate Secretary) and then sent on for signatures of the House Speaker, the Senate President, and the U.S. President. An enrolled bill is printed on parchment.

Executive Calendar -- This is an additional, non-legislative calendar, in the Senate, on which Presidential documents such as treaties and nominations are listed.

Executive Document -- A document, usually a treaty, sent to the Senate by the President for consideration or ratification. These are identified for each session of Congress as Executive A, 89th Congress, 1st Session; Executive B, etc. They are referred to committee in the same manner as other measures. Unlike legislative documents, however, treaties do not die at the end of a Congress, but remain "live" proposals until acted on by the Senate or withdrawn by the President.

Executive Session -- Meeting of a Senate or a House committee (or, very rarely, of the entire chamber) which only the group's members are privileged to attend. Frequently witnesses appear before committees meeting in executive session, and other Congressmen may be invited, but the public and press are not allowed.

Expenditures -- The actual spending of money as distinguished from the appropriation of it. Expenditures are made by the disbursing officers of the Administration; appropriations are made only by Congress. The two are rarely identical in any fiscal year; expenditures may represent money appropriated one, two or more years previously.

Filibuster -- A time-delaying tactic used by a minority in an effort to prevent a vote on a bill which probably would pass if brought to a vote. The most common method is to take advantage of the Senate's rules permitting unlimited debate, but other forms of parliamentary maneuvering may be used. The stricter rules in the House make filibusters more difficult, but they are attempted from time to time through devices such as repeated demands for quorum calls.

Fiscal Year -- Financial operations of the Government are carried out in a 12-month fiscal year, beginning on July 1 and ending on June 30. The fiscal year carries the date of the calendar year in which it ends.

Floor Manager -- A Member, usually representing sponsors of a bill, who attempts to steer it through debate and revision to a final vote in the chamber. Floor managers are frequently chairmen or ranking members of the committee that reported the bill. Managers are responsible for apportioning the time granted supporters of the bill for debating it. The Minority Leader or the ranking minority member of the committee often apportions time for the opposition.

Frank -- A Congressman's facsimile signature on envelopes, used in lieu of stamps for his official outgoing mail, thus postage-free. Also the privilege of sending mail postage-free.

Germane -- Pertaining to the subject matter of the measure at hand. All House amendments must be germane to the bill. The Senate requires that amendments be germane only when they are proposed to general appropriation bills, bills being considered under cloture, or often when proceeding under an agreement to limit debate.

Grants-in-Aid -- Payments by the Federal Government which aid the recipient state, local government or individual in administering specified programs, services or activities.

Hearings -- Committee sessions for hearing witnesses. At hearings on legislation, witnesses usually include specialists, government officials and spokesmen for persons affected by the bills under study. Hearings related to special investigations bring forth a variety of witnesses. Committees sometimes use their subpena power to summon reluctant witnesses. The public and press may attend "open" hearings, but are barred from "closed" or "executive" hearings.

The committee announces its hearings, from one day to many weeks in advance, and may invite certain persons to testify. Persons who request time to testify may be turned down by the committee but most requests are honored.

Hopper -- Box on House Clerk's desk where bills are deposited on introduction.

House -- The House of Representatives, as distinct from the Senate, although each body is a "house" of Congress.

House Calendar -- Listing for action by the House of Representatives of public bills which do not directly or indirectly appropriate money or raise revenue.

Immunity -- Constitutional privilege of Congressmen to make verbal statements on the floor and in committee for which they cannot be sued or arrested for slander or libel. Also, freedom from arrest while traveling to or from sessions of Congress or on official business. Congressmen in this status may be arrested only for treason, felonies or a breach of the peace, as defined by Congressional manuals.

Joint Committee -- A committee composed of a specified number of Members of both House and Senate. Usually a joint committee is investigative in nature. There are a few standing joint committees, such as the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy and the Joint Economic Committee.

Joint Resolution -- A joint resolution, designated H J Res or S J Res, requires the approval of both houses and the signature of the President, just as a bill does, and has the force of law if approved. There is no real difference between a bill and a joint resolution. The latter is generally used in dealing with limited matters, such as a single appropriation for a specific purpose.

Joint resolutions also are used to propose amendments to the Constitution. These do not require Presidential signature, but become a part of the Constitution when three-fourths of the states have ratified them.

Journal -- The official record of the proceedings of the House and Senate. The Journal records the actions taken in each chamber, but unlike the Congressional Record, it does not include the verbatim report of speeches, debate, etc.

Law -- An Act of Congress which has been signed by the President, or passed over his veto by the Congress. Laws are listed numerically by Congress; for example, the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (HR 7152) became Public Law 88-352 during the 88th Congress.

Legislative Day -- The "day" extending from the time either house meets after an adjournment until the time it next adjourns. Because the House normally adjourns from day to day, legislative days and calendar days usually coincide. But in the Senate, a legislative day may, and frequently does, extend over several calendar days. (See Recess.)

Lobby -- A group seeking to influence the passage or defeat of legislation. Originally the term referred to persons frequenting the lobbies or corridors of legislative chambers in order to speak to lawmakers.

The exact definition of a lobby and the activity of lobbying is a matter of opinion. By some definitions, lobbying is limited to attempts at direct influence by personal interview and persuasion. Under other definitions, lobbying includes attempts at indirect influence, such as stirring members of a group to write or visit Congressmen, or attempting to create a climate of opinion favorable to a desired legislative action.

The right to attempt to influence legislation is based on the 1st Amendment to the Constitution, which says Congress shall make no law abridging the right of the people "to petition the Government for a redress of grievances."

Majority Leader -- Chief strategist and floor spokesman for the party in nominal control in either chamber. He is elected by his party colleagues and is virtually program director for his chamber, since he usually speaks for its majority.

Majority Whip -- In effect, the assistant majority leader, in House or Senate. His job is to help marshal majority forces in support of party strategy.

Manual -- The official handbook in each house prescribing its organization, procedures and operations in detail. The Senate Manual contains standing rules, orders, laws and resolutions affecting Senate business; the House Manual is the equivalent for the lower chamber. Both volumes contain previous codes under which Congress functioned and from which it continues to derive precedents. Committee powers are outlined. The rules set forth in the Manuals may be changed by elaborate chamber actions also specified by the Manuals.

Marking up a Bill -- Going through a measure, usually in committee, taking it section by section, revising language, penciling in new phrases, etc. If the bill is extensively revised, the new version may be introduced as a separate bill, with a new number. (See Clean Bill.)

Memorial -- A request for Congressional opposition or an objection from an organization or citizens' group to particular legislation or government practice under the purview of Congress. All communications, both supporting and opposing legislation, from state legislatures are embodied in memorials. They are referred to appropriate committees unless the legislation dealt with in the memorial has been reported to the Senate, in which case the memorial is placed on the table. It can be called up for consideration at the time the bill is read for amendments. (See Petition)

Minority Whip -- Performs duties of whip for the minority party. (See Majority Whip.)

Morning Hour -- The time set aside at the beginning of each legislative day for the consideration of regular routine business. The "hour" is of indefinite duration in the House, where it is rarely used. In the Senate it is the first two hours of a session following an adjournment, as distinguished from a recess. The morning hour can be terminated earlier if the morning business has been completed. This business includes such matters as messages from the President, communications from the heads of departments, messages from the House, the presentation of petitions and memorials, reports of standing and select committees, and the introduction of bills and resolutions.

During the first hour of the morning hour in the Senate, no motion to proceed to the consideration of any bill on the calendar is in order except by unanimous consent. During the second hour, motions can be made but must be decided without debate. Senate committees may meet while the Senate is in the morning hour.

Motion -- Request by a Congressman for any one of a wide array of parliamentary actions. He "moves" for a certain procedure, or the consideration of a measure or a vote, etc. The precedence of motions, and whether they are debatable, is set forth in the House and Senate Manuals.

Nominations -- Appointments to office by the Executive Branch of the Government, subject to Senate confirmation. Although most nominations win quick Senate approval, some are controversial and become the topic of hearings and debate. Sometimes Senators object to appointees for patronage reasons -- for example, when a nomination to a local federal job is made without consulting the Senators of the state concerned. Then a Senator may use the stock objection that the nominee is "personally obnoxious" to him. Usually other Senators join in blocking such an appointment out of courtesy to their colleague.

One Minute Speeches -- Addresses by House Members at the beginning of a legislative day. The speeches may cover any subject, but are limited strictly to one minute's duration.

Override a Veto -- If the President disapproves a bill and sends it back to Congress with his objections, Congress may override his veto by a two-thirds vote in each chamber. The Constitution requires a yea-and-nay roll call. The question put to each house is: "Shall the bill pass, the objections of the President to the contrary notwithstanding?" (See also Pocket Veto and Veto.)

Pair -- A "gentlemen's agreement" between two lawmakers on opposite sides to withhold their votes on roll calls so their absence from Congress will not affect the outcome of record voting. If passage of the measure requires a two-thirds majority, a pair would require two Members favoring the action to one opposed to it.

Two kinds of pairs -- special and general -- are used; neither is counted in vote totals. The names of lawmakers pairing on a given vote and their stands, if known, are printed in the Congressional Record.

The special pair applies to one or a series of roll-call votes on the same subject. On special pairs lawmakers usually specify how they would have voted.

A general pair in the Senate, now rarely used in the chamber, applies to all votes on which the Members pairing are on opposite sides, and it lasts for the length of time pairing Senators agree on. It usually does not specify a Senator's stand on a given vote.

The general pair in the House differs from the other pairs. No agreement is involved and the pair does not tie up votes. A Representative expecting to be absent may notify the House Clerk he wishes to make a "general" pair. His name then is paired arbitrarily with that of another Member desiring a general pair, and the list is printed in the Congressional Record. He may or may not be paired with a Member taking the opposite position. General pairs in the House give no indication of how a Congressman would have voted. (See Record Vote and Stand.

Petition -- A request or plea sent to one or both chambers from an organization or private-citizens group asking support of particular legislation or favorable consideration of a matter not yet receiving Congressional attention. They are referred to appropriate committees and considered or not, according to committee decision. (See Memorial)

Pocket Veto -- The act of the President in withholding his approval of a bill after Congress has adjourned -- either for the year or for a specified period. When Congress is in session, a bill becomes law without the President's signature if he does not act upon it within 10 days, excluding Sundays, from the time he gets it. But if Congress adjourns within that 10-day period, the bill is killed without the President's formal veto.

Point of Order -- An objection raised by a Congressman that the chamber is departing from rules governing its conduct of business. The objector cites the rule violated, the chair sustaining his objection if correctly made. Order is restored by the chair's suspending proceedings of the chamber until it conforms to the prescribed "order of business." Members sometimes raise a "point of no order" -- when there is noise and disorderly conduct in the chamber.

President of the Senate -- Presiding officer of the upper chamber, normally the Vice President of the United States. In his absence, a President pro tempore (President for the time being) presides.

President pro tempore -- The chief officer of the Senate in the absence of the Vice President. He is elected by his fellow Senators. The recent practice has been to elect to the office the Senator of the majority party with longest continuous service.

Previous Question -- In this sense, a "question" is an "issue" before the House for a vote and the issue is "previous" when some other topic has superseded it in the attention of the chamber. A motion for the previous question, when carried, has the effect of cutting off all debate and forcing a vote on the subject originally at hand. If, however, the previous question is moved and carried before there has been any debate on the subject at hand and the subject is debatable, then 40 minutes of debate is allowed before the vote. The previous question is sometimes moved in order to prevent amendments. The motion for the previous question is a debate-limiting device and is not in order in the Senate.

Private Calendar -- Private House bills dealing with individual matters such as claims against the Government, immigration and naturalization cases, land titles, etc. When it is before the chamber, two Members may block a private bill, which then is recommitted to committee.

Backers of a private bill thus recommitted have another recourse. The measure can be put into an "omnibus claims bill" -- several private bills rolled into one. As with any bill, no part of an omnibus claims bill may be deleted without a vote. When a private bill goes back to the floor in this form, it can be defeated only by a majority of those present. The Private Calendar can be called on the first and third Tuesdays of each month.

Privilege -- Privilege relates to the rights of Congressmen and to the relative priority of the motions and actions they may make in their respective chambers. The two are distinct. "Privileged questions" concern legislative business. "Questions of privilege" concern legislators themselves. (See below.)

Privileged Questions -- The order in which bills, motions and other legislative measures may be considered by Congress is governed by strict priorities. A motion to table, for instance, is more privileged than a motion to recommit. Thus, a motion to recommit can be superseded by a motion to table, and a vote would be forced on the latter motion only. A motion to adjourn, however, would take precedence over this one, and is thus considered of the "highest privilege."

Pro Forma Amendment -- See Strike Out the Last Word.

Questions of Privilege -- These are matters affecting Members of Congress individually or collectively.

Questions affecting the rights, safety, dignity and integrity of proceedings of the House or Senate as a whole are questions of privilege of the House or Senate, as the case may be.

Congressmen singly involve questions of "personal privilege." A Member's rising to a question of personal privilege is given precedence over almost all other proceedings. An annotation in the House Rules points out that the privilege of the Member rests primarily on the Constitution, which gives him a conditional immunity from arrest and an unconditional freedom to speak in the House.

Quorum -- The number of Members whose presence is necessary for the transaction of business. In the Senate and House it is a majority of the membership (when there are no vacancies, this is 51 in the Senate and 218 in the House). A quorum is 100 in the Committee of the Whole House. If a point of order is made that a quorum is not present, the only business in order is either a motion to direct the Sergeant-at-Arms to request the attendance of absentees.

Readings of Bills -- Traditional parliamentary law required bills to be read three times before they were passed. This custom is of little modern significance except in rare instances. Normally the bill is considered to have its first reading when it is introduced and printed, by title, in the Congressional Record. Its second reading comes when floor consideration begins. (This is the most likely point at which there is an actual reading of the bill, if there is any.) The third reading (usually by title) takes place when action has been completed on amendments.

Recess -- Distinguished from adjournment in that a recess does not end a legislative day and therefore does not interfere with unfinished business. The rules in each house set forth certain matters to be taken up and disposed of at the beginning of each legislative day. The House, which operates under much stricter rules than the Senate, usually adjourns from day to day. The Senate often recesses.

Recommit to Committee -- A simple motion, made on the floor after deliberation on a bill, to return it to the committee which reported it. If approved, recommittal usually is considered a death blow to the bill. In the House a motion to recommit can be made only by a Member opposed to the bill, and in recognizing a Member to make the motion, the Speaker gives the minority party preference over the majority.

A motion to recommit may include instructions to the committee to report the bill again with specific amendments or by a certain date. Or the instructions may be to make a particular study with no definite deadline for final action.

Reconsider a Vote -- A motion to reconsider the vote by which an action was taken has, until it is disposed of, the effect of suspending the action. In the Senate the motion can be made only by a Member who voted on the prevailing side of the original question, or by a Member who did not vote at all. In the House it can be made only by a Member on the prevailing side.

A common practice after close votes in the Senate is a motion to reconsider, followed by a motion to table the motion to reconsider. On this motion to table, Senators vote as they voted on the original question to enable the motion to table to prevail. The matter is then finally closed and further motions to reconsider are not entertained. In the House, as a routine precaution, a motion to reconsider usually is made every time a measure is passed. Such a motion almost always is tabled immediately, thus shutting off the possibility of future reconsideration except by unanimous consent.

Motions to reconsider must be entered in the Senate within the next two days of actual session after the original vote has been taken. In the House they must be entered either on the same day or on the next succeeding day the House is in session.

Record Vote -- This is a roll call of the entire chamber membership, to which each Member on the floor must answer "yea," "nay," or, if he does not wish to vote, "present." The Constitution requires yea-and-nay votes on the question of overriding a veto. In other cases, they can be obtained by the demand of one-fifth of the Members present. In the House, the yeas and nays are required automatically whenever a Member objects to a non-record vote taken when a quorum was not present, if the question is one which requires a quorum. The yeas and nays are not taken in the Committee of the Whole.

Report -- Both a verb and a noun, as a Congressional term. A committee which has been examining a bill referred to it by the parent chamber "reports" its finding and recommendations to the chamber when the committee returns the measure. The process is called "reporting" a bill.

A "report" is the document setting forth the committee's explanation of its action. House and Senate reports are numbered separately and are designated S Rept or H Rept. Conference reports are numbered and designated in the same way as regular House reports.

Most reports favor a bill's passage. Adverse reports are occasionally submitted, but more often, when a committee disapproves a bill, it simply fails to report it at all. When a committee report is not unanimous, the dissenting committeemen may file a statement of their views, called Minority Views and referred to as a Minority Report. Sometimes a bill is reported without recommendation.

Recision -- An item in an appropriation bill rescinding, or cancelling, funds previously appropriated but not spent.

Resolution -- A simple resolution, designated H Res or S Res, deals with matters entirely within the prerogatives of one house or the other. It requires neither passage by the other chamber nor approval by the President, and does not have the force of law. Most resolutions deal with the rules of one house. They also are used to express the sentiments of a single house, as condolences to the family of a deceased member or to give "advice" on foreign policy or other executive business. (Also see Concurrent and Joint Resolutions.)

Rider -- A provision, usually not germane, tacked on to a bill which its sponsor hopes to get through more easily by including in other legislation. Riders become law if the bills embodying them do. Riders providing for legislation in appropriations bills are outstanding examples, though technically they are banned.

Rule -- The term has two specific Congressional meanings. A rule may be a standing order governing the conduct of House or Senate business and listed in the chamber's book of rules. The rules deal with duties of officers, order of business, admission to the floor, voting procedures, etc.

In the House, a rule also may be a decision made by its Rules Committee about the handling of a particular bill on the floor. The Committee may determine under which standing rule a bill shall be considered, or it may provide a "special rule" in the form of a resolution. If the resolution is adopted by the House, the temporary rule becomes as valid as any standing rule, and lapses only after action has been completed on the measure to which it pertains.

A special rule sets the time limit on general debate. It may also waive points of order against provisions of the bill in question or against specified amendments intended to be proposed to the bill. It may even forbid all amendments or all amendments except, in some cases, those proposed by the legislative committee which handled the bill. In this instance it is known as a "closed" or "gag" rule as opposed to an "open" rule which puts no limitation on floor action, thus leaving the bill open to alteration. (See Suspend the Rules.)

Secretary of the Senate -- Chief administrative officer of the Senate, responsible for direction of duties of Senate employees, education of pages, administration of oaths, receipt of registration of lobbyists and other activities necessary for the continuing operation of the Senate.

Select or Special Committee -- A committee set up for a special purpose and a limited time by resolution of either House or Senate. Most special committees are investigative in nature.

Senatorial Courtesy -- Sometimes referred to as "the courtesy of the Senate," it is a general practice without written rule applied to consideration of executive nominations. In practice, generally, it means nominations from a state are not to be confirmed unless they have been approved by the Senators of the President's party of that state, with other Senators following their lead in the attitude they take toward such nominations.

Sine Die -- See Adjournment sine die.

Slip Laws -- The first official publication of a bill that has been enacted into law. Each is published separately in unbound single-sheet or pamphlet form. It usually takes two to three days from the date of Presidential approval to the time when slip laws become available.

Speaker -- The presiding officer of the House of Representatives, elected by its Members.

Special Session -- A session of Congress after it has adjourned sine die, completing its regular session. Special sessions are convened by the President of the United States under his constitutional powers.

Stand -- A lawmaker's position, for or against, on a given issue or vote. He can make known his stand on a roll-call vote by answering "yea" or "nay," by "pairing" for or against, or by "announcing" his position to the House or Senate. Members also may go on record by answering the Congressional Quarterly Poll of unrecorded Congressmen on roll calls. (See Pair, and Record Vote, above.)

Standing Committee -- A group permanently provided for by House or Senate rules. The standing committees at present are specified by the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946, which broadly defines their respective jurisdictions.

Standing Vote -- A non-record vote used in both House and Senate. A standing vote, also called a division vote, is taken as follows: Members in favor of a proposal stand and are counted by the presiding officer; then Members opposed stand and are counted. There is no record of how individual Members voted. In the House, the presiding officer announces the number for and against. In the Senate, usually only the result is announced.

Statutes-at-Large -- A chronological arrangement of the laws enacted in each session of Congress. Though indexed, the laws are not arranged by subject matter nor is there an indication of how they affect previous law. (See U.S. Code.)

Strike from the Record -- Remarks made on the House floor may offend some Member, who moves that the offending words be "taken down" for the Speaker's cognizance, and then expunged from the verbatim report to be carried in the Congressional Record.

Strike Out the Last Word -- A move whereby House Members are entitled to speak for a fixed time on a measure then being debated by the chamber. A Member gains recognition from the chair by moving to strike out the last word of the amendment or section of the bill then under consideration. The motion is pro forma, and customarily requires no vote.

Substitute -- A motion, an amendment, or an entire bill introduced in place of pending business. Passage of a substitute measure kills the original measure by supplanting it. A substitute may be amended.

Supplemental Appropriations -- Normally are passed after the regular appropriation, but supposedly before the fiscal year to which they apply. Deficiencies are passed in the same fiscal year to which they apply but in recent practice have been called supplementals.

Suspend the Rules -- Often a time-saving procedure for passing bills in the House. The wording of the motion, which may be made by any Member recognized by the Speaker, is: "I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (HR 000)..." A favorable vote by two-thirds of those present is required for passage. Debate is limited to 40 minutes and no amendments from the floor are permitted. If a two-thirds favorable vote is not attained, the bill may be considered later under regular procedures.

Table a Bill -- The motion to "lay on the table" is not debatable in either house, and is usually a method of making a final, adverse disposition of a matter. In the Senate, however, different language is sometimes used. The motion is worded to let a bill "lie on the table," perhaps for subsequent "picking up." This motion is more flexible, merely keeping the bill pending for later action, if desired.

Teller Vote -- In the House, Members file past tellers and are counted as for or against a measure, but they are not recorded individually. The teller vote is not used in the Senate. In the House, tellers are ordered upon demand of one-fifth of a quorum. This is 44 in the House, 20 in Committee of the Whole.

Treaties -- Executive proposals which must be submitted to the Senate for approval of two-thirds of the Senators present. Before they act on such foreign policy matters, Senators usually send them to committee for scrutiny. Treaties are read three times and debated in the chamber much as are legislative proposals, but are rarely amended. After approval by the Senate, they are ratified by the President.

Twenty-one-day Rule -- Permits the Speaker to recognize a committee member to call up for House consideration any bill reported by the committee that has been before the Rules Committee for 21 days without having received a rule for floor debate.

Unanimous Consent -- Synonymous with Without Objection. (See below)

Union Calendar -- Bills which directly or indirectly appropriate money or raise revenue are placed on this House calendar according to the date reported from committee.

U.S. Code -- A consolidation and codification of the general and permanent laws of the United States arranged by subject under 50 Titles, the first six dealing with general or political subjects, and the other 44 alphabetically arranged from Agriculture to War and National Defense. The Code is now revised every six years and a supplement is published after each session of Congress.

Veto -- Disapproval by the President of a bill or joint resolution, other than one proposing an amendment to the Constitution. When Congress is in session, the President must veto a bill within 10 days, excluding Sundays, after he has received it; otherwise it becomes law with or without his signature. When the President vetoes a bill, he returns it to the house of its origin with a message stating his objections. The veto then becomes a question of high privilege. (See Override a Veto.)

When Congress has adjourned, the President may pocket veto a bill by failing to sign it. (See Pocket Veto.)

Voice Vote -- In either House or Senate, Members answer "aye" or "no" in chorus and the presiding officer decides the result. The term also is used loosely to indicate action by unanimous consent or without objection.

Whip -- See Majority Whip.

Without Objection -- Used in lieu of a vote on noncontroversial motions, amendments, or bills, which may be passed in either the House or the Senate if no Member voices an objection.

SESSION SUMMARY, PARTY LEADERS, TURNOVER IN 1965

The first session of the 89th Congress convened at noon Jan. 4, 1965, and adjourned at 12:52 a.m. Oct. 23, 293 days later. As first sessions go, the 89th's was somewhat longer than average, but it marked a sharp cutback from the first session of the 88th Congress, which ran from Jan. 9 to Dec. 30, 1963, a total of 356 days, for the fifth longest in history.

In 1965, 16,882 bills and resolutions were introduced -- a record in recent years for a single session. Of these, 349 became public laws and 214 became private laws. Although the significance of the new public laws was great, the number was comparatively low (there were 409 in 1964, 257 in 1963, 484 in 1962, and 401 in 1961).

Five discharge petitions were filed in the House, of which only one -- to bring the District of Columbia home rule bill to the floor -- gained the necessary 218 signatures. The bill was not enacted, however. (See story p. 613)

During 1965, President Johnson vetoed seven bills -- five private and two public. Congress did not attempt to override the vetoes, but in the case of the two public bills -- military construction authorization and the Northwest flood disaster bill -- it subsequently passed new versions eliminating language objectionable to the President, and the new bills were signed. (See stories, p. 676, 697)

Party Ratios

When Congress convened Jan. 4, there were more than twice as many Democrats as Republicans in both chambers -- the biggest Democratic margin since 1937. The Democrats have been the majority party since 1955.

On opening day in 1965, there were 68 Democrats and 32 Republicans in the Senate. One Democrat -- Olin Johnston (S.C.) -- died during the session, but he was replaced by a Democrat, so the party ratio remained unchanged at the session's end.

In the House, the 89th Congress opened with 295 Democrats and 140 Republicans. When Rep. Albert W. Watson (D S.C.) on Jan. 12 switched from Democrat to Republican, the line-up became 294 Democrats and 141 Republicans. This remained the basic party breakdown for the rest of the year. During the session, two Congressmen died and another resigned, but each was replaced by a Member from his own party. (See chart p. 26)

ELECTORAL BALLOT COUNT

A joint session of the Senate and House convened at 12:55 p.m., Jan. 6 to comply with the constitutional requirement of counting the electoral ballots for President and Vice President. The ballots were cast by electors in each state and the District of Columbia. At 1:45 p.m. the count was completed, showing Democrats Lyndon B. Johnson and Hubert H. Humphrey with 486 electoral votes to 52 for the Republicans, former Sen. Barry Goldwater and former Rep. William E. Miller. Both Johnson and Humphrey had had long experience in Congress, Johnson as Representative (1937-49), Senator and then Senate Majority Leader (1955-61), and Humphrey as Senator (1949-64), becoming Majority Whip in 1961. Humphrey resigned his Senate seat Dec. 29 in order to give his successor, Minnesota Attorney General Walter F. Mondale (D), a few days' seniority over other Senators-elect.

Johnson Inauguration

President Lyndon Baines Johnson Jan. 20 was sworn in for his first elected term as President. Mr. Johnson took the oath of office, administered by Chief Justice Earl Warren, at 12:03 p.m., immediately after Humphrey was sworn in as Vice President by Speaker of the House John W. McCormack (D Mass.). (For text of Inaugural address, see p. 1346)

Senate Leadership

The following Senate officers, selected by their party caucuses, were announced as the session convened:

President pro tempore -- Carl Hayden (D Ariz.)
Majority Leader -- Mike Mansfield (D Mont.)
Majority Whip -- Russell B. Long (D La.)
Democratic Conference Secretary -- George A. Smathers (D Fla.)
Minority Leader -- Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.)
Minority Whip -- Thomas H. Kuchel (R Calif.)
Republican Policy Committee Chairman -- Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R Iowa)
Republican Conference Chairman -- Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.)
Republican Conference Secretary -- Milton R. Young (R N.D.)

All had served in the same posts in the 88th Congress except Long, who succeeded Vice President Humphrey as Majority Whip. In a close race with two other contenders, John O. Pastore (D R.I.) and A.S. Mike Monroney (D Okla.), Long was chosen by the Democratic Conference on a secret ballot Jan. 4. Long was backed by Southerners and by some liberal and moderate Democrats including Sens. Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) and Clinton Anderson (D N.M.), but was strongly opposed by other Members because of his opposition to key Administration proposals, such as civil rights, medicare, the nuclear test ban treaty and foreign aid. On the first ballot, he received 34 votes, against 20 for Pastore and 14 for Monroney. As prearranged, the lowest man was eliminated, and on the second ballot Long won with a majority: 41 votes against 25 for Pastore and 2 votes for Philip A. Hart (D Mich.). After the balloting, Long said the President's programs "will get full consideration from all Senators."

DEMOCRATIC STEERING COMMITTEE

Reconvening the Democratic Conference Jan. 7, the Democrats adopted a proposal by Mansfield to enlarge the 15-member Steering Committee, which makes Senate Democratic committee assignments, by the addition of two Midwesterners. The purpose of this plan was to weaken conservative control of the Committee. Sens. Carl Hayden (Ariz.) and Alan Bible (Nevada) frequently voted with the Committee's seven Southerners, creating a 9-6 ratio against the more liberal Northerners. With the new Whip, Long, replacing Humphrey on the Committee, the ratio was 10-5.

The Mansfield proposal was adopted following defeat (by a 22-34 secret ballot) of a plan by Sen. Joseph S. Clark (Pa.) to enlarge the Committee by four members to be selected in accordance with the geographical distribution and ideological views of Senate Democrats.

Long reportedly endorsed the Mansfield proposal. The two Midwesterners appointed to the Committee Jan. 7 were Eugene J. McCarthy (Minn.) and Pat McNamara (Mich.). When Hayden, Bible and the Southerners voted together, they enjoyed a 10-7 advantage in the new Committee.

The new Steering Committee membership: Mansfield, chairman; Bible; Clark; Thomas J. Dodd (Conn.); Douglas; Allen J. Ellender (La.); Hayden; Spessard L. Holland (Fla.); Olin D. Johnston (S.C.); Long; McCarthy; John L. McClellan (Ark.); McNamara; A. Willis Robertson (Va.); Richard B. Russell (Ga.); George A. Smathers (Fla.); and Harrison A. Williams Jr. (N.J.).

House Leadership

The following House officers were selected by their party caucuses:

Speaker -- John W. McCormack (D Mass.)
Majority Leader -- Carl Albert (D Okla.)
Majority Whip -- Hale Boggs (D La.)
Minority Leader -- Gerald R. Ford (R Mich.)
Minority Whip -- Leslie C. Arends (R Ill.)
Republican Policy Committee Chairman -- John J. Rhodes (R Ariz.)
Republican Conference Chairman -- Melvin R. Laird (R Wis.)

Rep. Emanuel Celler (D N.Y.), a Member since 1923 and chairman of the Judiciary Committee, became dean of the House. He succeeded Carl Vinson (D Ga.), who retired in January after 50 years in the House.

McCormack was elected Speaker in the first action taken by the House Jan. 4. He won by a party-line roll-call vote of 290-139 over GOP leader Ford. (For voting, see chart p. 932)

GOP TURNOVER

The House Republican Conference, meeting Jan. 4 to organize for the 89th Congress, elected Gerald R. Ford (Mich.), 51, as Minority Leader, succeeding Charles A. Halleck (Ind.), 64, who had held the post since 1959. The vote, by secret ballot, was 73 to 67.

The election was a continuation of the "revolt" begun in 1963 by young House Republicans, including Melvin R. Laird (Wis.), Charles E. Goodell (N.Y.), and Robert P. Griffin (Mich.). In that year they elected Ford to replace Charles B. Hoeven (Iowa) as chairman of the Conference. (1963 Almanac p. 24) The Ford-Halleck dispute in 1965 did not appear to be based on ideological differences but rather on the question of which man could give the most forceful leadership to depleted GOP Congressional ranks.

As part of the same movement, the Conference elected as its chairman Laird, 42, who had helped to engineer the election of Ford in 1963 and had emerged as a power while chairman of the Republican Platform Committee at the 1964 presidential convention. Laird defeated Peter Frelinghuysen (N.J.), who had the backing of the more liberally oriented "Wednesday Club" group of GOP House Members, by a vote of 75-62. Laird was opposed by some Members because of his role in writing the Goldwater-oriented platform of 1964.

On Jan. 14 the Conference re-elected Leslie C. Arends (Ill.), 69, as party Whip. The 70-59 secret ballot rebuffed the bid of Ford to install Frelinghuysen, 48, as Whip. Arends, a close ally of ousted Minority Leader Halleck, had announced Jan. 13 that he would try to keep his post.

At the same meeting the Conference adopted a new rule prohibiting a Member from serving simultaneously as ranking member on a legislative committee and in a leadership position. Ford resigned from the Appropriations Committee, where he had been ranking Republican. (See Committee changes, p. 26) The rule required John W. Byrnes (Wis.), who had been re-elected as chairman of the GOP Policy Committee, to choose between that post and his position as ranking Republican on the Ways and Means Committee. Byrnes resigned as chairman Jan. 14.

He was succeeded Feb. 23 by John J. Rhodes (R Ariz.) on a unanimous vote of the Conference. Ford had sought to have Goodell elected to the chairmanship of the Policy Committee, but backed down when Rhodes announced his candidacy, apparently unwilling to risk another defeat in the Conference.

Goodell Study Group. At a Feb. 2 press conference, Ford announced formation of a House GOP Planning and Research Committee, headed by Goodell, to "offer long-term solutions to recognized problems." In addition to Goodell, the group had four other members and an eight-man research staff headed by Dr. William B. Prendergast, former research director of the Republican National Committee. During the year it supervised the activities of 13 task forces, each of which studied and made recommendations on major problems in a particular field.

DEMOCRATS CENSURED

By a secret ballot of 157-115, House Democrats Jan. 2 voted to censure two Southern party members, John Bell Williams (Miss.) and Albert W. Watson (S.C.), for publicly supporting the Republican Presidential candidate in the 1964 elections. Both men were stripped of seniority rights, but could continue to be recognized as Democrats. It was the first time House Democrats had punished one of their members for party disloyalty since 1911.

Watson lost little seniority, but Williams, a Member since 1947, dropped from second-ranking Democrat on the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee and fifth-ranking Democrat on the District of Columbia Committee to the bottom of both committees. If it had not been for that action, Williams would have been in line to succeed Interstate and Foreign Commerce Chairman Oren Harris (D Ark.), who was due to retire in February, 1966. Because of the censure, Harley O. Staggers (D W. Va.) was the next in line.

Watson Jan. 12 switched to the Republican party and later ran for re-election. (See p. 27)

SEATING DISPUTES

On opening day, Speaker McCormack, after being sworn into office by Emanuel Celler (D N.Y.), dean of the House, administered the oath of office to all Members present except the five-man Mississippi delegation and freshman Rep. Richard L. Ottinger (D N.Y.), whose seats had been challenged. Ottinger was later sworn in, pending a committee investigation of charges that his campaign expenditures had violated federal and state campaign financing laws. The Mississippi Representatives' elections had been challenged by the Mississippi Freedom Democratic Party (MFDP) on grounds that eligible Negroes had been excluded from voting. The House Jan. 4 voted to seat the delegation and later dismissed the challenge against the Representatives. (See story p. 609)

On the House floor, one of the roll calls was disturbed by the noisy intrusion of a member of the American Nazi Party who was apparently trying to mock the MFDP. Wearing black-face makeup, black leotards and a bandanna, he ran toward the speaker's podium, shouting, "I's the Mississippi delegation. I demand to be seated." He was quickly removed from the Capitol and later was fined for the intrusion.

Committees

● SENATE -- When the 89th Congress convened, there were no immediate changes in Senate committee chairmanships. Sen. Olin D. Johnston (D S.C.), chairman of the Post Office and Civil Service Committee, died April 18, and was replaced by Sen. A. S. Mike Monroney (D Okla.), 63.

Committee ratios were changed in both chambers to reflect the size of the Democratic majority, 68 percent in each house. The only major committee on which Democrats failed to win 2-1 control was the Senate Finance Committee, where the ratio remained unchanged from the 88th Congress -- 11 Democrats to 6 Republicans. Mansfield sought to add two Democrats to the Finance Committee for a 13-6 ratio, but failed in a showdown in the Democratic Steering Committee with Long, the second-ranking Democrat on the Finance Committee and newly elected Whip. The Steering Committee made changes in 10 of the 16 standing committees as follows: Aeronautical and Space Sciences, from 10-5 to 11-5; Agriculture and Forestry, from 11-6 to 10-5; Banking and Currency, from 10-5 to 10-4; Commerce, from 12-5 to 12-6; District of Columbia, from 4-3 to 5-2; Foreign Relations, from 12-5 to 13-6; Government Operations, from 10-5 to 10-4; Interior and Insular Affairs, from 11-6 to 11-5; Judiciary, from 10-5 to 11-5; Labor and Public Welfare, from 10-5 to 11-5; and Post Office and Civil Service from 6-3 to 8-4.

A new rule modifying strict adherence to seniority in assigning Republicans to committees was adopted by the Republican Conference Jan. 12. It provided that no Senator holding an assignment on one of the four most important committees -- Appropriations, Armed Services, Finance and Foreign Relations -- could be assigned to another of the four until other Senators were offered the opening. But the rule also provided that Senators currently holding assignments on two of these committees could continue to do so, and could also switch to another one of the top four. As of 1965, six Senators held assignments on two of the top four committees: Carlson (Kan.), Case (N.J.), Mundt (S.D.), Saltonstall (Mass.), Smith (Maine) and Williams (Del.).

● HOUSE -- Two new House committee chairmen were chosen at the beginning of the session: L. Mendel Rivers (D S.C.), 59, who became chairman of the Armed Services Committee succeeding Carl Vinson (D Ga.), who retired Jan. 4, and George H. Fallon (D Md.), 62, who became chairman of the Public Works Committee, replacing Charles A. Buckley (D N.Y.), who was defeated in a 1964 primary.

House leaders McCormack and Ford Jan. 5 agreed to an approximate 2-1 Democratic-Republican ratio on House committees, giving to the Democrats and taking away from the Republicans one to four seats on each of the 20 standing committees except Rules, which already had a 10-5 ratio. Under the realignment, the ratio on the influential Ways and Means Committee was changed from 15-10 to 17-8. House Democrats filled three vacancies on the Committee, greatly increasing the chances that the Committee would report legislation on medical care for the aged. The three elected were Richard Fulton (D Tenn.), Phil M. Landrum (D Ga.), and Charles A. Vanik (D Ohio).

James F. Battin (R Mont.) gave up his seat on the Foreign Affairs Committee in order to fill the one GOP vacancy on Ways and Means. He was replaced on Foreign Affairs by James G. Fulton (R Pa.). The GOP vacancy on the Rules Committee, formerly filled by a Member from New York, was assigned to James H. Quillen (R Tenn.)

Peter H. B. Frelinghuysen (R N.J.) resigned his ranking minority position on Education and Labor but did not take on a new assignment. He stated that he wished to give more attention to his Foreign Affairs Committee duties.

The Republican Conference adopted a resolution stating that "no Member should serve simultaneously as chairman or ranking member of more than one standing committee." However, Clarence J. Brown (R Ohio), by special exception, kept his ranking positions on the Rules and Government Operations Committees. As Minority Whip, Arends was required to yield ranking position on Armed Services. (See p. 25)

Albert W. Watson (S.C.), who Jan. 12 switched from the Democratic to the Republican party, was assigned a seat on Interstate and Foreign Commerce and ranked ahead of freshman Tim Lee Carter (R Ky.).

On the Committee ratio agreement with McCormack, Ford won one point -- the Foreign Affairs Committee was enlarged by three members to 36, permitting the lowest ranking Republican, Vernon W. Thomson (R Wis.), to remain on the Committee. This concession ensured that no Republican would be dropped from a committee on which he had served the previous year.

HOUSE RULES CHANGES

In its opening business, the House by voice vote adopted a resolution (H Res 8) reinstituting the rules of the 88th Congress, with an amendment. The amendment made three changes in the House rules, two of which substantially strengthened the authority of the Speaker to bring legislation to the floor.

The important vote on the changes came on a motion to move the previous question, thereby preventing amendments and ending debate. The motion was adopted by a 224-201 roll-call vote, with a majority of Republicans and Southern Democrats voting against it. (For voting, see chart p. 932)

The major change -- the 21-day rule -- weakened the power of the Rules Committee to block legislation from reaching the floor. It permitted the Speaker to recognize a committee chairman (or other committee member) to bring up a measure that had been before the Rules Committee for 21 days without being granted a rule for floor action. The 21-day rule was used many times during the session. The second change allowed the Speaker to recognize a Member to offer a motion that would permit sending a bill to conference by majority vote. Existing procedure required unanimous consent or a rule from the Rules Committee to send a bill to conference. (For details, see story p. 585)

CLOTURE

As in past sessions, attempts were made in the Senate to ease the cloture rule (Rule 22) for shutting off filibusters. The existing rule requires the vote of two-thirds of Senators present and voting to limit debate. Cloture was successfully invoked on the Voting Rights Act of 1965 but failed on the bill to repeal state "right-to-work" laws. (See story p. 590)

First Session Turnover

● SENATE -- On Jan. 4 there were no vacancies in the Senate, but there were two changes in the membership during the year. Olin D. Johnston (D S.C.), a Senator since 1944 and chairman of the Post Office and Civil Service Committee, died April 18, 1965. On April 21 South Carolina Gov. Donald Stuart Russell (D), 59, resigned as Governor to accept appointment to the Senate seat. Lt. Gov. Robert E. McNair (D) was sworn in as Governor April 22 and immediately appointed Russell to serve until November 1966, when a special election would be held to fill out the remaining two years of the term. Russell, a lawyer, was a proponent of states' rights, but was considered a moderate on the racial question. He was sworn in April 23 and was assigned to the Agriculture and Forestry, and Post Office and Civil Service Committees.

Gov. Albertis S. Harrison Jr. (D Va.) Nov. 11 announced the resignation of Sen. Harry Flood Byrd (D Va.), 78, a Senator since 1933. Byrd, who had been the principal power in Virginia politics for over 40 years, was chairman of the Finance Committee and third ranking Democrat on the Armed Services Committee. On Nov. 12, Harrison named Byrd's son, Harry Flood Byrd Jr. (D), 50, to serve in the seat until 1966, when a special election would be held to fill out the remaining four years of the term. Harry Flood Byrd Jr., who had been a Virginia state Senator, assumed his new duties Nov. 15, and was sworn in when the second session convened.

● HOUSE -- The first House vacancy resulted from the Feb. 1 resignation of Albert W. Watson (D S.C. 2nd District). Watson, who had been stripped of seniority rights Jan. 2 by the Democrats because he supported the Republican Presidential candidate in 1964, had switched from the Democratic to Republican party Jan. 12. He resigned in order to seek election as a Republican. In a June 15 special election Watson defeated State Rep. Preston H. Callison (D), 56,291 to 24,409. He was the first Republican to win a South Carolina House seat since the Reconstruction era.

T. Ashton Thompson (D La. 7th District) died July 1. In a race for the Democratic nomination, State Sen. Edwin W. Edwards (D), 38, a racial moderate, Oct. 3 defeated segregationist Gary Tyler (D), 51,963 votes to 44,672. Gov. John J. McKeithen (D) Oct. 15 announced that since no Republican had filed to run in the Oct. 26 special election, the election was cancelled and Edwards was declared the winner. Edwards was sworn in Oct. 18 and assigned to the Public Works Committee.

Clarence J. Brown (R Ohio 7th District), a Representative since 1939 and the ranking minority member of both the Rules and the Government Operations Committees, died Aug. 23. He was succeeded by his son, Clarence J. Brown Jr (R), 38, who defeated James A. Berry (D) with a 22,830 plurality (59.6 percent) in the Nov. 2 special election.

James Roosevelt (D Calif. 26th District), son of the late President Roosevelt, Sept. 30 resigned to accept President Johnson's Aug. 25 appointment as U.S. Representative to the United Nations Economic and Social Council. Earlier in the year, Roosevelt April 6 had been defeated in the Los Angeles mayoralty race by the incumbent Mayor Samuel Yorty (D). In a Dec. 15 runoff for the House seat, State Sen. Thomas Rees (D), 40, defeated Dr. Ed Marshall (R), 40,575 votes to 27, 696. Entertainer Steve Allen (D) had announced his candidacy for the seat, but Oct. 20 he was denied a place on the ballot by the California Supreme Court because he had not registered as a member of his political party 90 days before the election. Before Sept. 18 Allen was registered as an independent.

Herbert C. Bonner (D N.C. 1st District), chairman of the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, died Nov. 7. In a special election Feb. 5, 1966, State Sen. Walter B. Jones, (D), 54, defeated John East (R). Edward A. Garmatz (D Md.) succeeded Bonner as chairman in 1966.

John V. Lindsay (R N.Y. 17th District) Dec. 30 resigned to become Mayor of New York City, to which he was elected Nov. 2. (See p. 1546)

Footnotes

†Died or resigned after Jan. 3, 1965. See changes in membership, p. 27.
Rep. Watson, elected as a Democrat in 1964, became a Republican Jan. 12, 1965; resigned from Congress Feb. 1; was elected as a Republican June 15, 1965.*

For delegations from each state, see p. 33-37.

Seniority in the 89th Congress

(As of Jan. 3, 1965)

Senate Seniority

Senate rank generally is determined according to the official date of the beginning of a Member's service, which is Jan. 3 except in the case of new Members sworn in after Congress is in session. For those appointed or elected to fill unexpired terms, the date of appointment, certification or swearing in determines the Senator's rank.

When Members are sworn in on the same day, custom decrees that those with prior political experience take precedence. Counted as political experience, in order of importance, are Senatorial, House and Gubernatorial service. Information on prior experience is given below. The dates following Senators' names refer to the beginning of their present service.

House Seniority

House rank generally is determined according to the official date of the beginning of a Member's service, which is Jan. 3 except in the case of Members elected to fill vacancies, when the date of election determines the rank.

When Members enter the House on the same day, those with prior House experience take precedence, starting with those with the greatest consecutive service. Experience as Senator or Governor is disregarded. Information on prior experience is given below. The dates following Members' names refer to the beginning of their present service.

CHARACTERISTICS OF MEMBERS OF THE 89th CONGRESS

A summary of the ages, professions and religions of Members of the 89th Congress, compiled at the beginning of the 1965 session, showed these highlights:

Average Age - 51.9

Senator	57.7
Representative	50.5
Newcomer, Representative	43.8

The youngest Senator was Edward M. Kennedy (D Mass.), 32; the youngest Representative was Jed J. Johnson Jr. (D Okla.), whose 25th birthday was Dec. 27, 1964. Legal minimum age for a Senator is 30; for a Representative, 25. The oldest Senator was Carl Hayden (D Ariz.), 87; the oldest Representative was Barratt O'Hara (D Ill.), 82.

RELIGIONS -- Roman Catholics replaced Methodists as the largest religious group in Congress, with 108 Members. Methodists, who had the most numerous membership in the 88th Congress with 102, moved to second place with 91. Roman Catholics had held second place during 1963-64 with 92. Episcopalians, who ranked fifth numerically in the 88th Congress, moved up to third place with 69 Members.

PROFESSIONS -- As always, more Congressmen had backgrounds as civil servants and politicians (469) than as members of any other profession. As in 1963-64, the next most frequently mentioned occupation was lawyer (314), followed by business and banking (181).

Four Congressmen, Sen. Pat McNamara (D Mich.) and Reps. Joseph E. Karth (D Minn.), Joseph G. Minish (D N.J.) and Paul J. Krebs (D N.J.), had been labor union officials. Four Congressmen were physicians: Sen. Ernest Gruening (D Alaska), who never practiced as a doctor, and Reps. Thomas E. Morgan (D Pa.), Tim Lee Carter (R Ky.) and Durward G. Hall (R Mo.). Three Members of the House were ordained ministers: Rep. Walter H. Moeller (D Ohio), a Lutheran; and Reps. Adam C. Powell (D N.Y.) and John H. Buchanan Jr. (R Ala.), Baptist ministers. War veterans in Congress numbered 373 out of the 535 Members.

There were 12 women in the 1965 session and six Negroes, Democratic Reps. Augustus F. Hawkins (D Calif.), William L. Dawson (D Ill.), freshman John J. Conyers Jr. (D Mich.), Charles C. Diggs Jr. (D Mich.), Adam C. Powell (D N.Y.) and Robert N.C. Nix (D Pa.).

CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES

A list of Congressional committees and subcommittees, their functions and membership appears on the following pages. The membership is complete as of April 30, 1965.

● LISTING -- Democrats are listed on the left, Republicans on the right in order of their seniority on the committee. In the case of party leadership committees, members are listed alphabetically.

● KEY -- Full committee names are in boldface type, while subcommittee names are capitalized. Asterisk (*) following the names of the committee chairman or ranking minority member indicates ex officio member of all subcommittees. Dagger (†) indicates a member waived seniority to the next in line. Double dagger (‡) indicates ex officio member from another committee.

89th CONGRESS JOINT COMMITTEES, SUBCOMMITTEES

Following is a list of eight major joint Congressional committees and their subcommittees. Joint committees are set up to examine specific questions and are established by public law. Membership is drawn from both chambers and both parties. When a Senator serves as chairman, the vice chairman is usually a Representative, and vice versa. The chairmanship usually rotates from one chamber to the other at the beginning of each Congress.

There are currently three other joint committees: Disposition of Executive Papers; Immigration and Nationality Policy; Navajo-Hopi Indian Administration.

Atomic Energy

Atomic Energy Commission; development, use and control of atomic energy generally. Reports legislation to House and Senate.

Congress 1965 -- The Year in Review

Johnson Leadership, Large Majorities Win Legislative Grand Slam for Democrats

"Tonight, the President of the United States is going on record as naming this session of Congress the greatest in American history.... From your committees and both your houses have come the greatest outpouring of creative legislation in the history of this nation.... This has been the fabulous 89th Congress." Thus did President Johnson plan to praise the assembled legislators of the 89th at a White House "Salute to Congress" on Oct. 7. He did not deliver his remarks because the House of Representatives could not make it to the party. It worked until after midnight that day to complete action on the Administration's highway beautification bill, and before it finished, the President had gone to Bethesda Naval Hospital for a gall bladder operation.

The President's views were echoed by Democrats in Congress. House Majority Leader Carl Albert (D Okla.) Oct. 10 declared that the 89th Congress was "the most significant in all our history." But a chorus of Republicans complained throughout the year that it was the "rubber-stamp Congress."

Whatever the assessment, it was clear that the first session of the 89th, starting early and working late, had passed more major legislation than most Congresses pass in two sessions. The scope of the legislation was even more impressive than the number of major new laws. Measures which, taken alone, would have crowned the achievements of any Congress, were enacted in a seemingly endless stream.

In the course of the year, Congress approved major programs which had long been on the agenda of the Democratic party; in the case of medical care for the aged under Social Security, for as long as 20 years. Other long-standing objectives were met by enactment of aid to primary and secondary schools, college scholarships and immigration reform.

The pace of the session was so breathless as to cause a major revision of the image, widely prevalent in preceding years, of Congress as structurally incapable of swift decision, prone to frustrate demands for progress. The change was due to three primary factors not always present in past years: The decisive Democratic majorities elected in 1964, the personal leadership of President Johnson, and the shaping of legislation to obtain maximum political support in Congress. On a number of occasions (most notably in connection with the Elementary-Secondary Education Act) the word was passed to approve the bill and worry about perfecting details later. (See Mansfield statement, next page)

Major Bills. In addition to "medicare," aid to education and immigration, Congress also approved important new legislation to: enforce Negro voting rights in the South, provide a broad housing program including rent subsidies to low-income families and grants for beautifying city parks and streets, promote regional economic planning and development, rebuild the Appalachian region, eliminate most federal excise taxes, and establish a national foundation to encourage and subsidize the arts and humanities. It drafted and approved a constitutional amendment on Presidential continuity, dealing with the problems of a disabled President and a vacancy in the office of Vice President.

Other measures extended and revised the manpower training and anti-poverty laws, as well as feed grains, wheat and cotton commodity programs; encouraged regional medical centers for research and treatment benefitting victims of heart disease, cancer and stroke; raised Social Security benefits and taxes; established programs to combat water pollution and expand water supply planning; ordered automotive exhaust controls; established a program to clean up the appearance of federal-aid highways by screening junkyards, controlling placement of billboards and landscaping roads; removed silver from coins and gold backing from Federal Reserve deposits; reduced the tourist duty exemption and took other steps to combat the balance-of-payments deficit; expanded controls over sales of depressant and stimulant drugs; required a health warning on cigarette packages but barred controls on advertising; established a new national park and several national recreation areas; enabled U.S. participation in the International Coffee Agreement; and put into effect a U.S.-Canadian agreement on auto tariffs.

Taken together with bills passed by the second session of the 88th Congress, notably the Civil Rights Act, the income tax cut and the anti-poverty program, the record of the first two Johnson sessions in the field of civil benefits led Washington observers to make favorable comparisons with the 73rd Congress of 1933-34, in the first two years of the Roosevelt New Deal, and the 63rd Congress of 1913-14, in the first years of the Wilson Administration.

The President scored notable successes on three of his major requests: medical care for the aged, voting rights, and elementary-secondary education, all of which were strengthened by Congress rather than diluted. The Administration was forced to make concessions on a fourth major bill, immigration reform, but attained its primary objective, which was repeal of the national-origins quota system. Larger concessions were required before Congress would accept other major Administration proposals covering rent subsidies, highway beautification, wheat farmers' income guarantees and the program to combat heart disease, cancer and stroke.

Foreign Issues. In a session dominated by domestic programs, there was also an unusual amount of concern over foreign policy problems. The year was punctuated by major crises in Viet Nam and the Dominican Republic. Faced with the threat of success by the Viet Cong Communist insurgents in South Viet Nam, President Johnson first initiated large-scale bombing raids in both North Viet Nam and South Viet Nam. When this tactic did not succeed in turning the course of the war, he ordered a vast increase -- from about 20,000 to over 140,000 -- in American troop strength in the south, and an aggressive prosecution of the land war. Both steps required new outlays for men and materiel. Despite highly vocal criticism of his Viet Nam policy by a small band of Senators, Congress overwhelmingly approved Mr. Johnson's special request for funds.

The Viet Nam critics in Congress got fresh ammunition when the President sent more than 30,000 troops to the Dominican Republic to end a civil war that he said threatened to place the country under Communist control. The Senate Foreign Relations Committee held closed hearings on the Dominican crisis but deadlocked over a report. Committee Chairman J. W. Fulbright (D Ark.) followed up with a controversial Senate speech highly critical of Administration decisions on the crisis. The House of Representatives, however, passed by a lopsided 312-52 vote a resolution approving unilateral intervention in the Western Hemisphere if done to forestall Communist coups.

The Administration went through a mild crisis with Congress over aid to Egypt and Indonesia, both of which were expressing contempt for the United States. The House tried to ban all Food for Peace aid to Egypt, but with diligent work by Administration lobbyists was finally persuaded to leave the decision up to the President. A similar solution was arranged when the Senate threatened to ban all foreign aid to Egypt and Indonesia.

Congress made only a token cut in the Administration's foreign aid program, but the House and Senate fell out over how many years of aid should be authorized, and whether the program should be reorganized in 1967. In the end, the traditional one-year authorization was enacted, a House victory.

Disappointments in Congress

The two major defeats for President Johnson were D.C. "home rule" and repeal of section 14(b) of the Taft-Hartley Act, which permitted states to enact laws banning the union shop. The President made strong pleas for enactment of both in 1965; his effort to get the House to discharge the District of Columbia Committee of the home rule bill was one of the most vigorous displays of Presidential leadership in recent years. Although the bill was discharged, many of the Members who yielded to Mr. Johnson's pressure and signed the discharge petition subsequently voted for a substitute bill which effectively blocked enactment of D.C. home rule, at least for the year. The bill to repeal section 14(b) bogged down in a Senate filibuster at the end of the session and was laid aside by a weary Congress eager for adjournment.

Congress also failed to get around to passing Johnson bills to expand minimum wage coverage, reform the unemployment compensation system and establish a "wild rivers" conservation program. Other Presidential requests which were frustrated included pesticides control legislation, truth-in-lending and truth-in-packaging bills, firearms controls, standby tax cut authority, electoral reforms, ratification of the U.S.-Soviet consular treaty.

On its own initiative the Senate debated a constitutional amendment proposed by Minority Leader Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) to overturn the Supreme Court's "one man, one vote" ruling on state legislative apportionment. Supporters won a majority of the Senate's votes on the proposal but failed to get the two-thirds majority needed for approval of a constitutional amendment. The House passed a bill setting standards for apportionment of Congressional districts but the Senate did not act on it.

The issue of birth control was considered for the first time in Congressional hearings.

The Senate Rules and Administration Committee wound up the second phase of its investigation of the affairs of Robert G. Baker, former Senate Majority Secretary, and again recommended Senate reforms, but its recommendations were quietly forgotten. So were proposals to liberalize the Senate cloture rule to permit debate to be limited more easily. A six-member Senate Select Committee on Standards and Conduct was appointed after the end of the Baker probe, but failed to meet. A Joint Committee on the Organization of the Congress was set up and took reams of testimony. It had yet to issue its recommendations for changes when the session ended.

Bills Vetoed. Among the bills President Johnson vetoed were two, requiring prior Congressional approval of Executive actions, which he said were unconstitutional. One was a minor bill to aid flood-damaged states in the Pacific Northwest. The other was the annual military construction authorization bill, which involved the politically sensitive question of military base closings. Both bills were subsequently re-enacted by Congress after the objectionable provisions were removed.

Congress itself in effect vetoed several Administration plans during the year. It strongly objected to the shut-down of veterans hospitals and some other economy moves, winning reconsideration by the Administration, and it blocked the proposed merger of the Army Reserve and the Army National Guard.

Mansfield on 1966 Outlook

Following is an excerpt from a Sept. 28 statement by Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield at a Senate Democratic Conference meeting:

"The President has stated that 'we look forward to the Congress being able to get out of here early next year. I would say certainly far ahead of the fiscal year in June'.... I welcome...the President's view that he does not expect anything like the volume of the substantive legislation next year.'

"The scope of achievements in the last eight or nine months makes any repetition of the volume of significant legislation which has been cleared in the present session not only unlikely but, in my judgment, undesirable. That is not to say that during the second session we may expect nothing in the way of proposals for new initiating legislation.... Even less does it mean that we will be able to take it easy for the first half of 1966. What is indicated, it seems to me, is that barring some extraordinary crisis in foreign policy the main concern of the Senate in the second session will be the perfection, the elaboration, and the refinement of the basic legislation which underpins major federal programs and, particularly, the legislation which has been put into the statute books during the past three or four years. Indeed, that is likely to be the main concern not only for the next session but for some time to come."

Johnson Leadership

The record of the first session of the 89th Congress stood as a lesson in Presidential leadership surpassing even the strong showing made by Mr. Johnson in 1964. The President seized the momentum provided by his landslide victory in the 1964 election and the large Democratic majorities in the House and Senate to get much of his program off to an early start; then he sustained the pace, sending up new messages and programs throughout the first half of the year to keep Congressional mills turning. Republican alternative programs got short shrift and even less public attention.

The President gained maximum political effect from his efforts to build a broad consensus of support. His fiscal 1966 Budget was drafted with great care to present a total under $100 billion and convince the business community that Mr. Johnson meant to keep his pledge of economy in Government; the excise tax cut, designed to keep the economy growing steadily, appealed to businessmen and consumers alike. Lack of strong business opposition made it easier to mount the Great Society program of greatly increased civil benefits.

An outstanding example of the President's consensus-building technique and legislative leadership was provided by the Elementary-Secondary Education Act of 1965. Previous bills providing general aid to education had become mired in Congress over the issue of aid to church-supported schools. But before the Johnson school bill was submitted to Congress, Administration officials held meetings with leaders of the two major, and hitherto opposed, education lobbies, the National Education Assn. and the National Catholic Welfare Conference. Both groups gave their approval of a new approach to end the impasse: to aid not schools as such, but their children, whether in public or private school, and particularly in poor areas. With the two major lobbies brought into consensus, the Administration drafted the aid formula of the bill with an eye to gaining the maximum votes in Congress. The lobby groups supported the bill, the formula withstood all challenges on the floor, and Mr. Johnson's legislative leaders pushed the program through by April 9, without major amendment. The Senate made no changes whatsoever in the House bill.

In a similar fashion, the House accepted unchanged the Senate's version of the Administration's Appalachia bill and sent it to the President March 3.

Such lightning legislative work in the early months of the session led to Republican charges that the 89th was a "rubber-stamp" Congress. Administration officials warmly denied the charge, pointing to the many programs on which they had to compromise during the year.

In an effort to avoid setbacks, President Johnson went further than any recent President in cultivating a close relationship with Congress. He held a series of evening parties for Congressmen and their wives, combining a buffet supper and dancing with a briefing for the Members on national security affairs, conducted by Cabinet officers and other high Executive officials. Both personally and through the White House legislative liaison staff, headed by Lawrence F. O'Brien, the President kept in close touch with Democratic Members, offering them small favors and, in O'Brien's words, developing a "rapport." This "rapport" and the President's knowledge of the legislative process made it possible for him to nudge a committee toward a vote here, press for early hearings there, and in general take a direct hand in the management of his legislative program in Congress.

House Performance. President Johnson's skill alone does not explain the productivity of the 1965 session. A most important factor was the increased Democratic majority in the House of Representatives. In the 1964 elections, House Democrats made a net gain of 38 seats over the Republicans and also traded some conservative Democratic votes in the South for some liberal Democratic votes in the North. They held a 153-vote margin over the Republicans most of the year. The newfound liberal strength in the House showed itself most dramatically in the passage of the elementary-secondary education bill and the medical care bill. The Senate had in recent years passed both "medicare" and general aid-to-education bills, only to see them blocked in the House. This was largely because from 1961 to 1964 the Democratic majorities in the House, sizable in appearance, in practice gave the leadership only slender working majorities, due to the cooperation of conservative Southern Democrats with the Republican party.

Of the 71 Democratic freshmen in 1965, 67 voted for passage of the education bill and the same number voted for medicare. The Democratic freshmen on the average supported the President more than 80 percent of the time on House roll-call votes, according to a CQ study made in August.

The Johnson Democrats made their new strength evident at the first meeting of House Democrats on Jan. 2. At this caucus, liberals succeeded in:

- Censuring and stripping of seniority rights two Southern Democrats who had supported the Republican candidate, Goldwater, in the 1964 Presidential campaign.
- Approving a three-part revision in House rules that gave the Speaker authority to bring legislation to the floor if blocked by the Rules Committee, and also impeded the dilatory tactics of the opposition. (See box, next page)

Another result of the large Democratic majority was an increase in their party ratios on House committees. The Ways and Means Committee ratio was changed from 15 D - 10 R to 17 D - 8 R, and the three Democratic vacancies on the Committee were filled by supporters of the Administration's "medicare" plan. The action made it virtually certain that the Committee, which in past years had defeated "medicare" proposals, in 1965 would approve one.

A characteristic of House action on many Administration bills during the year was foreshadowed when the Ways and Means Democrats, under the leadership of Chairman Wilbur D. Mills (D Ark.), previously "medicare's" most influential opponent, greatly expanded the medical care proposals sent up by the President. In like fashion, House Democrats later expanded on Administration requests in the higher education, elementary-secondary education, regional development and anti-poverty bills and overrode the White House's proposals by approving military and federal pay bills that greatly exceeded the recommended pay increases.

In the Senate the Administration met with equal success except for the impasse over repeal of the right-to-work clause. Although an attempt to end debate on 14(b) through cloture failed, earlier the leaders of the two parties had gathered the two-thirds majority needed to invoke cloture on the voting rights bill.

Floor Leaders. The Majority and Minority leadership in the House and Senate remained unchanged from 1964 except for the election of Rep. Gerald R. Ford (R Mich.) as House Minority Leader and Sen. Russell B. Long (D La.) as Senate Majority Whip.

What Congress Did

(For appropriations voted, see p. 150)

AGRICULTURE

Omnibus Farm. Congress enacted a four-year omnibus farm bill (HR 9811 -- PL 89-321) extending existing programs for wheat, wool, and feed grains, implementing new programs for dairy products, cotton and cropland adjustment and providing for a rice diversion program under certain circumstances.

The bill was a heavily amended version of legislation requested by President Johnson. The President had made recommendations on all commodities except cotton and supported a modified version (written into the bill) of cotton legislation introduced by Rep. Harold D. Cooley (D N.C.).

Most significant Administration defeat on the farm bill was elimination by the House of a provision requiring millers to finance increased wheat subsidies through more costly marketing certificates.

Sugar. Congress revised and extended through Dec. 31, 1971, domestic and foreign sugar quotas. The Sugar Act Amendments (HR 11135 -- PL 89-331) increased domestic mainland cane and beet sugar quotas by 580,000 tons a year and granted foreign quotas to 31 nations. House and Senate quotas for foreign countries differed significantly; in the final version, House provisions prevailed in most cases. The Senate version was closer to the Administration's recommendations.

Tobacco Quotas. Congress passed an amended Administration-backed bill (HR 5721 -- PL 89-12) providing acreage-poundage quotas in place of existing acreage allotments for the 1965 flue-cured tobacco crop and for other tobacco beginning in 1966. The new quotas would not become effective for any kind of tobacco unless approved by two-thirds of the growers voting in a referendum. If the new system were rejected, existing acreage controls would continue. (Growers of flue-cured tobacco subsequently voted in a referendum to accept the new program.) President Johnson requested acreage-poundage marketing quotas for tobacco in his 1965 Farm Message to provide better controls and as a means of improving the quality of the tobacco.

Farmers Home Administration Loan Ceiling. Congress cleared a bill (S 1766 -- PL 89-240) increasing the annual ceiling on Farmers Home Administration insured loans from $200 million to $450 million. The bill also provided grants to help develop water supply and waste disposal systems in rural areas (see What Congress Did -- 9).

EDUCATION AND WELFARE

Elementary-Secondary Education. President Johnson April 11, outside the former one-room schoolhouse at Stonewall, Texas, where he first attended classes, signed the Elementary-Secondary Education Act of 1965 (HR 2362 -- PL 89-10).

Enactment of HR 2362 marked the first time that Congress had approved legislation which in effect authorized funds for general use in elementary-secondary schools

House Rules Revised, Cloture Not

The balance of power between the majority leadership and an obstructive majority in the House of Representatives was shifted further toward the majority leadership Jan. 4, 1965, when the House adopted three new rules designed to increase the authority of the Speaker, reduce the obstructive power of the House Rules Committee, and outlaw a delaying tactic sometimes used by the minority during debate on a bill.

Of the three new House rules, the most important was the "21-day rule." This permitted the Speaker to recognize a member of a committee to call up a resolution authorizing debate on any bill reported by the committee which had remained before the Rules Committee for 21 days without gaining clearance for House consideration.

The 21-day procedure was used six times during 1965: on July 26 the House agreed to a resolution authorizing debate on a bill (HR 77) to repeal section 14(b) of the Taft-Hartley Act, which permitted states to enact laws banning the union shop (the House passed HR 77 July 28); on Aug. 24, the House adopted a resolution for debate on a bill (HR 9022) providing additional financial aid to public schools affected by natural disasters (the House passed the bill Aug. 30, and it was cleared by the Senate Oct. 15); and on Sept. 13 the House adopted resolutions for debate on four bills. These were HR 9460, authorizing a National Foundation on the Arts and Humanities; HR 7371, bringing the DuPont estate of Florida under the provisions of the Bank Holding Company Act; HR 10281, the federal pay raise bill; and HR 10065, strengthening federal fair employment laws. The first three of these bills were subsequently passed by the House and of them, the arts and humanities bill and the federal pay increase were enacted.

The second rule adopted Jan. 4 permitted the Speaker to recognize a Member to offer a motion that would permit sending a bill to conference by majority vote. Previously, if unanimous consent for a conference was not obtained, a rule had to be sought from the Rules Committee and the Committee could be bypassed only by a two-thirds vote of the House.

The third rule adopted Jan. 4 deprived a Member of the right to demand an engrossed copy of a bill before it was passed -- a tactic to delay final action on the bill, usually overnight.

Senate Cloture Rule. Senate Rule 22, which requires the votes of two-thirds of the Senators present and voting to shut off debate, was again attacked by liberal Senators who wished a more workable cloture procedure. However, they were persuaded to send their proposals to the Senate Rules and Administration Committee, which was ordered to report them back by March 9. The proposals were reported with unfavorable recommendations on that day, but no effort was made to call them up during the rest of the session.

The Senate in May invoked cloture on the Administration's voting rights bill (S 1564) but in October rejected cloture on the House-passed bill (HR 77 -- see above) to repeal Section 14(b) of the Taft-Hartley Act.

and the first time it successfully bypassed an obstacle that had blocked similar legislation for a number of years. The obstacle was the question of whether aid should go to non-public as well as public schools -- particularly to those sponsored or operated by a church. The problem was overcome by providing some forms of assistance to students in parochial schools, but not to the schools themselves.

Included in PL 89-10 were a three-year program of federal grants to the states to be allotted to school districts with large numbers of low-income families or families on relief; a five-year program of grants to the states for purchasing library books, textbooks and other library materials for students in public and private non-profit schools; a five-year program of grants for community-wide educational centers; a five-year program of grants for improving educational research and training research personnel; and a five-year program of grants to help strengthen state departments of education.

Higher Education. In his far-reaching education message Jan. 12, President Johnson recommended not only federal aid for preschool programs and elementary-secondary education, but also proposed new programs for higher education: federal scholarships for college students, federally guaranteed low-interest loans, aid to struggling small colleges and community service programs, grants for college libraries and training.

The House Aug. 26 passed HR 9567, which carried out most of the President's requests. It was the first time the House had approved scholarships for general undergraduate education. The Senate version, passed Sept. 2, added graduate fellowships for elementary and secondary school teachers and a Teacher Corps whose members would augment school faculties in slum and other impoverished areas. The final version, including most elements of the Senate bill, was cleared Oct. 20 after the Teacher Corps was upheld on a 226-152 vote. Funds for the Corps, however, were denied in the session-end supplemental appropriations bill (HR 11588).

Omnibus Housing. Congress July 27 cleared an Administration-backed bill (HR 7984 -- PL 89-117) authorizing $7.8 billion to fund new and existing housing programs through Oct. 1, 1969. Highlight of the measure was an Administration program for rent supplements to low-income families who could not obtain standard housing with their own incomes. The final version of HR 7984 also embodied most of President Johnson's other housing requests, but it did not include a major Administration program to provide Federal Housing Administration (FHA) mortgage insurance on land development loans for developers of new towns. Under a strong assault by Republicans, the "new towns" provision was dropped in committees of both House and Senate.

HR 7984 was passed by the House June 30 on a 245-169 roll-call vote and by the Senate July 15 on a 54-30 roll call. Although the bill in general commanded wide support in both chambers, a vigorous and at times acrimonious debate centered on the rent supplements program. With House opposition apparently strong enough to defeat the plan, Administration forces agreed to an amendment which limited the payment of supplements to persons whose incomes were low enough to make them eligible for public housing. (The original proposal covered these persons as well as persons with a somewhat higher income.) Republican opposition to the entire plan held firm, however, and a GOP recommittal motion designed to eliminate the supplements section missed adoption by a 202-208 roll call. In the Senate, a GOP-sponsored amendment to delete the modified program failed by seven votes. When Congress voted on appropriations for supplements, however, funds were knocked out of the supplemental appropriation bill (HR 11588), at least until 1966.

In addition to the rent supplements plan, HR 7984 extended numerous housing programs, including ones for moderate-income families, low-rent public housing (authorizing an additional 60,000 units annually over the following four years) and housing for the elderly. New federal aid for land development was included in the measure, as were sections on urban renewal, college housing and urban beautification.

Urban renewal grants were made subject to prior appropriations in the independent offices bill (HR 7997).

Department of Housing. Congress in 1965 passed an Administration-backed bill (HR 6927 -- PL 89-174) creating a cabinet-level Department of Housing and Urban Development -- the first addition to the President's Cabinet since the Department of Health, Education and Welfare was created in 1953. HR 6927 was passed by the House June 16 on a 217-184 roll-call vote and by the Senate Aug. 11 on a 57-33 roll call. In both chambers, most of the opposition came from Republicans and Southern Democrats.

In its major provisions, HR 6927 transferred to the new Secretary all the powers, functions and duties of the Housing and Home Finance Agency and its components -- the Federal Housing Administration, Public Housing Administration and the Federal National Mortgage Assn. The measure was a revival of legislation which failed to pass Congress in 1962, partly because of opposition to President John F. Kennedy's announced intention to appoint Housing Administrator Robert C. Weaver, a Negro, as Secretary of the new Department. President Johnson in 1965 gave no advance indication of his choice for the post -- a tactic which picked up enough Southern votes to ensure the bill's enactment. The new Secretary had not been named when the session adjourned.

'Medicare.' A 20-year fight for a Federal Government health insurance program was climaxed in 1965, when Congress passed a bill (HR 6675 -- PL 89-97) establishing a Social Security medical care program for the aged. President Johnson, who pushed unsuccessfully in 1964 for enactment of medical care legislation, gave "medicare" top priority in 1965.

PL 89-97, the Social Security Amendments of 1965, also increased Social Security cash benefits and expanded public assistance programs, but these provisions received broad bipartisan support and were not a subject of controversy (see below).

The $6.5 billion bill provided two health care programs for most persons 65 and older. One, called the basic plan and commonly referred to as "medicare," would cover most hospital and nursing home costs, diagnostic studies and home health-care visits. It would be compulsory, financed mainly by a payroll tax and administered by the Social Security system. Republicans and the American Medical Assn. strongly opposed this plan. The second health-care program, called the supplementary plan, would be voluntary and would be financed by $3 monthly premiums from participants and by general revenue. This program covered a variety of health services, including doctor bills. The supplementary plan was based on Republican proposals.

Social Security. Congress passed a bill (HR 6675 -- PL 89-97) providing a 7-percent across-the-board increase in Old-Age Survivors and Disability Insurance benefits, retroactive to Jan. 1, 1965. Retroactive payments totaling about $885 million were sent out in September to some 20 million recipients.

HR 6675, which set up Government medical care programs (see above), also liberalized other Social Security provisions to provide further benefits and extended coverage to self-employed physicians and to tips. The additional Social Security benefits provided by HR 6675 were expected to total $2.3 billion in the first full year of operation (1966).

Congress also passed a bill (HR 10874 -- PL 89-212) amending the Railroad Retirement Act of 1937. The bill raised the maximum creditable and taxable compensation base for the railroad retirement system from $450 to $550 a month, the level set for the Social Security system by HR 6675.

Programs for the Aging. Congress passed an Administration-backed bill (HR 3708 -- PL 89-73) creating an Administration on Aging in the Health, Education and Welfare Department and authorizing total appropriations of $17.5 million in fiscal 1966 and 1967 for grants for developing programs for the aging. The Older Americans Act of 1965 was based on requests originally made by President Kennedy in 1963 in a "Special Message on Aiding Our Senior Citizens" and on recommendations of the 1961 White House Conference on Aging.

Regional Medical Programs. Congress authorized a three-year, $340-million program of grants to establish an estimated 25 regional medical programs in the fields of heart disease, cancer, stroke and related diseases. In his Jan. 7 Health Message, President Johnson proposed a five-year grant program to establish a series of regional medical "complexes" consisting of both existing facilities and new ones which could be constructed with the help of federal funds, to provide a coordinated system of research and training and diagnosis and treatment of patients. The bill Congress enacted (S 596 -- PL 89-239) authorized grants to assist in establishment of regional "cooperative arrangements." It did not include authority to use funds for construction of new facilities, but placed more emphasis on local initiative in establishing the centers.

Drug Controls. One of the least controversial major bills enacted in 1965 was HR 2 (PL 89-74) which expanded federal controls over depressant and stimulant drugs (barbiturates or "goof balls" and amphetamines or "pep pills") in order to reduce illegal distribution and use. The need for effective controls was stressed by the President in two messages to Congress -- in his Jan. 7 Health Message as a health measure and in his March 8 Message on Crime as a means to reduce crimes resulting from "indiscriminate" use of drugs.

Health Programs Extensions. Four existing health programs were extended in 1965 through enactment of S 510 (PL 89-109). The program of grants for immunization of children against polio, diphtheria, tetanus and whooping cough was authorized for another three years and expanded to include measles and other infectious diseases. Also extended for three years and enlarged was the program of grants for health services to domestic migrant workers. The bill authorized one-year extensions of programs of grants for general health assistance and for community health services. The extensions were requested by the President in his Jan. 7 Health Message.

Mental Health Staffing. Congress in 1965 gave President Johnson what it denied President Kennedy in 1963: a program of federal grants to cover part of the costs of initial professional and technical personnel at community mental health centers. The final bill (HR 2985 -- PL 89-105) authorized the grants over seven years and extended and expanded the existing programs of grants for training teachers of mentally retarded and handicapped children and for university research and demonstration projects to improve educational opportunities for handicapped children.

Health Research Facilities. Congress enacted legislation (HR 2984 -- PL 89-115) extending and increasing fund authorizations for the existing program of grants for construction of health research facilities. The President requested the legislation. The bill also authorized the Public Health Service to negotiate contracts for health research through fiscal 1969 and -- partly as a result of the numerous health bills enacted by Congress in 1965 -- authorized appointment of three additional Assistant Secretaries of Health, Education and Welfare (for a total of six).

Health Professions Education. In response to requests by President Johnson in his Jan. 7 Health Message, Congress enacted legislation (HR 3141 -- PL 89-290) extending for three years and expanding the existing programs of federal grants for construction of teaching facilities to train health personnel and of loans for students in specified health fields. The bill also granted the President's requests for new programs of grants to improve teaching programs and of scholarships for needy students in specified health professions.

Medical Library Facilities. Congress Oct. 12 cleared a bill (S 597 -- PL 89-291) authorizing $105 million in grants to improve medical library services and facilities over a five-year period. The bill authorized funds for construction, research, and training, and provided for the establishment of regional medical libraries.

Vocational Rehabilitation. With no opposition expressed in either chamber, Congress in 1965 approved legislation (HR 8310 -- PL 89-333) requested by the President to expand existing vocational rehabilitation programs. The goal was to increase the number of persons rehabilitated annually from 120,000 to 200,000 and improve the quality of rehabilitation programs. The bill authorized grants to cover part of the costs of expansion of existing services, innovation of services by the states, initiation of special programs to increase the number of persons rehabilitated and their instructors, construction and initial staffing of workshops and other facilities, and provision of new training services including allowances for trainees. It also allowed longer periods of time for determining the rehabilitation potential of the severely disabled or retarded and eliminated an existing requirement that most services be provided for people in need of economic assistance. Both the House and Senate versions contained the major provisions requested by the Administration, but the final bill also included provisions added by the House which changed the current financing provisions to ease state matching requirements and to set specific dollar and year limits on most programs.

Vocational Training Loans. Congress Oct. 8 cleared for the President's signature a bill (HR 7743) providing federal loan insurance and interest subsidies for students in post high-school business, trade, technical and other vocational education (PL 89-287).

Cigarette Labeling. A lobbying campaign by the cigarette industry paid off in 1965 as Congress enacted a bill (S 559 -- PL 89-92) which not only required a health-hazard warning statement on cigarette packages and cartons ("Caution: Cigarette Smoking May Be Hazardous to Your Health"), but also prohibited any other health warning requirement on the packages and prohibited until July 1, 1969, any requirements that cigarette advertising include a similar statement. The bill was Congress's response to the Jan. 11, 1964, declaration of the Surgeon General's Advisory Committee on Smoking and Health that "cigarette smoking is a health hazard of sufficient importance...to warrant appropriate remedial action." The bill superseded a 1964 promulgation by the Federal Trade Commission that both cigarette packages and advertising carry a warning of the health hazards of smoking and also prevented states and localities from requiring a stronger warning on cigarette packages.

Poverty Amendments. Congress in HR 8283 (PL 89-253) more than doubled the first year's anti-poverty authorization. HR 8283 authorized appropriations of $1,785,000,000, which was $285 million more than the Administration requested. Final action on the bill came when the House Sept. 23 and the Senate Sept. 24, by a 46-22 roll-call vote, adopted a second conference report on the bill. On Sept. 15, the House, by a 209-180 roll-call vote, had sent the bill back to conference with instructions to reinsert a House provision retaining a limited gubernatorial veto power over certain locally initiated, federally aided anti-poverty programs. House Republicans, spearheading attempts to retain a veto power for the Governors, voted unanimously for recommittal. Conferees bowed and accepted the House version in place of the originally accepted Senate version, which repealed the veto power entirely over certain programs. As enacted, the provision permitted a state Governor to veto Neighborhood Youth Corps, community action and adult basic education programs, but authorized the Office of Economic Opportunity Director to override the veto.

HR 8283 also made numerous amendments to the 1964 Act, including extension through Aug. 20, 1967, of 90-percent federal financing of certain programs. The bill also directed federal attention to the special needs of chronically unemployed poor adults and of the elderly poor.

VA Hospital Closings. Congress succeeded in drastically modifying Administration plans to close, mainly for economy reasons, 11 Veterans Administration hospitals and 4 old soldiers homes, and to consolidate 16 regional VA offices.

The announcement of the closings Jan. 12 brought outcries from affected Congressmen and precipitated a series of efforts to forestall the closings. The President's nomination of William J. Driver as VA Administrator was held up as a result of the controversy, but Driver was finally confirmed Feb. 2. The Senate, by attaching to a supplemental appropriations bill (H J Res 234 -- PL 89-2) a temporary ban on the closings, did succeed in forcing the Administration to delay its plans. Congress also expressed its displeasure in two other bills, neither of which took legal effect (S Con Res 13; HR 202). Compromising with his Congressional opposition, President Johnson June 8 followed the recommendations of a special advisory committee and ordered the VA to close only 6 of the 11 hospitals, 2 of the 4 old soldiers homes, and to consolidate only 9 of the 16 regional offices.

Veterans' Compensation Increases. Both houses Oct. 21 cleared in the last-minute rush for adjournment a bill (HR 168 -- PL 89-311) providing increases in the rates of compensation for veterans with service-connected disabilities and their dependents. The bill authorized an average 10 percent increase in monthly payments, with the largest increase going to veterans who were 50 percent or more disabled. The over-all, first-year cost of the increased compensation under HR 168 was estimated at $175,826,663. The bill also authorized 4,000 Veterans Administration nursing-care beds for veterans. Dropped from the final version was a controversial Senate amendment which sought to prevent losses in veterans' compensation resulting from the 1965 Social Security increases.

Veterans' Rehabilitation. Congress enacted two bills which increased assistance for disabled veterans receiving vocational rehabilitation training. HR 208 -- PL 89-138 extended for 10 years the period during which seriously disabled World War II and Korean War veterans could take training. HR 206 (PL 89-137) provided an average 30-percent, cost-of-living increase in subsistence allowances for disabled veterans receiving vocational rehabilitation training.

Auto Safety. Congress and the Federal Government in 1965 showed increasing interest in the subject of auto safety.

The major action taken occurred Jan. 26 when the General Services Administration (GSA) published a list of 17 safety features to be required on all 1967 model motor vehicles purchased by the Government. The GSA was acting under a 1964 law prohibiting the Federal Government from purchasing passenger-carrying vehicles which were not equipped with "reasonable passenger safety devices" and directing the GSA to prescribe the required devices. (1964 Almanac p. 273)

The devices prescribed by the GSA included front and rear seat belts, padded dash panels and sun visors, recessed instrument panels, an impact-absorbing steering wheel, back-up lights, safety glass, dual brake systems, and automotive exhaust controls.

Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff (D Conn.) unsuccessfully attempted to amend the Excise Tax Reduction Act of 1965 to make 4 percentage points of the reduction in the automobile excise tax contingent on the installation in all new cars beginning with the 1968 models of the safety items and exhaust control equipment prescribed by the GSA.

In other 1965 developments, the Senate Commerce Committee conducted hearings on a bill (S 1643) requiring tire safety and performance standards, and the Senate Government Operations Executive Reorganization Subcommittee held extensive hearings on the Federal Government's role in promoting greater traffic safety.

Disaster Legislation. Following a 12-month period from July 1, 1964, to June 30, 1965, which produced one of the worst series of natural disasters on record, Congress enacted several bills to give individuals, states and local communities affected by major disasters more comprehensive and rapid disaster relief. Congress June 15 cleared a bill (S 2089 -- PL 89-41) authorizing $111,875,000 for emergency public highway and forest road construction in Pacific Northwest areas damaged by late 1964 and early 1965 floods. An earlier version of the bill was vetoed.

Congress June 21 enacted a bill (S 1796 -- PL 89-59) to provide additional Small Business Administration assistance to disaster victims and to increase by $50 million the SBA's revolving fund for disaster victims. Congress also passed bills (HR 9022) to provide additional federal aid to disaster struck public schools and (HR 8620 -- PL 89-112) to provide price support payments to wheat, feed grains and cotton growers unable to plant their crops in 1965 because of floods and other natural disasters. In an appropriations bill (HR 7997 -- PL 89-128), Congress increased the President's emergency disaster relief fund from $20 million to $55 million in fiscal 1966. In addition, the House Public Works Committee Oct. 13 reported an Administration-endorsed bill (HR 11539) to authorize $70 million in federal aid to Florida, Louisiana and Mississippi to repair public facilities damaged by September's hurricane Betsy. The bill also authorized federal loan adjustment assistance and a study of alternative federal relief programs. The House passed the bill Oct. 18 and the Senate Oct. 21.

FOREIGN POLICY

Immigration. President Johnson Oct. 3 at the Statue of Liberty signed into law an Administration-backed bill (HR 2580 -- PL 89-236) amending the 1952 McCarran-Walter Act to eliminate the national origins quota system, which had been in effect since 1925, and to establish general priorities for admission of immigrants to the United States. Under PL 89-236, close relatives of U.S. citizens and persons with special education, talents and skills were favored over other immigrants.

The bill included a 120,000 annual ceiling on immigration from the independent countries of the Western Hemisphere, the first over-all numerical limitation ever placed by the United States on Western Hemisphere immigration.

Foreign Aid. For the second consecutive year, Congress enacted the Administration's foreign aid request without a major battle and with only minor reductions in the authorization and appropriation. The appropriations bill (HR 10871 -- PL 89-273) provided $3,218,000,000 for foreign aid in fiscal 1966. The final figure was only 6.9 percent under the Administration's request of $3,459,470,000, the smallest percentage reduction in the program's history.

However, the aid program was not without controversy in 1965. Senate and House managers of the aid authorization legislation (HR 7750 -- PL 89-171) were in complete disagreement over Senate proposals to provide a two-year authorization in place of the existing one year, to end the program as currently constituted in 1967 and to create a study group to recommend a new program. The House Members refused to accept the proposals, which were not included in the final bill.

International Coffee Agreement. An Administration bill (S 701 -- PL 89-23) enabling the United States to carry out its obligations under the International Coffee Agreement of 1962 was cleared by Congress in 1965. The long-delayed bill placed a $150,000 per fiscal year limitation on U.S. contributions for administration of the Agreement. The bill provided that the enabling legislation would remain in effect until Oct. 1, 1968, or until Congress by concurrent resolution determined that there had been an "unwarranted increase" in coffee prices.

Inter-American Bank. A bill (HR 45 -- PL 89-6) authorizing a $750 million increase in the U.S. contribution to the Inter-American Development Bank's Fund for Special Operations (FSO) was enacted. The legislation was requested by the President. The final bill included a provision requiring the United States, through use of its voting power in the bank, to disapprove any FSO loan to a country which expropriated U.S. property under certain circumstances that were spelled out in the bill.

World Bank - IFC Charter Changes. Congress enacted legislation (S 1742 -- PL 89-126) requested by the Treasury Department authorizing the U.S. to consent to certain changes in the charters of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (World Bank) and its affiliate, the International Finance Corporation (IFC). The changes permitted the Bank to make loans to the IFC and the IFC to borrow from the Bank, and allowed the Bank to vote for increases in the non-U.S. subscription to the Bank's capital stock without express Congressional approval on each occasion.

IMF Contribution. A bill (HR 6497 -- PL 89-31) authorizing an increase of $1,035,000,000 in the U.S. contribution to the International Monetary Fund was approved by Congress. The increase represented a general increase of 25 percent of the U.S. share in IMF quotas, and brought the total U.S. obligation to the Fund to $5,160,000,000.

UN Charter Amendments. Amendments to the United Nations Charter designed to reflect an increase in UN membership from 51 to 114 nations since the organization's founding in 1945 were ratified by the Senate June 3 by a 71-0 roll-call vote (Exec. A, 89th Congress, 1st Session). The proposed amendments enlarged the Security Council from 11 to 15 members and the Economic and Social Council from 18 to 27 members. The amendments also increased from seven to nine the number of affirmative votes required for decisions of the Security Council, but left unchanged the existing authority of the five permanent members to veto nonprocedural matters.

Export Control Act. Congress enacted a bill (HR 7105 -- PL 89-63) extending for four years -- until June 30, 1969 -- the Export Control Act of 1949. The Act contained the basic authority in law to control exports to Communist nations and to regulate exports in line with U.S. foreign policy aims. The Administration had requested that the Act be made permanent.

Canadian Auto Agreement. Congress enacted an Administration bill (HR 9042 -- PL 89-283) implementing a Jan. 16 agreement by President Johnson and Canadian Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson to remove U.S. and Canadian tariff duties on automobiles and new car parts. The compact was reached after U.S. manufacturers protested a tariff "remission plan" drawn up by the Canadian Government in 1963 to subsidize greater exports of automobiles. Major sections of the bill authorized the President to abolish retroactively to Jan. 18, 1965, the 6.5 percent U.S. tariff on Canadian automobiles and the 8.5 percent duty on Canadian parts for original equipment; outlined procedures for reimposition of the duties under certain circumstances; and set up, until July 1, 1968, a special adjustment assistance program for U.S. auto firms and workers "dislocated" by the agreement.

International Communism. The House Sept. 20 adopted a resolution (H Res 560) which in effect endorsed the unilateral use of force by any Western Hemisphere country to prevent a Communist takeover anywhere in the Hemisphere. The resolution appeared tailored to give approval to situations such as the U.S. intervention in the Dominican Republic in April 1965, although that action was not mentioned. The resolution, which required neither the Senate's concurrence nor the President's approval and did not have the force of law, was reported to have antagonized many Latin American countries. The resolution also contributed further to a domestic controversy over the Dominican intervention that had arisen out of Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman J.W. Fulbright's (D Ark.) criticism of the U.S. action.

GENERAL GOVERNMENT

Voting Rights. President Johnson Aug. 6 signed into law the most comprehensive voting rights legislation to gain Congressional approval in 90 years. In a broad departure from the courtroom remedies of past legislation, the Administration-backed measure (S 1564 -- PL 89-110) suspended the use of literacy tests or similar voter qualification devices and authorized the appointment of federal voting examiners to order the registration of Negroes in states and voting districts whose voter activity had fallen below certain specified levels. The formula affected six Southern states (Ala., Ga., La., Miss., S.C., Va.), Alaska, 34 counties in North Carolina and one county each in Arizona, Idaho and Maine.

S 1564 was passed by the Senate May 26, on a 77-19 roll-call vote, and by the House July 9, on a 333-85 roll call. The day before Senate passage, a debate-limiting cloture motion was adopted on a roll call of 70-30. This was only the second time in history -- but the second time in two years -- that the Senate had voted cloture on civil rights legislation.

The House-Senate conferees on the bill argued for three weeks over a controversial House amendment imposing a flat ban on state poll taxes, an objective sought by civil rights organizations. Although a similar amendment had been rejected in the Senate by only four votes, 45-49, Senate conferees adamantly opposed the ban, which the Justice Department said might be unconstitutional. Finally, the conference committee agreed on language which dropped the ban and provided instead for the Attorney General to seek court action against the enforcement of such levies. This was completely satisfactory to the Administration and acceptable to civil rights forces. The final version of S 1564 was cleared by the House Aug. 3 and the Senate Aug. 4.

Presidential Continuity. Ending more than 176 years of uncertainty as to the interpretation and application of Article II, Section 1, Clause 5 of the Constitution, Congress cleared for ratification by the states a proposed constitutional amendment (S J Res 1) dealing with the two-fold problem of Presidential inability and succession. The proposed 25th Amendment to the Constitution, if ratified by 38 states within seven years, would spell out specific procedures to permit the Vice President to become Acting President if the President were unable to perform his duties and would allow the President to nominate a candidate to fill a Vice Presidential vacancy subject to confirmation by Congress. The amendment was supported by President Johnson.

Assassination of the President. Congress enacted a bill (HR 6097 -- PL 89-141) making it a federal crime to kill, kidnap or assault the President. The bill also made such attacks a federal crime if they were directed toward the President-elect, the Vice President, the officer next in the order of Presidential succession, the Vice President-elect, or any individual who was "acting as President." The bill was backed by the Administration.

The House Sept. 7 passed a bill (HR 9545) authorizing the Federal Government to acquire and preserve items of evidence (including the rifle) pertaining to the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. The Senate Oct. 18 cleared the bill.

Arts, Humanities Foundation. Congress enacted legislation (S 1483 -- PL 89-209) establishing a National Foundation on the Arts and Humanities. The bill authorized total appropriations of $63 million during fiscal 1966-1968 for federal financial aid to the visual and performing arts and for scholarship in the humanities. The bill contained the Administration's proposals for an arts and humanities foundation and authorized assistance to go to states, individuals and private nonprofit groups to support or produce amateur and professional artistic productions and encourage public appreciation of the arts. The bill also authorized grants, loans and fellowships for individuals and institutions to promote scholarship in the humanities and foster public understanding of humanistic subjects.

Crime. Despite President Johnson's March 8 message calling for a concerted attack on crime, Congress moved hesitantly in the field. Among Administration-sponsored bills passed were the Law Enforcement Assistance Act of 1965 (HR 8027 -- PL 89-197), authorizing expenditure of $10 million to train local law enforcement personnel; extension of the 1961 Juvenile Delinquency and Youth Offenses Control Act for one year (HR 8131 -- PL 89-69); funding of $1.5 million for the President's Commission on Law Enforcement and Administration of Justice and the President's Commission on Crime in the District of Columbia (S J Res 102 -- PL 89-196); extension of federal control over depressant and stimulant drugs, the so-called "pep pills" (HR 2 -- see above); and a work-release program for federal prisoners (HR 6964 -- PL 89-176).

Congress also enacted a bill (HR 2263 -- PL 89-178) authorizing a study of manpower and training needs in correctional rehabilitation and Administration-backed bills making it a federal crime to kill, kidnap or assault the President (HR 6097 -- see above) or to travel in interstate commerce for the purpose of committing arson (HR 6507 -- PL 89-68).

Federal Pay, Supreme Court Salaries. Congress Oct. 22 cleared a $641.5-million, across-the-board, 3.6-percent pay increase for nearly two million federal workers (HR 10281 -- PL 89-301). The bill also included liberalized overtime and relocation allowances for postal workers and established, for the first time, a severance pay system for all federal civilian personnel. The final version of HR 10281 represented a compromise between a $1.5-billion, two-step pay boost (4 percent in 1965; 3 to 8 percent in 1966, depending on trends in private industry pay scales) that the House voted, 370-7, and a $542.7-million, 3-percent pay hike proposed by the Administration. The threat of a Presidential veto had forced the Senate to trim back the House-passed version and, in an eleventh-hour maneuver, to return the revised version to the House on a take-it or leave-it basis.

Earlier in the year, the House rejected by a 178-202 roll call a bill (HR 5374) providing a $3,000-a-year pay boost for Supreme Court Justices. The measure was designed to restore part of a pay hike for the Justices denied in 1964.

Federal Retirement Payments. Congress enacted a bill (HR 8469 -- PL 89-205) increasing pensions received by retired federal employees and their survivors and also revising the method of determining cost-of-living increases.

Kennedy Film. Congress passed a bill (S J Res 106) to allow the showing in the United States of the United States Information Agency's film about President Kennedy, "Years of Lightning, Day of Drums." The bill gave the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts exclusive rights to distribute the film, through educational and commercial media. Republicans generally opposed the measure, arguing that the film would be used for partisan political purposes. USIA material was prepared for overseas distribution.

NATIONAL SECURITY

Viet Nam Defense Funds. On two separate occasions, Congress in 1965 showed nearly unanimous support for U.S. military efforts in Viet Nam. On May 6, only two days after the President asked for the funds, Congress cleared a bill (H J Res 447 -- PL 89-18) making fiscal 1965 supplemental appropriations of $700 million to fund mounting U.S. military operations in Southeast Asia. The bill passed the House on a 408-7 roll call and the Senate on a 88-3 roll call. The President had said enactment would demonstrate that Congress and the President "stand united" in U.S. efforts to resist Communist aggression. On Sept. 21, Congress cleared the $47 billion fiscal 1966 defense appropriations bill (HR 9221 -- PL 89-213), which included an additional $1.7 billion appropriation for Viet Nam operations. The measure was approved by unanimous votes of both chambers. The $1.7 billion had been requested by Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara following his return from a fact-finding mission to the Viet Nam battlefront in July. Despite the combined $2.4 billion appropriated, however, the consensus was that additional funds would be required early in 1966.

Servicemen. Stepped-up military action in Viet Nam during 1965 focused renewed attention on the serviceman, his dependents and survivors. Numerous pieces of legislation affecting these groups were cleared by Congress, including the following: S 2127 (PL 89-214) making available group life insurance ($10,000) to all servicemen and authorizing death gratuity payments ($5,000) to survivors of servicemen who died between Jan. 1, 1957, and the effective date of the new insurance program; HR 3043 (PL 89-26) authorizing payment of special allowances to dependents abroad who were ordered evacuated from a danger area to the United States; HR 7595 (PL 89-140) providing Government-paid transportation for dependents if they needed medical care that was not locally available; HR 3044 (PL 89-149) increasing the pay of enlisted men by $55 a month and the pay of officers by $110 a month while serving on flight deck crews of aircraft carriers; HR 3037 (PL 89-150) providing Government-paid transportation for the remains of a deceased dependent; HR 7843 (PL 89-151) entitling a deceased serviceman's survivors to payment for his unused leave; and HR 10306 (PL 89-152) making it a crime to knowingly destroy or mutilate a draft card.

Military Pay. Far exceeding the President's proposals, Congress Aug. 12 cleared a bill (HR 9075 -- PL 89-132) authorizing basic pay increases, effective Sept. 1, averaging 10.4 percent and costing an estimated $1 billion a year for about 4.1 million uniformed military personnel. The measure included the first pay raise since 1952 for enlisted men with two or less years of service, reenlistment bonuses for personnel with critical skills, a $10 monthly increase (to $65) in "hostile fire" pay and free first-class postage for servicemen in combat zones. Although President Johnson, who had earlier proposed a $447.6 million pay bill, initially opposed HR 9075, he said Aug. 21 that "in light of the alternatives available to me," he had concluded that "the public interest will best be served by signing the bill." The bill had passed both the House and Senate, in slightly different form, on unanimous roll-call votes.

Military Construction Veto. Electing not to attempt to override a Presidential veto of the original military construction authorization bill (HR 8439), but claiming victory on the principle involved, Congress Sept. 9 cleared a second bill (HR 10775 -- PL 89-188) authorizing $1.8 billion in fiscal 1966 for construction at military installations in the United States and abroad and for military family housing. HR 10775 included a compromise provision requiring the Defense Department, 30 days before closing a military base, to submit the plan to Congress for review. HR 8439, which was vetoed by Mr. Johnson Aug. 21 on grounds that it represented a "fundamental encroachment" on his executive powers, had provided a much more rigid reporting requirement, including a minimum 120-day waiting period before the Department could effect a base closure. The provision originated in the House Armed Services Committee. On a House roll-call vote Sept. 7, only 19 Congressmen voted to make an attempt at overriding the veto, while 322 opposed the effort. The fiscal 1966 military construction appropriations bill (HR 10323 -- PL 89-202) was cleared by Congress Sept. 21.

The President similarly accused Congress of intruding on his powers when he vetoed a Northwest disaster relief bill (S 327) June 5. (See above) Congress later cleared a second bill (S 2089 -- PL 89-41) without the objectionable feature.

Army Reserve-Guard Merger. A controversial Defense Department plan to merge the Army Reserve and Army National Guard under Guard management in order to increase combat readiness and cut costs was blocked in the fiscal 1966 Defense Appropriations bill (HR 9221 -- PL 89-213), when Congress required that any realignment or reorganization of the two reserve components had to be specifically authorized by law. Extensive hearings on the subject by the House Armed Services Committee prior to action on HR 9221 had established that Congressional sentiment for the plan, at least during 1965, was low. Despite Congress' action, Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara Sept. 30 announced a new plan to effect the main objectives of the merger through existing statutory authority, thereby skirting Congress' earlier prohibition.

Space Program Funds, MOL. For the first time in the history of the U.S. space program, funds requested and appropriated to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration dropped below the level of the previous year. The largest single cuts made by Congress in the Administration's requests were for the manned lunar landing program, Project Apollo. In the NASA authorization bill for fiscal 1966 (HR 7717 -- PL 89-53), Congress set a ceiling of $5,190,396,200 on NASA appropriations -- a $69.5 million cut in the request, of which $38.9 million was cut from Apollo. In the Independent Offices Appropriations Act for fiscal 1966 (HR 7997 -- PL 89-128), Congress made a slight additional cut, leaving $5,190,305,200. NASA officials and the President, however, subsequently asserted that the United States still intended to achieve the previously established goal of landing a man on the moon by 1970.

In a related development, the President Aug. 25 announced he had directed the Defense Department to proceed with development of a $1.5-billion manned orbiting laboratory (MOL) to conduct defense-related research in space. In the Defense Department Appropriations Act for fiscal 1966 (HR 9221 -- PL 89-213), Congress earmarked $150 million of the Air Force research and development funds in the bill for the MOL program.

Disarmament Agency. Congress in 1965 enacted a bill (HR 2998 -- PL 89-27) authorizing appropriations of $30 million over a three fiscal year period, 1966-68, for operations of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency. The Administration Jan. 15 requested $55 million for fiscal 1966-69.

Price-Anderson Extension. Congress continued the Price-Anderson Act 10 years, to 1977, providing federal indemnity for damages from private nuclear reactor accidents. The bill (S 2042 -- PL 89-210) limited such indemnity to $500 million above available commercial insurance ($60 million in 1965), thus effecting a gradual reduction in federal liability as commercial insurance increased.

PUBLIC WORKS AND RESOURCES

Appalachia. The first major "Great Society" measure passed by the 89th Congress was a bill (S 3 -- PL 89-4) authorizing $1,092,400,000 for the development of the economically depressed 11-state Appalachian region. President Johnson had proposed the assistance program in 1964 and renewed the request in 1965.

The Appalachian Regional Development Act of 1965 established an Appalachian Regional Commission to coordinate the projects authorized by the bill and to develop an economic program for 360 counties covering all of West Virginia and portions of Alabama, Georgia, Kentucky, Maryland, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia. Contiguous counties in New York also were made eligible for aid.

The bill also authorized $840 million to pay up to 70 percent of the cost of building 3,350 miles of roads in the region over an estimated five-year construction period and $252.4 million through fiscal 1967 to finance various other programs, which included construction of health facilities and vocational schools, land improvement, reclamation of mining areas and development of timber and water resources.

Highway Beautification. Congress cleared an amended version of the President's bill (S 2084) to improve the landscaping of interstate and primary highways. The bill was often referred to as Ladybird's bill because of Mrs. Johnson's particular interest in national beautification. Under the bill, states faced the penalty of loss of 10 percent of their federal-aid highway funds if they failed to control billboards and junkyards outside of specified commercial and industrial areas. The controls would not begin to take effect until 1968. Federal funds could be used to pay part of the costs (to be shared by the states) of compensating billboard and junkyard owners if they were forced to remove or screen their properties. In addition, the bill authorized states to use federal funds, without matching, for landscaping and scenic development along the highways. The bill carried a $320 million price tag over fiscal 1966-67, most of which was to cover the landscaping provisions. Although the bill initially proposed by the President was extensively amended -- partly on the initiative of Congress and partly at the request of the Administration itself -- the main change called for appropriation of the funds from the Treasury, instead of from the Highway Trust Fund.

Air Pollution. New federal action to control air pollution was approved by Congress. The bill (S 306 -- PL 89-272) consisted of two parts. One part directed the Government to establish standards as soon as practicable to control the emission of substances from new motor vehicles and engines that would pollute the air. The second part authorized a national research program to develop improved methods of disposing of solid wastes -- discarded matter such as garbage, rubbish, ashes, demolition debris, automobile hulks and similar items. For the vehicle pollution section, Congress authorized appropriations of $3,980,000 over fiscal 1966-69; for the solid waste disposal section, it authorized $92.5 million over the same period.

Water Pollution. Legislation was enacted in 1965 to strengthen controls over water pollution. The bill (S 4 -- PL 89-234) provided for the establishment -- by states or by the Federal Government if the states failed to act -- of water quality standards for interstate streams. Once standards were established, authorities could move through various proceedings including court action to prevent individuals or industries from discharging matter into a stream that would lower the water quality below the established purity level. The bill, which was requested by President Johnson, also increased federal financial aid for construction of community sewage projects and created a new federal water pollution control agency.

Rural Water, Sewage. Congress enacted Administration-backed legislation (S 1766 -- PL 89-240) authorizing $55 million a year for a new program of matching grants to help develop water supply and waste disposal systems in rural areas. The grants were to go to towns or areas with a population of up to 5,500. The bill also made changes in the Farmers Home Administration loan ceiling. (See Agriculture, above).

Water Resources Planning. Proper utilization of the nation's water resources was the object of a bill (S 21 -- PL 89-80), the Water Resources Planning Act, passed by Congress. The law gave statutory authority to the Federal Water Resources Council and authorized federal-state river basin planning commissions, an expenditure of $5 million a year for 10 years in federal matching grants to states for water resource programs and an additional $6,700,000 a year for operation of the Act.

Rivers-Harbors, River Basins. Congress Oct. 20 cleared a bill (S 2300 -- PL 89-298) authorizing 140 river, harbor, flood control and beach erosion projects of the Army Engineers. Estimated cost of the bill was almost $2 billion. Although the House and Senate versions of S 2300 differed, the only major project in dispute was a $227 million power project on the St. John River in Maine, which was opposed by coal interests and New England power companies. The project was deleted on the House floor but reinserted in the final version. Initial funds for the project were also unsuccessfully fought on the House floor.

Congress completed action on a bill (HR 6755 -- PL 89-42) increasing 13 river basin appropriations authorizations by a total of $944 million. The bill was passed by the House May 12 and by the Senate, with amendments, June 2. The House concurred in the amendments June 10, clearing the bill.

Auburn-Folsom South. Completion of the Auburn-Folsom South unit of the Central Valley Project in California was envisioned in an Administration-backed bill (HR 485 -- PL 89-161) passed by Congress, authorizing expenditure of $424,670,000 for construction of irrigation, hydroelectric and other phases of the project. More than half the funds were for construction of the Auburn Dam and Reservoir, the highest earthfill dam ever built by the Bureau of Reclamation.

Garrison Irrigation. The Garrison, N.D., irrigation project was reauthorized as part of the Missouri River Basin plan as Congress enacted an Administration-backed bill (HR 237 -- PL 89-108). The law authorized an appropriation of $207 million for construction of the project, which would provide irrigation for 250,000 acres.

Saline Water Conversion. Congress (in S 24 -- PL 89-118) extended the expiration date of the federal saline water conversion program from fiscal 1967 through fiscal 1972; increased from $20 million to $35 million the amount available for the program in fiscal 1967; and set a $185 million authorization ceiling for the new five-year extension. The extended program was requested by President Johnson.

Parks, Recreation. Congress in 1965 made a beginning at establishing a long-range program to meet U.S. recreation needs in the future but left much unfinished (see What Congress Did Not Do, p. 81)

Water Projects Recreation. Congress enacted a bill (S 1229 -- PL 89-72) establishing a uniform policy on inclusion of recreation and fish and wildlife enhancement features in federal multipurpose water projects.

Recreation Areas. In his Feb. 8 Natural Beauty Message, President Johnson advocated establishment of 12 park and recreation areas across the country. Congress authorized establishment of four: the Tocks Island National Recreation Area in Pennsylvania and New Jersey (HR 89 -- PL 89-158); the Spruce Knob-Seneca Rocks National Recreation Area in West Virginia (S 7 -- PL 89-207), the Whiskeytown-Shasta-Trinity National Recreation Area in California (HR 797 -- PL 89-336) and the Assateague Island National Seashore in Maryland and Virginia (S 20 -- PL 89-195).

Monuments, Historic Sites. Among the bills enacted in 1965 which established new National Monuments or Historic Sites were HR 8111 (PL 89-119) authorizing development of a Herbert Hoover National Historic Site in West Branch, Iowa; H J Res 454 (PL 89-129) authorizing development of Ellis Island as part of the Statue of Liberty National Monument in New York; S 26 (PL 89-102) authorizing development of the Golden Spike National Historic Site in Utah; HR 3320 (PL 89-148) authorizing development of the Hubbell Trading Post National Historic Site in northeastern Arizona; and HR 881 (PL 89-154) authorizing a National Monument in Potter Co., Texas.

TAXES AND ECONOMIC POLICY

Excise Taxes. Congress in 1965 enacted with little controversy an Administration-backed bill (HR 8371 -- PL 89-44) providing for graduated excise tax cuts totalling $4.7 billion. The cuts began with the paring of $1.8 billion on June 22, and were to continue with a reduction of $1.6 billion on Jan. 1, 1966, plus an additional $1.3 billion after successive cuts on Jan. 1, 1967, 1968 and 1969.

President Johnson in his Jan. 25 Budget Message called for a $1.75 billion excise cut but later increased his request to $4 billion when Congressional sentiment for far broader reductions became clear. The major revenue cut exceeding the President's request was Congress' reduction of the tax on automobiles to 1 percent instead of the proposed 5 percent.

The cuts provided by HR 8371 represented the first general revision of excise taxes since the imposition of many of the levies during World War II. After completion of the phased cuts on Jan. 1, 1969, the only excises still in force would be user, regulatory and sumptuary levies (cigarette and liquor taxes) and the 1-percent manufacturers' tax on passenger automobiles.

Debt Limit. Over Republican opposition, Congress passed the annual bill (HR 8464 -- PL 89-49) increasing the temporary national debt limit. For fiscal 1966 it was set at $328 billion -- $4 billion above the previous ceiling but $1 billion less than the level the Treasury requested. The additional authority had been sought in order to provide a contingency allowance of $3 billion over the expected high point of $326 billion in the fiscal 1966 debt. HR 8464 was passed by the House June 9 on a 229-165 roll-call vote (R 6-122; D 223-43) and by the Senate June 16 on a 61-26 roll call (R 12-16; D 49-10).

Regional Development. Congress in 1965 enacted legislation (S 1648 -- PL 89-136) providing $3.25 billion over five years (fiscal 1966-70) in grants and loans for public works, development facilities and other projects intended to aid economically depressed areas and to encourage planning for economic development. The effect of the bill, which was requested by President Johnson, was to re-enact and broaden the Kennedy Administration's 1961 Area Redevelopment Act and the 1962 Public Works Acceleration Act. In addition, the bill extended to other areas of the United States elements of the aid provided to the 11-state Appalachian region under the Administration's Appalachia bill.

High Speed Ground Transportation. Congress enacted an Administration-backed bill (S 1588 -- PL 89-220) authorizing the Commerce Department to undertake a three-year $90 million research, development, and demonstration project in high-speed ground transportation. The legislation was requested by the Administration. One of the projects envisioned under the bill was a high-speed rail line between Washington, D.C. and Boston within a few years after enactment. The actual bill, however, made it clear that research and development activities would not be limited to rail transportation.

Manpower Programs. An extension and expansion of the Manpower Development and Training Act of 1962 was approved by Congress. The legislation (S 974 -- PL 89-15) extended the Act for three years, from June 30, 1966, through June 30, 1969; authorized appropriations of $454 million in fiscal 1966 and such sums as were necessary thereafter; permitted 100-percent federal financing of MDTA programs for another year, through fiscal 1966, rather than require the states to pay one-third of the costs; increased the maximum period during which persons could receive training from one year to two years; provided additional training allowances and benefits; and made other changes in the law.

Silver Coinage. Congress enacted legislation (S 2080 -- PL 89-81) to revise the nation's coinage by eliminating all of the silver in dimes and quarters and reducing the silver in half dollars. PL 89-81 authorized the minting of new dimes and quarters made of a copper-nickel alloy, similar to the existing nickel, and a new half dollar with a 40-percent silver content. The legislation, which was requested by the President, was required because of the increasing industrial demand for the metal and the need to expand the nation's coin supply.

Gold Backing. In a move to reinforce foreign confidence in the dollar, Congress passed an Administration bill (HR 3818 -- PL 89-3) eliminating the requirement in existing law that each Federal Reserve Bank maintain gold certificate reserves valued at not less than 25 percent of the amount of commercial bank deposits it holds. Removal of the "gold cover" on deposits released some $5 billion in gold to meet international claims on the dollar and to allow the nation's money supply to expand. HR 3818 encountered little opposition in either chamber, and the measure was approved only 21 days after the President's Jan. 28 request.

Balance of Payments. Congress in 1965 approved four Administration proposals aimed at reducing the persistent U.S. balance-of-payments deficit by stemming the outflow of capital from the United States to other countries. The four measures, outlined by President Johnson Feb. 10 in a special balance-of-payments message to Congress, were: an extension and expansion of the 1964 Interest Equalization Tax; continued authority for domestic banks to pay higher interest rates on time deposits (short-term investments) of foreign governments than on domestic deposits; a reduction in the amount of duty-free purchases that tourists may bring back from abroad; and antitrust exemptions for bankers who cooperate to cut down dollar flows abroad. Details of action:

Duty-free Allowance. Congress June 30 approved a bill (HR 8147 -- PL 89-62) to make permanent the expiring $100 ceiling on the value of foreign goods which could be brought home duty-free by returning American citizens. The President had requested a reduction to $50. The measure provided, however, that the exemption would be computed on the higher retail value of the goods rather than the wholesale value.

Interest Rates. Congress July 7 sent the President a bill (HR 5306 -- PL 89-79) to continue for a three-year period, through Oct. 15, 1968, the authority of domestic banks to pay higher interest rates on time deposits of foreign governments than they may pay on domestic deposits. The measure was designed to encourage foreign governments and monetary authorities to maintain dollar accounts in the United States rather than convert them directly into gold or transfer them to other financial centers where they would eventually be converted into gold.

Antitrust Exemptions. A bill (HR 5280 -- PL 89-175) to provide exemptions from the antitrust laws to safeguard the U.S. balance-of-payments position was cleared by Congress Aug. 26. HR 5280 established procedures for voluntary agreements among banks, investment bankers and companies, pension funds, charitable trusts and foundations and educational institutions as might be necessary to curtail the flow of private dollars and credit from the United States to foreign countries. Safeguards to legalize the agreements only when their benefit to the U.S. balance-of-payments position overshadowed their detriment to competition were included in the bill.

Interest Equalization Tax. HR 4750 (PL 89-243), cleared Sept. 20, extended for 19 months, through July 31, 1967, the tax on the purchase by Americans of certain foreign securities. In a major amendment to the 1964 Interest Equalization Tax Act, the bill broadened the tax to cover the purchase by Americans of foreign bonds with a maturity period of one to three years. Purpose of the tax was to make it equally as expensive for foreign borrowers to obtain capital in U.S. financial markets as it was to obtain capital from other industrial nations.

State Technical Services. Congress enacted, with little debate, a bill (S 949 -- PL 89-182) to help businesses and industries gain access to the growing body of nonproprietary scientific and technical information. It provided $60 million over three years for matching grants to states which established technical information programs to apprise local businesses and industries of the opportunities for applying new -- or even well-established -- scientific information and techniques to create new products; improve sales, administration and production methods; and adjust to coming economic trends. The programs would be conducted by public and private institutions of higher learning. The bill also encouraged state economic planning.

Patent Office Fees. President Johnson July 24 signed a bill (HR 4185 -- PL 89-83) increasing patent fees for the first time since 1932. The House passed HR 4185 as requested by the Administration, providing increases in some fees and establishing a maintenance fee to be paid 5, 9 and 15 years after the patent was issued. The Senate, however, eliminated the controversial maintenance fees and the House accepted the change. Patent Office officials estimated that the increase would enable the Office to recoup 75 percent of its costs rather than the 30 percent which it currently recouped.

McKee Appointment, SST. Brushing aside objections from Congressmen who protested the appointment of a military man to a civilian post, Congress June 17 cleared a bill (HR 7777 -- PL 89-46) authorizing President Johnson to name Gen. William F. McKee (USAF ret.) to the position of Administrator of the Federal Aviation Agency. The legislation was necessary because the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 required that the FAA Administrator be a civilian. The measure passed the House on a 228-137 roll call and the Senate on a 46-20 roll call. The Senate June 30 confirmed McKee's nomination by voice vote.

At McKee's swearing-in ceremony July 1, Mr. Johnson said McKee would have full responsibility for the U.S. supersonic transport (SST) development program, launched in fiscal 1962. In effect postponing selection of a final SST contractor, the President also called for 18 more months of research on the aircraft and requested $140 million to finance the additional work.

Transportation Amendments. Congress Aug. 19 cleared an Administration-backed bill (HR 5401 -- PL 89-170) which was primarily designed to give the Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC), states and shippers more effective tools for combatting illegal for-hire trucking -- that is, the transportation of certain commodities in interstate commerce by motor carriers without proper ICC authority. Final action on the measure concluded nearly five years of Congressional consideration of the legislation, which initially included more controversial provisions.

Ship Subsidies. Congress enacted a bill (HR 4346 -- PL 89-127) extending to June 30, 1966, the existing construction, reconstruction and reconditioning subsidies for U.S. merchant ships in U.S. shipyards. During the year there also was increasing concern over the fate of the U.S. merchant marine which had been declining since the end of World War II. The problems of the U.S. merchant marine were under consideration by President Johnson's Maritime Advisory Committee.

MISCELLANEOUS

Investigations. Committees of the Senate and House in 1965 turned the Congressional spotlight on a wide variety of subjects. The most notable investigations were the Senate Rules and Administration Committee's wrap-up of the "second phase" of its probe of the business activities of former Secretary to the Senate Majority Robert G. (Bobby) Baker; the Senate Government Operations Permanent Investigations Subcommittee's probe of gangster elements in the banking industry; and the Senate Government Operations Foreign Aid Expenditures Subcommittee's study of the Government's role in birth control.

Among other investigations conducted by Congress during the year were the following: the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee's investigation of the "jungle" of federal paperwork; the Senate Judiciary Administrative Practice and Procedure Subcommittee's investigation of federal invasion of privacy, including the use of personality tests, wiretaps and other electronic eavesdropping devices; the Senate Judiciary Patents, Trademarks and Copyrights Subcommittee's hearings to establish a policy on patent rights to inventions obtained with the aid of federal funds; and the House Un-American Activities Committee's investigation of the Ku Klux Klan.

Major Confirmations. During 1965 six major Cabinet positions were filled but the one newly created post remained vacant when Congress adjourned. These positions were: Secretary of the Treasury, Henry H. Fowler, confirmed March 25; Justice Department, Attorney General, Nicholas deB. Katzenbach, confirmed Feb. 10; Postmaster General, Lawrence F. O'Brien, confirmed Sept. 1; Secretary of Commerce, John T. Connor, confirmed Jan. 15; Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, John W. Gardner, confirmed Aug. 11; U.S. Representative to the United Nations, Arthur J. Goldberg, confirmed July 23. The Secretary of the new Department of Housing and Urban Development, authorized Sept. 9, had not been appointed.

There was one appointment to the Supreme Court: Associate Justice Abe Fortas, confirmed Aug. 11. The appointment was made to fill the vacancy created by the appointment of Goldberg as U.S. Representative to the United Nations to replace Adlai E. Stevenson, who died in London on July 14.

Two major posts within the Executive Office of the President were filled: Director, Bureau of the Budget, Charles L. Schultze, who was sworn in June 1 (no Senate confirmation needed) and Director, Central Intelligence Agency, William F. Raborn Jr., confirmed April 22.

Major independent agency positions filled were: Administrator, Federal Aviation Agency, William F. McKee, confirmed June 30; Administrator, General Services Administration, Lawson B. Knott, confirmed June 4; Director, United States Information Agency, Leonard H. Marks, confirmed July 21.

Thurgood Marshall was confirmed Aug. 11 as Solicitor General in the Justice Department.

The Senate Oct. 21 shelved the judgeship nomination of Francis X. Morrissey.

What Congress Did Not Do

AGRICULTURE

Migratory Labor. The Migratory Labor Subcommittee of the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee July 7-8 held hearings on five bills sponsored by Subcommittee Chairman Harrison A. Williams (D N.J.) to improve conditions for migrant farm workers. No action was taken on the measures.

EDUCATION AND WELFARE

Disaster Legislation. Acting in piecemeal fashion, Congress enacted several bills to increase federal aid to communities and individuals affected by a major natural disaster (see above), but failed to complete action on others. An omnibus disaster relief bill (S 1861) was passed by the Senate July 22. The House Public Works Subcommittee on Flood Control Oct. 15 concluded hearings on the measure. The bill provided a basic authority for all federal disaster relief programs and contained provisions usually included in individual disaster bills: federal loan adjustment assistance, grants to states to aid homeowners and businesses and increased assistance to public facilities, schools and federal-aid highways. The bill contained new provisions for aid to unincorporated areas and non-federally-aided highways and called for establishment of a federal-state disaster relief plan.

A provision in S 1861 to rebuild federal-aid highways was contained in a bill (HR 6790) passed by the House.

Other disaster relief bills on which Congress failed to complete action included: S 408, passed by the Senate Jan. 28 and reported July 21 by the House Banking and Currency Committee, to authorize feasibility studies of alternative programs of federal financial aid to disaster victims, including federal flood and earthquake insurance; and HR 7502, passed by the House Aug. 3, to provide that certain property losses could be deducted from ordinary income rather than from capital income. The Senate Finance Committee Sept. 1 postponed action on HR 7502 until 1966.

Teachers Sabbaticals. The House Education and Labor Committee Sept. 2 reported, but no further action was taken on, a bill (HR 10622) authorizing a program of grants to permit elementary and secondary teachers to take sabbatical leaves to obtain a B.A. degree or to update their proficiency. Although the Administration endorsed a bill (HR 9627) providing fellowships for graduate degree study, it did not take a position on HR 10622.

Group Practice Facilities. For the fourth consecutive year, an Administration bill to provide mortgage insurance and loans to group practice medical organizations for construction of facilities was left by the wayside. The only action was hearings by the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee on HR 2987. The legislation was requested in 1962 and 1963 by President Kennedy and in 1964 and 1965 by President Johnson.

Cold War GI Bill. The perennial issue of whether the Government should provide "readjustment benefits" to veterans of U.S. military operations since the Korean War (the "Cold War GIs") was unresolved in 1965. The Administration opposed providing the benefits. The Senate July 19 passed a bill (S 9) authorizing grants for educational and vocational training and loan guarantees and direct loans for homes, farmlands, livestock and farm machinery for all veterans who served in the armed forces between Jan. 31, 1955, and July 1, 1967. The House Veterans' Affairs Committee completed hearings Sept. 20 on S 9 and a variety of Cold War GI bills, but postponed further action until the 1966 session convened.

Administrator of Veterans Affairs William J. Driver Oct. 2 said that the VA in 1966 probably would recommend "that cold war veterans be given benefits comparable to World War II and Korean veterans."

In the meantime, however, Congress enacted two programs from which Cold War GIs could receive benefits similar to some of those proposed in S 9. Under the housing bill (HR 7984 -- PL 89-117), veterans were eligible for a special home mortgage insurance program, and under the higher education bill (HR 9567) they would be eligible for scholarships and student loan insurance.

Coal Mine Safety. The House June 1 passed a bill (HR 3584) extending the mandatory federal inspection and safety requirements of the 1952 Federal Coal Mine Safety Act to previously exempt small coal mines (mines regularly employing 14 persons or fewer underground). It was estimated that the bill would extend coverage of the 1952 Act to about 7,000 small mines employing about 35,000 miners. HR 3584 was similar to previous bills which had been reported but never granted a rule for floor consideration. The Senate did not act on the bill in 1965.

Mine Safety Standards. Congress did not complete action on an Administration-backed bill (HR 8989) establishing federal health and safety standards for metal and nonmetallic mining in other than coal and lignite mines. The House passed the bill Sept. 2.

Foreign Agents Registration. As in 1964, the Senate again passed Administration-backed legislation (S 693) designed to close loopholes in the Foreign Agents Registration Act of 1938. The bill, which stemmed from a 1962-63 Senate Foreign Relations Committee investigation of lobbyists acting for foreign interests, imposed stricter disclosure requirements on foreign lobbyists and redefined the activities of persons required to register under the Act. Opposition by American businesses with extensive international operations was cited as one of the reasons for delaying House passage of the measure in both 1964 and 1965.

U.S.-Soviet Consular Treaty. The Senate did not act on a treaty (Exec. D, 88th Congress, 2nd session) with the Soviet Union providing the legal framework for an exchange of consulates. The Senate Foreign Relations Committee Aug. 3 approved the treaty. Five members of the Committee subsequently filed minority reports opposing the treaty on the grounds it would broaden Soviet espionage opportunities in the United States, a view expressed in March by Federal Bureau of Investigation Director J. Edgar Hoover. The treaty extended to consular officers the immunity from criminal prosecution currently granted to embassy diplomats. Ratification by two-thirds vote of the Senate was required for the treaty to take effect.

Aid to Egypt. Three attempts to ban sales of surplus farm commodities to the United Arab Republic (Egypt) under Title I of PL 480 (the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act) failed in 1965. Before passing the supplemental fiscal 1965 farm appropriations bill (H J Res 234 -- PL 89-2) the House Jan. 26 voted a flat ban on such sales, but the final version of the bill approved Feb. 10 contained a compromise provision giving the President discretionary authority to continue the sales. Later, when the House considered the fiscal 1966 Agriculture Department appropriations bill (HR 8370) May 26, it reversed its earlier position and rejected an effort to add language banning the sales to both Egypt and Indonesia. The subject also arose in connection with the foreign aid appropriations bill (HR 10871) -- this time in the Senate, which prohibited all aid to Egypt and Indonesia, but again gave the President discretionary authority to avoid the ban. This provision was retained in the final bill.

GENERAL GOVERNMENT

Reapportionment. Deft parliamentary maneuvers by Senate Minority Leader Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) brought to the floor of the Senate Aug. 4 a bill (S J Res 2) to amend the Constitution to permit states to apportion one legislative house on a non-population basis. The Senate rejected the measure 57-39 (a constitutional amendment requires a two-thirds majority in favor -- 64 in the case of Dirksen's proposal). Hearings on a similar bill (H J Res 2) were postponed indefinitely by the House Judiciary Committee.

Dirksen Aug. 11 introduced an amended version of his bill (S J Res 103), and after further maneuvers, it was reported Sept. 8 by the Senate Judiciary Committee without recommendation. Dirksen said he was content to have the bill on the Senate calendar for early consideration in the second session of the 89th Congress in 1966.

Congressional Redistricting. Although the House March 16 passed a bill (HR 5505) establishing population and other standards for Congressional districts, the Senate failed to act on the measure. A 1964 Supreme Court decision, Wesberry v. Sanders, required districts to be based on substantial equality of population. The House version permitted variations in district populations up to 15 percent above or below the average for all of a state's districts, but the Senate Judiciary Committee cut the figure to 10 percent. Both versions barred at-large elections and required districts to be composed of contiguous territory and drawn as compactly as possible.

Fair Employment Amendments. Congress in 1965 did not enact legislation to broaden and strengthen Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act banning employment discrimination based on race, color, religion, sex or national origin. House floor action on a bill to broaden the ban (HR 10065) was scheduled for Oct. 13, but was postponed until the 1966 session. HR 10065 was the Education and Labor Committee's version of a bill (HR 9222) sponsored by the Committee's chairman, Adam C. Powell (D N.Y.). The committee bill was supported by civil rights groups, but not by the Administration. Major sections of HR 10065 provided for extension of Title VII to cover all businesses and labor unions with 100 or more employees or members, effective upon enactment of the bill, established a graduated scale for further extension of the Title culminating July 2, 1967, in coverage of all businesses and unions with eight or more persons and empowered the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission to issue "cease and desist" orders.

Crime. Congress took no action on a variety of bills aimed at organized crime, including measures outlawing membership in the Mafia and similar secret crime societies (S 2187), making it a federal crime to bribe federal agents or informants (S 2188), legalizing certain wiretapping (S 2189) and permitting compelled testimony and witness immunity in federal prosecutions (S 2190). President Johnson's request for a law providing for civil commitment of drug addicts for treatment in lieu of imprisonment (HR 9167, S 2152, S 2191) was the subject of House hearings, but received no further action. A bill (HR 5688) amending the District of Columbia Criminal Code and permitting police interrogation of up to three hours aggregate remained in conference, while the Bail Reform Act of 1965 (S 1357) was passed Sept. 21 by the Senate, but was not acted upon by the House.

Firearms Control. President Johnson March 8 asked for amendments to the 1938 Federal Firearms Act to stop mail order deliveries of firearms to individuals, a law actively sought by many individuals and organizations since the 1963 assassination of President Kennedy with a mail-order rifle. Congress did not act on the Administration's bill (S 1592) or on more than 20 such bills introduced in the House, although the Senate Subcommittee on Juvenile Delinquency and the House Ways and Means Committee held extensive hearings on the proposals.

D.C. Home Rule. After a hopeful beginning, Congress in 1965 failed to enact a bill (S 1118) to provide for establishment of local self-government ("home rule") for the District of Columbia.

The Senate passed the bill July 22, providing machinery for establishment of a locally elected government and delegate to the U.S. House if D.C. voters approved the plan in a referendum within four months. With strong Administration support and help, the bill was brought to the House floor through a discharge petition Sept. 27, but there a substitute version bearing almost no resemblance to the Senate bill was passed Sept. 29. The substitute prescribed a lengthy procedure to permit D.C. voters to establish a D.C. Charter Board. The Board would prepare a charter which would be submitted to D.C. voters and, if accepted, go into effect in 90 days unless disapproved by either chamber of Congress.

In an earlier show of unanimity, however, the House July 15 and the Senate Aug. 25 passed by voice votes a bill (HR 4822) authorizing construction of a rapid rail transit system for the District, to be operated through contracts with private concerns. The bill was signed into law Sept. 8 (PL 89-173).

Federal Judgeships. A bill (S 1666) to create 44 new federal judgeships (10 circuit court, 34 district court) passed the Senate June 30, but remained in the House Judiciary Committee after its chairman, Rep. Emanuel Celler (D N.Y.), expressed doubt about the need for the posts.

Sports. Congress considered several bills dealing with sports.

The Professional Sports Act of 1965 (S 950) was similar to previous bills which Congress had considered since 1958. The legislation which passed the Senate Aug. 31 brought professional baseball, football, basketball and hockey teams uniformly under the antitrust laws and the Federal Trade Commission Act but exempted certain activities of those sports from such laws. There was no House action.

The House passed a bill (HR 8635) designed to rid professional boxing of alleged racketeering. HR 8635 established a Federal Boxing Commission with authority to regulate professional matches televised or broadcast interstate or to other countries. There was no Senate action.

The Senate adopted a resolution (S Res 147) providing an arbitration board to settle disputes in amateur athletics. The first task would be to end the dispute between the National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (NCAA) and the Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) over the control of amateur track and field competition in the United States. The resolution did not require House action.

Metric Study. The Senate Sept. 20 passed a bill (S 774) authorizing a three-year study by the Secretary of Commerce, costing $500,000 the first year, of the feasibility of adopting the metric system in the United States. The House Rules Committee Sept. 9 deferred action on a similar bill (HR 10329).

Mid-Decade Census. Congress did not act on a bill (HR 6183) providing for a census, in 1966, 1975 and every 10 years thereafter, of population, unemployment and housing. The Administration, through the Bureau of the Budget, opposed the bill on grounds of cost. The House Post Office and Civil Service Committee Aug. 12 reported the bill, its majority urging passage on grounds that national policy should be based on up-to-date census information.

Freedom of Information. Congress in 1965 failed to clear a bill (S 1160) amending the Administrative Procedure Act of 1946 to require all federal agencies to make public all records, rules, decisions and other information except for specified exemptions, such as matters affecting national security, and authorizing federal court suits to force compliance. The Senate passed the bill Oct. 13, but there was no House action.

Obscene Mail. The House April 5 passed a bill (HR 980) permitting a person who had received mail which he considered "obscene, lewd, lascivious, indecent, filthy or vile" to have the Postmaster General prevent the sender from mailing more similar unsolicited material to him or to his children. HR 980 was similar to a bill (HR 319) which the House passed in 1964. The Post Office and Justice Departments declined to recommend enactment of the two bills and raised constitutional objections.

NATIONAL SECURITY

Stockpiling Revision. The Senate Feb. 9 passed, but the House failed to act on an Administration-backed bill (S 28) consolidating the three existing stockpiles into two: one containing materials sufficient to meet the stockpiling objectives set by the President and one containing excess materials. Under S 28, excess materials could be sold, generally at "fair market value," unless either house passed a resolution disapproving the sale.

During the session, the House passed 15 bills authorizing the disposal of 25 different excess materials from U.S. stockpiles. Most of the bills were cleared by Congress.

Freedom Academy. Congress did not enact any of several bills (S 1232, HR 470, HR 9713) to establish a Freedom Academy to create "non-military capabilities" for dealing with Communist political and psychological warfare. The first "Freedom Academy" bill was introduced in 1959 and similar bills were introduced in the 87th and 88th Congresses. HR 9713 was reported in the House in 1965.

PUBLIC WORKS AND RESOURCES

Parks, Recreation. Partial action was taken in 1965 on a number of park, recreation and scenic enhancement bills.

Recreation Areas. Of the 12 park and recreation areas mentioned by the President in his Feb. 8 Natural Beauty Message, final action was taken by Congress to establish four (see above), only one chamber acted on four, and hearings were held on the other four. The Senate passed bills to establish the Sleeping Bear Dunes National Lakeshore in Michigan (S 936), the Cape Lookout National Seashore in North Carolina (S 251), the Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore in Indiana (S 360) and the Bighorn Canyon National Recreation Area in Wyoming and Montana (S 491). None of these bills was reported by the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee but the Committee held hearings on most of them.

Although there were hearings in one or both chambers, no floor action was taken on bills to establish the remaining four areas: Great Basin National Park in Nevada and Utah (S 499), Guadalupe Mountains National Park in Texas (S 295, HR 517), Oregon Dunes National Seashore in Oregon (S 250) and Flaming Gorge National Recreation Area in Utah and Wyoming (S 92).

Wild Rivers. Another bill recommended by the President in his Natural Beauty Message on which Congress had not completed action was S 1446, establishing a National Wild Rivers System initially comprising parts of five rivers, but authorizing studies for possible future inclusion of others. The bill was reported Sept. 28 by the Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee. There was no House action on a similar bill (HR 11395).

The Senate Sept. 8 passed a separate bill (S 897) establishing the St. Croix National Scenic Riverway in Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Oceanography. The House and Senate passed different versions of a bill (S 944) to provide for a national oceanographic program. As passed by the Senate Aug. 5, S 944 established a Cabinet-level National Council on Marine Science, Engineering, and Resources. The Council combined in one agency the current oceanographic activities of many agencies. S 944 as passed by the House Sept. 20 did not contain the Senate provision establishing a separate Council; rather the House version placed the Council's responsibilities directly with the President. Both the House and Senate versions provided for a temporary commission to study and recommend an oceanographic program, although the House bill made the commission's establishment mandatory while the Senate version left its appointment up to the discretion of the President. The Administration opposed the Senate version of S 944. It supported a bill (HR 2218) which placed the power and responsibility to plan and carry out oceanographic programs directly with the President.

Water Research Act Amendments. An Administration-backed bill (S 22) amending Title II of the Water Research Act of 1964 was passed March 25 by the Senate but was not reported by the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee. The bill increased federal water research grants eventually to $10 million annually and removed several restrictions to awarding the grants.

Lower Colorado Project. Although California and Arizona finally resolved their long dispute over apportionment of the waters of the Lower Colorado River, bills to authorize federal construction of the $1.3 billion Lower Colorado Basin (Central Arizona) Project (S 1019, S 75, HR 4671-4706, HR 9248) received no action in either chamber in 1965, other than Aug. 23-Sept. 1 hearings by the House Interior and Insular Affairs Irrigation and Reclamation Subcommittee. Action on the Administration-endorsed project was blocked by fears of water users in the Upper Colorado River Basin states (Colorado, Wyoming, New Mexico, Utah) that the project would permit Arizona to take Colorado River water that eventually would be needed in the Upper Basin; and by conservationist fears that proposed power dams in the project would ruin the wild, natural character of the Grand Canyon.

Coulee Power Plant. A third power plant at the Grand Coulee Dam on the Columbia River in Washington was authorized by an Administration-backed bill (S 1761) passed June 16 by the Senate. The bill, authorizing an appropriation of $364,310,000 for the work, was not reported by the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee.

TAXES AND ECONOMIC POLICY

Right-to-Work Repeal. A late-session Senate filibuster prevented enactment of President Johnson's request for repeal of section 14(b) of the Taft-Hartley Act, which permitted states to enact "right-to-work" laws banning the union shop. Repeal of the section had long been a top-priority goal of most labor unions. The House July 28 passed by a 221-203 roll-call vote a bill (HR 77) to repeal section 14(b) and it was believed that majority sentiment in the Senate also favored repeal. However, consideration of the measure was blocked in the Senate by an eight-day filibuster conducted by Southern Democrats and Northern Republicans against a motion to begin debate on the bill. The Senate Oct. 11 refused to invoke cloture by a 45-47 roll-call vote (a two-thirds majority was required) and Majority Leader Mike Mansfield (D Mont.) the following day announced that the Senate leadership had postponed further action on HR 77 until 1966.

Minimum Wage, Double Overtime. President Johnson's requests for extension of minimum wage coverage and higher pay for overtime work were not enacted. The President asked for extension of the federal minimum wage protection to 4.6 million workers not covered and for double pay for overtime in place of the existing time-and-a-half. He did not make a specific request for an increase in the existing minimum wage. The House Education and Labor Committee in August reported a bill (HR 10518) extending coverage to about 7.9 million workers, establishing a $1.25 minimum wage for agricultural workers and increasing the non-farm minimum wage to $1.75 from $1.25, but containing no provision for higher overtime pay. Floor consideration of the bill was postponed until 1966. In the Senate, hearings were held on minimum wage legislation, but no further action occurred.

Unemployment Compensation. No effort was made during 1965 to enact Administration proposals to revise the federal-state unemployment insurance program. The House Ways and Means Committee, in which the legislation must originate, held hearings on a bill (HR 8282) to provide federal benefits for long-term unemployed persons, to establish minimum federal standards for state unemployment benefit programs, to extend unemployment compensation coverage, to provide federal funds to help states pay certain unusually high benefit costs and to increase employer taxes to pay for the reforms. The federal standards and higher taxes were particularly objectionable to business.

'Common-Site' Picketing. The House Education and Labor Committee Sept. 21 reported the labor union-proposed 'common-site' picketing bill (HR 10027). The measure would have reversed a 1951 Supreme Court ruling which held that a Taft-Hartley Act provision outlawing secondary boycotts by unions made it illegal for a union to throw a picket line around a construction site if the picket line kept unions not directly involved in the dispute off the job. The bill was not cleared by the House Rules Committee before adjournment.

Labor-Management Programs. The House Aug. 10 passed a bill (HR 1153) amending the 1947 Labor-Management Relations (Taft-Hartley) Act to permit employer contributions for jointly administered product promotion programs or committees for the interpretation of collective bargaining agreements. The Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee did not report the bill.

Bank Mergers. The Senate passed a bill (S 1698) to overturn several Supreme Court decisions and exempt bank mergers from Justice Department antitrust prosecution if not contested within 30 days after their approval by the appropriate federal bank regulatory agency. An amended version of the bill was reported in the House Oct. 19 after considerable committee dissension but was not brought to a floor vote. S 1698 was designed to clarify provisions of the Bank Merger Act of 1960, which did not expressly exempt bank mergers from the antitrust laws, even though the history of the Act indicated that such exemption was intended.

Helicopter Subsidies. Congress twice in 1965 voted its disapproval of subsidies for helicopter operations. Ultimately, it allowed the subsidies for helicopter commuter, mail and air transport service in Chicago and Los Angeles to continue until the end of 1965 but cut off the New York program in April. In the second supplemental appropriation bill for fiscal 1965 (HR 7091) Congress rejected the Administration's request for $942,000 for helicopter subsidies. In the fiscal 1966 independent offices appropriation bill (HR 7997 -- PL 89-128) the Administration asked for $2.1 million to keep the three-city program going through Dec. 31, 1965 but Congress approved only $1.2 million.

FPC Regulation of REA Co-ops. The Senate Aug. 26 passed on an 86-5 roll call a bill (S 1459) to exempt non-profit rural electric cooperatives from regulation by the Federal Power Commission. The bill was a reaction to efforts of the FPC to regulate certain interstate activities of co-ops and covered cooperatives financed wholly or partially by the Rural Electrification Administration. Although the House did not act on the bill, the Senate vote was considered likely to deter further FPC action.

Tax-Exempt Foundations. Congress in 1965 took no action on an Administration request for new restrictions on the activities of private tax-exempt foundations. The proposed restrictions, embodied in a Feb. 8 Treasury Department report to the Senate Finance and House Ways and Means Committees, would prevent the foundations from using their funds for private gains and would reduce foundations' economic power exercised through the control of private commercial businesses. The Treasury report, requested by the two Committees in 1963, was prompted in part by Rep. Wright Patman's (D Texas) contentions that many "philanthropic" foundations had abused their tax-exempt privileges to gain control of industrial and commercial enterprises and had operated in competition with small businesses which do not enjoy similar tax advantages. The Committees were thought favorably inclined to the restrictions, but were unable to consider the matter in 1965 because of the press of higher priority legislation.

Copyright Revisions. Congress in 1965 failed to act on legislation (HR 4347, S 1006) to revise substantially the Copyright Law of 1909. The Copyright Office of the Library of Congress spent five years preparing the legislation. Both the Senate and House Judiciary Subcommittees on Patents, Trademarks and Copyrights held hearings on the legislation but were unable to reconcile the opposing views of copyright owners and users, particularly authors and educators. As a stop-gap, Congress Aug. 12 cleared a bill (H J Res 431 -- PL 89-142) which extended through Dec. 31, 1967, the renewal term of any copyright due to expire before 1968.

Truth-in-Lending and Packaging. Congress again failed to complete action on a variety of bills to protect the consumer from misrepresentation and deception in packaging and lending. Legislation similar to that introduced in previous Congresses and recommended by President Kennedy was again endorsed for enactment by President Johnson in his Economic Message Jan. 28. Truth-in-packaging bills (S 985, HR 7493), intended to cut down on deceptive and false packaging, met stiff opposition from manufacturers, packagers and retailers; the truth-in-lending bills (S 2275, HR 111, HR 155, HR 8332), requiring full disclosure of total costs and hidden charges in the financing of articles and services, were opposed by merchants and finance and loan companies, as well as by many members of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee.

Quality Stabilization. A bill to permit manufacturers to fix the minimum retail prices of their nationally branded goods received no action in 1965. The proposed legislation (S 1484), known as the Quality Stabilization bill, was the most recent of fair trade measures that small businesses and trade organizations (particularly retail druggists) have pushed during the past decade. In the 88th Congress, a similar bill (HR 3669) was approved by the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, but never got out of the Rules Committee. A companion bill (S 774) was tabled by the Senate Commerce Committee. Both the Kennedy and Johnson Administrations opposed the bills on grounds that they tended to inhibit the freedom of consumers.

U.S. ECONOMY CONTINUED TO SET RECORDS IN 1965

The U.S. economy continued into its fifth consecutive year of expansion in 1965 -- the longest boom since the end of World War II. By the end of the year, the expansion -- which began in February 1961 -- was 59 months old. Performing beyond expectations, the economy set records in most areas. The gross national product (the value of all goods and services) totaled $675.6 billion, up $47 billion from 1964 and $9.4 billion above the original Government estimate.

Major Stimulants. As 1965 began, tax cuts enacted the previous year continued to stimulate the economy as did the recovery from automobile strikes in late 1964. The Council of Economic Advisers in early 1966 said that increased sales, employment, earnings and investment continued to spark the economy as 1965 progressed. The CEA said the 1964 tax cut had lifted consumption and investment spending by $30 billion by the end of 1965.

Although the lift from the tax cut was substantial, other fiscal measures helped sustain the pace of growth. Additional boosts in demand resulted from several developments -- an unforeseen increase of $2.8 billion in defense spending between the second and fourth quarters (federal purchases of all goods and services for the entire year increased by $1.5 billion over 1964); a mid-year reduction of $1,750,000,000 in excise taxes (as the first phase of a four-year, $4.7 billion cut) and an increase of $885 million in Social Security benefits, made retroactive to Jan. 1 and disbursed in September. Together, these measures more than offset the normal growth of federal revenues and provided a net fiscal stimulus for the calendar year.

Components of Expansion. Of the major yardsticks of expansion, almost all showed substantial gains during the year. Major developments were as follows:

Unemployment. By December, the unemployment rate had fallen to 4.1 percent, nearly a full percentage point below the level of December 1964, and only a shade above the Administration's 4-percent "interim" goal. For all of 1965, the rate was 4.6 percent compared to 5.2 percent a year earlier. Major reductions occurred among non-white adults (8.2 percent in 1964, 6.6 percent in 1965 and 5.8 percent in the fourth quarter of 1965) and white teen-agers (13.3 percent in 1964, 12.2 percent in 1965 and 11.1 percent in the fourth quarter of 1965). An important exception to the pattern was non-white teen-agers, with a 1965 unemployment rate of 25.3 percent, only slightly lower than the 26.2 percent rate in 1964.

Fixed Business Investment. The new stimulus to business to expand and modernize capacity resulted in record outlays of $51.8 billion for new plant and equipment -- an increase of $6.9 billion over 1964 and $16.2 billion over 1960.

Industrial Production. Spurred by greater demand and capacity, the industrial production index rose to a record 143.3 (1957-59 = 100), up from 132.3 in 1964 and 108.7 in 1960.

National Income. National income rose to a record $554.6 billion, up $40.2 billion from 1964 and $140.1 billion from 1960.

Personal Consumption. Rapid gains in consumer purchasing power brought personal consumption expenditures to a record $428.5 billion -- up $29.6 billion from 1964 and $103.3 billion from 1960. The increase in this area constituted 63 percent of the 1965 rise in gross national product.

Corporate Profits. Profits for all private corporations in 1965 rose to $74.6 billion before taxes (up from $64.8 billion in 1964 and $49.7 billion in 1960) and to $44.5 billion after taxes (up from $37.2 billion in 1964 and $26.7 billion in 1960).

Housing Starts. Of the major components of private spending, only residential construction remained weak during 1965. Private housing starts fell from an annual rate of 1.7 million units in the first quarter of 1964 to a low of 1.4 million units in the third quarter of 1965.

Prices. Wholesale prices rose 2 percent and consumer prices, 1.8 percent, but the rises were considered moderate in terms of the size of the expansion. Higher food costs were a principal reason for the increases.

Balance of Payments. Administration programs helped cut the deficit to $1.3 billion. (See p. 865)

Wage-Price Concerns. The accelerating economic activity that occurred late in the year was one of the most outstanding features of the 1965 economic picture. It was reflected, as the Commerce Department's Survey of Current Business put it, in "the buoyant state of demand, the prospective large increases in spending, particularly for defense, and the growing pinch on resources. It was a dramatic shift from the spring months, when there was a widespread belief that the expansion might be slowing down." To many observers, if not all, the year-end question was whether national production capacity could accommodate the expected increase in total demand within the moderate price increases that had occurred over the five-year expansion. Although Administration officials in late 1965 continued to argue that inflation was not an imminent danger (at least from Government outlays -- see p. 150), President Johnson in January 1966 was constrained to note that "perhaps our most serious economic challenge" in 1966 was maintaining cost and price stability.

Throughout 1965, however, the Administration was not indifferent to wage and price developments. Officials continued to emphasize the importance of the Administration's wage-price guideposts, which sought to define non-inflationary limits for wage and price increases. Although voluntary, Government officials sometimes resorted to direct efforts to enforce the guideposts. When aluminum producers in November raised prices above the guideline limits, the Administration threatened to sell stockpiled aluminum and thus force prices down (although it denied that this was the intent of the proposed sales and, in fact, cited other reasons). The price increase was rescinded. When two major steel producers later announced an increase in prices which the Administration considered inflationary, they were met by a shift in Government purchases to other firms not raising prices. Steel prices did rise, but by an amount acceptable to the Administration.

In December, the Federal Reserve Board (which is independent of the Administration) increased the discount rate to control inflation. (See p. 877)

President Johnson in January 1965 urged Congress to establish counter-recessionary procedures to permit quick action on temporary income tax cuts and appropriation of funds for immediate "job-creating public programs." No action occurred on these requests.

House and Senate Key Votes for 1965

House Votes

1. House Rules. The House made a major change in its operating rules Jan. 4 when it voted to allow the Speaker to recognize a Member to call up for floor action a bill that had been before the Rules Committee for 21 days without being granted a rule for floor consideration. This increased the power of the majority leadership and decreased the power of the Rules Committee which in the past frequently blocked action on Administration bills by not granting a rule for floor consideration. Some legislation was brought to the floor under the new rule, while other bills were believed to have been cleared by the Committee because of the existence of the rule. The roll call on the issue, 224-202 (D 208-79; R 16-123), technically was on a parliamentary procedure, but had the effect of approving the change. The President did not have a public position on the issue.

2. Appalachia Assistance. The first major Great Society measure to clear Congress was a bill providing more than $1 billion in federal aid for the development of the economically depressed 11-state Appalachian region. By a 257-165 (D 232-56; R 25-109) roll-call vote, the House March 3 passed the bill and sent it to Mr. Johnson for his signature; Johnson in favor.

3. Aid to Education. Federal aid to elementary and secondary schools, long blocked in Congress over the church-state issue of assistance for non-public schools, won approval in 1965. The House early in the session passed an Administration bill which provided aid to school districts on the basis of the number of children from low-income families in the area. By using this approach, the Administration successfully avoided a controversy over the religious issue that could have again prevented favorable House action. The bill passed March 26 by a 263-153 (D 228-57; R 35-96) roll call; Johnson in favor.

4. Medicare. A major Administration victory was approval of legislation providing medical care for the aged. But Administration forces first had to defeat a Republican proposal for a voluntary comprehensive health insurance program in place of the President's compulsory approach. The method of financing the Administration and Republican plans also differed. The GOP proposal April 8 was rejected 191-236 (D 63-226; R 128-10); Johnson opposed.

5. Medicare. The Administration's bill providing a health insurance system for the aged April 8 passed the House by a 313-115 (D 248-42; R 65-73) margin once the Republican substitute (above) had been defeated. It was the first time that the House had voted on a medicare bill, which in previous years had never been reported by the Ways and Means Committee. It was a major part of the Administration's program. Johnson in favor.

6. Presidential Continuity. With the President's support, the House approved a constitutional amendment to permit the Vice President to become Acting President if the President were unable to perform his duties. The bill also provided for filling a vacancy in the office of the Vice President. The proposed amendment, which later cleared Congress and was sent to the states for ratification, was intended to resolve the long-standing uncertainty and debate about Presidential inability and its effect on the functioning of the office. The House April 13 approved the bill 368-29: D 246-21; R 122-8; Johnson in favor.

7. Foreign Aid. Although foreign aid went through Congress in 1965 without major reductions in Administration proposals, efforts were made to reduce spending in some areas. One Republican-sponsored cut would have reduced funds for development loans by $130,958,000, to a total of $649,292,000, and would have stipulated that labor unions participating in Latin American housing projects (under the aid program) be "non-Communist dominated." This effort May 25 was rejected 178-219 (D 62-205; R 116-14) and the Administration aid bill went on to pass the House virtually without change. Johnson opposed.

8. Department of Housing. A proposal of both Presidents Kennedy and Johnson to establish a Cabinet-level Department of Housing, which had been blocked in Congress for several years, won approval in the first session of the 89th Congress. The measure passed the House June 16 by a 217-184 roll call (D 208-66; R 9-118). Johnson in favor.

9. Rent Supplements Authorization. An Administration proposal to have the Federal Government pay part of the rent of poor families who could not obtain decent housing with their own incomes was one of the most controversial issues of the year. It also was one of the few new proposals sent to Congress in 1965 along with dozens of older requests, some of which had been debated for years. The unique nature of the proposal was believed to be one important reason the House June 30 nearly killed it by a 202-208 roll call (D 72-204; R 130-4). The proposal became law but operating funds were not forthcoming (see next item). Johnson opposed deletion.

10. Rent Supplements Financing. Although the Administration by a hairbreadth margin won approval of its controversial rent supplements plan (above), opponents late in the session were able to prevent the program from being put into effect. This was accomplished when a coalition of Republicans and Southern Democrats Oct. 14 voted 185-162 to kill a supplemental appropriation for the program (ND 24-141; SD 62-19; R 99-2); Johnson opposed to defeat of appropriation.

11. Voting Rights. For the second consecutive year, Congress enacted major legislation to protect the rights of Negroes. The 1965 law was intended to eliminate the denial of voting rights that occurred throughout much of the South and led to many and sometimes violent Negro demonstrations. The legislation suspended the use of literacy tests and similar devices and provided for federal voting examiners to order the registration of Negroes in certain areas, mostly in the South. The House passed the bill July 9 by a 333-85 roll call (ND 188-1; SD 33-60; R 112-24); Johnson in favor.

12. Anti-Poverty Amendments. Congress provided for expanded anti-poverty activities in legislation which about doubled funds for the program in 1966. But the increase was not enacted without controversy as the federal program came under increasing attack by Republicans and many state and local officials. An indication of the controversy occurred during House action on the bill when an effort was made to cut back authorized funds to the 1965 level and to kill a section which allowed federal officials to override a state Governor's veto of certain federal anti-poverty activities. The effort, however, was not successful, 178-227 (D 57-214; R 121-13). Johnson opposed.

13. Right-to-Work. The Administration's pledge to organized labor to obtain repeal of Section 14(b) of the Taft-Hartley Act appeared to be on its way to fulfillment when the House July 28 passed a bill to kill the disputed section. A filibuster in the Senate, however, prevented final action on the bill (below). Section 14(b) permitted states to enact so-called right-to-work laws barring the union shop. The House vote was 221-203 (D 200-86; R 21-117); Johnson in favor.

14. Farm Bill. One major piece of legislation, which received less notice than many other bills, was an omnibus farm bill covering wheat, cotton, wool, dairy and feed grain commodities and providing a cropland retirement program. It passed the House Aug. 19, 221-172 (D 202-68; R 19-104); Johnson in favor.

15. Immigration Revisions. Proposals that had been before Congress for many years to reform the immigration system were brought to the floor for a vote in 1965. The measure, passed by the House Aug. 25 by a 318-95 roll call (D 209-70; R 109-25) and later by the Senate with only one major change (below), eliminated the national origins quota system and established general priorities for the admission of immigrants to the United States based primarily on family relationships and employable skills. Johnson in favor.

16. Arts and Humanities. The long-controversial proposal of federal financial aid for the arts and humanities was enacted into law by Congress in 1965, but not without the protests of many who argued that this activity was none of the Government's business. In the House a Republican effort Sept. 15 to kill the bill was rejected 128-251 (D 49-207; R 79-44); Johnson opposed.

17. D.C. Home Rule. Although not an issue of national importance, legislation to provide self-government for the District of Columbia produced one of the President's few -- and one of his most notable -- outright defeats of the year. Mr. Johnson pushed vigorously for the legislation, finally persuading House Members to force the Administration's bill out of the Southern-dominated District Committee, which had bottled up similar proposals for years, only to see a substitute measure approved on the House floor. The Administration bill, which the Senate passed, provided for automatic establishment of home rule; the House bill provided for election of a charter board to draw up a home rule plan which would require approval in another election and could be vetoed by Congress. As a result, no home rule bill was enacted. The key House vote on the record was adoption Sept. 29 of the charter board plan as a substitute for the Administration bill, 227-174 (D 122-151; R 105-23); Johnson opposed.

18. Highway Beauty. One of the Administration's key proposals to improve the appearance of the United States was a program for control or removal of billboards and junkyards along Interstate and primary highways. The legislation also provided federal payments to states to cover costs of landscaping and scenic development of certain roads. The legislation, with which the President's wife was identified as much as the President, went through many revisions in Congress but finally became law. It passed the House Oct. 7 by a 245-138 roll call (D 219-49; R 26-89); Johnson in favor.

Senate Votes

1. Federal Water Quality Standards. The heart of the Water Quality Act of 1965 was the provision permitting federal water quality standards to be enforced in the absence of effective state action to abate pollution of interstate waters. The Senate sustained federal action in this area, defeating an amendment to strike out authority for federal standards, and went on to prevail on its basic position in the House-Senate conference on the bill. The amendment to strike out federal standards was defeated Jan. 28 on a 15-62 roll-call vote (D 3-49; R 12-13); Johnson no position.

2. Appalachia Assistance. The year in Congress got off to a fast start when the Senate Feb. 1 completed action on the first major Great Society measure, a bill providing more than $1 billion in federal aid for the development of the economically depressed 11-state Appalachian region. The bill was later propelled through the House unchanged. Senate passage came on a 62-22 vote (D 51-7; R 11-15); Johnson in favor.

3. Aid to Education. Long-sought legislation for federal aid to elementary and secondary schools became a reality when the Senate accepted a House bill without any change and sent it to the President. (See House votes) The vote on this highly unusual action came April 9, when the bill was passed by a 73-18 vote (D 55-4; R 18-14); Johnson in favor.

4. Poll Tax Ban. Led by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (D Mass.), a group of liberal Senators came close to defeating the Administration and adding to the voting rights bill a legislative ban on poll taxes in state and local elections. The Administration said the amendment possibly was unconstitutional. Although the poll tax ban was defeated, the Senators won Administration acceptance of a provision directing the Attorney General to institute court tests of the poll tax as a discriminatory device. The House version of the bill contained a poll tax ban, but the Senate's milder provision prevailed in the final version of the bill. The Kennedy amendment was rejected May 11 on a 45-49 vote: R 6-25; D 39-24 (ND 34-9; SD 5-15); Johnson opposed.

5. Voting Rights Cloture. The Senate duplicated its history-making feat of 1964 when it voted to invoke clo-ture on (cut off) a civil rights filibuster. The issue this time was the voting rights bill, and the vote ended a proforma Southern filibuster. The procedure requires a two-thirds majority of Senators present and voting. The required total was achieved May 25 with votes to spare, 70-30: R 23-9; D 47-21 (ND 42-4; SD 5-17); Johnson in favor.

6. Voting Rights Passage. The most comprehensive federal program to enforce voting rights of Southern Negroes since the Reconstruction resulted in large part from month-long demonstrations against alleged voting registration malpractices in Selma, Ala. The Senate debated the measure for 25 days before passing it May 26 on a 77-19 roll call: R 30-2; D 47-17 (ND 42-0; SD 5-17); Johnson in favor.

7. Military Assistance Funds. The U.S. foreign military assistance program came under sharp attack during the year. Critics said recipient countries were using the arms to attack their neighbors instead of defending against Communism; they cited Greece and Turkey, India and Pakistan. But the Senate turned down an amendment to pare $115 million a year from the fiscal 1966 and fiscal 1967 authorization for the military assistance program, reducing the program to the fiscal 1965 level. The June 11 vote was 38-43 (D 28-25; R 10-18); Johnson opposed.

8. Presidential Continuity. President Johnson backed Congressional action proposing a constitutional amendment to deal with the problems of a disabled President and a vacancy in the office of Vice President. The Senate cleared the bill July 6, voting 68-5 (D 47-4; R 21-1).

9. Medicare. The Senate nailed down the top Administration victory of the year, sustaining the House in support of a compulsory hospital insurance plan for the aged backed by a supplementary, voluntary health insurance plan. An amendment to delete both plans from the Social Security bill July 9 was rejected, 26-64 (D 8-53; R 18-11); Johnson opposed.

10. Medicare. After that vote, enactment of the "medicare" program was a foregone conclusion. The program was embedded in a bill which also included a major boost in Social Security payments and revision of the Kerr-Mills health program for the aged, child health care programs and other federal-state public assistance programs. The Senate passed the bill July 9 by a vote of 68-21 (D 55-7; R 13-14); Johnson in favor.

11. Rent Subsidies. The hottest political item of the year in Congress was the Administration proposal to pay part of the rent of certain classes of low-income families. The Senate rejected a move to strike the proposal from the omnibus housing bill, 40-47 (D 16-42; R 24-5); Johnson opposed.

12. Dirksen Amendment. Deft parliamentary maneuvers by Senate Minority Leader Dirksen (R Ill.) brought to the Senate floor a proposed constitutional amendment to permit states to apportion one house of a bicameral legislature on non-population bases. The amendment would have, in effect, overturned "one-man, one-vote" decisions by the Supreme Court on apportionment of state legislatures. On a vote Aug. 4, the bill failed to get the required two-thirds majority for a constitutional amendment. The vote was 57-39 (D 28-36; R 29-3); Johnson no position.

13. Anti-Poverty Funds. With the Great Society program under full steam, Republicans failed in a Senate attempt to bank the fires by cutting the anti-poverty program back to its first-year level. An amendment to cut the funds and set up a joint Congressional committee to keep an eye on the anti-poverty warriors Aug. 18 was rejected 39-48 (D 14-45; R 25-3); Johnson opposed.

14. Foreign Farm Workers. Showing their disgruntlement with the farm labor policies of Labor Secretary W. Willard Wirtz, farm-state Senators in committee added an amendment to the omnibus farm bill which would have made the Agriculture Secretary, not Wirtz, responsible for deciding whether U.S. farmers required supplemental labor imported from Mexico, the Caribbean and other locales. It took the vote of Vice President Humphrey to break a tie and put across an amendment to strike this provision from the bill Sept. 13. The amendment prevailed, 46-45 (D 43-17, plus Humphrey; R 2-28); Johnson in support.

15. Omnibus Farm Bill. With extraneous matters out of the way, the Senate quickly passed the omnibus farm measure, 72-22 (D 56-8; R 16-14); Johnson in favor.

16. Highway Beautification. A sizable majority of Senators also supported a watered-down version of the First Lady's highway beautification bill. The bill provided federal funds to control or remove junkyards and billboards along Interstate and primary federal-aid highways and for landscaping and scenic improvement of all federal-aid highways. The Senate Sept. 16 passed it 63-14 (D 47-6; R 16-8); Johnson in favor.

17. Immigration Revisions. A long-sought goal of many ethnic, labor and religious groups was the repeal of the country-by-country quotas of the national origins quota system, and the re-unification of families kept apart by stringent immigration policies. A bill to repeal the national origins quota system and substitute over-all annual ceilings on immigration from the Western Hemisphere and from all non-Western Hemisphere countries was passed by Congress in 1965. The bill also set general priorities for preferred classes of immigrants, and placed relatives of previous immigrants high on the list. The Senate Sept. 22 passed it 76-18 (D 52-15; R 24-3); Johnson in favor.

18. Right-to-Work Repeal. The top legislative goal of the labor movement in 1965 was repeal of a section of the Taft-Hartley Act which permitted states to enact "right-to-work" laws to ban union shop agreements between labor and management. The House passed the bill, but in the Senate it ran into a filibuster. It was laid aside until 1966 after its supporters Oct. 11 failed to get even a majority on a vote to shut off debate on a preliminary motion to take up the bill (a two-thirds majority was needed). The vote, 45-47 (D 40-21; R 5-26), ranked as one of President Johnson's major defeats of the year.

House Key Votes on New House Rules, Appalachia, School Aid, Medical Care Insurance System and Presidential Continuity

1. H Res 8. Adoption of House rules for the 89th Congress. Amend the rules to permit the Speaker to recognize a Member to call up for floor action a bill that had been before the Rules Committee for 21 days without being granted a rule, and make other changes in House rules. Albert (D Okla.) motion to consider the previous question, cutting off debate and precluding amendments. Motion agreed to 224-202: R 16-123; D 208-79 (ND 185-4; SD 23-75), Jan. 4, 1965. The President did not take a position on the motion.

2. S 3. Passage of the Appalachian Regional Development Act of 1965 authorizing $1,092,400,000 for road construction, health facilities, vocational schools, housing, sewage works, land improvement and other activities to aid the 11-state Appalachian region. Passed 257-165: R 25-109; D 232-56 (ND 173-15; SD 59-41), March 3, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position.

3. HR 2362. Passage of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965, providing: a three-year program of grants to states for allocation to school districts with large numbers of children from low-income families; grants for purchase of books and library materials; funds to improve educational research; and grants to strengthen state departments of education. Passed 263-153: R 35-96; D 228-57 (ND 187-3; SD 41-54), March 26, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position.

4. HR 6675. Social Security Amendments of 1965 providing a basic, compulsory, payroll-tax-financed health insurance program for the aged, a supplementary voluntary health insurance program and other Social Security and welfare benefits (see next roll call). Byrnes (R Wis.) motion to recommit the bill to the House Ways and Means Committee with instructions to report it back with the provisions of a substitute bill, HR 7059, which provided a voluntary, comprehensive health insurance program for the aged financed by general revenue and contributions from participants. Rejected 191-236: R 128-10; D 63-226 (ND 3-188; SD 60-38), April 8, 1965. A "nay" was a vote supporting the President's position.

5. HR 6675. Passage of the Social Security Amendments of 1965 to: provide a basic compulsory health insurance program for the aged, financed primarily by a payroll tax; a supplementary voluntary health insurance program financed by general revenue and contributions from participants; increases in Social Security cash benefits; and expansion of the Kerr-Mills health program, child health-care programs and other federal-state public assistance programs. Passed 313-115: R 65-73; D 248-42 (ND 189-2; SD 59-40), April 8, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position.

6. H J Res 1. Passage of the bill proposing a constitutional amendment to permit the Vice President to become Acting President if the President were unable to perform his duties, and to provide for filling a vacancy in the office of Vice President. Passed (two-thirds majority required) 368-29: R 122-8; D 246-21 (ND 172-6; SD 74-15), April 13, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position.

House Key Votes on Foreign Aid, Housing Department, Rent Subsidy and Financing, Voting Rights, Anti-Poverty Funds

7. HR 7750. Foreign Assistance Act of 1965. Adair (R Ind.) motion to recommit the bill to the Foreign Affairs Committee with instructions to reduce funds for development loans by $130,958,000, and to stipulate that labor unions participating in Latin American housing projects be "non-Communist dominated" as well as "free." Rejected 178-219: R 116-14; D 62-205 (ND 13-166; SD 49-39), May 25, 1965. A "nay" was a vote supporting the President's position.

8. HR 6927. Passage of the bill establishing a cabinet-level Department of Housing and Urban Development to be headed by a Secretary appointed by the President with Senate confirmation; transferring to the Secretary all the functions, powers and duties of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, the Federal Housing Administration, the Public Housing Administration and the Federal National Mortgage Association; and specifying other functions, powers and duties of the Department. Passed 217-184: R 9-118; D 208-66 (ND 170-10; SD 38-56), June 16, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position.

9. HR 7984. Housing and Urban Development Act of 1965, providing rent supplements to low-income families and extending and amending laws relating to public housing, urban renewal and community facilities. Harvey (R Mich.) motion to recommit the bill to the Banking and Currency Committee with instructions to delete the rent supplements provisions and language authorizing home improvement grants to homeowners in urban renewal areas. Rejected 202-208: R 130-4; D 72-204 (ND 21-163; SD 51-41), June 30, 1965. A "nay" was a vote supporting the President's position.

10. HR 11588. General Supplemental Appropriations bill for fiscal 1966. Harvey (R Mich.) amendment to delete language providing authority for $6 million in contracts, and appropriations of $180,000 for payments under the contracts, for a new program of rent supplements to low-income families. Accepted 185-162: R 99-2; D 86-160 (ND 24-141; SD 62-19), Oct. 14, 1965. A "nay" was a vote supporting the President's position.

11. HR 6400. Passage of the Voting Rights Act, suspending the use of literacy tests or similar voter qualification devices in certain states and areas and authorizing the appointment of federal voting examiners to order the registration of Negroes in states and voting districts whose voter activity had fallen below certain specified levels; the bill also imposed a ban on the use of poll taxes as a voter qualification in any election. Passed 333-85: R 112-24; D 221-61 (ND 188-1; SD 33-60), July 9, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position.

12. HR 8283. Economic Opportunity Amendments of 1965 (anti-poverty authorization). Quie (R Minn.) motion to recommit the bill to the House Education and Labor Committee with instructions to (1) delete a section which allowed federal officials to override a state Governor's veto of certain federal anti-poverty activities and (2) reduce the fiscal 1966 appropriations authorization of $1.9 billion to the fiscal 1965 level of $947.5 million. Rejected 178-227: R 121-13; D 57-214 (ND 6-174; SD 51-40), July 22, 1965. A "nay" was a vote supporting the President's position.

*Rep. Scheuer (D N.Y.) did not vote because of possible conflict of interest.

†Rep. Clarence J. Brown (R Ohio) died Aug. 23, 1965.

#Rep. Albert W. Watson (R S.C.) resigned Feb. 1, and was re-elected in a special election June 15, and sworn in June 16, 1965.

House Key Votes on Right-to-Work, Farm Bill, Immigration, Arts and Humanities Foundation, D.C. Home Rule, Highway Beauty

13. HR 77. Passage of the bill to repeal Section 14(b) of the Taft-Hartley Act permitting state right-to-work laws under which the union shop is prohibited. Passed 221-203: R 21-117; D 200-86 (ND 182-8; SD 18-78), July 28, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position.

14. HR 9811. Passage of the Food and Agriculture Act of 1965, covering wheat, cotton, wool, dairy and feed grain commodities and providing a cropland retirement program. Passed 221-172: R 19-104; D 202-68 (ND 139-40; SD 63-28), Aug. 19, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position.

15. HR 2580. Passage of the bill amending immigration law to eliminate the national origins quota system and to set general priorities for the admission of immigrants to the United States. Passed 318-95: R 109-25; D 209-70 (ND 179-8; SD 30-62), Aug. 25, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position.

16. HR 9460. Establish a National Foundation on the Arts and Humanities to provide federal assistance to the visual and performing arts and the humanities. Griffin (R Mich.) motion to recommit (kill) the bill. Rejected 128-251: R 79-44; D 49-207 (ND 5-170; SD 44-37), Sept. 15, 1965. A "nay" was a vote supporting the President's position.

17. HR 4644. District of Columbia Charter Act. Sisk (D Calif.) substitute for Administration's D.C. home rule bill, providing for election of a charter board to draw up within seven months a charter for D.C. self-government which, if approved by D.C. voters, would go into effect in 90 days if not disapproved by either chamber of Congress. (The Administration bill provided machinery for automatic establishment of D.C. self-government, contingent only on approval by D.C. voters in a referendum, with an automatic federal payment to the District.) Accepted 227-174: R 105-23; D 122-151 (ND 50-134; SD 72-17), Sept. 29, 1965. A "nay" was a vote supporting the President's position.

18. S 2084. Passage of the bill authorizing appropriations of $325 million in fiscal 1966-67 for federal-state programs for control or removal of billboards and junkyards along interstate and primary highways, for federal payments to states to cover costs of landscaping and scenic development of federal-aid highways, and for the administrative costs of implementing the bill. Passed 245-138: R 26-89; D 219-49 (ND 159-21; SD 60-28), Oct. 7, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position.

Senate Key Votes on Federal Water Standards, Appalachia, School Aid, Poll Tax Ban, Voting Rights Cloture and Passage

1. S 4. Water Quality Act of 1965. Tower (R Texas) substitute for provisions of the Senate version, deleting a directive to the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare to set federal water quality standards for interstate streams. Rejected 15-62: R 12-13; D 3-49 (ND 0-36; SD 3-13), Jan. 28, 1965. The President did not take a position on the amendment.

2. S 3. Passage of the Appalachia Regional Development Act of 1965, authorizing $840 million for construction of 3,350 miles of roads in the 11-state Appalachian region and $252.4 million for the period ending June 30, 1967, for construction of health facilities, vocational schools, housing and sewage works; land improvement; reclamation of mining areas; development of timber and water resources; and supplements to federal grant-in-aid programs. Passed 62-22: R 11-15; D 51-7 (ND 39-1; SD 12-6), Feb. 1, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position.

3. HR 2362. Passage of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965, providing: a three-year program of grants to states for allocation to school districts with large numbers of children from low-income families; grants for purchase of books and library materials; funds to improve educational research; and grants to strengthen state departments of education. Passed 73-18: R 18-14; D 55-4 (ND 40-0; SD 15-4), April 9, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position.

4. S 1564. Voting Rights Act of 1965. Kennedy (D Mass.) amendment to prohibit the collection of a poll tax as a condition for registration or voting in state or local elections and to authorize enforcement machinery. Rejected 45-49: R 6-25; D 39-24 (ND 34-9; SD 5-15), May 11, 1965. A "nay" was a vote supporting the President's position.

5. S 1564. Voting Rights Act of 1965. Hart (D Mich.) motion that the Senate invoke cloture (set limits) on debate on the bill. Cloture agreed to (two-thirds majority required) 70-30: R 23-9; D 47-21 (ND 42-4; SD 5-17), May 25, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position.

6. S 1564. Passage of the Voting Rights Act of 1965, suspending the use of literacy tests or similar voter qualification devices in any state or county where 20 percent of the population was nonwhite and in which such tests or devices were used to qualify registrants seeking to vote in the 1964 general elections, provided less than 50 percent of the voting-age population was registered or voted in the 1964 general election; authorizing the appointment of federal voting examiners to register voters in such states or counties, and also in states or counties where less than 25 percent of the voting-age population of any race or color was registered to vote; and ordering the Attorney General to institute court tests of state poll taxes as discriminatory devices. Passed 77-19: R 30-2; D 47-17 (ND 42-0; SD 5-17), May 26, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position.

Senate Key Votes on Military Aid Cut, Presidential Continuity, Medical Care Insurance System, Rent Subsidy, Dirksen Amendment

7. S 1837. Foreign Assistance Act of 1965. Church (D Idaho) amendment to reduce the fiscal 1966 and fiscal 1967 authorizations for foreign military assistance by $115 million each year, to an annual authorization of $1,055,000,000. Rejected 38-43: R 10-18; D 28-25 (ND 21-17; SD 7-8), June 11, 1965. A "nay" was a vote supporting the President's position.

8. S J Res 1. Presidential Continuity. Adoption of the conference report on the bill proposing a constitutional amendment to permit the Vice President to become Acting President if the President were unable to perform his duties, and to provide for filling a vacancy in the office of Vice President. Adopted (two-thirds majority required) 68-5: R 21-1; D 47-4 (ND 31-3; SD 16-1), July 6, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position.

9. HR 6675. Social Security Amendments of 1965. Curtis (R Neb.) amendment to delete the compulsory hospital insurance plan for persons 65 or older, financed by a payroll tax, and the voluntary, supplementary health insurance plan for persons in the same age group, financed by general revenues and by contributions from participants. Rejected 26-64: R 18-11; D 8-53 (ND 0-43; SD 8-10), July 9, 1965. A "nay" was a vote supporting the President's position.

10. HR 6675. Passage of the Social Security Amendments of 1965, providing a basic compulsory hospital insurance program for the aged financed primarily by a payroll tax and a supplementary, voluntary health insurance program financed by general revenue and contributions from participants; increasing Social Security cash benefits; and expanding the Kerr-Mills health program, child health care programs and other federal-state public assistance programs. Passed 68-21: R 13-14; D 55-7 (ND 43-0; SD 12-7), July 9, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position.

11. S 2213. Housing and Urban Development Act of 1965. Tower (R Texas) amendment to delete a provision authorizing a program of rent supplements for low-income families. Rejected 40-47: R 24-5; D 16-42 (ND 6-35; SD 10-7), July 15, 1965. A "nay" was a vote supporting the President's position.

12. S J Res 66. State Legislative Apportionment. Passage of the bill proposing a constitutional amendment, sponsored by Dirksen (R Ill.), to permit one house of a state legislature to be apportioned on the basis of geography and political subdivisions as well as on the basis of population. Rejected (two-thirds majority required) 57-39: R 29-3; D 28-36 (ND 10-33; SD 18-3), Aug. 4, 1965. With 96 Senators voting, 64 votes were needed for passage. The President did not take a position on the amendment.

Senate Key Votes on Anti-Poverty Funds, Foreign Farm Workers, Omnibus Farm Bill, Immigration Revisions, Right-to-Work Cloture

13. HR 8283. Economic Opportunity Amendments of 1965 (anti-poverty funds authorization). Allott (R Colo.) amendment to reduce the fiscal 1966 authorization from $1,650,000,000 to the fiscal 1965 level of $947,500,000, and to establish a joint Congressional committee to study the federal anti-poverty program. Rejected 39-48: R 25-3; D 14-45 (ND 1-38; SD 13-7), Aug. 18, 1965. A "nay" was a vote supporting the President's position.

14. HR 9811. Food and Agriculture Act of 1965. Bass (D Tenn.) amendment to strike from the bill a provision transferring from the Secretary of Labor to the Secretary of Agriculture authority to determine whether foreign farm workers were required by U.S. farmers. Accepted 46-45 (the 46th "yea" vote was cast by Vice President Humphrey to break a 45-45 tie): R 2-28; D 43-17 (ND 36-6; SD 7-11), Sept. 13, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position.

15. HR 9811. Passage of the Food and Agriculture Act of 1965, providing wheat, cotton, wool, dairy, feed grains and rice programs for four years, plus a four-year cropland retirement program. Passed 72-22: R 16-14; D 56-8 (ND 38-5; SD 18-3), Sept. 14, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position.

16. S 2084. Highway Beautification and Scenic Development. Passage of the bill, authorizing $320 million during fiscal 1966-67 for federal-state programs to control or remove billboards and junkyards along federal-aid Interstate and primary highways, and for federal payments to states to cover the costs of landscaping and scenic improvement of all federal-aid highways. Passed 63-14: R 16-8; D 47-6 (ND 38-0; SD 9-6), Sept. 16, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position.

17. HR 2580. Immigration and Nationality Act Amendments. Passage of the bill amending the Immigration and Nationality Act to repeal the national origins quota system, to set an annual quota on all immigration from outside the Western Hemisphere and a quota on all immigration from the Western Hemisphere, and to establish general priorities for the admission of immigrants to the United States. Passed 76-18: R 24-3; D 52-15 (ND 43-2; SD 9-13), Sept. 22, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position.

18. HR 77. Right-to-Work Repeal. Mansfield (D Mont.) motion that the Senate invoke cloture (set limits) on debate on his Oct. 1 motion to make the pending business of the Senate the bill HR 77, for repeal of Section 14(b) of the Taft-Hartley Act (which allowed states to enact laws banning union shop agreements between labor and management). Rejected (two-thirds majority required) 45-47: R 5-26; D 40-21 (ND 36-5; SD 4-16), Oct. 11, 1965. With 92 Senators voting, 62 votes were needed for cloture. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position.

CQ Fact Sheet On Johnson Boxscore

CONGRESS UNUSUALLY COOPERATIVE WITH PRESIDENT'S PROGRAM

In 63 separate documents, President Johnson in 1965 asked Congress for an imaginative, staggering variety of legislation. With characteristic energy, he guided and maneuvered his program through the legislative mill until all but a handful of his major requests were granted. Congressional Quarterly's item-by-item breakdown of the President's specific requests gave him a score of 68.9 percent of requests fully granted by Congress, the highest score since 1953 (see box).

Mr. Johnson's domestic proposals, the bulk of his legislative program, were aimed chiefly at building the "Great Society." The President proposed to channel the nation's wealth not only to fight poverty and inequities among the poor, the underprivileged, the handicapped and the minority groups, but also to wage war on disease, crime, and ugliness, to provide direction for the country's burgeoning urban areas, and to enhance the environment of all through encouragement of the arts and humanities, preservation of parklands within the reach of everyone and control of environmental pollutants.

The President also proposed to improve the nation's economy through a number of measures -- removal of the existing gold reserve requirement in order to release gold to meet international claims on the dollar and allow the U.S. money supply to expand; repeal or reduction of most excise taxes to spur economic growth; programs aimed at reducing the nation's balance-of-payments deficit; reduction of the silver content in coins; a new program of technical services to the states; and a new program for development of depressed regions through programs similar to the area redevelopment and accelerated public works programs initiated earlier and the newly enacted plan for development of the Appalachian region. All these were granted by Congress.

FOREIGN POLICY

In foreign policy, the President's long-sought immigration reforms were approved, embodying most of his basic objectives including repeal of the outmoded national-origins quota system. Congress did, however, impose an annual ceiling on immigration from Western Hemisphere countries which Mr. Johnson opposed. His foreign aid requests were cut only slightly by Congress, and three separate requests for funds for defense of South Viet Nam and for economic assistance to Southeast Asia were granted in full. Congress approved Presidential requests for legislation to implement an agreement with Canada for removal of U.S. and Canadian tariff duties on automobiles and new car parts, and for Congressional consent to ratification of a number of treaties including amendments to the United Nations Charter. One treaty not acted on by the Senate provided a legal framework for an exchange of consulates with the Soviet Union.

Specific Requests

CQ broke the President's program down into 469 specific legislative requests (list begins on p. 100). The status of the requests at the end of the 1965 session was as follows:

- 323 requests had been approved by Congress -- 68.9 percent.
- 8 requests awaited compromise House-Senate agreement -- 1.7 percent.
- 20 requests were passed by either the House or the Senate, but not by both -- 4.3 percent.
- 3 requests were approved by a committee but did not come up for a vote on the floor of either chamber -- .6 percent.
- 20 requests received committee hearings but were not reported -- 4.3 percent.
- 40 requests received no action -- 8.5 percent.
- 4 requests were rejected either in committee or on the floor but could be brought up again -- .9 percent.
- 51 requests were rejected finally -- 10.8 percent.

Legislative Scores -- 1953-1965

Legislative scores for President Eisenhower in the 83rd Congress (1953-54, Republican), 84th Congress (1955-56, Democratic), 85th Congress (1957-58, Democratic) and 86th Congress (1959-60, Democratic); for President Kennedy in the 87th Congress (1961-62, Democratic); for Presidents Kennedy and Johnson in the 88th Congress (1963-64, Democratic); and for President Johnson in the first session of the 89th Congress (1965, Democratic):

Year	Proposals Submitted	Approved By Congress	Approval Score
1957	206	76	36.9
1961	355	172	48.4
1965	469	323	68.9

 The score for 1953 is not comparable to those for subsequent years. Before 1954, CQ used a different system, grouping Presidential requests in relatively broad categories.*

MAJOR REQUESTS NOT GRANTED

The President's legislative casualties were minimal. He lost his wheat program in favor of a substitute plan; his proposal for federal mortgage insurance on land development loans for "new towns" was dropped; Congress voted a much bigger military pay hike than the President wanted. In addition, there was only partial action on three of his major labor programs (minimum wage and double overtime, repeal of the law allowing state "right-to-work" laws and overhaul of the unemployment compensation system), on home rule for the District of Columbia, on a proposal to place all the foreign affairs agencies of the Government under a single personnel system, on much of the anti-crime program, including firearms control, on establishment of several parks and a wild rivers preservation system. There was no action at all on his requests for reform of the electoral college, a new policy for the merchant marine or revision of many transportation taxes and user charges. But most of these programs seemed certain to receive action in the next session.

'GREAT SOCIETY' PROGRAMS

Cutting across the categorical lines of the President's messages were a variety of "Great Society" proposals to reduce poverty and help the impoverished. But many of the President's other "Great Society" programs benefitted the fortunate as well as the needy.

Some of the major programs which had failed in recent years were brought under the mantle of the "Great Society" and enacted in 1965. Notable among these were aid to elementary and secondary education, which the President re-cast to overcome previous objections to aid to church-supported schools by emphasizing aid to individual needy children; and area redevelopment, which was presented as part of a new program of economic development of entire depressed regions.

Other programs previously denied by Congress were proposed again in substantially the same form and enacted in 1965. Chief among these was medical care for the aged financed under the Social Security system, which Congress embroidered with an additional voluntary health care program proposed by Republicans. Another was federal scholarships, which the President requested and Congress granted in two bills in 1965 -- the general college aid program and a bill extending and expanding programs of aid to students of the health professions. One more was authority for grants for initial staffing of community mental health centers, which Congress had denied in 1963; in 1965 it not only voted these grants but also permitted grants for initial staffing of vocational rehabilitation workshops. Finally, a previously shelved proposal for foundations to foster the arts and humanities was sought by Mr. Johnson and granted.

The President's education program contained a number of innovations including a Teacher Corps to bolster school faculties in slum and other impoverished areas, extension of the college work-study program to students from medium-income (as well as low-income) families, encouragement of less-developed colleges and use of university resources to foster community development.

The capstone of the President's efforts in the field of health was the medical care for the aged program. His over-all health program also included a number of new proposals, all granted by Congress -- a wide-ranging program to disseminate information on and provide for diagnosis and treatment of heart disease, cancer and stroke patients in regions throughout the country; a greatly expanded vocational rehabilitation program emphasizing new methods of treatment, construction and initial staffing of rehabilitation workshops, and extended periods for diagnoses of the rehabilitation potential of the severely disabled and mentally retarded; and grants for initial staffing of community mental health centers. Other proposals, granted by Congress, expanded federal controls over illicit uses of depressant and stimulant drugs; and extended and expanded existing programs of vaccination of preschool children against childhood diseases, of health care for domestic migratory workers, of construction of facilities for health research, of assistance for students in a variety of health professions, and of general health program grants.

WELFARE PROGRESS

The President's major welfare requests also were granted. He sought a program of aid for the depressed Appalachian region, major changes in the Social Security law benefitting children as well as the aged and indigent, and a doubling of the war on poverty begun in 1964 with continued federal payment of 90 percent of most of the costs of the program.

In his housing requests, the President received authority (but only administrative funds) for a new program of rent supplements for low-income families unable to obtain decent housing on their own, extension of several existing housing programs such as public housing and housing for the elderly, new federal aid for land development, college housing, urban renewal and urban beautification partly through grants under the existing open spaces program. In addition Mr. Johnson pushed through his proposal to establish a new Cabinet-level Department of Housing and Urban Development, similar to a request denied President Kennedy.

For urban areas, in addition to the housing programs, the President proposed and Congress granted authority for study of a high-speed rail transit system, and Congress finally approved building of a rapid rail transit system for the nation's capital.

Mr. Johnson's proposals to eliminate barriers to Negro voting were approved by Congress roughly according to the outline he presented. The bill suspended all literacy test requirements and allowed appointment of federal examiners to enforce voting rights in areas where voting participation fell below specified levels.

For the first time ever, the President in 1965 enunciated natural beauty enhancement as a part of the national purpose. Under this umbrella, he proposed establishment of 12 park areas across the country and Congress authorized four; he asked and was granted programs of federal aid to encourage states to control billboards and junkyards along highways; he sought and was granted new authority to control water and air pollution and to develop new means of solid waste disposal. Congress took little or no action, however, on other beautification proposals to preserve wild rivers in their natural states, to take steps to control pesticides and to control other forms of pollution of the environment.

CQ'S JOHNSON BOXSCORE FOR 1965

Following is a list of President Johnson's specific legislative requests to Congress in 1965 and action taken on them through Oct. 23, when Congress adjourned. A letter in parentheses following each request indicates the principal and most definitive source of the request. A key to the letters is given in the box on page 99. Treaty requests made during the Johnson Administration are followed by the date the treaty was sent to the Senate.

Boxscore Ground Rules

Only specific requests for legislative action submitted to Congress by the President were tabulated for the Boxscore. Excluded from the list of legislative requests were proposals advocated by officials of the Executive Branch, but not specifically by the President; measures that the President endorsed but did not request; suggestions that Congress consider or study particular topics, if no legislative action was requested; nominations.

Almost all appropriation requests were excluded because they are a yearly occurrence and provide the funds necessary to carry out regular functions of the Government. But CQ included several appropriation requests the President designated as key points of certain programs, and which were submitted in special messages.

Congress does not always vote "yes" or "no" on a Presidential proposal. CQ evaluates compromises to determine if the request is closer to approval or to rejection of the President's request.

COTTON HIGHLIGHTS FOUR-YEAR FARM BILL

HR 9811 -- Reported by House Agriculture Committee (H Rept 631) July 20, 1965.

- Passed by the House, amended, on a 221-172 roll-call vote Aug. 19, 1965. (See p. 992)
- Reported with amendments by Senate Agriculture and Forestry Committee (S Rept 687), Sept. 7, 1965.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, on a 72-22 roll-call vote Sept. 14, 1965. (See p. 1072)
- Conference report (H Rept 1123) adopted by the House by a 219-150 roll-call vote Oct. 8 (see p. 1016), and by the Senate by voice vote Oct. 12, 1965.

PL 89-321 -- Signed into law Nov. 4, 1965.

Congress in 1965 passed a much-amended version of the Administration's omnibus farm bill. The Food and Agriculture Act of 1965:

● Established a new acreage reduction and price support program for the 1966-69 cotton crops, using direct payments to cotton farmers for the first time, and continuing "one-price cotton," instituted in 1964, under which cotton was sold domestically and for export at about the same price. Estimated first-year cost, $800 million.

● Revised and extended through the 1969 crop year existing acreage reduction and price support programs for wheat and feed grains, continuing in effect the wheat marketing certificate program instituted in 1964. Estimated first-year cost: wheat, $1.25 billion; feed grains, $1.4 billion.

● Authorized acreage reduction payments for the 1966-69 rice crops if needed to keep rice growers' income at 1965 levels.

● Revised and extended through 1969 the National Wool Act program of income supplement payments to wool growers. Estimated first-year cost, $40 million.

● Established authority for premium milk sales quotas for individual farmers selling in federally regulated milk markets.

● Authorized a cropland retirement program for 1966-69 which permitted five-to-ten-year land retirement contracts with farmers. First-year cost, $250 million.

On balance, the 1965 farm bill was a victory for the Johnson Administration, because all of the President's major proposals except the ones dealing with a change in the wheat certificate program, a marketing certificate program for rice, graduated payments to wool producers and sale and transfer of acreage allotments were accepted. Congress went even further than requested when it provided four-year commodity programs instead of two-year programs. Thus, unless the programs provided by HR 9811 proved inadequate to provide enough food and fiber, protect farm income and to keep down Government costs, Congress was promised a respite from the frequent, hard-fought farm bills of the past decade.

The Administration failed to put across its plan to decrease Government farm program costs by shifting some of the burden for farm income support to the consumer. The two major features of this plan were a proposed increase in value of domestic marketing certificates for wheat -- meaning higher flour prices -- and institution of a domestic marketing certificate program to raise the cost of domestically consumed rice. Both programs would have increased farmers' income and would also have cut Government costs by eliminating export subsidies.

Following a concerted lobbying effort by the milling and baking industry, the Democratic leadership in the House withdrew the Adminstration's plan to increase the face value of wheat marketing certificates from 75 cents a bushel to about $1.30 a bushel, and substituted a provision for direct federal payments to farmers to cover the increase, thus increasing the Government cost of the wheat program by about $300 million annually. (Since millers must buy wheat certificates from farmers along with the wheat, the Administration's plan would have increased their costs, and the increase would have been passed on to consumers. Opponents of the plan called it a "bread tax.")

Almost unanimous opposition to the rice certificate plan from producers and consumers caused it to be dropped at the committee stage, along with its projected savings of $40 million annually. The rice program written into the bill was designed to permit the Administration to reduce acreage allotments in an effort to eliminate surpluses, and still keep farmers' income at 1965 levels. It would cost about the same as the existing program.

Higher-than-expected costs also emerged from the cotton program. The total cost for fiscal 1966 of the Administration's commodity proposals plus the cotton provisions which it backed was estimated at $3.7 billion by the Agriculture Department. The Department estimated that the final version of the farm bill would cost $4.1 billion in fiscal 1966, close to the figure for the fiscal 1965 cost of the programs covered. (Dairy program costs are included, although not affected by HR 9811.)

Cotton. The most significant departure from existing programs was the cotton title of HR 9811. It applied to cotton the type of program which had already been successful in reducing surpluses of feed grains and wheat: a low level of support for market prices, coupled with supplemental payments to bring farmers a more adequate income than they could derive from market sales, plus a requirement that farmers retire from production a certain portion of their acreage in order to qualify for the supplemental payments.

This program replaced a complicated program, enacted in 1964, for a moderately high level of market price support, plus additional payments for farmers who reduced their production and an "equalization payment" to cotton mills and exporters to permit them to obtain cotton at world market prices. The 1964-65 cotton program had a number of adverse effects: Almost all cotton moved through Government hands, virtually eliminating the private cotton trade and increasing Government handling costs. Production remained at high levels, threatening a record surplus. And total consumption did not rise as much as had been expected, in part because the rigid price structure created by the program gave producers of synthetic fibers and foreign cotton producers a competitive advantage.

HR 9811 provided for support of market prices at 90 percent of the world market price (support would be 21 cents a pound for middling-inch upland cotton in 1966). For farmers who wished additional income, the bill required that they retire 12.5 percent of their cotton allotments (already based on the minimum permitted by law -- 16 million acres nationally); for this they would get acreage diversion payments. They could also voluntarily retire more acres, up to 35 percent of their allotments, for payment. In exchange for cooperating with the acreage reduction program, these farmers would also get direct payments from the Government (9.42 cents a pound in 1966) on the portion of their crop grown on a special "domestic allotment," representing 65 percent of the regular farm cotton allotment.

The program was so designed that on the basis of administrative determinations, in 1966 a farmer could choose to plant 150 percent of his farm cotton allotment for the world market price of 22-23 cents a pound; 87.5 percent of his allotment for an average price (including direct and diversion payments) of about at least 29.5 cents a pound; 75 percent of his allotment for an average price about 33 cents a pound; or 65 percent of his allotment for an average price of over 36 cents a pound. Farmers with small allotments would get maximum program benefits without having to cut back their production.

The Administration hoped that the new program would reduce cotton production by a significant amount below the 15 million bales grown in 1965; would lower cotton prices to mills even more than under the "equalization payment" system, making cotton more competitive with synthetics; would make U. S. cotton more competitive in export markets; would strengthen the private cotton trade, almost ending Government cotton purchase and resale activities; and would permit reduction of Government surpluses.

Regional rivalries, between Southern and Western cotton growers, and other intra-industry disputes complicated the task of drafting a new cotton program. Early in the year, President Johnson recommended changes in the program, but the Agriculture Department was unable to come up with specific recommendations for submission to Congress. The new program was finally drafted by the House Agriculture Committee, in consultation with the Administration and the industry. It was amended on the House floor to meet Southern objections, and a few other changes were made in the Senate and carried through in the final version. (The Senate Agriculture and Forestry Committee made sweeping changes in the wheat and cotton provisions of the bill before reporting it to the Senate floor. The Administration expressed strong opposition to the changes, and the House provisions were restored on the Senate floor, with some minor changes.)

'Bread Tax' Lobbying. A strong lobbying campaign was successfully waged against the Administration's plan to increase the cost to millers, etc., of domestic wheat marketing certificates. Among the groups leading the campaign were the American Farm Bureau Federation and the Wheat Users Committee -- an organization specially created to fight the certificate increase. The latter group was composed of a number of major milling and baking companies, cereal and macaroni manufacturers and three labor unions: the American Bakery & Confectionery Workers International Union (AFL-CIO), the Bakery & Confectionery Workers International Union of America and the Teamsters Union.

The campaign took two forms -- direct lobbying of House members and a vigorous propaganda effort within many Congressional districts, expecially in Northern urban areas. Literature against the plan was passed out at grocery stores and an intensive letter-writing effort was organized.

It was the effectiveness of the campaign in Northern urban areas which brought victory to the lobbying coalition. The House Democratic leadership, at the urging of a number of urban Democrats, abandoned the planned increase in certificate costs on the House floor and backed a substitute providing for the desired increase in farmer income through direct federal payments. The Administration yielded to the decision of the House leadership even though some backers of the plan felt they could have commanded a majority had it come to a vote.

Tie to 14(b) Repeal. Following a legislative tactic similar to that employed in 1964 on the wheat-cotton and food stamp bills, the House leadership tied passage of HR 9811 to a bill with wide appeal for Members from Northern urban districts -- HR 77, to repeal Section 14(b) of the Taft-Hartley Act, which permitted states to enact "right-to-work" laws banning union shop agreements between management and labor unions. Repeal of the provision was a major legislative goal of organized labor in 1965. The House leadership held up HR 9811 until after HR 77 was passed July 28, with the support of many farm-state Democrats, on a 221-203 roll-call vote. HR 9811 was then passed by the House Aug. 19, with the support of many urban Democrats, on a 221-172 roll-call vote. Following is a comparison of the line-up on the two votes, by region and party:

Democrats:	East	South	Midwest	West
HR 77	77-1	18-78	63-3	42-4
HR 9811	51-23	63-28	55-9	33-8
Republicans:
HR 77	16-23	0-19	4-54	1-21
HR 9811	2-33	4-13	12-41	1-17

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law, the Food and Agriculture Act of 1965 (HR 9811 -- PL 89-321) contained the following major provisions:

COTTON

Established a semi-voluntary acreage diversion and price support program for the 1966-69 cotton crops, with price support loans at the world market level and direct payments to farmers to supplement their income from market sales.

Under the program, a cooperator (a farmer "diverting" at least 12.5 percent of his cotton acres from production) would qualify for three kinds of benefits: price support loans at 90 percent of the world market price on all the cotton he produced (the loan rate for 1966-crop cotton would be cents a pound), direct payments (for 1966, 9.42 cents a pound) on the portion of his production grown on a special "domestic allotment," and acreage diversion payments (for 1966, 10.5 cents a pound) on the projected yield of the diverted acres. A cooperator would have to average 65 percent of parity (at 1965 prices, 27.2 cents a pound) from the first two types of benefits. Farmers with small allotments would not be required to divert acres in order to participate.

Permitted farmers to overplant their allotted acres but provided that none of the cotton grown by these farmers would be eligible for Government support loans or payments, and required that all such cotton must be sold for export only. A national ceiling of 250,000 acres was placed on such nonprogram acreage for 1966. The ceiling for 1967, 1968 and 1969 was not to exceed that figure and could be less, depending upon the amount of reduction in crop carryover each year.

Domestic Allotment. Established, for 1966-69, a "domestic allotment" for each cotton farm, representing the farm's share of the nation's domestic needs for one year. A similar provision was contained in the 1964-65 cotton program. HR 9811 made the domestic allotment no smaller than 65 percent of the farm's total cotton acreage allotment. (For 1966, it would be 65 percent.)

Established a minimum domestic allotment to apply on farms with small cotton acreage. The minimum domestic allotment would be (1) the smaller of 10 acres or the farm's regular cotton allotment, or (2) the smaller of the farm's regular cotton allotment (if more than 10 acres) or the acreage required to produce 3,600 pounds of cotton. Stipulated that a farmer would not have to reduce his planting below his minimum domestic allotment to receive benefits under the bill.

Acreage Diversion Program. As a condition for price support loans and price support payments, required farmers in 1966 to keep out of cotton production at least 12.5 percent of their farm cotton acreage allotments. In following years the required amount would be set by the Secretary of Agriculture at up to 12.5 percent of the farm allotment. However, a farmer could not be required to reduce his plantings below his minimum domestic allotment.

Authorized the Secretary to make acreage diversion payments of up to 25 percent of parity (parity was currently 41.7 cents a pound; the payments would be 10.5 cents a pound in 1966) on the projected yield of the amount of acres required to be diverted as a basis for participation in the cotton program.

Authorized the Secretary to offer additional acreage diversion payments at a rate of up to 40 percent of parity on projected yield if the farmer retired up to an additional 22.5 percent of his farm acreage allotment (making a total of 35 percent of his acres which a farmer could retire for payment). (For 1966, these payments would also be 10.5 cents a pound.)

As a condition for diversion payments, required retired acres to be devoted to specified land-conserving practices.

Permitted a farmer to divert and receive payment on 12.5 percent of his allotment, and to release the balance of his allotment for reapportionment to other farmers.

For farms where no diversion was required because of the minimum domestic allotment, stipulated that farmers would nonetheless receive full diversion payments, as though they had diverted the full amount for which payment was authorized (35 percent of the farm acreage allotment). If, in addition, such a farmer actually diverted up to 35 percent of his allotment, he would get additional diversion payments. This provision was designed to provide additional income support for small, inefficient "subsistence" farmers.

Price Support. Established a price support loan of 21 cents a pound for upland cotton (middling-inch) in 1966 and of not more than 90 percent of the world market price in succeeding years. All cotton grown by farmers cooperating in the acreage reduction program would be eligible for price support loans. (The price support loan rate is made available to a farmer when he pledges his crop as collateral against a loan from the Commodity Credit Corporation, or when he sells the crop to the CCC. The price support loan rate tends to establish the domestic market price for a given commodity.)

In addition, instructed the Secretary to make direct payments to farmers of at least nine cents a pound on the projected yield of each farmer's domestic allotment. (In 1966, the payment would be 9.42 cents a pound.) The sum of the price support and the direct payment (exclusive of diversion payments) on all cotton produced on the farm would have to yield the farmer between 65 percent and 90 percent of the parity price for cotton. In November 1965 prices, this range was between 27.2 cents a pound and 37.3 cents a pound.

Total Benefits -- Rep. Harold D. Cooley (D N.C.), chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, Oct. 8 entered into the Congressional Record the following summary of benefits cooperators would receive on all cotton planted (with acreage diversion payments added to support loans and support payments): a farmer who reduced his plantings by the minimum 12.5 percent -- 29.5 cents per pound; a farmer who reduced his plantings by 25 percent -- 32.67 cents; a farmer who made the maximum reduction of 35 percent and thus planted only his domestic allotment -- 36.07 cents. For the farmers with minimum domestic allotments who chose to divert acres even though it wasn't required, the benefits would be 30.8 cents, 33.7 cents and 41.7 cents, respectively, in the three categories above.

Miscellaneous. Provided that unused allotted cotton acreage could be released by farmers and reapportioned to other farmers within the county, or in other counties within the state if not wanted within the county.

Authorized sale or lease of cotton allotments between farmers within a county, or in other counties of the same state if farmers within the county of origin approved in a referendum.

Authorized exchange of rice and cotton allotments within a county or with farmers in an adjoining county.

Provided that farmers could assign their direct price support and diversion payments to private lending agencies in obtaining production loans.

Provided support payments to be made one-half at the time the farmer signs up and the other half at the Secretary's discretion.

WHEAT

Extended through 1969 and altered the voluntary wheat acreage reduction and marketing certificate program enacted in 1964. Under the revised program, farmers who complied with their acreage allotments and also agreed to participate in a land division program would receive a combination of price supports, direct payments, marketing certificates and, possibly, land diversion payments which would bring their average price per bushel for wheat to $1.845. Farmers who did not comply would get the going market price for wheat, which was expected to be around $1.25 a bushel.

Acreage Allotments. Required the Secretary of Agriculture to set a national acreage allotment based on estimated needs for domestic consumption and export. He could not set these estimated needs -- called the national marketing quota -- at less than 1 billion bushels. (For 1966, Agriculture Secretary Orville L. Freeman set a national marketing quota of 1,292,000,000 bushels and a national acreage allotment of 47.8 million acres.)

For 1967 and succeeding years, distributed state, county and farm acreage allotments on the basis of the previous year's distribution. (This would do away with the complicated formula for determining small farm allotments, established in 1962, which would remain in effect for 1966. See 1962 Almanac p. 100)

Land Diversion. Provided that in 1966 cooperating farmers would have to devote to land-conserving practices an amount of land equal to 15 percent of their acreage allotments based on 47.8 million acres. (This figure represented the additional amount of land which the farmers would be allotted if allotments were based on 55 million acres, the former national minimum acreage. For years after 1966, the figure would change as the national acreage allotment changed in relation to 55 million acres.)

Authorized the Secretary of Agriculture to pay up to 50 percent of the support rate on the projected production of the required diverted acres, plus any additional acres the farmer elected to retire from his actual wheat allotment up to the larger of 50 percent of his allotment or 25 acres. (In 1965 the Secretary did not offer any payment on the mandatory diverted acres, but did offer payment for voluntarily diverted acres. The Department Oct. 25 announced the same procedure would be followed in 1966.)

Price Supports, Certificates, Direct Payments. Provided price support loans based on the world market level and the price of wheat sold for feed (about $1.25 a bushel).

Required processors of wheat for domestic human consumption to acquire from farmers marketing certificates issued by the Government. The certificates would have a face value calculated to bring the price received by farmers for wheat for domestic human use up to $2.00 a bushel (about 75 cents a bushel). Farmers would receive from the Government enough certificates to cover about 40 percent of their production.

Provided for direct federal payments to farmers to further increase, to 100 percent of parity (currently $2.57 a bushel), the price received by farmers for wheat for domestic human use.

Directed that the minimum average price received by farmers for all of their wheat must be $1.845 a bushel.

Provided that additional support could be given if necessary through direct payments to farmers on exported wheat or through diversion payments.

FEED GRAINS

Continued through 1969 the voluntary price support and acreage diversion program for corn, grain sorghums and, at the discretion of the Secretary, barley.

Provided that, in order to cooperate in the program, a farmer must retire a specified amount of his feed grains base (for most farms, the average amount planted to feed grains in 1959 and 1960), and that, in addition, he could retire an additional amount for payment, up to a total of 50 percent of his base or 25 acres, as determined by the Secretary. (The Secretary set the required diversion at 20 percent of the base in 1966, same as in 1965; the additional voluntary diversion could amount to 30 percent, for a total of 50 percent of the base on a cooperating farm.)

Required farmers to devote the retired acres to land-conserving uses, and authorized acreage diversion payments at up to 50 percent of the support rate on the projected yield of the diverted acres. (For 1966, the Secretary set the payment at zero for the required 20 percent diversion, except for small farms--25 acres base or less--where the payment would be 20 percent of the support rate. For any additional acres diverted, up to 50 percent of the farm's base, the Secretary set the payment at 50 percent of the support rate.)

Provided that, at the discretion of the Secretary, the diverted land could be used for production of guar, sesame, safflower, sunflower, castor bean, mustard seed crambe, plantago ovato and flax, but that the diversion payment would be reduced.

Permitted the Secretary to authorize participators to grow soybeans in place of feed grains and receive the feed grains direct payments to which they would otherwise have been entitled on that acreage. Also permitted participators to substitute wheat on their feed grain acreage and vice versa, if permitted by the Secretary.

Continued the Secretary's authority to provide price support through a combination of loans and direct payments.

Authorized the Secretary to set the price support loan at less than 65 percent of parity ($1.03 a bushel for corn) as long as the combined rate of loans and payments was at least 65 percent of parity. This was done to encourage participation in the acreage reduction program, since lowering the loan would drive the market price down. (For 1966, the Secretary set the loan rate for corn at $1.00 a bushel compared to $1.05 in 1965, and the direct payment at 30 cents, compared to 20 cents in 1965, for a total support of $1.30. Total supports for grain sorghums -- $2.05 a hundredweight -- and barley -- $1.00 a bushel -- also were about 5 cents higher than in 1965.)

OTHER PROGRAMS

Dairy. Authorized establishment of individual quotas for sales of Class I milk under federal milk marketing orders. Currently producers selling under federal milk marketing orders were paid a "blend" price representing their share of the pooled receipts of the sales of all Class I (drinking) milk, which commanded premium prices, and all manufacturing milk, which commanded only the minimum support price. The dairy title provided that, if approved by producers in a referendum, the producers in a market order area would each be assigned a specific quota for Class I sales.

In addition, authorized marketing orders for manufacturing milk, provided for individual voting (instead of block voting) in the farmer referendums, provided access for new producers in the case of increased consumption or forfeited bases, and permitted transfer of Class I bases among farmers.

Wool. Continued the wool program through 1969. Provided that direct payments to producers for shorn wool would represent the difference between the average market price and an income level between 60 and 90 percent of parity, taking into account increases in the cost of production. The cost of production formula would result in raising the income target level from 62 cents a pound (the level since 1955) to 65 cents a pound in 1966 and 66 cents a pound in 1967, with the support levels for 1968 and 1969 depending on further changes in the parity index.

Rice. For 1966-69, provided that whenever the national rice acreage allotment was reduced below the 1965 level of 1.8 million acres, the Secretary would institute an acreage diversion program.

Provided that under the acreage diversion program, payments made to cooperators would be set at levels designed to keep their total rice income at 1965 levels.

Froze the support price for rice for 1966 and 1967 at the existing level of $4.50 a hundredweight.

Cropland Adjustment. Established a cropland retirement program designed to retire 40 million acres through five-to-ten-year contracts. Contracts could be entered into between 1965 and 1969.

Set a $225 million limitation on the calendar-year costs of new contracts that could be signed in any fiscal year.

Provided that payments under such contracts would be at an annual rate of not more than 40 percent of the annual market value of the crop that would have been produced on the land. Payments could be made annually, in a lump sum, or in other installments.

Required that a participating farmer place all of at least one surplus crop into the program in 1966, with the Secretary setting the percentage of a crop to be retired after that time.

Stipulated that a participator must have owned the farm for at least three years prior to participation.

Authorized additional payments to farmers who permitted their retired land to be used for hunting or fishing and authorized appointment of a Wildlife Advisory Board.

Specified that for 1966 only, the cropland adjustment program could not be used to retire cotton acreage in any county where this was vetoed by the local Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee.

Miscellaneous. Directed the Secretary of Agriculture to make a study of the parity income position of farmers and report to Congress not later than June 30, 1966.

Authorized the Secretary of Agriculture to use CCC funds for the purchase of dairy products on the open market when there was not a sufficient supply of such products in the CCC to meet Department commitments under Food for Peace export programs and domestic donation programs.

Extended for four years the authority for leasing of tobacco acreage and added the provision that for tobacco being allotted on an acreage-poundage basis, leases might be made on the basis of pounds, rather than acres.

Extended for four years the exemption of "boiling peanuts" from peanut marketing quotas.

An omnibus farm bill in 1965 was dictated by the fact that three major commodity programs -- feed grains, wheat and cotton -- were scheduled to expire with the 1965 crop. A fourth program, wool, was slated to expire Dec. 31, 1966. Also, Administration farm planners wished to make changes in the rice program and initiate a new cropland retirement program similar to the Soil Bank of the 1950s.

JOHNSON MESSAGE

President Johnson Feb. 4 sent a farm message to Congress calling for revision and extension of expiring commodity programs, changes in the rice and tobacco programs and institution of a new cropland retirement program designed to take 40 million acres out of production over a period of five years. (For text see p. 1413)

Mr. Johnson also called for increased credit to rural areas and steps to assure that rural communities receive all available federal assistance. The President further asked for authority to establish an emergency stockpile of farm goods and announced plans to create a permanent body to study the entire U. S. agricultural policy.

The President's farm message stressed the importance of the support programs. "Independent studies by university economists are unanimous in their basic conclusion: the removal of price and income supports would have a catastrophic effect upon farm income," the President said. However, he said that the farm program should "be focused more precisely on the opportunity for parity of income for America's family farmers and lower Government costs." He said private business should be encouraged to buy from farmers "rather than depending on the Government as a source of supply."

The message also emphasized that programs to help rural America should be considered as distinct from programs aimed at helping commercial farming. "We need to change much of our thinking on farm policy," Mr. Johnson said. "Just as we do in other segments of our economy, we need to separate the social problems of rural America from the economic problems of commercial agriculture. We need to be concerned about both, but the answers to each may be different."

President Johnson listed five objectives that should determine farm policy: (1) an abundance of food and fiber at reasonable, stable prices; (2) effective use of agricultural resources; (3) a workable balance between supply and demand at lower costs to the Government; (4) opportunity for the efficient farmer to earn parity of income; (5) parity of opportunity for all rural people.

PROPOSALS

Following is a summary of the major recommendations, plans and actions listed in the President's farm message:

Commodity Programs. He requested revision and extension of existing wheat, feed grains, cotton, tobacco, rice and wool programs. He also requested authorization of a cropland retirement program and for legislation to permit the leasing or sale of acreage allotments. The President subsequently submitted detailed requests for all of these programs except cotton. (For tobacco requests, see story p. 134; for all other programs, see below)

Distribution of Federal Aid. Mr. Johnson said special measures were needed to assure that federal assistance was distributed equally between urban and rural communities. "It is not easy to equitably distribute federal assistance to a scattered rural population," he said. "Rural communities often lack the specialized organizations found in major cities which keep informed of development programs and initiate action to make use of them."

The President said a Rural Community Development Service would be created in the Department of Agriculture to work with other federal agencies in extending services to rural areas. All departments and agencies administering programs which could benefit rural people had been asked to take steps to assure equal distribution between rural and urban areas. A study had been ordered of "administrative obstacles" that might prevent equal distribution. The Cooperative Federal-State Extension Service would be strengthened to assist rural communities in forming development organizations. (See agriculture appropriation story p. 194)

Rural Credit. The President recommended that Congress set up a home mortgage insurance program to be administered by the Agriculture Department. Congress failed to act on a similar proposal in 1964. The program would be patterned after the Federal Housing Administration's insured home loan program that had brought private money into urban and suburban areas. The Department had administered a direct housing loan program since 1949. The President said the loan insurance program would increase rural housing at lower federal cost. (The program was included in the omnibus housing bill enacted in 1965. See story p. 358)

Mr. Johnson also asked Congress to increase the annual limit on the Department's present program of insuring farm ownership loans and loans for community water systems and recreation developments. (See story p. 138)

Reserve Stocks. The President asked for authority to set up a reserve stock of commodities to be used during emergencies, such as for national security purposes, for relief and for domestic economic stabilization. The Commodity Credit Corporation would manage the stock, but the expenses would be kept separate from the cost of prices and income support programs. There was no action on this request in 1965.

Foreign Trade. The President said steps would be taken to increase exports of farm products. He said the Food for Peace program would be broadened and geared to the needs of recipient countries and their economic development programs.

Study. Mr. Johnson said he would reorganize the National Agricultural Advisory Commission into a permanent Commission on U. S. Food and Fiber to make a detailed study of the entire agriculture policy of the nation. The Commission would represent rural communities, consumers, producers, industry, Government and the public.

(The President Nov. 4 announced the formation of a Commission on Food and Fiber to appraise "our agricultural and related foreign trade policies," and report to him in 18 months. The Commission would be chaired by Sherwood Berg, dean of the School of Agriculture at the University of Minnesota.

ADMINISTRATION DRAFT BILL

President Johnson April 5 sent Congress a draft bill to extend and amend the Government's wheat, feed grain and wool programs, provide a new subsidy program for rice and a long-term cropland retirement plan, and permit the transfer of allotments from one farm to another.

The President, in letters to the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House, said the proposals would reduce Government costs and increase farm income by making the market pay more to farmers, would reduce production and would make U. S. farm products more competitive in the world market. (For text, see p. 1416)

An Administration spokesman emphasized that a main objective of the President's proposals was to shift part of the Government's farm costs to the market. He said farmers "have been subsidizing consumers for a long time," and that it was "unfair" for taxpayers to provide farm income. Agriculture should receive "fair returns" from the market on a par with other businesses, he said.

The draft bill would have increased consumer costs by increasing the cost of wheat through the use of wheat marketing certificates of a higher value than in 1964 and 1965, and by the institution of a marketing certificate program for rice. Under this system, farmers were given certificates for that portion of the crop to be consumed domestically. Processors, such as millers, were required to buy the certificates at prices set by the Secretary of Agriculture. They could pass along the cost of the certificates to consumers. Officials estimated that the changes proposed by the Administration would increase the retail price of bread by about a penny a loaf and of rice by "a few pennies" a pound. The Administration bill was introduced April 5 in the House (HR 7097) by Agriculture Committee Chairman Harold D. Cooley (D N. C.) and in the Senate (S 1702) by Agriculture and Forestry Chairman Allen J. Ellender (D La.)

Background and highlights of the President's proposals:

Wheat. The existing wheat program, passed in 1964 for the 1964 and 1965 crops, provided land diversion payments and price supports to farmers complying with acreage allotments and agreeing to divert certain amounts of acreage from wheat production to conservation and certain other crops. Farmers not taking part in the program received none of the benefits.

Land diversion payments ran up to half the value of normal production on the diverted acres. Under the price support program, each farmer was given domestic marketing certificates covering that portion of his crop to be consumed in this country and export marketing certificates for the portion to be exported. Food processors and exporters were required to buy the certificates to cover the wheat they processed or exported. The domestic certificates currently were worth 75 cents each and the export certificates 30 cents. Price supports currently could be set from 65 to 90 percent of parity on wheat for domestic use and from 0 to 90 percent of parity on wheat to be exported and on non-certificated wheat.

Proposals -- The Administration bill extended the wheat program for two years -- for the 1966 and 1967 crops--with these changes:

The maximum price support for wheat for domestic use was raised from 90 percent of parity to 100 percent -- about $2.57 a bushel. The Government's basic support of $1.25 a bushel would be continued, but the value of domestic certificates would be raised from 75 cents to nearly $1.30 a bushel.

The Administration planned to discontinue the export certificate system. Export subsidies would then also be dropped, meaning an annual savings of $125 million. Farmer income would be increased by about the same amount.

Farmers would be permitted to divert up to 50 percent, rather than the current 20 percent, of their wheat cropland to conservation and other uses. The limitation (a maximum of 50 percent of the normal production of the diverted acres) on land diversion payments would be removed.

Feed Grains. Congress in 1961 enacted a voluntary acreage reduction program covering corn, grain sorghums, barley, oats and rye. The program was revised in 1962 and again in 1963, when it was extended through 1965. Farmers who agreed to take out of production 20 to 50 percent of their feed grain acreage received diversion payments and price supports. Noncooperators received no benefits.

Diversion payments were provided up to 50 percent of the price support rate on the normal production of the retired cropland. Price supports for corn (the basis for all other feed grain supports) were set between 65 to 90 percent of parity.

Proposals -- The Administration bill extended the feed grain program for two years--through 1967--with these major changes:

Agriculture officials were given more discretion in lowering or raising price supports to meet year-to-year conditions and could limit supports to only a portion of a farmer's production. The 50 percent limit on diversion payments would be removed. Farmers would be permitted to grow soybeans on feed grains acreage if approved by the Agriculture Secretary. Officials estimated that changes in the feed grains programs would cut Government costs $25 to $50 million a year.

Rice. The Agricultural Act of 1958 provided a permanent floor on acreage allotments for rice of 1,653,000 acres and price support at 65 to 90 percent of parity. Export subsidies, as with wheat, were paid to permit sales to foreign countries at the lower world prices.

Proposals -- The Administration's bill authorized a domestic marketing certificate program--similar to the one for wheat--for 1966 and 1967. Price support loans for rice with the certificates would be from 65 to 100 percent of parity. Farmers would receive certificates based on the percentage (about 35 percent) of the crop to be used in the country. Processors would be required to buy the certificates.

Government supports, then currently about $4.50 a hundredweight, were to be at the world market level of about $3.50 per hundredweight. The certificates would be valued at about $3 to provide the farmer with a total parity income of about $6.50 per hundredweight for rice consumed domestically. The lower price support loan rate would eliminate the need for export subsidies, saving the Government an estimated $35 to $45 million a year.

Additional certificates would be given on the first 1,500 hundredweight of production, thus providing higher returns to small producers.

Wool. The National Wool Act of 1954, extended in 1958 and 1961, was due to expire March 31, 1966. It authorized conventional price support purchases or direct payments. Under the direct payment system, domestic wool was sold on the open market, and the difference between the market price and a much higher support price was paid the farmer. Price supports could range up to 90 percent of parity and were set at a level to encourage a production of up to 360 million pounds of wool a year.

Proposals -- The Administration's bill would extend the National Wool Act from March 31, 1966, to Dec. 31, 1967. Production goals in terms of poundage would be deleted, and payments would be graduated on three levels, depending on the amount a producer marketed. Small producers would receive the highest rate of payments.

Cropland Retirement. The Administration bill authorized a new Cropland Adjustment Program under which the Government during 1965-70 could make contracts of five to 10 years with farmers to divert cropland to soil, water, wildlife and forest conserving uses, conservation of open spaces, natural beauty, wildlife and recreational resources and prevention of air and water pollution. The farmers would receive diversion payments and financial assistance to put the acreage to other uses. Limits would be placed on the amount of land which could be retired in any county. A farmer executing a contract would have to agree to retire from production his entire acreage devoted to one of the surplus crops designated by the Secretary of Agriculture.

Allotment Transfers. The Administration bill authorized the sale or lease of acreage allotments, marketing quotas and sugar proportionate shares from one farmer to another with the seller or leasor retaining ownership of the land. The President said this would provide additional income to farmers who remain on their land but quit farming and would permit other farmers to expand their operations.

COTTON

Although Mr. Johnson, in his Feb. 4 agricultural message, recommended that changes be made in the expiring cotton law, he did not include cotton in the draft bill. Later in the year, the Administration backed a cotton bill drafted by the House Agriculture Committee on the basis of proposals by Chairman Harold D. Cooley (D N. C.). This proposed direct income support payments to farmers, a single market price for domestic and export cotton at the world market level and an acreage diversion program to reduce cotton production. This program was written into the final version of the Administration's 1965 omnibus farm bill.

Congress in 1964 enacted a two-year cotton program designed to allow domestic textile mills to purchase cotton at prices competitive with those paid for U. S. cotton by foreign manufacturers buying on the world market.

Before 1964, the domestic price of cotton was supported at about 32.5 cents a pound, and an 8.5-cent-a-pound export subsidy was provided to make U. S. cotton exports competitive in world markets. The mechanism of support was the price-support loan system, under which a farmer could get a Government loan on his crop at the support rate. If market conditions were favorable, he could redeem the cotton, paying off the loan, and sell the crop commercially. If conditions were unfavorable, he could deliver the cotton to the Government in full repayment of the loan.

The complicated 1964 cotton program (1) reduced the loan rate in stages to 29 cents a pound, (2) established an "equalization fee" which went to exporters and to domestic cotton mills, providing them both with cotton at about the world price of 23.5-24 cents a pound, and (3) authorized a higher level of price support for small farmers and farmers who voluntarily reduced their production. (1964 Alamanac p. 98)

This program, it was hoped, would stimulate domestic textile mills to use more cotton instead of artificial fibers in their products, and would encourage farmers to reduce their production. However, domestic mill consumption did not increase enough to offset a decline in exports, and cotton production continued at high levels. Government surplus stocks continued to grow; the total carryover at the end of the 1965-66 marketing year was expected to reach a record 16 million bales. Federal expenditures for the cotton program went from $740 million in fiscal 1964 to $903 million in fiscal 1965. (This expenditure figure does not take into account possible receipts from the later sale of cotton acquired by the Government in those years.)

Cooley Bills. Disagreement among various elements of the cotton industry frustrated Administration efforts in 1965 to come up with a detailed cotton program in time to add it to the President's April 5 proposals. House Agriculture Committee Chairman Harold D. Cooley (D N. C.) May 13 introduced a cotton bill (HR 8149) to reduce the national minimum cotton allotment from 16 million acres to 14 million acres; eliminate the payment of a subsidy to cotton mills; provide for, alternatively, a direct payment to farmers to make up the difference between the world market price and a higher "fair" price set by the Secretary of Agriculture, or a support loan at about 29 cents a pound; and provide payments to farmers who retired some of their cotton acres. Growers could either sell their cotton on the market and take a direct payment or sell it to the Government at the support rate. In the latter case, the Government would sell the cotton to textile mills at the world price, absorbing the loss.

This bill was opposed by growers because it reduced the national minimum acreage allotment and by the cotton trade because it substituted Government transactions for open market transactions. Following further discussions between the industry, the Agriculture Department and members of the House Agriculture Committee, Cooley June 23 introduced a second cotton bill (HR 9414) which retained the 16-million acre national minimum cotton allotment, provided for price support loans at the world market price level plus direct payments to increase growers' incomes on the cotton produced on a "domestic allotment" equal to at least 60 percent of a farm's cotton allotment, and authorized the Secretary of Agriculture to require farmers to retire a portion of their cotton acres in order to be eligible for the direct payments on their cotton. This bill became the basis for the cotton program in HR 9811.

DAIRY

No dairy legislation was due to expire in 1965, and the President made no recommendation for changes in existing law, which provided indirect price supports for dairy farmers through Government purchase of U. S. milk products. A second form of income support was provided to some dairy farmers through federal milk marketing orders. These orders, in effect in most major milk markets throughout the United States, amounted to price-fixing agreements, supervised by the Federal Government, between milk handlers operating in the regulated markets and the farmers who sold milk to them. Under the agreements, a higher price -- varying from market to market -- was paid for milk which was sold as drinking (Class I) milk than was paid for milk, usually of the same grade and quality, which was used to make milk products. (The lower price of the "manufacturing" milk was established by the prices paid by the Government in its purchase program for dairy products.)

Rep. W. R. Poage (D Texas) June 1 introduced a bill (HR 8674) to authorize the establishment of individual quotas on sales of Class I milk for producers selling under federal milk marketing orders.

The program was similar to one recommended by President Kennedy in 1963 as part of a proposed broad change in the dairy program. The Class I base plan was passed by the Senate in 1964 but was not acted on by the House during the 88th Congress. In the meantime, pressure for broad changes in the dairy program subsided as surplus milk production declined.

The Class I base plan was designed to discourage overproduction by farmers who sold milk under federal milk marketing orders. Under such orders, all of the milk sold by farmers to regulated handlers was pooled. After the portion required for the fluid (drinking, or Class I) milk needs of the market was drawn off, the remaining amount was used for manufacturing milk products. Each farmer was then paid a "blend price" representing his share of the receipts for the higher-priced Class I sales and of the lower-priced manufacturing sales. If production of milk sold in the market increased more rapidly than requirements for Class I milk, the "blend price" per unit of milk decreased, reflecting the higher proportion of milk sales for manufacturing purposes. Individual farmers who wished to maintain a given level of income thus had to increase their output. But their actions poured more manufacturing milk into the market, further diluting the blend price. The Class I base plan was designed to break this vicious price circle by establishing individual quotas for Class I milk sales. Then, a farmer who increased his production would get only the manufacturing price for the extra milk, and his action would not dilute the income of other farmers.

REACTION

The House Agriculture Committee held hearings intermittently between March 22 and June 14 on farm legislation, including the Administration's proposals. The Senate Agriculture and Forestry Committee held similar hearings between June 16 and July 15. Following is a summary of testimony before the two Committees.

Wheat. Manufacturers of wheat products and the American Farm Bureau Federation attacked the proposed increase in the value of domestic marketing certificates, calling the increase a "bread tax" on low-income consumers. Manufacturers of corn starch said wheat for industrial uses should not be exempted from the marketing certificate system. Numerous groups criticized an Administration proposal to permit planting of soybeans on diverted acreage as designed to bring about a soybean surplus.

Feed Grains. The Administration feed grains proposals had relatively smooth sailing in the House, with only the provision allowing planting of soybeans on diverted acreage drawing stiff criticism.

The feed grains program received rougher treatment in the Senate. Sen. Ellender told Secretary Freeman during the hearings that he would push for legislation to stiffen feed grain production controls. Ellender said the feed grain price support and acreage control program had reduced surpluses but at a cost to the taxpayers of $6 for each bushel of reduction. Freeman countered that the system was the best that could be passed. He said he had supported the stiffer control plan in 1962, when it was rejected by Congress, but added it was currently "politically unrealistic" to believe it could be passed.

Rice. The proposed institution of a certificate system for rice generated strong criticism. In House hearings, only the National Grange supported the proposal. Both growers and millers opposed the plan. A spokesman for the Rice Millers Association told the Committee that the Administration's plan "would in essence ask the rice industry to turn its back on its domestic market." A brewery representative indicated brewers of some beers might have to drop rice from their beer formulas if the provisions went into effect. A spokesman for the Kellogg Co. said the change would harm the competitive position of his firm's rice cereal. Joseph L. Alioto, president of the Rice Growers Assn. of California, said, "Our considered judgment is that the certificate plan as proposed is both unwise and unjust and would be destructive to the rice industry."

Freeman told the Senate Committee that he recognized rice growers had opposed the plan and that he was willing to discuss adjustments and compromises. But he warned that if the program was not adopted, rice price supports and acreage allotments would have to be reduced.

Wool. The Administration's plan to shift wool price supports to a graduated scale with higher payments to small producers drew strong criticism from wool growers. A spokesman for the National Wool Growers Assn. told the Senate Committee that the Administration plan would give small growers -- many of whom raised sheep as a sideline -- only "a few dollars" additional income per year. The larger producers, who depended on sheep for all their income, "would be adversely affected and in some cases ruined by this proposal," he said. A number of other grower organizations also opposed the plan.

Cropland Retirement. Secretary Freeman told the Senate Committee, "I regard Title V (cropland retirement) as the most basic and perhaps the most essential feature of the entire bill." The National Grange gave it tepid support, saying it should be considered only in terms of a "temporary expediency." The National Assn. of Wheat Growers endorsed it but asked that provisions be amended to require that a farmer need only retire a minimum of 50 (rather than 100) percent of one allotment crop to be eligible for the program. The National Farmers Union (NFU) took a similar stand. A spokesman for the Uplands Cotton Growers Inc. asked that it be amended to exclude cotton. Various conservation and recreation groups went on record in favor of it.

Allotment Transfers. Title VI (allotment transfers) received little support. It was roundly criticized by both the NFU and the Farm Bureau and was given only qualified support by the Grange. Fred V. Heinkel, president of the Missouri Farmers Assn., summed up much of the prevailing feeling in his remarks to the Senate Committee. "There is considerable apprehension among our membership as to the desirability of this provision," he said. "There is a prevailing fear among family farmers that large landowners might 'gobble up' basic allotments and stimulate a trend toward corporate farms. If this provision is adopted, we would insist that certain safeguards be incorporated to be sure that this does not happen."

Cotton. Cotton merchants generally urged that support loan rates be dropped to or below the world price level and that growers receive direct cash payments to bring their incomes up to "fair" levels. Some merchants advocated making the cash payments available only if the farmer sold his cotton in the open market and not if he put it under the loan. These same merchants usually also advocated setting the loan rate below the world market level to discourage cotton being put under the loan.

The NFU said mill subsidies should be ended and growers given the option of selling in the open market with Government subsidy payment. The Farm Bureau said mill subsidies and loan price support rates should be scaled down gradually over the next three years. Some growers' groups asked that the support loan rate be maintained at a high level and that the "equalization fee" paid to cotton users and exporters be continued. One major grower organization, the Cotton Producers Legislative Committee, told the House Committee that the Government could bring about a further reduction in the cotton surplus by offering acreage diversion payments. Both growers and merchants generally voiced opposition to reducing the national minimum acreage below 16 million acres.

Secretary Freeman expressed the Administration's position before the Senate Committee, saying, "After four years of experience, I am convinced the best way -- as a practical matter -- to maximize American cotton exports is to move cotton through the private trade freely at world prices. We can best accomplish this through a low loan rate -- near the world price -- that would permit cotton to move freely into export. Grower income should be supplemented by direct payment in cash or in kind or by diversion payments."

Dairy. The major opposition to the proposed Class I base plan came from the American Farm Bureau Federation, which argued that some farmers' net income would go down under the plan, that competition between markets would create pressure for a single nationwide milk marketing order, and that the plan would create pressure for higher Class I milk prices. It also objected, as did the NFU, that the proposal failed to make provision for entry of new producers into a market.

HOUSE

COMMITTEE -- Agriculture.

ACTION -- July 20 reported an Administration-backed omnibus farm bill (HR 9811 -- H Rept 631) containing wheat, feed grains and cropland adjustment programs close to the ones recommended by Mr. Johnson April 5, and a revised version of his recommendations for wool. The bill also provided a cotton program along the lines of the second bill (HR 9414) introduced by Cooley, and a Class I base plan for federal milk marketing orders. The bill did not include the President's recommendations for sale and transfer of -- except, with limitations, for cotton -- allotments, or for rice. All programs would run for four years, instead of the two years recommended by the President.

MAJORITY VIEWS

The majority report on HR 9811 said, "In general the Committee adopted provisions which will hold farm income at current or higher levels while bringing about some reduction in Government costs." The majority said it was convinced "that unless we maintain farm income at more equitable levels, hundreds of thousands of our most progressive farmers will find their debt position intolerable and will be forced into bankruptcy, with very serious repercussions in the economic and social orders of the nation." It also stated that HR 9811 did not "do all for the food and fiber producers of this nation that the Committee would like to do at this time. It also involves costs to the Government higher than is desirable from a budgetary standpoint.... The Committee sought to reduce Government costs further. But it found that usually an alternative that would save $100 million for the Government would reduce farm income by $200 to $300 million, or even more."

Cotton. The Committee added to the omnibus farm bill an Administration-backed cotton program which required farmers who wished to obtain price support loans and other program benefits to retire 15 percent of their cotton allotments to soil-conserving practices. (The national minimum cotton allotment of 16 million acres was retained.) Farmers who did so would get (1) price support loans at 90 percent of the world market price (the loan rate would be 21 cents a pound in 1966), plus (2) acreage diversion payments at one half the loan rate on the projected yield of the mandatorily retired acres and on any additional retired acres, up to 35 percent of the farm's total cotton allotment, plus (3) a direct payment of nine cents a pound on the yield of the farm's "domestic allotment," equal to at least 65 percent of the farm's regular cotton allotment. Farmers who chose to forgo price support could plant an unlimited amount of cotton, for export only. Sale and reapportionment of cotton allotments would be permitted, but reapportionment would be limited to single counties and sale or lease to single states. Farmers who put their entire cotton allotments into the cropland adjustment program would get 25 percent higher annual payments on their cropland retirement contracts.

The report said the highest returns per pound would go to farmers who planted only their domestic allotment. It estimated that these farmers would average 36.65 cents a pound on their cotton, taking into account both forms of direct payment and assuming a market price of about 22 cents a pound. The report also said expenditures for the 1966 crop under the new program should be about $100 billion less than under the 1965 cotton program. The report said the program would be costly for several years, but would cost less in the long run because it would permit a reduction of Government stocks and balancing of production and consumption. The report predicted that the program would stimulate exports by making the price of U.S. cotton more competitive.

Wheat. The Committee adopted the Administration plan, including the plan to provide 100 percent of parity support on domestic wheat (about $2.57 a bushel) by means of marketing certificates valued at close to $1.30 a bushel, but denied an Administration proposal to allow the planting of soybeans on diverted acres and another to remove the ceiling on the diversion payment rate. The report said the program would increase farmer income by $150 million and reduce Government costs by the same amount.

The majority report conceded that the new wheat program was likely to increase consumers' bread costs. But, it said, "consumers are spending less of their income on food than ever before. Food costs in America are smaller in relation to family income than in any other nation.... Expenditures per person for food in the United States increased by $105 from 1950 to 1964. Marketing firms -- that is, the people and businesses operating between the farm gate and the retail food counter -- received $104 of the $105 extra spent by the consumer."

Feed Grains. The Committee adopted the Administration's plan virtually unchanged, but did not include permission to grow soybeans on diverted acres and did not remove the ceiling on the acreage diversion payment rate. It did permit the substitution of soybeans for feed grains on permitted areas, as requested at the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture.

The majority cautioned that if the feed grains program were not extended, the feed grains surplus would climb "by as much as 15 million tons" in 1966. It further said, "Two years of this would offset the surplus reduction achieved during the past four years."

Dairy. The Committee adopted the approach of Poage's bill with minor changes.

The report said Title I would "remove the necessity for dairymen to maintain maximum production in order to preserve their individual participation in the markets for milk for fluid consumption.... The cost for the operation of the dairy price-support program should be slightly reduced from the $360 million level in the current fiscal year, as a result of the enactment of this new dairy program." It said that, of the 124.8 billion pounds of milk produced in 1963, some 52.9 billion pounds were marketed under federal milk marketing orders. Of the latter amount, 33 billion pounds was Class I milk.

Wool. The Committee rejected the Administration's plan for graduated payments to producers based upon the amount they produced, and extended the National Wool Act through 1969. It established a new minimum price support level of 77 percent of parity, instead of the current 60 percent. The report said this would raise supports to at least 64.1 cents a pound, compared to the level of 62 cents a pound (currently 74 percent of parity) provided under the program since 1955. The report said rising prices necessitated the higher payments.

Cropland Adjustment. The Committee adopted the Administration's cropland adjustment program, adding a provision for higher payments to farmers who let the land be used for hunting, trapping, fishing and hiking by the public.

The majority report said the program was designed to "fill a void in the effort to get a comprehensive shift of farm acreage from the production of crops to new uses to fill the land requirements of our changing economy." The report said the program would cost about $141 million a year to retire 8 million acres. It said this was about $35 million a year less than the cost of retiring the land under the feed grains and wheat programs. It indicated that the program might eventually cover 40 million acres.

Rice. The report said testimony before the Committee "showed almost unanimous opposition from the rice industry" to the Administration rice certificate plan, and so the plan had been dropped from the bill.

MINORITY, OTHER VIEWS

The eleven Republican members of the Committee submitted a minority report which stated, "While we find there are certain provisions of HR 9811 which have merit and deserve general support, we feel that on the whole this bill in its present form will not move toward the sound solution of the problems of American agriculture."

Much of the minority report was devoted to support for an amendment to the bill which would raise the Commodity Credit Corporation wheat re-sale floor from 105 to 115 percent of the support price. The minority said it was clear that Agriculture Secretary Orville L. Freeman had used the 105 percent re-sale floor "as a club to force compliance in what he calls a 'voluntary' program." The minority said, "The CCC policy has been to sell commodity stocks at 105 percent and thus, without question, depress the market prices and literally deprive the farmer of additional income."

The minority said an amendment to make the CCC wheat resale price 115 percent of parity plus carrying charges was rejected on a 17-18 vote. It also said an amendment "to finance the proposed 50-cent increase in domestic wheat certificates by Government payments from appropriated funds" (instead of through payments by processors of such wheat) was rejected on a 17-17 tie vote. This amendment was sponsored by Rep. Albert H. Quie (R Minn.).

The minority noted that it had consistently urged establishment of a "bi-partisan, blue-ribbon" committee to study the farm program and make long-range recommendations on farm problems.

Additional Minority Views. Republicans Paul B. Dague (Pa.), Delbert L. Latta (Ohio), Paul Findley (Ill.) and Laurence J. Burton (Utah) submitted additional minority views stating, "The wheat provisions of this bill are unfair to consumers, taxpayers, farmers, labor, and to low-income families.... The cotton provisions of this bill seek to move from one costly failure to another, and the feed grain provisions call for another extension of a costly and ineffective program that originally was started as a 1-year 'temporary' expedient." Findley also submitted a separate minority report criticizing the dairy section as one which "will further restrict the access to existing markets by either new producers or by producers outside the order area implementing this plan" and critizing the wool and cropland adjustment provisions.

Separate Views on Cotton. E. C. Gathings (D Ark.), and Thomas G. Abernethy (D Miss.) filed separate views. They said the bill's cotton provisions would "greatly reduce farm income and seriously impair the economy wherever cotton is grown.... It sets the stage for the liquidation of the cotton industry as a major segment of the nation's economy and will create new pockets of poverty in many areas." They also said there could be no assurance that future Congresses would not limit the amount of direct payments individual farmers could receive under the new cotton provisions.

Floor Action

The House Aug. 19 passed HR 9811, amended, by a 221-172 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart p. 992)

In order to ensure a comfortable margin for passage, the House leadership, in the weeks following the reporting of the bill from committee July 20, made two arrangements:

Tie to 14(b) Repeal. To pass both the farm bill and the Administration-backed bill (HR 77) to repeal Section 14(b) of the Taft-Hartley Act, authorizing state "right-to-work" laws, the leadership concocted an alliance in support of both bills between farm-state Democrats and city Democrats. HR 77 was passed by the House July 28 on a 221-203 roll-call vote. (For voting analysis, see p. 115; for story on HR 77, see p. 818)

Wheat, Cotton Amendments. The Democratic leadership Aug. 17 announced that compromise amendments would be offered to the wheat and cotton sections of the bill. The wheat amendment was designed to diminish urban opposition to the bill while the cotton amendments were included to placate Southerners. The amendments were accepted. Indications were that the Administration would have sustained major defeats had the compromise amendments not been offered. Other provisions of the bill remained intact as reported by the House Agriculture Committee on July 20.

The wheat amendment provided that an increase of about 50 cents per bushel in the support level of domestically consumed wheat would be financed out of the general tax revenues instead of by a boost in the value of marketing certificates purchased by processors. Financing the increase by boosting the value of marketing certificates had been labeled a "bread tax" by opponents because it was expected to result in higher prices for consumers. Baking and milling interests lobbied vigorously against the increase in certificate value. The amendment was substantially the same as one offered in the Agriculture Committee by Quie.

The cotton amendments were designed to answer criticism that the bill made too many concessions to the big Western growers at the expense of small Southern farmers. The amendments permitted released cotton acreages to be reapportioned across county lines (the bill had limited reapportionment to within counties); limited the sale of cotton allotments to 100 acres per individual purchaser (the bill had authorized the sale of allotments with no limitations on how much an individual could purchase); provided that only those growers who already had allotments would be given the option of staying out of the support program entirely and planting unlimited amounts of cotton (the bill had given the option to anyone who wanted to grow cotton) and provided that a grower who owned more than one farm must either have all his farms in the support program or all not in it (the bill contained no uniformity requirement).

Southerners argued that limiting acreage reapportionments to within counties instead of within states (as was the current procedure) would result in the permanent loss of acreage by some Southern states. They favored the 100-acre ceiling on allotment purchases and the uniformity requirement to limit the growth of the already large Western farms. The requirement that a farmer must already have an allotment to be able to exercise the option of operating outside the program -- growing an unlimited amount of cotton -- was favored as a way of combatting speculators, mostly in the West.

DEBATE. During the three days of debate, the bill's opponents concentrated on the wheat and cotton sections.

Bitter words were exchanged over the Administration's plan to increase the value of domestic wheat marketing certificates. B.F. Sisk (D Calif.) Aug. 17 termed arguments made by the milling and baking industry against the proposal as "pure poppycock and as phony as a $3 bill." Sisk said he was preparing a resolution calling for a Congressional investigation of the "monopolistic tendencies" and "anti-trust violations" of the milling and baking industry. Sisk said it was "a giant monopoly, out to feather its own nest."

John B. Anderson (R Ill.) Aug. 17 accused Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman of making "intemperate statements" about the milling and baking industry. Anderson also said federal funds had been used to lobby for the farm bill. Freeman had been critical of what he termed the "bread trust."

Chairman Harold D. Cooley of the House Agriculture Committee Aug. 17 said he had "never heard more criticism of any provision in any bill than has been leveled against this proposal to increase the price the miller must pay for wheat." Cooley said the compromise should "do away completely with any argument about a so-called bread tax."

Cooley said HR 9811 as a whole incorporated "the successful features of past programs" and drew "on new proposals in a determined and comprehensive effort to meet the basic needs of farmers, consumers and taxpayers." He said, "It will cut Government costs, maintain farm income, and keep food and fiber abundant at reasonable prices."

John S. Monagan (D Conn.) Aug. 17 said he was opposed to the bill because "it is too expensive, it does not meet the objectives which it proclaims and it neglects the problems of the very farmers who are most in need. It involves wasteful and ruinous storage charges and constitutes an unfair burden on the community as a whole."

Thomas G. Abernethy (D Miss.) Aug. 18 spoke out against the direct payment aspects of the bill. He said the farmer "doesn't want a dole, he only wants...a fair price in the market." Jamie L. Whitten (D Miss.) was especially critical of the cropland retirement provision, saying Aug. 18 it was similar to the soil bank of the 1950s. "It (soil bank) made ghost towns throughout the farm belt."

The section which generated the most floor debate was cotton. Thomas G. Morris (D N. M) Aug. 18 said the farm bill "picked out the objectionable features of the programs of Secretary (Ezra Taft) Benson (Secretary of Agriculture, 1953-61) and Secretary (Charles F.) Brannan (Secretary of Agriculture, 1949-53) and threw them into the cotton section -- that is, the low price supports proposed by Mr. Benson and the direct payments proposed by Mr. Brannan." Paul Findley (R Ill.) Aug. 18 said the bill "would authorize payments as high as $1 million a year to some cotton farmers." Quie said the language of the bill regarding sale and lease of cotton allotments could "be so construed" to have the effect of legalizing the type of operations carried on by Billie Sol Estes.

Cooley stated that "without some change in the current program, the cotton surplus can be expected to rise substantially and Government costs skyrocket."

Majority Leader Carl Albert (D Okla.) Aug. 17 said the decision to offer the compromises on wheat and cotton were made solely by the House leadership.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House HR 9811 was the same as the version reported by the House Agriculture Committee, with the addition of the amendments noted below.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Aug. 18 -- W. R. Poage (D Tex.) -- Permit released cotton acreages to be reapportioned across county lines. Standing vote, 111-28.

Poage -- Limit the sale of cotton allotments to 100 acres per individual purchaser (the bill had authorized the sale of allotments with no limitations on how much an individual could purchase); provide that only those growers who already had allotments would be given the option of staying out of the support program entirely and planting unlimited amounts of cotton (the bill had given the option to anyone who wanted to grow cotton) and provide that a cotton grower who owned more than one farm must either have all his farms in the support program or all not in it (the bill contained no uniformity requirement). Voice vote.

Aug. 19 -- Maston O'Neal (D Ga.) -- Give farmers within a county 45 days priority in purchasing or leasing cotton acreage allotments in that county. Voice.

Harold D. Cooley (D N.C.) -- Provide that any increase in the current support of wheat (about $2 a bushel) be financed by direct payments from the general Government revenues. (The bill had specified that an increase to bring supports up to 100 percent of parity -- about $2.50 a bushel -- be financed by boosting the value of marketing certificates purchased by processors.) Voice.

Rolland Redlin (D N.D.) -- Amend pending Dole amendment support loans (below) to make the figure 110 percent, rather than 115 percent. Voice.

Page Belcher (R Okla.) -- Authorize the Agriculture Secretary, under certain conditions, to permit the transfer of acreage allotments or feed grain bases together with relevant production histories from a farm composed of public lands to another farm or farms in the same county composed of public lands. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Aug. 18 -- Leo W. O'Brien (D N.Y.) -- Exempt small milk producer-dealers who retail milk solely within their own immediate area and do not purchase milk from interstate producers from the provisions of the Agricultural Marketing Agreements Act of 1937. (The bill amended the Act to provide that all producers would be subject to Class I quotas if a majority of the producers in federal milk order areas approved establishment of a Class I base plan.) Standing vote, 89-105.

Paul Findley (R Ill.) -- Set the minimum support level for wool producers at 75 percent of parity, rather than at 77 percent of parity provided in the bill. Voice.

Albert H. Quie (R Minn.) -- Require that PIK (payment-in-kind) feed grains be sold at 105 percent of the current support price if held by the Agriculture Department for more than one year. (The amendment was designed to discourage the Government from accumulating large stocks of PIK feed grains.) Standing vote, 35-76.

Findley -- Require that all PIK feed grains be sold at 105 percent of the current support price. Standing, 28-78.

Findley -- Reduce the extension of the feed grains program from four to two years. Standing, 52-66.

Robert H. Michel (R Ill.) -- Limit diversion payments on feed grain land to one-fifth of the fair market price of the diverted acres. Standing vote, 43-79.

Quie -- Delete provisions for sale and lease of cotton allotments. Voice.

Paul C. Jones (D Mo.) -- Delete from the pending Poage cotton-acreage amendment (above) the provision permitting released cotton acreages to be reapportioned across county lines. Standing vote, 36-47.

Jones -- Delete from the pending Poage cotton-acreage amendment (above) the definition of a "cooperator." Voice.

Aug. 19 -- Jamie L. Whitten (D Miss.) -- Make implementation of the cotton section contingent on the Agriculture Secretary's enforcing provisions of Export Sales Act of 1956 (directing him to sell stocks of cotton for export at world market prices and retain the traditional U.S. share of the market). Voice.

Bob Casey (D Tex.) -- Require Commodity Credit Corporation to seek competitive bids for cotton storage contracts. Standing, 35-50.

Michel -- Delete the section of the bill giving the Agriculture Secretary authority to finance the cotton program through an alternate method if Congress should in the future place limitations on the amount of direct payments individual cotton growers may receive. Voice vote.

Michel -- Require that the Agriculture Department when buying cotton allotments from farmers use funds appropriated specifically for that purpose instead of funds of the Commodity Credit Corporation. Standing, 35-78.

Findley -- Provide that all wheat subsidies above the basic support loan rate ($1.25 per bushel) be paid directly from general Government revenues instead of just that amount above $2 per bushel -- as provided in the Cooley amendment (above). (This would have eliminated the marketing certificate entirely). Standing, 32-93.

Robert Dole (R Kan.) -- Provide that a married wheat producer would not lose eligibility for wheat program benefits due to a violation of regulations by his (or her) spouse if the two operate separate farms. Standing, 63-67.

George M. Rhodes (D Pa.) -- Exempt soft white wheat east of Mississippi from the wheat program. Standing vote, 28-64.

Dole -- Increase the resale rate of wheat obtained by the Government on non-recourse support loans to 110 percent of the support price. Standing, 82-141.

Delbert L. Latta (R Ohio) -- Allow wheat farmers to receive domestic marketing certificates on that percentage of their wheat consumed domestically and not just on a flat 45 percent of their production as was the current practice. Voice.

E. C. Gathings (D Ark.) -- Delete the cropland retirement section of the bill (Title VI). Standing, 45-101.

Joseph Y. Resnick (D N.Y.) -- Provide for a nationwide egg marketing order to limit the total number of eggs that could be marketed in any one year. Standing, 107-128; teller, 110-137.

Sidney R. Yates (D Ill.) -- Limit the extension of wool, feed grains, wheat and cotton programs to two years instead of four. Standing, 93-131.

Michel -- Limit the total payments made under the cropland retirement program to 20 percent of the fair market value of the farm involved. Voice.

Findley -- Prohibit the total amount of payments made to any farmer under the wheat, cotton, wool, feed grains and cropland retirement sections of the bill from exceeding $25,000 a year. Standing, 59-144.

SENATE

COMMITTEE -- Agriculture and Forestry.

ACTION -- Sept. 7 reported a much amended version of the omnibus farm bill passed by the House Aug. 19 (HR 9811 -- S Rept 687).

The Senate Committee bill contained Administration recommendations for feed grain commodity legislation and a cropland retirement program, plus Committee-drafted provisions on wheat, cotton, wool and rice. The feed grains and cropland retirement provisions were similar to the ones approved by the House. But the Commitee altered the House bill by re-writing the wheat and cotton provisions, dropping a dairy provision altogether and adding a rice program. (For details, see below).

The Committee also added to HR 9811 an amendment giving to the Secretary of Agriculture, instead of the Secretary of Labor, the responsibility for determining whether foreign agricultural laborers were needed in the United States; and an amendment expressing the sense of Congress that commercial exports of agricultural commodities -- such as shipments of wheat to the Soviet Union -- should not be subjected to any requirement that half be shipped in U. S. flag vessels as long as other commercial exports were not subjected to the same requirement.

The Committee Sept. 2 ordered HR 9811, as amended reported on a 12-3 vote. Sens. Talmadge (D Ga.), Jordan (D N. C.) and Russell (D S. C.) were opposed.

A White House official Sept. 8 said the Senate Committee's wheat and cotton provisions were "completely impossible."

Sen. Herman E. Talmadge (D Ga.) Sept. 8 announced that he would seek to restore to the bill a cotton program similar to the one approved by the House and backed by the Administration.

MAJORITY VIEWS

The Committee's report said farm commodity legislation was the "mainstay against the destructive influence of surplus production on farm income." It said the nation's production potential, "if unchecked,...could push surpluses to staggering levels with serious effect on farm income and substantial increases in Government farm program costs."

Wheat. The report said the Committee plan, sponsored by Sen. Milton R. Young (R N.D.) and adopted Aug. 31 on a 15-0 vote, would provide a voluntary-type support and acreage diversion program for the 1966-69 wheat crops. It said the plan would increase farmer income to an average of $1.90 a bushel, which was about 9 cents a bushel higher than provided under the House wheat plan.

The Committee plan, like the one in effect for 1964-65 and the one proposed in the House bill, would permit farmers to choose whether to participate or not. No planting restrictions or fines would be placed on farmers who failed to participate. These would get the going market price for wheat, which would be near the support price of $1.25 a bushel. Farmers who signed up with the program also got land-diversion payments. The wheat supports would be provided in two steps. First, the farmer would get a support price in the neighborhood of $1.25 a bushel for all the wheat he produced. (If he chose to sell it on the market rather than sell it to the Government, he would still get about the same price for his wheat.) Second, each participating farmer would get direct payments from the Government on the projected yield of his permitted acreage to bring his average income per bushel up to at least $1.90. (The bill would permit these payments to go high enough to bring the income up to 100 percent of parity -- about $2.50 a bushel -- but the Secretary of Agriculture was not expected to make the higher payments.)

The Senate Committee plan would partially finance the cost of the direct payments by requiring millers and processors of wheat for domestic human consumption to purchase, directly from the Government, marketing certificates to cover all the wheat they used (estimated to be about 40 percent of the annual production of slightly under 1.4 billion bushels). These certificates would probably have a face value of 75 cents in 1966. The remainder of the program cost would be financed directly from the federal treasury. If the Secretary of Agriculture determined that the average price of bread had increased he could raise the cost of the marketing certificates to bring the price of wheat up to as high as 100 percent of parity, or about $2.50 a bushel.

The report said the Committee's wheat plan would increase farm income by about $400 million in 1966, and simplify the program for farmers.

Cotton. The Committee rejected the House cotton plan. Instead, it decided to retain the market support price at its current level of 29 cents a pound, and to provide additional direct payments for farmers who voluntarily retired at least 35 percent of their cotton acreage, or who had less than 10 acres. These payments would be 7 cents a pound in 1966 and could go as high as 11 cents a pound in succeeding years. The cotton program would cover the 1966-69 crops. (This price support program was similar to the one in effect for 1964-65.)

Like the House plan, the Committee left the national minimum acreage for cotton at 16 million acres. However, the Committee did not permit unlimited production for farmers who did not participate in the program.

The Committee adopted a version of the cotton mill subsidy plan in effect for 1964-65, but cut the subsidy in half, to 3 cents a pound, and ordered that the payment be made to cotton handlers (middlemen) rather than directly to the mills. The report said, "The cotton situation was actually aggravated and intensified by the so-called one-price cotton act adopted last year." It said Government surplus stocks increased, rather than declined; mills used only 600,000 more bales, instead of the projected 1.1 million more bales; and "exports fell off alarmingly," to about 4 million bales in the 1964-65 marketing year. It said annual exports should be about 6 million bales.

The cotton program was approved by the Committee Sept. 1 on an 8-7 vote. Voting against the plan were Sens. Talmadge, Jordan, Russell, Mondale (D Minn.), McGovern (D S.D.), Boggs (R Del.) and Aiken (R Vt.).

Feed Grains. The report said, "Many Committee members view with considerable concern the 'free ride' that the majority of the farmers get on the feed grain program by benefitting from the improved price and supply situation without making any adjustments in their production." In order to eliminate "the benefits accruing to the non-participants," the Committee suggested "a gradual lowering of the loan rate" over the period 1966-69 and an accompanying increase in the amount of direct payments, keeping the total support constant. Lowering the support loan -- the mechanism under which farmers can get the Government-guaranteed price by turning over their production to the Commodity Credit Corporation of the Department of Agriculture -- would have the effect of lowering the market price for grains.

The Committee bill provided a feed grain program similar to the one in effect for 1965 and to the one provided in the House bill. The major change permitted the Secretary of Agriculture to lower the support loan (which could currently drop only as low as $1.03 a bushel for corn -- 65 percent of parity) and increase the direct payments made to cooperating farmers, as long as the sum of the two fell between 65 percent of parity and 90 percent of parity.

The Committee also provided an alternative feed grain program for 1966-69 under which the Secretary could elect to offer a low support loan (as low as 95 cents a bushel, or 60 percent of parity) and more lucrative land diversion contracts. These could run for as long as five years, instead of from year to year, as under the current program, and could pay a minimum of 70 percent of the loan rate on the projected yield of the diverted land, instead of a maximum of 50 percent under the current program. There would be no direct payments.

Cropland Adjustment. The Senate Committee approved the House's cropland adjustment provisions with some changes. It added a $225 million limitation on the amount of new contracts signed in any single year, specified that the Agriculture Secretary could not require more than 50 percent of one allotment be put in the program as a basis for participation and prohibited lump sum payments in advance on the entire amount of the contract. It also provided that a person controlling a farm for the contract period (five or ten years) could not be excluded from the program because of non-ownership if he had operated the farm for three years, and established a Wildlife Advisory Board.

Rice. The Committee added a rice section which provided an acreage diversion program effective whenever the national rice allotment would be reduced below the 1965 level of 1.8 million acres. The House bill contained no rice provisions. The Senate rice provision did not include the Adminstration's proposals for a rice marketing certificate program.

Wool. The Committee scrapped the House method of calculating the support level for wool in favor of a new method based upon the cost of production. This would produce a support price of 65 cents a pound in 1966. The Senate version also provided that producers marketing less than 1,000 pounds of wool would receive an extra five cents a pound in support payments.

The majority noted that the support level for wool had been 62 cents a pound since 1955, that production costs had increased "substantially" since then and that the support price "does not provide the same incentive now as it did when the program was first begun." Wool is the one commodity in the bill which is not in surplus.

MINORITY, OTHER VIEWS

Minority Views on Cotton. Sens. Herman E. Talmadge (D Ga.), B. Everett Jordan (D N.C.) and Donald

Russell (D S.C.) submitted a minority report on cotton which estimated that the cotton program reported by the Committee would cost "over $1 billion more than a program along the lines of HR 9811."

Supplemental Views. Sens. Walter F. Mondale (D Minn.) and George McGovern (D S.D.) opposed the Committee amendment transferring from the Secretary of Labor to the Secretary of Agriculture the responsibility for determining when supplemental agricultural laborers should be imported into the United States.

Other Views. Sen. John Sherman Cooper (R Ky.) submitted individual views supporting the Senate amendments to the House version of HR 9811. He particularly supported the amendments to the feed grains section designed to reduce the support loan in an effort to lower the market price of grains, while increasing the direct payment to maintain the income of cooperating farmers. Cooper also supported the cropland adjustment program in the Senate bill. He said he supported the Committee's cotton provisions because the possible results of the House program "were unknown and in dispute" and would have been in effect for four years.

Sen. J. Caleb Boggs (R Del.) recommended a "Hoover-type commission" to study agriculture.

Sen. Jack Miller (R Iowa) said that the feed grain program had been given "ample opportunity to work, and ...the record is clear that it has not worked."

Floor Action

The Senate Sept. 14 passed HR 9811, amended, by a 72-22 roll-call vote and sent it to conference. (For voting, see chart p. 1072)

In four days of debate, the Senate restored the bill to a form similar in most respects to the House-passed version. In key votes, the Senate substituted for cotton and wheat provisions reported by the Senate Agriculture and Forestry Committee the programs backed by the Administration and included in the House version. A dairy provision similar to the one approved by the House and deleted by the Committee was also restored to HR 9811. Moreover, two controversial riders on farm labor imports and wheat shipments to Communist countries, added by the Committee, were deleted from the bill on the floor. The one on foreign farm workers was dropped only after Vice President Humphrey voted to break a 45-45 tie.

HR 9811, as passed by the Senate, extended existing wheat, feed grains and wool programs through 1969, substantially altered the existing cotton program and extended it through 1969, instituted a new four-year cropland retirement program and a new dairy program. A rice section, providing for an acreage diversion program, was added to the bill by the Senate. Except for rice, all of the programs mentioned above were contained in the House version.

Heavy lobbying was conducted by the Administration to restore House provisions on wheat and cotton. It was supported on cotton by the cotton textile industry. Organized labor also waged a concentrated lobbying campaign against the Committee riders on wheat shipments to Soviet bloc countries and foreign farm workers.

Cotton. The Senate Sept. 10, by a 62-24 roll-call vote, substituted for the cotton provisions reported by the Senate Agriculture and Forestry Committee an amendment by Herman E. Talmadge (D Ga.), similar to the House cotton provisions.

Wheat. The Senate Sept. 10 adopted by voice vote amendments by George McGovern (D S. D.) which substituted wheat provisions similar to those passed by the House for those reported by the Senate Committee. The Committee provisions, sponsored by Milton R. Young (R N. D.), would have supported all wheat produced by cooperators at $1.90 a bushel, through a $1.25 price support loan plus 65 cents in direct payments.

The McGovern plan differed from the House plan in retaining two key features of the Young plan. It directed that the average price which cooperating farmers got for their wheat must be $1.90 a bushel, even if extra federal payments were required. (Under the House plan, it would be about $1.81 a bushel.) And it permitted the Secretary of Agriculture to raise the price of the marketing certificates which processors must acquire if he determined that the price of bread rose significantly in 1966. Young called the McGovern amendment "satisfactory." It was estimated that this Senate wheat plan would cost the Government about $250 million a year more than the House plan.

Wheat Shipments to Soviet Bloc. The Senate Sept. 10 accepted, by voice vote, an amendment by Majority Leader Mike Mansfield (D Mont.) to delete a committee amendment providing that it was the "sense of Congress" that the President should eliminate a requirement that 50 percent of the wheat sold to Soviet bloc countries must be shipped in U. S. bottoms. The proviso was established by President Kennedy after unions blocked wheat shipments to the Soviet Union in 1963. It was protested by the Soviet Union, which said the higher shipping costs made U. S. wheat prohibitively expensive. John J. Sparkman (D Ala.) Sept. 10 said the Foreign Relations Committee would hold hearings on a resolution similar to the committee amendment. (For later action, see p. 130)

Foreign Farm Workers. The Senate Sept. 13 voted, 46-45, to drop a committee amendment which transferred from the Secretary of Labor to the Secretary of Agriculture authority to determine when and how many foreign agricultural workers were needed by U. S. farmers. The amendment was opposed by the Secretaries of Labor and Agriculture and by the Attorney General. Vice President Humphrey cast the deciding vote to break a 45-45 tie. The vote was confirmed by a 45-44 vote to table a motion to reconsider it. (For voting, see chart. p. 1072)

Ceiling on Farm Subsidy Payments. The Senate rejected three attempts to amend HR 9811 to establish a ceiling on the amount of agricultural subsidies an individual or corporation could get from the Federal Government. First, the Senate Sept. 14 rejected, on a 33-56 roll-call vote, an amendment by Daniel B. Brewster (D Md.), as modified by A. Willis Robertson (D Va.), which would have prevented any corporation, except a producer of sugar, from being eligible for any price support loans or payments under any program administered by the Department of Agriculture, and would have limited any individual producer to a total of $25,000 a year in price support loans or payments under all Department programs. Following this vote, the Senate rejected, 42-49, an amendment by John J. Williams (R Del.) limiting any producer except a producer of sugar to no more than $50,000 in price support loans and payments, including payments in kind, from the Agriculture Department in any year. Finally, the Senate rejected, 42-50, a similar Williams amendment with a ceiling of $100,000 a year.

PROVISIONS -- The Senate version of HR 9811 differed from the House version on the following major points (for additional detail, see conference action and final provisions):

Dairy. Authorized permanent, instead of four-year, Class I base plan, did not provide marketing orders for manufacturing milk or for individual voting instead of bloc voting, and added provisions to protect against dumping of milk in other markets and to permit CCC purchases of dairy products on the open market for its domestic and foreign donation programs.

Wool. Provided a cost-of-production formula for figuring direct payments, which would raise the support level from 62 cents a pound in 1965 to 65 cents in 1966; and provided that producers marketing less than 1,000 pounds a year would get an extra five cents a pound.

Feed Grains. In the voluntary acreage reduction program of loans plus direct payments, authorized the Secretary of Agriculture to set the loan rate below 65 percent of parity ($1.03 a bushel for corn) and increase the direct payment, to encourage participation in the program. Also authorized a new, alternative feed grains acreage reduction program for 1966-69 for use if the Secretary felt the existing program was not satisfactory in reducing acreage. The alternative program permitted loans as low as 60 percent of parity (95 cents a bushel for corn), with no direct payments but with higher diversion payments.

Cotton. Provided, like the House, a four-year cotton program with semi-voluntary acreage diversion, low market support loans and direct payments to farmers. Provided a small farm exemption from mandatory diversion requirements for farmers who wished to receive program benefits, a 10 percent mandatory diversion requirement (instead of 15 percent), a 50-percent ceiling on over-plantings by non-program farmers and a guarantee that the average price per pound yielded by loans plus direct payments (but excluding diversion payments) must be at least 65 percent of parity on all cotton produced. Did not permit 25-percent higher payments on cropland retirement contracts if farmers put their entire cotton acreage into the cropland adjustment program in 1966, dropping this House provision.

Wheat. Directed that farmers must average $1.90 a bushel for all their wheat (as compared to the $1.81 average offered under the House version), and authorized higher diversion payments on mandatorily retired acres and payments on export wheat to reach this figure. Also authorized the Secretary of Agriculture to increase the face value of marketing certificates for wheat for domestic human consumption up to the difference between 100 percent of parity ($2.57 a bushel) and the loan rate (about $1.25 a bushel), if he determined that the price of bread had risen in 1966. If the Secretary increased the value of marketing certificates, he would make a corresponding cut in the direct payment.

Rice. Added a rice acreage-reduction program to the House bill. (See final provisions)

Cropland Adjustment. Made minor adjustments in the House program. (See Senate Committee action, above)

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Sept. 10 -- Herman E. Talmadge (D Ga.) -- Substitute a cotton title providing, instead of a support loan at 29 cents a pound and three-cent "equalization" payments to domestic cotton users, a support loan below the world market price (it would be 21 cents a pound in 1966), direct payments to farmers who took out of production at least 10 percent of their cotton allotments (no cut required for farmers with 10 acres or less), and 150 percent over-planting of allotments for farmers willing to take the new low market price. Roll-call vote, 62-24.

Mike Mansfield (D Mont.) -- Delete a "sense of Congress" provision opposing the 1963 Presidential requirement that 50 percent of all agricultural shipments to the Soviet bloc must be transported in U.S. vessels. Voice.

George McGovern (D S.D.) -- Substitute a wheat title providing $1.90 a bushel on all wheat produced by cooperators through (1) a price support loan on all such wheat at about $1.25 a bushel (near the world price level); (2) a 75-cent wheat marketing certificate sold by farmers to processors and millers for each bushel of wheat for domestic human consumption (about 30 percent of a farmer's production); (3) direct federal payments to farmers on all wheat for domestic human consumption, to bring total support for this wheat up to 100 percent of parity ($2.57 a bushel); and (4) additional payments if needed to bring the average price per bushel on all the wheat produced by a cooperator up to $1.90. If the price of bread rose, the value of the marketing certificate could be raised, and the direct federal payment reduced. Voice.

Sept. 13 -- Ross Bass (D Tenn.) -- Delete a provision transferring authority over importation of foreign farm workers from the Secretary of Labor to the Secretary of Agriculture. Accepted on a 46-45 roll call after Vice President Humphrey voted to break a 45-45 tie.

William Proxmire (D Wis.) -- Authorize a "Class I base plan" for federal milk marketing orders, so that sales quotas for drinking (Class I) milk -- which brings premium prices -- could be established for individual farmers. Roll call, 57-27.

Sept. 14 -- Allen J. Ellender (D La.) -- Specify that the average price on the projected yield of a cooperative farmer's cotton allotment would be a minimum of 65 percent of parity (27.1 cents a pound). Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Sept. 10 -- Frank Carlson (R Kan.) -- Specify that the Agriculture Secretary cannot require that more than 50 percent of a farmer's wheat or feed grains allotment be devoted to designated soil conserving uses (including summer fallow and idle land) as a condition for participation in the wheat and feed grain support programs. Voice.

Sept. 13 -- Jack Miller (R Iowa) -- Delete a provision to allow transfer of Class I base allotments between dairy producers. Voice.

Miller -- Delete a provision specifying that provisions of the dairy section may be made applicable to a regulated handler's own production of milk. Voice.

Miller -- Limit application of the dairy section to those federal milk marketing order areas where less than 50 percent of the milk used was Class I milk. Voice.

Sept. 14 -- Daniel B. Brewster (D Md.) -- Provide that no corporation, except a sugar producer, could receive any price support loans or payments from programs administered by the Secretary of Agriculture, and that no individual producer, except a producer of sugar, could receive more than $25,000 a year in price support loans and payments by the Agriculture Department. Roll call, 33-56.

John J. Williams (R Del.) -- Limit a producer, except a producer of sugar, to $50,000 a year total in price support loans and payments. Roll call, 42-49.

Williams (Del.) -- Limit a producer, except a producer of sugar, to $100,000 a year in price support loans and payments. Roll call, 42-50.

Warren G. Magnuson (D Wash.) -- Provide that each farming unit in which a state government or the Federal Government had an interest would be treated as a separate entity in determining whether the state government or the Federal Government had complied with the requirements for cooperating in the wheat, feed grains, cotton and other commodity programs. (Magnuson explained that because about 1 percent of the farms owned and rented out by the state of Washington were not in compliance with federal farm programs, the state and all its lessees were currently not eligible to participate in the price support and other provisions of these farm programs.) Voice.

Conference Action

The House Oct. 8 by a 219-150 roll-call vote and the Senate Oct. 12 by voice vote adopted the conference report (H Rept 1123) on HR 9811. (For House voting, see chart p. 1016)

Senate and House conferees Oct. 6 filed a report (H Rept 1123) on compromises reached on HR 9811. The major conference decisions included:

Cotton. The conference committee split the difference between the Senate requirement that a farmer divert 10 percent of his allotment to be eligible for program benefits and the House requirement that a farmer divert 15 percent.

The conferees set an over-all ceiling on the amount of cotton which could be grown outside of the acreage reduction and price support program in 1966 at 250,000 acres. The ceiling would vary in 1967-69 depending upon the amount of reduction in the national carryover of unsold cotton at the end of each marketing year.

The conferees accepted the Senate concept of a minimum domestic allotment, but broadened it to provide that no mandatory acreage reduction would be required of a farmer who had an acreage allotment of 10 acres or less, or whose allotment yielded 3,600 pounds of cotton or less.

The conferees also adopted a Senate provision requiring that the blend price (excluding revenue from diversion payments) for the yield of all permitted acres under the program be at least 65 percent of parity (currently 27.1 cents a pound). (The conferees dropped a House provision allowing 25 percent higher payments on cropland retirement contracts for farmers who put their entire cotton acreage into the cropland adjustment program.)

Wheat. The conferees also split the difference on a major disagreement involving the blend support price of wheat. The Senate had set the blend price at $1.90 a bushel. The House had set the blend price at $1.81. The conferees set the figure at $1.845.

Conferees deleted a Senate provision providing that the Secretary of Agriculture could increase the value of domestic marketing certificates if the price of bread rose.

Feed Grains. Conferees accepted the Senate provision that the loan rate could be reduced below 65 percent of parity as long as the total supports (loan plus direct payments) reached at least 65 percent of parity. The House version had provided that the loan rate could not drop below 65 percent of parity. The conferees deleted a Senate provision providing an alternative feed grains program (without direct payments) to be implemented at the discretion of the Secretary.

Dairy. Conferees adopted the House provisions and two Senate amendments (1) allowing the Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) to purchase dairy products (except fluid milk for schools) for domestic and foreign donation programs even when the products were not in CCC inventories and (2) providing penalties to counteract dumping of surplus milk in other market areas.

Wool. Conferees adopted the Senate method of calculating the support level but deleted a Senate provision granting additional payments to small producers.

Rice. A Senate section on rice, not in the House version, was approved by conferees.

Cropland Adjustment. The House provision permitting the Secretary to require all of a single commodity allotment be included in a land retirement contract was accepted and a Senate limitation on the dollar value of contracts that could be signed in a year was retained. A Senate provision establishing a Wildlife Advisory Board and wildlife payments also was retained.

Farm Labor Requirements. The conferees instructed the Secretary of Agriculture to collect necessary facts concerning the requirements for and availability of agricultural labor and submit these facts to the Attorney General. The conferees further stated "There is no question but that the Department of Agriculture is the appropriate agency to determine (these) facts.... Recommendations of the Secretary of Labor have been in many instances too little and too late to meet the critical needs of producers." (See story on migratory farm labor, p. 132)

BILL SIGNED. President Johnson Nov. 4 signed HR 9811 into law (PL 89-321), saying "In combining the principles of competitive pricing for farm products with direct payments to producers, Congress has forged a new link with the future." Mr. Johnson said "By 1970 our grain surpluses will have disappeared, and our surpluses of cotton and tobacco will be greatly reduced...By 1975 American farm exports will be more than 50 percent greater than today."

WHEAT SHIPMENT HEARINGS

COMMITTEE -- Senate Foreign Relations.

HELD HEARINGS -- Sept. 17 and 27 on a resolution (S Res 144) authorizing the Committee to examine the legality, in the light of U. S. trade agreements, of a 1963 Executive Order requiring that 50 percent of all surplus agricultural commodities sold to Soviet bloc countries must be transported in U. S. ships. (See Senate floor action above and 1963 Almanac p. 326)

ACTION -- Eleven members of the Foreign Relations Committee Oct. 7 sent a letter to President Johnson requesting that the 50 percent requirement be dropped. The letter was signed by Committee Chairman J. W. Fulbright (D Ark.), Frank J. Lausche (D Ohio), Mike Mansfield (D Mont.), Eugene J. McCarthy (D Minn.), Stuart Symington (D Mo.), Joseph S. Clark (D Pa.), John J. Sparkman (D Ala.), Albert Gore (D Tenn.), Frank Church (D Idaho), Claiborne Pell (D R.I.), and Frank Carlson (R Kan.)

The Senators said they were "unable to find any evidence that the existence of the requirement helped the American merchant marine, the intended beneficiary, or any other segment of the economy." They added that the requirement was a "self-defeating device" which had harmed the "maritime industry, farmers, and taxpayers" in making it more costly for the Soviet Union to buy wheat from the United States than from other countries.

FOOD MARKETING STUDY

HR 5702 -- Reported by House Agriculture Committee (H Rept 207) March 26, 1965.
- Passed by the House April 5 by voice vote.
- Reported by Senate Commerce Committee (S Rept 174) April 30.
- Passed by the Senate May 3 by voice vote.

PL 89-20 -- Signed into law May 15.

Congress in 1965, acting at the request of the Johnson Administration, extended for one year, to July 1, 1966, the life of the National Commission on Food Marketing. On that date the Commission would make its final report to the President on the marketing structure of the American food industry. In the same bill (HR 5702), Congress also increased the Commission's authorized funds by $1 million, to $2.5 million. (Of this amount, $700,000 was appropriated in fiscal 1965 and $1.5 million in fiscal 1966. See below)

Background

REFERENCE -- 1964 Almanac p. 142.

President Johnson in 1964 asked Congress to establish a bipartisan commission to study the food marketing industry, with special attention to how such recent developments as concentration in the industry, vertical integration and contract farming were affecting farmers, handlers and consumers of food. As approved by the 88th Congress (PL 88-354), the National Commission on Food Marketing consisted of five Representatives, five Senators and five public members appointed by the President, plus a professional staff. The Administration asked that the study run through fiscal 1966 and be authorized to spend $2.5 million; but Congress stipulated that the Commission hand in its report at the end of fiscal 1965, and authorized only $1.5 million. Of this, only $700,000 was appropriated. (1964 Almanac p. 176)

Duties. Congress directed the Commission to study and appraise the changes in the past 20 years in the various segments of the food industry; the changes likely to materialize if present trends continued; desirable changes in the industry and the public laws and policies and private actions needed to carry out such changes; the effectiveness of federal services to the industry and consumers; and the effect on the industry and consumers of imported food.

Membership. The members of the Commission were: Former Chief Justice of the California Supreme Court Phil S. Gibson, chairman; former Rep. Fred Marshall (D Minn. 1949-63); New Mexico Republican National Committeeman Albert K. Mitchell; William M. Batten, chairman of the board of J.C. Penney Co.; and Elmer R. Kiehl, dean of the University of Missouri School of Agriculture; Reps. Leonor K. Sullivan (D Mo.), Graham Purcell (D Texas), Benjamin S. Rosenthal (D N.Y.), Glenn Cunningham (R Neb.) and Catherine May (R Wash.); and Sens. Warren G. Magnuson (D Wash.), Gale W. McGee (D Wyo.), Philip A. Hart (D Mich.), Thruston B. Morton (R Ky.) and Roman L. Hruska (R Neb.).

Although the legislation authorizing the Commission was enacted in May 1964, appropriations for the Commission were not made until October and the executive director, George E. Brandow, was not appointed until November.

HOUSE

Bill Reported. The House Agriculture Committee March 26 reported HR 5702 (H Rept 207), stating that delays had made it impossible for the Commission to complete its work by July 1, 1965. The report said the bill was supported by the National Grange, the National Farmers Union, the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives and the Amalgamated Meat Cutters Union (AFL-CIO). Committee approval of the one-year extension was unanimous, but several members said they would oppose any further extension.

Floor Action. The House April 5 passed HR 5702 by voice vote following a brief discussion. There were no amendments.

SENATE

Bill Reported. The Senate Commerce Committee April 30 reported the bill unchanged (HR 5702 -- S Rept 174). The report said, "With the selection of an able executive director and chief counsel, and a distinguished supporting staff, the Commission's studies and investigations are now proceeding with dispatch. The Commission's mandate is so broad, its responsibility so great, its many tasks so complex that no one has doubted the need for a full two-year period to do the job properly."

Floor Action. The Senate May 3 passed HR 5702 by voice vote and sent it to the President. There were no amendments.

APPROPRIATION. The Commission was appropriated $1.5 million for fiscal 1966 in the agriculture appropriations bill (HR 8370). A proviso in the bill stated that $250,000 of the amount should be used to prepare the final report, and that the Commission's activities end not later than June 30, 1966. (See story p. 194)

Commission Hearings

The Commission began public hearings April 1 in Cheyenne, Wyo. During the year it held field hearings on the following commodities: meats, poultry, eggs, and fresh and processed fruit and vegetables. The hearings were at Cheyenne, April 1-3; Fort Worth, Texas, April 22-24; Atlanta, Ga., May 13-15; Omaha, Neb., June 3-5; McAllen, Texas, June 11-12; San Francisco, Calif., July 8-10; Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 12-14; and Seattle, Wash., Sept. 17-18.

In addition, the Commission held hearings in Washington, D.C., on May 5-7, Oct. 21-22 and Nov. 3-4, on retail food margins, the consumer's relationship to the food industry and agricultural cooperation and bargaining, respectively.

A Commission staff member May 5 testified that about one-fifth of consumers' food expenditures went for retailing costs. He said these comprised about one-third of the difference between consumer prices and those paid to the farmer. Representatives of the retail food trade said the increase over the past 10 years in the retail gross margin -- the difference between the price at which retailers buy and the price at which they sell -- was due to "a wild search for more and better promotions of all kinds of merchandise" and to increased services for shoppers.

MIGRATORY FARM LABOR

Migratory farm labor was the subject of much discussion but little new legislation during the first session of the 89th Congress. Three programs of assistance to domestic migrant farm laborers and their families, enacted in earlier years, were extended in 1965; and the House Education and Labor Committee reported a bill (HR 10518) requiring a minimum wage for farm labor, migrants included. However, floor action on this measure was postponed until 1966.

The principal topic of discussion was the decision of Labor Secretary W. Willard Wirtz, upon the expiration of the Mexican farm labor program (PL 78) on Dec. 31, 1964, to severely limit the number of foreign workers who could be employed on U.S. farms in 1965, in an effort to increase the number of jobs for domestic farm workers and to improve their wages and working conditions. Wirtz accomplished this by setting high standards for wages and working conditions which U.S. farmers would have to offer to prospective domestic farm workers before the Labor Department would certify a need for foreign labor. Through Nov. 19, 1965, Wirtz certified the use of some 44,434 foreign farm workers. Of these, 40,053 were actually admitted for work or had their 1964 contracts extended into 1965. But the full-year total for foreign farm workers used on U.S. farms was expected to be about one-fourth the 200,022 used in 1964, when PL 78 was in effect. (See box, next page)

Members of Congress from states that in the past made large use of foreign farm labor were highly vocal in their criticism of Wirtz's policy and of his reluctance to certify a need for foreign workers even where growers were willing the bear the extra cost imposed by his policy. Congressional dissatisfaction with Wirtz reached a climax Sept. 13, when it took the deciding "yea" vote of Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey to break a 45-45 tie -- R 2-28; D 43-17 (ND 36-6; SD 7-11) -- and eliminate from the Senate version of the omnibus farm bill (HR 9811) a rider which would have transferred from the Secretary of Labor to the Secretary of Agriculture authority for determining how much foreign labor was required by U.S. farmers. (See story p. 114)

1965 Action on Farm Labor Bills

Existing Programs Extended. The migratory farm labor programs extended by Congress in 1965 were:

- Grants for needs of migrants in housing, education, sanitation and child care, established by the 1964 Economic Opportunity Act; extended in the 1965 anti-poverty bill (PL 89-253). (See story p. 405)
- Grants for low-rent housing for farm labor, enacted in the 1964 Housing Act; increased from $10 million total to $50 million in the 1965 omnibus housing bill (PL 89-117). (See story p. 358)
- Grants for migratory worker health services, enacted in 1962; extended through fiscal 1968, with a total authorization of $24 million, in a bill extending various health programs (PL 89-109). (See story p. 331)

Minimum Wage Reported. The House Education and Labor Committee Aug. 25 reported a bill (HR 10518 -- H Rept 871) raising, and extending the coverage of, the federal minimum wage for non-agricultural workers and also providing for a special minimum wage for (1) temporary and seasonal agricultural employees employed for 12 consecutive work-weeks or less in the calendar year by the same employer (including migratory workers); and (2) agricultural employees who worked for more than 12 consecutive work-weeks for the same employer, if the employer used more than 300 man-days of agricultural labor (excluding temporary labor) in any quarter of the year. The minimum wage for agriculture would be $1.15 an hour through June 30, 1968, and $1.25 an hour after that date. Floor action on the measure was postponed until 1966. It was the first time that a minimum wage for agriculture had been reported in either the House or the Senate.

Williams Bills. The Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee, Subcommittee on Migratory Labor, held hearings July 7-8 and 13, but took no further action, on five bills introduced by Subcommittee Chairman Harrison A. Williams Jr. (D N.J.). They provided a minimum wage for agriculture (S 1864); set limits on employment of children in agriculture (S 1865); extended collective bargaining rights to agricultural employees (S 1866); established a federal farm placement service to supplement existing federal-state placement programs in recruiting farm labor (S 1867); and established a 15-member National Advisory Council on Migratory Labor (S 1868). (Several Williams-sponsored bills dealing with migratory labor problems were enacted by Congress in recent years. For background, see 1964 Almanac p. 116.)

The bills incorporated most of the recommendations of a report (S Rept 155) on migratory labor problems, issued by the Subcommittee April 8. In addition to the subjects covered by the bills, the report recommended extension of unemployment insurance coverage, workmen's compensation coverage and public welfare assistance to migrant laborers. In individual views, Sens. Dominick (R Colo.), Murphy (R Calif.) and Fannin (R Ariz.) disagreed "strongly" with the report's conclusions and expressed concern with the problems created for growers by a sharp reduction in the availability of foreign farm labor.

Foreign Farm Labor Issue

In 1951 Congress passed a law (PL 82-78) authorizing a program for recruiting farm labor in Mexico for temporary work on U.S. farms. PL 78 was regularly extended in the 1950s, but came under increasingly sharp attack from welfare and organized labor groups who said it deprived U.S. residents of work and contributed to the low wage scales and poor working conditions available to domestic farm workers. In 1961 the program was amended to set more stringent conditions for employment of Mexicans, principally by requiring farmers to offer U.S. workers certain wages and working conditions before they could qualify to use the Mexican "braceros." The new conditions were opposed by growers, who said that available American labor was not as good as the carefully selected "braceros." PL 78 was again extended in 1963, but for one year only, and many House Members served notice that they would oppose a further extension.

PL 78 expired Dec. 31, 1964. However, the basic legal authority for importation of foreign workers for temporary employment remained in effect. This was a section of PL 82-414, the McCarran-Walter Immigration

Act of 1952. It required the Secretary to certify that U.S. labor was not willing, able or qualified to do the work for which foreign labor was sought, and that the importation of foreign labor would not adversely affect the wages and working conditions of domestic labor. The foreign farm labor imported from the Caribbean to work in Florida and along the East Coast entered under PL 414; the number of these workers in 1964 was 22,261. The number imported under PL 78 in 1964 was 177,736.

Many growers who had in the past relied on PL 78 apparently hoped to get workers under PL 414. But Wirtz Dec. 19, 1964, made it clear that he would allow only restricted use of this law. He announced new wage levels and working conditions which farmers would have to make available to domestic workers before he would certify foreign workers for employment. The new wage levels were 40 percent to 90 percent higher than the levels in force for 1964. (For details, see 1964 Almanac p. 118)

The new regulations, more stringent than any that had been applied before, either administratively or under PL 78, were sharply attacked by growers and by Members of Congress from Florida, California and other states that had in the past relied heavily on foreign labor. They said that Wirtz had exceeded his legal authority in setting the new conditions, and charged that crops were spoiling in the fields because there was not enough labor and because the job done by domestic workers was inferior to that performed by foreign labor in past years.

The Labor Department replied that there were only a "few isolated cases" of crops going unpicked and that these had resulted because the growers dragged their heels in recruiting domestic labor. A Department spokesman told Congressional Quarterly that crop losses in 1965 amounted to the usual 5 percent. He said the Department was "very pleased" that the total number of foreign workers was held to about one-fourth of the 1964 level, and said the amount used in 1966 would be even less.

In an effort to fill the gap left by the departure of Mexican "braceros," the Labor Department in 1965 launched a vigorous drive to recruit domestic workers, including migrants, for farm labor. As a part of this program, Wirtz May 4 announced a special effort to recruit high-school athletes for summer farm work. The youths were organized into "A-Teams" (Athletes in Temporary Employment as Agricultural Manpower) and used primarily in Western states. The program met with only moderate success, with a number of the youths quitting after several weeks because of the difficulty of the work or because of the poor housing and food provided. Some growers declined to use the "A-Teams."

Following the Sept. 13 Senate vote eliminating from the omnibus farm bill (HR 9811) a provision shifting to the Secretary of Agriculture authority to decide whether foreign farm labor was needed, the House-Senate conferees on the bill Oct. 6 issued a conference report (H Rept 1123) calling for a study of the agricultural labor situation by the Department of Agriculture. They said "The findings and recommendations of the Secretary of Labor have been in many instances too little and too late to meet the critical needs of producers."

The Senate Appropriations Committee July 6, in its report on the agricultural appropriations bill (HR 8370 -- S Rept 423), also requested that the Department make a comprehensive study of agricultural labor.

Foreign Farm Labor By State, 1964-65

Below is a state-by-state comparison of the number of foreign farm workers used by U.S. farmers in 1964 and in the first 10 months of 1965. The totals do not include Basque sheepherders, Canadian woodsmen or foreign workers who were certified for employment but not employed.

In addition, a total of 7,749 British West Indians carried over from 1964 had their contracts extended in 1965: 7,000 in Florida, 566 in Connecticut, and 183 in Massachusetts.*

#National total includes 25 Japanese admitted to California, 14,361 British West Indians and Bahamians, and 7,900 Canadians. Individuals in the latter categories often worked in several states during the year, hence no state-by-state breakdown was available.

GREEN CARD WORKERS. Above totals do not include agricultural workers who entered the United States with "green cards" (permanent alien residence cards which also serve as visas). Foreign nationals holding green cards may work in the United States during the day and return to homes in another country (most often Mexico) at night or they may reside permanently in the United States. A total of 432,573 green cards were issued to Mexicans for all purposes, including agricultural labor, from fiscal 1955 through fiscal 1964. No figures were available for the number of Mexican aliens with green cards who worked in agriculture in 1965. A provision of the 1965 immigration law revision made it more difficult for aliens seeking to do day agricultural labor in the U.S. to qualify as permanent alien residents. (See story p. 459)

TOBACCO QUOTAS

HR 5721 -- Reported by House Agriculture Committee (H Rept 147) March 9, 1965.

- Passed by the House, amended, on a 206-170 roll-call vote March 23. (See p. 944)
- Reported by Senate Agriculture and Forestry Committee (S Rept 145) April 2.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, on a 54-16 roll-call vote April 5. (See p. 1033)
- Conference report (H Rept 228) agreed to by voice votes of the House and Senate April 8.

PL 89-12 -- Signed into law April 16.

A significant change in the method of controlling tobacco production was made in 1965 when Congress enacted a bill authorizing acreage-poundage marketing quotas in place of the existing acreage allotment system, if approved by a producers' referendum.

The Administration-backed bill (HR 5721) applied only to flue-cured tobacco in 1965 and to all tobacco beginning in 1966. If approved by two-thirds of the farmers voting in referendums, the new programs would be binding for three successive crop years following the vote. Under the new system farms would be assigned both acreage allotments and poundage quotas (based upon histories of production) in a manner designed to reduce surpluses.

The change was viewed by the Agriculture Department and most tobacco interests as a solution to problems caused by the drive for increased yields per acre in recent years. Steadily rising yields had negated reductions in acreage allotments, causing surpluses to remain high and tobacco quality to decline.

Main opposition came from small growers in Georgia and Florida who maintained they were being penalized because of surpluses produced by large North Carolina and Virginia growers, and from Republicans who said the bill established a precedent (yield per acre control) that could be carried over to other crops. Spokesmen for the Georgia and Florida interests also said the new system should not take effect until 1966 because the 1965 crop had already been planted.

Both houses passed bills that were basically similar. Their differences were in the manner of administration rather than in the over-all approach taken. The major difference settled in conference was the formula for determining individual farm quotas under the new acreage-poundage system. The House version was more favorable to high-yield producers than the Senate bill and the House language, with some modifications, prevailed in conference.

Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman May 1 announced the following controls for the 1965 flue-cured tobacco crop year under the new system: national acreage allotment -- 607,335 acres; national marketing quota -- 1,126,000,000 pounds; and national average yield goal -- 1,854 pounds per acre. Growers in a May 4 referendum approved the new system of controls for 1965, 1966 and 1967.

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law, HR 5721:

Required the Secretary of Agriculture within 30 days after enactment of the bill to determine and announce the national marketing quota for flue-cured tobacco for the marketing year beginning July 1, 1965, the national average yield goal and the national acreage allotment.

Provided that within 30 days of the Secretary's announcement, a referendum would be held among growers of flue-cured tobacco to determine whether they wanted acreage-poundage marketing quotas for the 1965, 1966 and 1967 crops.

Provided that acreage-poundage quotas would be placed on flue-cured tobacco for the three years if at least two-thirds of the voting growers approved the new controls. If the acreage-poundage controls were not approved, previously proclaimed acreage controls would be in effect.

Provided that the Secretary could conduct referendums beginning in 1966 among growers of other kinds of tobacco to see whether they wanted acreage-poundage controls for the next three years. A two-thirds majority of farmers voting would be necessary for approval.

Permitted growers of all kinds of tobacco to market up to 10 percent more than their poundage quotas without penalty, but any excess marketings would be deducted from a farm's quotas in subsequent years. Burley tobacco growers could market up to 20 percent of their quotas without penalty in the first year that acreage-poundage controls were in effect and 10 percent in subsequent years.

Provided price supports on all tobacco not exceeding 110 percent of a farm's poundage marketing quota. Penalties would be assessed on marketed tobacco exceeding 110 percent of the quota. Supports would be provided on burley not exceeding 120 percent of the quota in the first years that acreage-poundage controls were in effect and not exceeding 110 percent in subsequent years.

Established a formula for determining the individual poundage quotas for land with a history of high yields that exceeded the community's average yield.

Background

REFERENCE -- Congress and the Nation, p. 679, 709, 710.

Production controls setting acreage limits (allotments) were placed on tobacco by the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 in an attempt to help keep supply in line with demand and prevent drops in farmers' income. Farmers planting more than their allotted acres were fined. In recent years, acreage limitations proved inadequate in controlling production. Because of modern technology, farmers were able to increase their yields per acre, thus producing a larger crop in spite of cuts in acreage allotments.

In 1955 the Department, at the direction of Congress, submitted a report on alternative methods for controlling the marketing of burley tobacco. The alternatives included an acreage-poundage system. A subcommittee of the Senate Agriculture and Forestry Committee in 1957 held hearings in four tobacco-raising states on a bill to provide acreage-poundage quotas on tobacco, but no further action was taken on the proposal.

Increased production per acre was accompanied by a decline in quality due to the techniques and treatments used to raise the yield. The drop in quality caused a drop in demand by foreign buyers, who could purchase comparable tobacco from other countries at lower prices. The Government was forced to buy increasing amounts of low quality tobacco from farmers under the Agriculture Department's price support program. The Department in 1963, in an attempt to discourage production of low quality tobacco, revised its price support premiums and discounts to reduce price supports for the lower grades of tobacco. Experience with this approach led the Department to advocate 1965 legislation limiting the quantity of tobacco a farmer could market. The theory was that such limitations would encourage farmers to shift their efforts from improving yields to improving quality.

President Johnson, in his farm message Feb. 4, 1965, called for institution of acreage-poundage quotas. (For text, see p. 1413) A similar request had been made Nov. 13, 1964, by the National Agriculture Advisory Commission in a report to Secretary of Agriculture Freeman.

House

COMMITTEE -- Agriculture, Tobacco Subcommittee.

HELD HEARINGS -- Feb. 11, 16, 17, 18 and 24 on HR 4532, the Administration bill to provide acreage-poundage marketing quotas for tobacco, which was introduced by Committee Chairman Harold D. Cooley (D N.C.).

TESTIMONY -- The bill received wide support from tobacco interests. It was endorsed by Tobacco Associates, Inc. (representing flue-cured tobacco growers), Leaf Tobacco Exporters Assn., Burley Auction Warehouse Association and the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp. and other groups of growers.

Charles S. Murphy, Under Secretary of Agriculture, said flue-cured tobacco yields averaged 1,509 pounds per acre in 1954-58 and increased to 2,203 pounds an acre in 1964, a rise of 46 percent. The 1964 crop of flue-cured tobacco was 5 percent larger than the 1954 crop, even though the acreage used in 1964 was 40 percent less than in 1954. Murphy said the United States had lost much of its export market because the quality of tobacco had decreased as a result of the drive to increase per-acre yields.

ACTION -- The Committee March 9 reported HR 5721, a clean bill which had been introduced March 3 by Cooley (H Rept 147).

Changes in Administration Bill. HR 5721 differed from HR 4532 in the formula to be used in determining the individual poundage quotas. The new bill changed the average against which individual farm figures will be adjusted from a county average to a community (township) average and changed the floor for high yield land from 130 percent to 120 percent of the community average. HR 5721 also provided that a farmer could market 10 percent (rather than 5 percent) more than his poundage quota without penalty. The changes had been recommended by the Tobacco Subcommittee.

Majority Views. The Committee noted that the tobacco program had been the most successful of all Government farm programs but said that "dramatic increases in the per acre yields" in recent years were endangering the program. HR 5721 would supplement the present acreage allotment program with poundage quotas, the report said, providing "a more effective method of maintaining supplies in line with demand," improving the quality of U.S. tobacco and increasing tobacco exports.

The report stressed the importance of exports as a long-term solution to the problem of tobacco producers. It said, "The tobacco farmer needs and must have broader markets, and these markets can be found in export."

The Committee said acreage-poundage controls had received wide support from producers. A letter from Agriculture Secretary Orville L. Freeman endorsing the Subcommittee changes was included in the report.

Minority Views. Delbert L. Latta (Ohio) and Paul Findley (Ill.), two of the 11 Committee Republican members, said they opposed HR 5721 "because it establishes an unsound precedent, it provides special privileges, it disrupts land values, it is unduly complicated and it is unfair to many tobacco farmers." The two Republicans said the bill could establish a precedent for imposing similar restrictions on other crops. "This legislation represents the final step toward absolute control, short of outright governmental land ownership and management," they said.

FLOOR ACTION

The House March 23 passed HR 5721 by a 206-170 roll-call vote, amended. (For voting, see chart p. 944) The one floor amendment that was accepted prohibited the Secretary of Agriculture from making determinations on acreage-poundage marketing quotas for any kind of tobacco except flue-cured, until he had held public hearings in areas where the tobacco was produced.

House Members split sharply along large grower-small grower lines in voting on the bill. Representatives from North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia, states which produce about 90 percent of the nation's flue-cured tobacco, voted for the bill 21-2. The delegations from Alabama, Florida, and Georgia, which account for about 10 percent of the nation's flue-cured tobacco, voted against the bill 2-24.

Opponents of the measure claimed that HR 5721 would restore most of the 19.5 percent cut in acreage allotments already announced for the 1965 flue-cured crop. An amendment to delay the effect of the bill for one year was rejected.

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

March 23 -- Frank A. Stubblefield (D Ky.) -- Prohibit the Secretary of Agriculture from making any determinations on acreage-poundage marketing quotas on any kind of tobacco, except flue-cured, until after he had held public hearings in areas where the tobacco was produced. Voice vote.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

March 23 -- Maston O'Neal (D Ga.) -- Postpone applying acreage-poundage quotas until the 1966 flue-cured crop. (The bill provided the quotas for the 1965 crop if approved by two-thirds of the growers.) Standing vote, 13-57.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Agriculture and Forestry.

HELD HEARINGS -- Feb. 9 and 10 on S 821, the Administration bill, sponsored by North Carolina's Senators.

ACTION -- April 2 reported HR 5721 (S Rept 145) with a number of amendments to the House-passed bill. The most important amendment was a change in the formula for determining individual farm poundage quotas. The Senate version provided stricter quotas by substituting a 120-percent ceiling for a 120-percent floor (of the community average) for high-yield growers.

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate April 5 passed HR 5721 by a 54-16 roll-call vote, amended. A floor amendment, accepted on a 47-23 roll call, preserved the rights of a group of Georgia and Florida growers to continue a legal suit to require the Secretary of Agriculture to consider type 14 of flue-cured tobacco as a separate classification of tobacco in determining adjustments in acreage allotments. (For voting, see chart p. 1033)

Passage followed debate in which opponents from Georgia and Florida argued that the bill would penalize small growers who had not created the surpluses. An amendment by Herman E. Talmadge (D Ga.) to substitute new wording that would provide a reduction in marketing quotas for tobacco, beginning with 1966 crops, in direct proportion to the amount of tobacco a grower sold to the Federal Government as surplus was rejected on a standing vote.

All committee amendments were accepted by the Senate.

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

April 5 -- Herman E. Talmadge (D Ga.) -- Preserve the rights of a group of Georgia and Florida growers to continue a legal suit to require the Secretary of Agriculture to consider type 14 of flue-cured tobacco as a separate classification of tobacco in determining adjustments in acreage allotments. (The case was currently pending before the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals. A U.S. District Court in Georgia ruled in favor of the growers.) Roll-call vote, 47-23.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

April 5 -- Talmadge -- Substitute for the provisions of HR 5721 new wording that would provide a reduction in marketing quotas for tobacco, beginning with the 1966 crops, in direct proportion to the amount of the tobacco a grower sold to the Federal Government as surplus. Standing vote.

Talmadge -- Postpone applying acreage-poundage quotas until the 1966 flue-cured tobacco crop. Standing.

Conference

ACTION -- HR 5721 was cleared for the President's signature when both chambers April 8 approved by voice vote a compromise version reported by House-Senate conferees (H Rept 228) April 8.

REPORT -- The conferees accepted 10 of the Senate's 17 amendments without change and the others with revisions.

The major change made by the conferees was in a Senate amendment that would have provided stricter quotas (less favorable to high-yield producers) than those approved originally by the House. The conferees' revision provided that a farm's average yield, when it exceeded 120 percent of the community average yield, would be adjusted to equal the sum of 50 percent of the farm's average and 50 percent of the national yield goal but would not be less than 120 percent of the community yield.

The conferees accepted, on a one-year basis, a Senate provision that permitted burley tobacco growers to market up to 20 percent more than their quotas without penalty. After the first year that acreage-poundage quotas were in effect on burley tobacco, the limit on non-penalized marketing would revert to the 110 percent of quotas set for all other tobaccos.

A Senate amendment prohibited additional cuts in acreage-poundage quotas to burley growers with allotments of one-half acre or less. The conference report provided that if controls were returned to an acreage basis, acreage allotments for those farms would be based on the current allotments.

INTERNATIONAL WHEAT PACT

Congress in 1965 approved ratification of a one-year extension of the International Wheat Agreement (Exec. B, 89th Congress, 1st Session); however, action was not completed on a companion measure (S 2294) authorizing implementation of the extension.

The Senate June 15 consented, by an 88-0 roll-call vote, to ratification of Exec. B. (For voting, see chart p. 1048)

The Senate July 23 by voice vote passed S 2294, which was enabling legislation authorizing the United States to comply with its financial obligations under the Wheat Agreement. The House Banking and Currency Committee Aug. 4 reported the measure (H Rept 723) and it was granted a rule for floor debate by the House Rules Committee Sept. 1.

House Majority Leader Carl Albert (D Okla.) Oct. 19 announced that the House would not be able to act on the measure in 1965 because of "our efforts to complete the first session" (which adjourned Oct. 23). He said he wished to emphasize "that our deferment of action on this legislation should not be interpreted as indicating that the House is opposed to the agreement negotiated by our representatives and ratified by the Senate." (No opposition to the bill was apparent.)

An Agriculture Department spokesman Nov. 29 told CQ that the Secretary, under existing law, already had the discretionary authority necessary to implement the Agreement through export subsidy payments. Specific authority as provided under S 2294 was considered important, he said, because it showed foreign signers of the Agreement that the United States was solidly behind it. He added that this procedure -- seeking specific authority -- had always been followed in the past.

The International Wheat Agreement was first concluded in 1949 and was extended in 1953, 1956, 1959 and 1962. All these extensions were for a period of three years. (1962 Almanac p. 126)

Exec. B extended the 1962 Agreement without change except for the length of time involved. The Agreement specified amounts of wheat which importing countries agreed to take from exporting countries (as a percentage of their total needs), and the price range for the wheat. Exporting countries were bound to make the required amount of wheat available. Under the 1962 Agreement, prices for the standard wheat (No. 1 grade Manitoba at Canadian ports on Lake Superior) could range between $1.62½ and $2.02½. There were 49 parties to the International Wheat Agreement in 1965, including 10 exporting countries and 39 importing countries.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee reported Exec. B (Exec. Rept. 2) June 7. The report recommended an extension of one year because "pending negotiations of the Kennedy round in GATT which may conclude an agreement on all grains makes it inadvisable for a longer extension to be approved at this time."

During Senate debate on the extension several Senators from wheat-producing states said they would have opposed the extension had it been for more than one year. Gordon Allott (R Colo.) said, "If we do not come up with something tangible for the protection of American agriculture (through the Kennedy round of GATT negotiations), then at the end of another year, we would have to take a look at this matter from a completely different viewpoint."

PESTICIDE RESEARCH

S 1623 -- Reported by Senate Commerce Committee (S Rept 169) April 28, 1965.
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote April 29.
- Reported by House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee (H Rept 1002) Sept. 14.
- Passed by the House by voice vote Sept. 20.

PL 89-232 -- Signed into law Oct. 1.

Congress in 1965 passed a bill increasing the authorization for pesticide research funds; however, it failed to act on a major Administration request to increase controls over the manufacture of pesticides to assure their safety and to prevent pollution by the disposal of waste in the manufacturing process.

S 1623, signed into law on Oct. 1, increased authorizations for Interior Department research on the effects of pesticides on fish and wildlife from $2,565,000 to $3.2 million for fiscal 1966 and authorized appropriations of $5 million a year for fiscal 1967 and 1968.

The Interior Department program was just one phase of federal pesticide research. The first session of the 89th Congress appropriated $57,931,000 to the Agriculture Department for research on the effects of pesticides on plants and animals, $4,367,000 to the Health, Education and Welfare Department for research on the effects of pesticides on man and $2,565,000 to the Interior Department. (S 1623 was enacted too late in the session for its authorization increase to be reflected in appropriations.)

Background. Congress took a major step toward control of pesticides in 1947 with passage of the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide and Rodenticide Act. The Act, which required labels of all pesticides to be registered with the Agriculture Department, with proof that they conformed to safety standards, allowed products considered unsafe by the Department to be sold in the market until a final judicial determination on the issue. Congress in 1964 passed a law (PL 88-305) permitting the Department to keep off the market an unsafe product but setting up an appeals process by which the manufacturer could establish the safety of the pesticide. (1964 Almanac p.141)

1965 Amendments. President Johnson Feb. 8, in his special message to Congress on natural beauty, said the Secretary of Agriculture would submit "legislation to tighten control over the manufacture and use of agricultural chemicals (pesticides), including licensing and factory inspection of manufacturers, clearly placing the burden of proof of safety on the proponent of the chemical rather than on the Government." (For text of message, see p. 1379) Under existing procedures, manufacturers had to submit proof that their products conformed to Government standards on safety for pesticides and that labels properly specified the safe use and the effectiveness of the product. The Government, however, had no authority to inspect the actual manufacturing process.

An Administration bill (S 2470) incorporating Mr. Johnson's requests was introduced Aug. 30 by Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff (D Conn.), former Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare (1961-62). No hearings were held on it in 1965 by the Senate Agriculture and Forestry Committee to which it was referred.

Interagency disagreement over wording of the bill--acounting for the delay in introduction--and Congressional focus on broader legislation such as the Administration's air and water pollution bills, were generally regarded as the reasons for inaction in 1965.

In its major provisions, S 2470 amended the Insecticide Act to:

- Require that all facilities for production of pesticides be registered with the Agriculture Department. The bill authorized suspension of registration if the Secretary found that the manufacturer or processor was not conducting operations so as to ensure that the product would be safe and would "meet the quality and purity characteristics which it purports" to possess. Also grounds for license suspension would be failure to ensure that the disposal of waste would not result in pollution "which would endanger the public health or welfare."
- Authorize factory inspections by the Department to determine whether the above conditions were met.
- Grant the Department authority to seek a court injunction blocking shipment of improperly labeled or improperly made products. The existing Act prohibited shipments of such pesticides but contained no enforcement procedures.
- Provide for civil court action for minor violation of regulations with a maximum fine of $1,000. Existing law provided for criminal prosecution for major violations and written warnings for minor ones.

'Silent Spring' Criticism. The surveys and investigations staff of the House Appropriations Committee April 19 released a report on the effects of agricultural pesticides on public health which challenged the conclusions drawn in the book "The Silent Spring" by Rachel Carson. The Carson book, published in 1962, alleged that chemical pesticides had contaminated the "air, earth, rivers and sea with dangerous and even lethal materials" resulting in a "chain of poisoning and death." Public concern over pesticide use generated by the Carson book resulted in the House investigation, which began in June 1964. Rep. Jamie L. Whitten (D Miss.), chairman of the House Appropriations Subcommittee on Agriculture, said the study was undertaken because "we must not permit anyone or any group to saddle our sources of food and fiber with the burden of the unknown."

The report was based on interviews with "over 185 outstanding scientists and 23 physicians," state and local officials, and representatives of conservation groups and private industry. The report said the Carson book was "superficially scientific in that it marshals a number of accepted scientific facts," but was "unscientific in drawing incorrect conclusions from unrelated facts and making implications that are based on possibilities as yet unproved." The report said that Miss Carson had magnified the amount of environmental pollution resulting from pesticides and had made unsubstantiated statements that pesticides would produce cancer, sterility and cellular mutations in human beings and eventually extinguish all plant and animal life. "The book," the report alleged, "created an atmosphere of panic, foretold an impending disaster, and barely mentioned the immensely useful role played by pesticides in the U.S. economy...."

The report said, however, that the Carson book had performed a service in alerting the general public "to the dangers of misuse of chemical pesticides in and around the home and on the farm" and had increased public support for pesticides research programs.

RURAL WATER SYSTEMS

S 1766 -- Reported by Senate Agriculture and Forestry Committee (S Rept 500) July 22, 1965.
● Passed by the Senate by voice vote July 23.
HR 10232 -- Reported by House Agriculture Committee (H Rept 847) Aug. 24.
S 1766 -- Passed, amended, by the House by voice vote after HR 10232 was passed on a 326-10 roll-call vote Sept. 23. (See p. 1008)
● House amendments accepted by the Senate by voice vote Sept. 28, with additional amendments.
● Senate amendments accepted by voice vote of the House Sept. 28.
PL 89-240 --Signed into law Oct. 7.

A new program of $55 million in grants for development of water supply and waste disposal systems in rural areas was passed by Congress in 1965. The measure (S 1766) also increased the loan insurance limit of the Farmers Home Administration from $200 million to $450 million annually. The latter action was taken because of the existing backlog of applications, many of which were for water systems.

The bill, sponsored by Sen. George D. Aiken (R Vt.) and co-sponsored by 92 other Senators, was tied up in the House until President Johnson intervened in late August. The Aiken bill, which provided grants for water systems only, had been opposed by the Bureau of the Budget. The House added the sewage disposal grants.

According to a New York Times account, Mr. Johnson Aug. 20 told Aiken (at a birthday party for the Senator) that he had read about the bill in the Congressional Record and "It read pretty good." Mr. Johnson added that after further study, "I told a staffman to support the bill in the House and since he'd already opposed it in the Senate, this was a little difficult for him. We did a flip-flop."

After S 1766 was enacted, the Budget Bureau recommended an appropriation of $17 million for the grant program in fiscal 1966. The Senate, however, voted $30 million for grants in the General Supplemental Appropriations bill (HR 11588). This was reduced to $20 million in conference.

Four Water System Programs. S 1766 amended the Consolidated Farmers Home Administration Act of 1961 which, among other things, covered loans for rural water systems. (1961 Almanac p. 105) The grant programs in S 1766, which were available only for communities of no more than 5,500 population, constituted the fourth water system program voted by Congress in 1965. The other three programs, which also required local matching of federal funds, were:

● Title VII of the Housing and Urban Development Act (PL 89-117) authorized $200 million a year in grants for basic water and sewer facilities to communities of any size. The program was to be administered by the Community Facilities Administration of the new Department of Housing and Urban Development. (See story p. 358)

● The Public Works and Economic Development Act (S 1648 -- PL 89-136) authorized the Commerce Department to finance water and sewer facilities in depressed areas. (See story p. 798)

● The Water Quality Act (S 4 -- PL 89-234) increased by $50 million -- to $150 million annually -- the grant program for construction of sewage treatment works, administered by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. The program was first set up in the Federal Water Pollution Control Act. (See story p. 743)

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law, PL 89-240:

Authorized $50 million annually in matching grants to soil and water associations and local public agencies for construction of water supply and sewage disposal systems in rural areas where the population does not exceed 5,500.

Limited the federal share to no more than 50 percent of the cost of a project, required that grant applications be submitted to the local government for comment, gave applications by local government priority over requests by non-governmental groups serving the same area, and required that projects comply with state and federal water pollution control standards. (The Agriculture Department subsequently set the federal share at one-third of the cost of each project.)

Authorized an additional $5 million a year in grants to help public agencies prepare comprehensive plans for development of water supply or sewage disposal systems in rural areas.

Placed a $4 million ceiling on the amount of loans or grants outstanding to any association. (The existing limit was $500,000 on direct loans and $1 million on insured loans.)

Increased the Farmers Home Administration authority to insure real estate and other loans from $200 million annually to $450 million and authorized loans and loan insurance for waste disposal systems.

Gave the Secretary of Agriculture greater flexibility in setting charges on insured loans, in making repurchase agreements and in holding loans for future sale.

COMMITTEE -- Agriculture and Forestry.

ACTION -- July 22 reported S 1766 (S Rept 500), authorizing $30 million a year in federal matching grants to help develop water systems in rural areas. The bill also increased the amount of loans the Farmers Home Administration could insure from $200 million outstanding in a year to $450 million. Maximum size of eligible communities was 5,000.

Supporters of the bill viewed the grant provisions as a way of stimulating construction of water storage and distribution facilities in rural agricultural areas. Sen. Aiken said April 13 when he introduced the measure, "Probably the greatest handicap to rural development today lies in the fact that thousands of communities with incalculable potential for growth can make no progress because they have no dependable water supply."

The Agriculture Department endorsed the increase in FHA loan insurance authority but asked, in a June 18 letter, that action on the water facility grant program "be deferred." It said the pending housing and economic development bills were expected to meet "critical needs" for rural water systems, waste disposal and fire fighting facilities and that a study was underway in the Executive Branch to make sure that federal programs provide "an equitable distribution of benefits between urban and rural areas."

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate July 23 passed the bill by voice vote without amendment.

House

COMMITTEE -- Agriculture.

ACTION -- Aug. 24 reported a bill (HR 10232 -- H Rept 847) which was a broadened version of S 1766.

HR 10232 authorized grants for sewage disposal in addition to grants for rural water systems and increased the amount of money available from $30 million to $55 million annually. It also increased the population of rural areas that could be assisted from 5,000 to 5,500. Other provisions were basically similar to those in S 1766.

Justifying the need for rural sewage grants, the Committee report said, "Congress has approved legislation providing federal assistance to urban political bodies to provide adequate water and sanitation facilities for city people. Rural citizens have the same need and are entitled to the same kind and degree of assistance...."

FLOOR ACTION

The House Sept. 23 substituted HR 10232 for S 1766 and then passed its version of S 1766 by a 326-10 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart p.1008) A motion to end debate on the rule for consideration of the bill was adopted 280-70.

Rep. E. C. Gathings (D Ark.) said in House debate that a Senator had told him the House addition of sewage grants would bring a Presidential veto of the bill. House Majority Leader Carl Albert (D Okla.), however, replied that it was his understanding that "the Administration, including the President, supports this bill."

The bill had overwhelming support on the House floor. A few Members, however, questioned whether the sewage provisions did not overlap the new authority given the Community Facilities Administration in the 1965 Housing Act.

The House accepted by voice vote an amendment by John D. Dingell (D Mich.) to require that water and sewage systems built with any federal funds comply with state and federal water pollution control standards.

FINAL ACTION

The Senate Sept. 28 accepted by voice vote the House's version of S 1766, with minor amendments. The amendments were cleared by voice vote of the House later Sept. 28.

Johnson Comments

President Johnson Oct. 7, on signing S 1766 into law, said: "What Sen. Aiken has done with his bill might be an example for Democrats if we ever get in a minority, or might be an example for Republicans if they would just quit trying to recommit everything and really stand for something positive.... I am just looking for good Republican ideas, and if they will present alternatives, if they will present affirmative programs, if they will present positive programs for the good of all the people, this Democratic President will be the first to embrace them and sign them. And this is a classical example of what a member of a minority party can do, and how quickly a Texan will join him."

DISASTER PRICE SUPPORTS

HR 8620 -- Reported by House Agriculture Committee (H Rept 517) June 15, 1965.
- Passed by a 297-2 roll-call vote of the House June 21. (See p. 972)
- Reported by Senate Agriculture and Forestry Committee (S Rept 502) July 22.
- Passed by voice vote of the Senate July 23.

PL 89-112 -- Signed into law Aug. 6.

In HR 8620 (PL 89-112), Congress authorized price support payments for growers of wheat, feed grains and cotton who were not able to plant their crops in 1965 because of floods and other natural disasters. The bill applied only to those farmers enrolled in voluntary acreage-reduction programs prior to the disaster. Payments would not be made if the land involved was subsequently planted to other price-supported crops.

Existing law governing 1965 acreage-reduction programs for cotton, wheat and feed grains permitted a farmer who had entered the programs to receive benefits even if the crop was totally destroyed. HR 8620 simply extended this provision to cover disasters which occurred before the crop was planted. It entailed no additional costs to the Government, the Agriculture Committees said.

HOUSE. HR 8620 was considered in the House under the suspension-of-the rules procedure which prohibits floor amendments. During debate, Robert Dole (R Kan.) said he had wanted to offer an amendment to aid Kansas wheat farmers whose crops had been destroyed by June 1965 floods. The amendment, which would have permitted wheat farmers to plant milo and other feed grains on flooded-out farmland, had been defeated in the Agriculture Committee on a 13-16 vote. Dole inserted in the Congressional Record a letter from the Agriculture Department opposing the proposal because "present programs provide for disaster relief and because the overall supplies of feed grains are more than adequate."

On the 297-2 House vote passing the bill, the only negative votes were cast by Reps. Thomas B. Curtis (R Mo.) and Henry P. Smith III (R N. Y.).

SENATE. The Senate passed the bill July 23 by voice vote, without opposition.

The Senate Agriculture and Forestry Committee report (S Rept 502) said that under HR 8620, "The Government will be getting all that it contracted for, and even more, for instead of reducing his crop the farmer affected by this bill will harvest no crop whatever in that particular commodity for 1965 and will not be permitted to plant on the acreage any other price-supported crop." The Committee urged the Secretary of Agriculture to "be careful to see that payments are not made under the bill to any producers other than those that would have planted but for the disaster."

PROVISIONS EXTENDED

When the four-year omnibus farm bill, the Food and Agriculture Act of 1965 (PL 89-321), was enacted, provisions similar to those in HR 8620 were included for wheat, feed grains and cotton. The language was changed, however, so that payments could not be received if any "income-producing crop" were planted on the disaster-struck land. HR 8620 forbade planting of any "price-supported crop."

SUGAR ACT EXTENDED TO DEC. 31, 1971

HR 11135 -- Reported, amended, by House Agriculture Committee (H Rept 1046) Sept. 21, 1965.

- Passed by the House by a 246-147 roll-call vote Oct. 13. (See p. 1018)
- Reported, amended, by Senate Finance Committee (S Rept 909) Oct. 18.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, by a 69-16 roll-call vote Oct. 20. (See p. 1079)
- Conference report (H Rept 1209) agreed to by a 174-88 roll-call vote of the House Oct. 22 and a 41-10 roll-call vote of the Senate Oct. 22. (See p. 1022, 1080)

PL 89-331 -- Signed by the President Nov. 8.

Congress in 1965 enacted legislation (HR 11135) fixing new domestic and foreign sugar quotas -- action it had been unable to take in 1964 because of a deadlock within the U.S. sugar industry. The new quotas established by HR 11135 were to run through Dec. 31, 1971. They replaced existing domestic quotas, set in 1962, which otherwise would have remained in effect until Dec. 31, 1966, and foreign quotas (also set in 1962) which had expired at the end of 1964.

The Sugar Act is designed primarily to protect the domestic sugar industry. The Act creates an artificially high price for sugar by setting quotas limiting the total amount of sugar that can be sold in the United States. Under the Act, domestic sugar growers are guaranteed a large share of quota. The remainder is assigned to foreign countries. The latter are anxious to obtain quotas because the protected U.S. sugar price is normally higher than the world price. In mid-1965, for example, the New York price of delivered raw cane sugar was 6 cents a pound, while the world market price was only 2 cents.

KEY FEATURES OF HR 11135

The key feature of the 1965 Sugar Act amendments was an increase in the share of the U.S. market guaranteed to domestic sugar producers.

Under the previous law (the 1962 Sugar Act Amendments), domestic producers (mainland beet sugar producers, mainland cane sugar producers and Hawaiian, Puerto Rican and Virgin Island cane producers) were granted the right to supply 5,810,000 tons of sugar a year to the U.S. market -- or approximately 60 percent of the over-all normal market supply of 9.7 million tons a year. The remaining 3,890,000 million tons were to be supplied by imports from foreign countries.

Under HR 11135, the domestic producers' figure was raised by 580,000 tons -- to 6,390,000 tons (66 percent) -- and foreign suppliers were reduced correspondingly, to 3,310,000 tons a year. The entire 580,000-ton increase was divided among mainland beet (375,000 tons) and mainland cane producers (205,000 tons). The Administration endorsed these changes.

The increase in domestic quotas provided by HR 11135 constituted a compromise -- worked out before the Administration bill was sent to Congress in August -- between mainland beet producers, on the one hand, and large East and Gulf Coast cane refiners on the other hand. A third group, mainland cane growers, was not as active in negotiations as the other two and generally aligned itself with mainland beet interests since both were seeking quota increases at the expense of foreign producers.

The mainland beet sugar interests initially sought an increase in their basic quotas of 750,000 tons a year. The coastal cane sugar refiners, which rely mainly on imports of raw cane sugar from Latin America, opposed a substantial increase in beet sugar quotas at the expense of imports of cane sugar because that would leave the coastal refiners less imported raw sugar to refine and sell. The coastal cane refiners therefore originally sought to preserve the same level of imports as provided in the 1962 sugar amendments.

The coastal cane refiners eventually agreed to the 580,000-ton reduction in imports made by HR 11135 for the following reasons:

(1) In order to forestall the even larger increase in the beet sugar quota, at the expense of cane imports, that was sought by the beet industry. (As indicated above, the beet sugar industry initially sought a 750,000-ton increase for itself alone, but the final bill provided an increase of only 375,000 tons for the mainland beet industry plus 205,000 tons for mainland cane.)

(2) Because the bill provided that, whenever the national need for sugar rose above 9.7 million tons -- as was expected to be the case within a very few years -- foreign suppliers were to be permitted to supply the entire first 700,000 additional tons needed. (Under previous law, supplies needed to take care of growth of the market beyond 9.7 million tons were provided 65 percent by mainland cane and beets and only 35 percent by foreign suppliers.) Guaranteeing foreign suppliers the entire first 700,000 tons of market growth beyond 9.7 million tons was specifically intended to compensate them for taking a reduction in their basic quota share, and thus to boost the amount of imported sugar that would be available to East Coast and Gulf refiners.

(3) Because the 205,000 increase granted mainland (Florida and Louisiana) cane would, at least in part, be available to East Coast and Gulf refiners and therefore help make up for their reduction of imported sugar.

Other key features of the 1965 legislation were the continued suspension of the basic Cuban quota and its reassignment to other nations, pending restoration of good relations between the United States and Cuba; the absence of any special import fees on foreign sugar; and the return to a statutory system of country-by-country quotas for foreign suppliers, instead of partial use of a first-come, first-served system for foreign suppliers, as had been the case during 1963 and 1964.

BASIC PATTERN OF AMENDMENTS

The Sugar Act amendments made by HR 11135 set up the following basic pattern for the U.S. sugar quota system:

- Estimated the normal national consumption level at 9.7 million tons of sugar a year and contained provisions allocating quotas based upon that amount.
- Provided for a 580,000-ton increase in the domestic mainland producers' annual share of the U.S. market, allocated as follows: The mainland beet sugar share was increased by 375,000 tons (to a new total of 3,025,000 tons a year) and the mainland cane sugar share was increased by 205,000 tons (to a new total of 1,100,000 tons a year). In the eyes of mainland producers, this was the key section of the bill because the 580,000-ton increase -- which was deliberately made retroactive to Jan. 1, 1965 -- permitted them to dispose of surpluses accumulated in recent years and enlarge their share of the market.

- Assigned the following quotas to domestic off-shore producers: Hawaii, 1,110,000 tons; Puerto Rico, 1,140,000 tons; and the Virgin Islands, 15,000 tons. These were the same amounts as under the previous legislation.
- Assigned the Philippines a quota of 1,050,000 tons. This amount, guaranteed by treaty, was the same as under previous legislation.
- Divided the remaining 2,260,000 tons among 32 foreign nations, including Cuba. However, Cuba's share continued to be suspended and reassigned to the other nations. (See box)
- Reduced Cuba's permanent legal share -- currently suspended and reassigned -- from 57.77 percent to 50 percent of the 2,260,000-ton foreign total (exclusive of small amounts set aside for Ireland and the Bahamas).
- Permitted the Secretary to raise the annual national total quota above 9.7 million tons if he believed U.S. consumption needs required it, and provided that all increases in national consumption between 9.7 million tons and 10.4 million tons be assigned to foreign countries -- 10.86 percent to the Philippines and the rest divided among other foreign nations with quotas. All increases above 10.4 million tons would be filled 65 percent by mainland U.S. cane and beet sugar producers, and the remainder by foreign nations.
- Did not reinstate either a "recapture" import fee or the "global quota" concept (distributing Cuba's suspended share on a first-come, first-served basis instead of reallocating it to specific nations). The import fee and the "global quota" were written into the Sugar Act in 1962 and expired Dec. 31, 1964. The import fee, designed to "recapture" for the U.S. Treasury some of the difference between the normally low world market price and the normally higher Government-pegged U.S. price, was opposed by Latin American countries.

The "global quota" was blamed for causing U.S. shortages during the 1963 sugar crisis. Critics of the global quota said that country-by-country quotas, by guaranteeing foreign producers a long-term share of the lucrative U.S. market, encouraged them to maintain their shipments to the United States (in order to maintain their future quota rights) even on those rare occasions when world sugar shortages drove the world market price higher than the domestic U.S. price of sugar.

The critics of the global quota said that during 1963, when world production was down because of bad crops, some countries hesitated to continue selling sugar in the United States because at that time they could get a better price on the world market. By failing to provide these countries with the guarantees of future sales afforded by country-by-country quotas, the critics charged, the global quota system had left them little incentive to sell to the United States when the world market price was higher.

The same general argument was made against import fees. By taking away part or all of the "quota premium" (the difference between the normally high U.S. price and normally low world market price) through imposing an

Sugar Quotas

As signed into law, HR 11135 set up the following annual quotas fixing the amount of sugar to be provided to the U.S. market by different producing areas during calendar years 1966 through 1971. The figures reflect basic quotas plus proration to other foreign countries of Cuba's suspended 1.1 million-ton quota, and are based upon a U.S. consumption level of 9.7 million tons of sugar annually. When consumption rises above 9.7 million tons, quota amounts increase (see Provisions).

(a) Philippine quota fixed by treaty, but increases when U.S. consumption exceeds 9.7 million tons.

(b) The Bahama Islands were granted a 10,000 ton annual quota starting in 1968. After the Bahamas quota becomes effective, figures for countries in groups C and D will be reduced very slightly in order to provide the Bahamas' 10,000 tons.

(c) Cuba's quota of approximately 1,130,000 tons suspended until U.S.-Cuban relations improve. Figures for other foreign nations shown in the chart include reallocations from the suspended Cuban quota.

(d) Southern Rhodesia's 1966 quota was suspended and reallocated following that country's break with Great Britain, which occurred after the bill was passed.

(e) Ireland's quota is stationary and does not increase as the national U.S. consumption level goes up.

import fee, the 1962 law, it was contended, had reduced the incentive to foreign producers to sell into the U.S. market and had thus made it more difficult to obtain a dependable supply of foreign sugar. (Backers of import fees said the "quota premium" was simply a handout to foreign producers, but failed in attempts to restore the fees.) The final version of HR 11135 rejected both the global quota concept and the use of "recapture" import fees. The final provisions were in accord with the Administration position on this matter, which did not favor reinstatement either of the import fees or global quota.

MAJOR DISPUTE

The main dispute between the House and the Senate in 1965 was over the size of individual foreign quotas.

The Administration approach, backed by the Senate, was that quotas should be based on deliveries to the United States during the sugar crisis years of 1963-64, thus rewarding the countries that had stuck by the United States at the time when the world market price had gone up. The House approach, spelled out in an Agriculture Committee print, "The Development of Foreign Sugar Quotas in HR 11135," was that quotas should be based upon deliveries during more normal years such as 1962 and upon certain other factors. These included a nation's ability to produce enough to meet its quota reliably and to carry reserves for emergencies; the need for ready availability of sugar from nearby sources (hence a House revision of the Administration's proposed country-by-country quotas to favor Latin America more); and the need to aid friendly nations.

Critics of the House quotas said lobbyists for foreign countries exerted undue influence upon the deliberations of the House Agriculture Committee. These charges were vigorously denied by Chairman Harold D. Cooley (D N.C.). Unsuccessful efforts were made on the House floor to write an anti-lobbyist amendment into the bill. (See discussion of lobbying, below, and table of lobbyists p. 147.) Ultimately, the House prevailed on most individual country quotas, as had been the pattern in recent years.

There was no disagreement between the House and the Senate over increasing domestic quotas. Both chambers approved identical domestic provisions, which, in effect, continued the historic increase in the share of the market reserved for the mainland beet and mainland cane producers. Domestic quotas were a key factor in insuring favorable action on the over-all package. Members from mainland beet and cane producing areas were anxious to reach agreement on foreign quotas and enact a sugar bill in 1965 so that the 580,000-ton increase in mainland quotas could be retroactive to Jan. 1, 1965, and could also be fully effective throughout 1966. The increase would allow them to dispose of surplus stocks of sugar built up when production was expanded to meet the shortage during the 1963-64 crisis, and would also give them a long-range increase in their basic quotas.

Lobbying. Lobbyists for both domestic and foreign interests were extremely active during 1965 Congressional action, and many received sizable fees for their efforts. Twenty-seven foreign countries were represented by United States-based lobbyists (see table p. 147). In addition, all major domestic interests were represented by lobbyists -- some of whom sat in on Administration and House Agriculture Committee sessions -- and some private concerns with interests in foreign countries hired lobbyists. (See House hearings)

PROVISIONS

As signed into law, HR 11135 contained the following provisions:

Extended the Sugar Act through Dec. 31, 1971.

Established a basic total national quota which limited to 9.7 million short tons per calendar year the amount of sugar that could be marketed in the United States. Provided for division of the total quota as follows:

Domestic quota	6,390,000 tons
Foreign quota	3,310,000 tons

Breakdown of Domestic Total. Divided the 6,390,000-ton total annual domestic quota as follows, compared to previous quotas:

	New Quotas (in tons)	Previous Quotas (in tons)
Mainland beet sugar	3,025,000	2,650,000
Mainland cane	1,100,000	895,000
Offshore cane
Hawaii	1,110,000	1,110,000
Puerto Rico	1,140,000	1,140,000
Virgin Islands	15,000	15,000
Total	6,390,000	5,810,000

Made the new domestic quotas retroactive to Jan. 1, 1965. (This was to help mainland beet and cane producers dispose of Government-encouraged overproduction from the sugar crisis years of 1963-64. The domestic quotas were to expire at the same time as the over-all Act (Dec. 31, 1971).

Established a national reserve of 25,000 tons of the beet quota and 16,000 tons of the mainland cane quota to be used to alleviate hardships and inequities.

Breakdown of Foreign Total. Divided the 3,310,000-ton total annual foreign quotas as follows:

- For the Philippines, 1,050,000 tons a year (previously agreed to by treaty).
- For all other foreign countries combined, 2,260,000 tons a year. Of this total, 5,351 tons a year was allocated to Ireland, and, beginning in 1968, 10,000 tons a year to the Bahama Islands. The entire remainder of the 2,260,000 tons a year was to be divided among a number of foreign countries on a percentage basis, as follows, during calendar years 1966-71:

Cuba, 50 percent in place of the 57.77 percent previously assigned to Cuba under the 1962 law (but see below for provisions temporarily suspending Cuba's quota); Mexico, 7.73 percent; Dominican Republic and Brazil, 7.56 percent each; Peru, 6.03 percent; Australia, 3.60 percent; British West Indies, 3.02 percent; Republic of China, 1.50 percent; India, 1.44 percent; Ecuador, 1.10 percent; South Africa, 1.06 percent; French West Indies, 0.95 percent; Argentina, 0.93 percent; Costa Rica and Nicaragua, 0.89 percent each; Colombia, 0.80 percent; Fiji Islands, 0.79 percent; Guatemala, 0.75 percent; Panama, 0.56 percent; El Salvador, 0.55 percent; Haiti, 0.42 percent; Venezuela, 0.38 percent; Thailand and Mauritius, 0.33 percent each; British Honduras, 0.22 percent; Malagasy Republic, 0.17 percent; Swaziland and Southern Rhodesia, 0.13 percent each; and Bolivia and Honduras, 0.09 percent each. (Of the above, Argentina, Bolivia, Honduras, Thailand, Swaziland, Venezuela, Malagasy Republic, Mauritius, Southern Rhodesia and the Bahama Islands did not have statutory quotas under the 1962 provisions; however, the Agriculture Secretary had assigned Malagasy Republic, Argentina, Venezuela, Mauritius, Southern Rhodesia and Swaziland quotas by administrative action in 1965.)

Cuban Quota Suspension. Suspended Cuba's quota "during the current period of suspension of diplomatic relations between the United States and Cuba," and reassigned it to the other foreign quota nations (not including the Philippines, the Bahamas and Ireland) in proportion to their quotas. (For a breakdown of country quotas in tons, including the reallocations of Cuba's share, see p. 141).

Other Suspensions. Authorized the President to withhold and later to restore the quota of any country when he found either action to be in the national interest. (President Johnson cancelled Southern Rhodesia's 1965 and 1966 quotas following that country's unilateral declaration of independence from Great Britain in the fall of 1965.)

Broadened an existing Sugar Act provision directing the President to suspend a country's quota for various anti- U.S. acts, such as expropriations of U.S.-owned property, discriminatory taxes, violations of treaties and agreements relating to protection of property.

Reallocation of Deficits. Provided that if any of the domestic areas were unable to meet their basic quotas, the deficits would be reallocated 47.22 percent to the Philippines and the remainder to Western Hemisphere quota nations.

Provided that if any foreign countries were unable to meet their basic quotas, the deficits would be reallocated as follows: The first 47.22 percent would be filled by the Philippines (except the deficit of a country which was a member of the Central American Common Market, which would be allocated to other member countries). The remaining 52.78 percent of foreign deficits, if arising in any Western Hemisphere country, would be prorated to other Western Hemisphere countries with quotas; and if arising in non-Western Hemisphere countries, would be prorated to other non-Western Hemisphere countries with quotas. Directed that, in making allocations to Western Hemisphere countries under the above provisions, special consideration should be given to those countries purchasing U.S. agricultural commodities.

Authorized the President, if he determined it to be in the national interest, and notwithstanding the provisions in the above paragraphs or elsewhere in the bill, to assign any domestic or foreign deficit, other than the 47.22 percent reserved for the Philippines, to any quota countries in any manner he deemed appropriate. (The House Agriculture Committee said the purpose of this provision was primarily to give the President a free hand to boost sugar shipments from the Dominican Republic (in order to help that country), at such time as conditions were more stable there, by assigning to the Dominican Republic large portions of the Puerto Rican or any other foreign or domestic deficit, after allocation of the 47.22 percent Philippine share. No action had been taken under this discretionary provision as of Jan. 19, 1966.)

Allocated all consumption between 9.7 million tons and 10.4 million tons to foreign quota nations, with increases above the 10.4 million level allocated 65 percent to mainland beet and cane producers (divided in proportion to their basic quotas) and 35 percent to foreign producers.

Specified that in carrying out the above provision, the Secretary should divide increases between 9.7 million tons and 10.4 million tons among foreign quota nations as follows: 10.86 percent to the Philippines; the remainder prorated to all other foreign nations with quotas in effect (except Ireland and the Bahamas), but with the proviso that the share of market growth above 10 million tons that would have gone to Cuba had its quota been in effect instead of suspended, should be prorated among members of the Organization of American States only.

Other. Required countries to give assurance before the end of 1965 that they would supply their quotas and provided for withholding or reduction of quotas of countries in the future years which fail unjustifiably to fill their quotas.

Provided for limiting on a quarterly basis total imports during the first half of each year if such action was needed to support prices.

Prohibited the establishment of a quota for any country if, during the 24-month period ending June 30 of the preceding year, the country has been a net importer of sugar. Specifically excluded Ireland, Bolivia, Honduras and the Bahamas from this provision.

Provided a quota exemption for sugar used to produce industrial alcohol -- alcohol not intended for human consumption.

Background

REFERENCES -- For history of the Sugar Act and a description of how it works, see 1961 Almanac p. 125; 1962 Almanac p. 127 and 1964 Almanac p. 119.

The Sugar Act was last renewed in 1962. Provisions governing foreign quotas expired Dec. 31, 1964, and domestic provisions were slated to run through Dec. 31, 1966. Efforts to extend the expiring foreign quotas in 1964 were unsuccessful because of the deadlock between mainland sugar producers, on the one hand, and the coastal refiners who depended on offshore cane sugar, on the other hand, over the division of the market as between domestic and foreign quotas. Historically, the mainland beet and cane producers had repeatedly sought in recent years (usually successfully) to keep enlarging their permanent share of the market. Moreover, since passage of the 1962 Sugar Act amendments, they had expanded their production substantially in order to help meet needs during the 1963-64 sugar crisis. They argued that as a result they would be trapped with large oversupplies unless they got a larger market share.

Provisions initiated in 1962 which expired at the end of 1964 included authority for special import fees to "recapture" for the Treasury the difference between the low world price and the higher domestic price of raw cane sugar. (Note: In order to protect U.S. refiners of offshore cane, the Sugar Act, broadly speaking, permits imports only of raw sugar.) Supporters of a recapture import fee argued there was no reason why foreign growers should benefit from a high U.S. price that was the result of a protective system designed to aid the domestic industry.

Another provision which expired at the end of 1964 was the global quota -- allocation of Cuba's suspended quota on a first-come, first-served basis, instead of to specific countries.

Since the import fee and global quota provisions had expired, the Secretary of Agriculture set foreign quotas administratively for 1965, without an import fee and on a country-by-country basis.

Administration Requests. House Agriculture Chairman Harold D. Cooley (D N.C.) Aug. 17 introduced an Administration bill (HR 10496) to revise and extend the Sugar Act through 1971. The bill represented a compromise between the domestic beet and cane industries, on the one hand, and the large coastal refiners who depended primarily on imports of Latin American cane. The provisions were worked out with the aid of spokesmen for these groups.

In its essentials, HR 10496 did not differ from the final sugar bill (HR 11135) later signed into law: it provided the 580,000-ton increase sought by mainland beet and cane spokesmen at the expense of imports, thus setting the total domestic quotas at 6,390,000 tons annually and foreign at 3,310,000; gave the first 700,000 tons of growth of the market above 9.7 million tons a year to foreign imports exclusively; reallocated Cuba's suspended quota on a country-by-country basis instead of a "global" basis; and did not reinstate import fees. The Administration originally favored import fees, but the President Aug. 17 said he was dropping this proposal (reportedly because of the opposition of Latin American countries and Cooley).

The only major difference between HR 10496 and the final version of HR 11135 as later enacted was in the division of the total 3,310,000-ton foreign quota among foreign nations. HR 10496 left Cuba's suspended quota at 57.77 percent of total foreign imports exclusive of the tonnage reserved for the Philippines (final version of HR 11135: 50 percent); and based individual foreign country quotas on performance during the 1963-64 sugar crisis (final version: based on additional years and other factors as well).

Frank A. Kemp of Great Western Sugar Co. (a beet sugar firm) later testified before the House Agriculture Committee on behalf of the entire U.S. sugar industry, in favor of the basic Administration proposals. He represented the U.S. Beet Sugar Assn., American Sugar Cane League, Florida Sugar Cane League, U.S. Cane Sugar Refiners Assn. (spokesman for the coastal refiners), Hawaiian Sugar Planters Assn. and Assn. of Sugar Producers of Puerto Rico.

House

COMMITTEE -- Agriculture.

LOBBYING ACTIVITIES -- As in previous years, many lobbyists were active on the sugar bill.

Lobbyists for domestic interests included Robert H. Shields and Philip E. Jones, U.S. Beet Sugar Assn.; Irvin A. Hoff, U.S. Cane Sugar Refiners Assn.; Sanford L. Platt, Hawaiian Sugar Planters Assn.; William M. Requa, Assn. of Sugar Producers of Puerto Rico; Josiah Ferris, American Sugar Cane League and Florida Sugar Cane League; Robert M. Armstrong, Imperial Sugar Company of Texas and Arthur M. Becker, Talisman Sugar Corp.

Lobbyists for private interests with holdings in foreign countries included the law firm of Surrey, Karasik, Gould and Greene, representing the South Puerto Rico Sugar Co., a U.S. firm with large sugar holdings in the Dominican Republic. (For list of foreign country lobbyists, see chart p. 147.)

HEARINGS -- Aug. 20-23 on HR 10496.

TESTIMONY -- Aug. 18 -- John A. Schnittker, Under Secretary of Agriculture, said that under the legislation, "Quotas would be allocated to foreign countries to the degree that they demonstrated their willingness and their ability to service our market under the most trying circumstances, i.e., when sugar was extremely scarce and when higher prices were available in other markets."

Frank A. Kemp, representing all segments of the U.S. sugar industry (see above, Administration Requests, for list), said that agreement on a single bill by all groups concerned, industry and government, was "something of a miracle in legislative history." He added that "failure to achieve sugar legislation this year would so further aggravate the frictions as to make it practically certain that the industry would be unable to achieve unanimity next year."

Aug. 19 -- Joseph M. Creed, representing the Industrial Sugar Users Group (ISUG), urged that if Congress should include an import fee, contrary to the ISUG's and the Administration's recommendations, Congress should "also provide for a corresponding reduction in the processing tax on sugar equivalent to the amount of the import fee."

John C. Lynn, legislative director for the American Farm Bureau Federation, said "the Government has a moral obligation to bring the basic quotas for the mainland cane and beet areas into line with their enlarged productive capacity." He recommended "that the first one million tons of any increase in the estimate of domestic requirements be allocated to the mainland cane and beet areas."

John H. Bleke, representing the National Confectioners Assn., backed the Administration's plan of acquiring all foreign sugar on an individual country quota basis because "our foreign supplies will have definite sources of responsibility rather than being the responsibility of no country."

In addition to these industry spokesmen, lobbyists representing a number of foreign countries, many in Latin America, appeared before the Committee to seek shares of the foreign quota.

Bill Reported

The House Agriculture Committee Sept. 21 reported, with amendments, a new bill (HR 11135 -- H Rept 1046) introduced by Cooley Sept. 17. As reported, HR 11135 substantially revised the quotas for individual foreign countries recommended by the Administration (see p. 147), basing them on several factors, including sugar supplied during 1962 (rather than during 1963-64), but other than that, the Committee's bill was basically similar to the Administration measure and to the final version of HR 11135 eventually signed into law. It contained no import fees, no global quota. It granted a 580,000-ton increase to mainland producers, divided between mainland beet and cane, thus raising total domestic quotas to 6,390,000 tons a year through 1971 while lowering total foreign quotas to 3,310,000. The Committee bill, however, cut Cuba's permanent (though suspended) quota to a figure of 44.25 percent of what would remain of the foreign total after deduction of the fixed amounts assigned to Ireland, the Philippines and the Bahamas, instead of retaining Cuba at 57.77 percent, as requested by the Administration. The reported bill assigned the entire first 700,000 tons of growth of the market above 9.7 million tons to the foreign producers.

Majority Views. The Committee said HR 11135 was "the product of a unique demonstration of cooperation among all elements of the domestic sugar industry." It stated that import fees were eliminated because "it did not seem to be good policy to members of the Committee that the United States would assess a fee upon trade with a friendly neighbor and then, in effect, return the proceeds from the fee in the form of aid."

The Committee said it decided not to go back to the "global quota" because under that system in 1963 "the price of world sugar skyrocketed fantastically and the U.S. consumers were forced to pay prices for sugar which they had not encountered since the early 1920s."

Separate Views. Separate views submitted by Bert Bandstra (D Iowa), Alec G. Olson (D Minn.), Joseph Y. Resnick (D N.Y.) and Lynn E. Stalbaum (D Wis.) criticized the assignment of a 10,000 ton quota to the Bahama Islands. They said the allocation was made at the request of the Bahama Islands government. They said the action "would simply benefit an individual company while adding to the glut of sugar which now already floods the market."

Minority Views. Catherine May (R Wash.) and Robert Dole (R Kan.) submitted minority views criticizing the Committee for not adopting an amendment which would have tied reallocations of unfilled import quotas more completely to commitments by the receiving countries to purchase U.S. agricultural goods for dollars.

Individual Views. Paul Findley (R Ill.) said he opposed the whole philosophy of the existing Sugar Act, which he said cost U.S. consumers $700 million a year in hidden subsidies. He said, "The best improvement would be to drop the act entirely, and rely on a simple tariff to give desired domestic protection."

Findley, who subsequently led a campaign to restore special "recapture" import fees on sugar and to curb the activities of sugar lobbyists for foreign nations, Sept. 22 inserted two charts into the Congressional Record showing the names and fees of the sugar lobbyists and comparing the quotas given countries under the Administration's recommendations and under the bill as rewritten by the Agriculture Committee.

Findley said, "Not all countries which had lobbyists got increased quotas, but each of the nine countries which got quotas for the first time this year had lobbyists. Argentina did not hire lobbyists, reportedly because it thought it was not the thing to do. The Argentina quota is cut to about one-third the level recommended by the Administration."

Findley also added, "The world price of raw sugar is about $2 a hundredweight. The comparable U.S. price is about $5.50.... At present prices, the value of the quota premium -- approximately the difference between the world price and the U.S. price of world sugar -- is about $3.50 (a hundredweight) or $70 a ton. If the United States consumes 10 million tons as expected during the next year, this means the Sugar Act (which in effect sets the U.S. prices for all sugar at about $5.50 a hundredweight) will impose a burden of at least $700 million on U.S. consumers.

"Of the 10 million, about 4 million will be purchased under foreign quotas. Thus the 'quota premium' for the foreign part alone is about $280 million."

Findley's criticism of foreign lobbying received considerable attention in the press.

Rule Granted. The House Rules Committee Sept. 28 granted HR 11135 a rule for debate which permitted Findley to offer floor amendments to curb lobbying and to reimpose special "recapture" import fees. No other floor amendments were permitted. This action was considered unusual because in the past, sugar legislation normally had been considered under closed rules, forbidding floor amendments.

FLOOR ACTION

The House Oct. 13 by a 246-147 roll-call vote passed HR 11135 with floor amendments. (For voting, see chart p. 1018; for provisions, see Bill Reported, p. 144.)

Prior to passage, the House on a 160-230 roll-call vote rejected a motion by Ralph Harvey (R Ind.) to recommit the bill with instructions to add a special fee on imports from foreign countries, except from the Philippines, equal to 50 percent of the difference between the high U.S. market price for raw sugar and the low world price. A ceiling of 1 cent would have been placed on the fee. The rule for debate on the bill was adopted Oct. 12 by a 253-80 roll call.

The purpose of the import fee proposed by Harvey was to recapture for the U.S. Treasury a part of the premium received by foreign producers as a result of selling into the protected U.S. market, where prices were normally higher than on the world market. (The raw sugar price in the U.S. at that time was about 6 cents a pound, compared with about 2 cents in the world market.)

The Johnson Administration opposed imposition of a special import fee. Rep. Cooley Oct. 12 said that early in the year, an Administration draft bill had included a provision imposing a recapture import fee. But he said that after he had told the Administration he opposed a fee, it notified him that it was dropping the proposal, and the President so stated Aug. 17 publicly in remarks on the fourth anniversary of the Alliance for Progress. Cooley added that the Secretary of State that morning had reassured him the Administration opposed the import fee proposal.

Supporters of the bill maintained that, to assure a stable supply of sugar from abroad and to guarantee that foreign suppliers would not desert the U.S. market at times when the world sugar price rose, it was necessary to give them the incentives of fixed, country-by-country quotas and of the receipt of the entire quota premium.

Debate centered largely on criticism of the country-by-country allocations drawn up by the House Agriculture Committee in reporting the measure, and on reports that high-paid foreign lobbyists had been pressuring the Committee in order to obtain larger quotas for their clients. Paul Findley (R Ill.), Joseph Y. Resnick (D N.Y.) and others pointed out that the country quotas put in the bill by the Committee differed very sharply from those recommended by the Administration. Findley said the public had gained the impression that the changes, which, it was claimed, did not appear to follow any rational pattern, had in many cases been made at the behest of the foreign lobbyists.

Replying to these charges, Cooley strenuously denied that any undue lobbyist influence had been attempted or had succeeded, or that any lobbyists had attended any Committee executive drafting sessions on the bill.

Cooley read into the record the House Agriculture Committee print, "The Development of Foreign Sugar Quotas in HR 11135," explaining why the Administration recommendations were revised. (See "Major Dispute," p. 142, for contents.)

Critics responded that Cooley and the Committee appeared to believe they, rather than the State Department and Administration, should determine foreign policy questions. Findley offered two floor amendments, both of which were rejected. The amendments were the only ones permitted under the rule for floor debate. (See Amendments Rejected, p. 146)

The desire of mainland sugar beet and cane growers for an increase in their quotas, as provided by the bill, appeared to be a major factor in the wide margins by which the Findley and Harvey proposals were rejected. Byron G. Rogers (D Colo.), from one of the major beet sugar states, appeared to express the feelings of a wide consensus of Congressmen from mainland sugar growing areas when he said, "While we should recognize that the foreign provisions do have a bearing on our foreign policy, we should not penalize our own domestic producers by failing to pass this bill." A dispute over the foreign provisions could have delayed or blocked the domestic increases.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Oct. 13 -- Paul Findley (R Ill.) -- Cancel the quota of any foreign country which, after Jan. 1, 1966, employs a lobbyist subject to the Foreign Agents Registration Act to help it obtain Sugar Act quotas. Standing vote, 62-83; teller vote, 93-114.

Findley -- Impose a special fee on all imports of sugar from foreign countries, except the Philippines, equal to 75 percent of the difference between the U.S. price and the lower world market price. Teller, 95-137.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Finance.

HEARINGS -- Oct. 14 and 15 on HR 11135.

ACTION -- Oct. 18 reported HR 11135 (S Rept 909) with amendments.

The Finance Committee bill (like the Administration and House versions before it) did not reinstate either the global quota or import fees. It granted mainland beet and cane producers the same 580,000-ton annual increase as the Administration and House versions, thus raising total domestic quotas to 6,390,000 tons a year through the end of 1971, while reducing the over-all foreign quotas to 3,310,000.

In its only major amendments to the House bill, the Committee (1) authorized the foreign quotas only for two years, 1966 and 1967, instead of through 1971; and (2) in allocating the 3,310,000-ton annual foreign quota total, significantly altered the figures set by the House for individual country quotas, revising the latter to conform more with the Administration's requests (see p. 147). Thus, the Committee left Cuba's share of the import market (now suspended) at 57.77 percent (exclusive of the Philippines' guaranteed amount), instead of reducing it to 44.25 percent (the House figure). The Committee said a two-year limit was imposed on the foreign quotas "because of lack of opportunity to make an exhaustive study. The foreign quotas approved in the bill are not intended, in any way, to commit the United States to give any foreign nation a permanent quota."

The Committee altogether eliminated the quotas set by the House version for the Bahama Islands, Bolivia, Honduras, Thailand and the Malagasy Republic. It added quotas (not in the House version) for Ireland, Belgium and Turkey.

Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) and Albert Gore (D Tenn.) filed minority views. They said that American production of sugar was highly subsidized in order to make it possible for U.S. sugar growers to survive in the face of low-cost Caribbean competition, but foreign producers were then also granted the subsidized American price. "If bananas were grown on Pike's Peak, and if the American Government subsidized the domestic producers in order to make it profitable and if we then, in turn, paid the producers of bananas in the Caribbean this same price, we would have almost an identical analogy to the sugar program," they said. They favored imposition of a "recapture" fee in imports.

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate Oct. 20 by a 69-16 roll-call vote passed HR 11135, amended. (For voting, see chart p. 1079)

Prior to passage, the Senate by a 38-43 roll-call vote rejected an amendment by J. W. Fulbright (D Ark.) to remove statutory foreign quotas. The Senate also by a 23-62 roll-call vote rejected an amendment by Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) to provide for import fees on sugar from non-Western Hemisphere nations and from the British and French West Indies. Also rejected, 25-57, was a Eugene J. McCarthy (D Minn.) amendment to use 1960-64 as base years in determining foreign quotas.

During the two days' debate the Senate adopted amendments fully restoring the Malagasy Republic's quota and partially restoring quotas for Bolivia and Honduras. Quotas for all three were included in the House version but had been deleted by the Senate Finance Committee. (See p. 147 for individual country quotas) The bill was otherwise the same as reported by the Senate Finance Committee (see above).

Majority Whip Russell B. Long (D La.) Oct. 20 described the procedure used by the Finance Committee in assigning quotas. "We agreed to work from the Administration's formula as our starting point. So we went down through that formula on a country-by-country basis, and asked ourselves, 'Which countries does this formula reward too much? To which countries is it giving too much benefit?'" Long said the Committee upheld Administration requests in 23 cases and reduced Administration requests for 10 countries. He said that in several instances figures were set higher than Administration requests. The House had altered every Administration request.

DEBATE ON AMENDMENTS

Much of the floor debate centered on Douglas' amendment to add an import fee on sugar coming from certain countries. The amendment would have imposed an import fee on sugar from all non-Western Hemisphere nations (except the Philippines) plus the British and French West Indies. The fee would have been the greater of (1) the difference between the high U.S. sugar price and the world sugar price adjusted for freight, insurance and customs duties or (2) the difference between the U.S. sugar price and the world market price during the 15-year period preceding the year of importation adjusted for freight, insurance and customs duties. All import fees to be collected were earmarked for the Alliance for Progress.

Douglas said the fee would equal about 1.5 cents a pound (based upon existing prices) and would net about $18 million a year. Douglas said the fee was just because profits realized by countries selling sugar in the inflated U.S. market went to a few large producers and did not benefit the common people. He noted that earlier in the year both the Administration and the Agriculture Department had favored an import fee to apply to all countries. President Johnson Aug. 17 told Latin American countries he had decided not to support the import fee. "I believe that what happened was that Thomas Mann became Under Secretary of State and he has always been opposed to the plan," Douglas said.

Long said the import fee in effect in 1963-64 was "extremely unpopular." He said "The countries felt we were asking them to sell their sugar below the cost of production." Long said the world price (2.2 cents a pound) was a "myth, a phony, and a fraud." He said it represented the price of sugar "no one needs."

Fulbright said the section of the bill allocating foreign quotas should be eliminated because "this method of handling foreign allocations is bad for our foreign relations.... Foreign countries argue that they now have the impression that in order to prevail in the obtaining of quotas, they must employ high-powered lobbyists." Fulbright said he felt the Aministration should be given time to work out "a permanent system for the allocation of quotas."

Frank J. Lausche (D Ohio) said Malagasy Republic's quota should be restored because the country had backed U.S. policy consistently since it obtained independence in 1960. He also noted that the U.S. established a major NASA tracking station on the island country in the Indian Ocean. Lausche said the country shipped the U.S. sugar during the 1963-64 shortage even though it had not previously exported sugar to the U.S.

Wayne Morse (D Ore.) said quotas for Honduras and Bolivia should be partially restored because to leave them out of the bill entirely "would have a highly detrimental effect on our relationships with" them. He said he had spoken with officials of the two countries and they were "deeply distressed."

There were no amendments on the domestic quotas; all those offering amendments to change foreign quotas were careful to state that they endorsed the domestic increases.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Oct. 19 -- Frank J. Lausche (D Ohio) -- Grant the Malagasy Republic a quota of 7,492 tons. Voice.

Oct. 20 -- Wayne Morse (D Ore.) -- Grant Honduras and Bolivia quotas of 1,000 tons each. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Oct. 20 -- Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) -- Impose an import fee upon sugar coming from all non-Western Hemisphere nations (except the Philippines) and on sugar from the British and French West Indies. Roll-call vote, 23-62.

Eugene J. McCarthy (D Minn.) -- Revise basis for determining import quotas by using the years 1960-64 as a standard. Roll call, 25-57.

J.W. Fulbright (D Ark.) -- Delete section setting foreign quotas, leaving the establishment of such quotas up to the Administration in 1966. Roll call, 38-43.

Morse -- Reduce the quota of South Africa from 66,580 tons to 10,000 tons. Voice.

Conference

REPORT. The conference report (H Rept 1209) on HR 11135 was filed Oct. 22.

House-Senate conferees adjusted differences in foreign quotas approved by the two bodies. In most cases, the House prevailed. (See table, p. 147)

Conferees also approved extension of import quotas through Dec. 31, 1971, as provided in the House bill. The Senate had approved quotas for 1966 and 1967 only. Conferees split the difference on Cuba's permanent quota (currently suspended). The final bill set Cuba's quota at 50 percent of the foreign total excluding the Philippines (House: 44.25 percent; Senate: 57.77).

Conferees approved a Senate provision requiring every foreign country with a quota (except the Philippines) to give assurance to the Secretary of Agriculture that it would fill its quota. The House bill contained no similar provision. Conferees further wrote into the bill provisions for a national reserve of 25,000 tons of the beet quota and 16,000 tons of the mainland cane quota. The House bill had contained 25,000 ton reserves for both beet and cane sugar while the Senate version had specified a 25,000 ton reserve for beets and no reserve for cane. Conferees also adopted a House provision prohibiting the establishment of a quota for a country for any year if, during the 24-month period ending June 30 of the preceding year, it had been a net importer of sugar. The conference version, however, specifically exempted Ireland, Bolivia, Honduras and the Bahama Islands from this provision.

In their report, the conferees said it was their intention that special preference should be given Bolivia, Venezuela and the Dominican Republic (if political conditions there warranted it) in reassigning amounts resulting when countries could not fulfill their quotas.

ACTION. The House and Senate Oct. 22 adopted the conference report on HR 11135.

House approval came on a 174-88 roll-call vote and Senate action was by a 41-10 roll-call vote following a 38-11 roll call which did not stand because of lack of a quorum. HR 11135 was the last obstacle to adjournment and both chambers adjourned shortly after taking final action on the measure. (For voting, see charts p. 1022, 1080)

Chairman Harold D. Cooley (D N.C.) of the House Agriculture Committee defended the value of a tightly controlled market and artificially high U.S. prices. He said that "without a sugar program, the domestic producer could not survive. They would face bankruptcy because they cannot possibly compete with foreign producing areas, with low-cost production and low labor costs." Cooley said the conference agreement was a "complete vindication of the House Committee on Agriculture" and "a complete vindication of the House of Representatives."

Rep. Paul Findley (R Ill.), a critic of the House's action on the sugar bill, said, "The powerful vested interests of the sugar industry have clearly overwhelmed the broader public interest."

Sen. Wallace F. Bennett (R Utah), a member of the House-Senate conference committee, said the Senate yielded to the House on the length of the extension of foreign quotas "with the understanding that the question involved the security of the refiners operating on the Atlantic coast." He said the refiners "felt that they were entitled to the secure knowledge that they would have a firm supply of sugar for this length of time."

REVIEW OF BUDGET ESTIMATES, APPROPRIATIONS ACTIONS

President Johnson Jan. 25 sent Congress the Government's Budget for fiscal 1966, in which he stressed health, education and welfare spending and de-emphasized defense outlays. By the end of the year, however, the increasing U.S. commitment to the war in Viet Nam required the Johnson Administration to substantially revise its estimates of spending for national defense during fiscal 1966. The war and other developments during 1965 pushed administrative-budget spending above $100 billion for the first time in history. (For text of message see p. 1351)

Congress during 1965 acted on 17 appropriation bills giving the Executive Branch, legislative offices and other Government agencies authority to spend $107,037,566,896, $2.4 billion below the requested amounts.

BUDGET SUBMITTED

The Budget Mr. Johnson sent to Congress Jan. 25 estimated that federal administrative-budget spending during fiscal 1966 would total $99.7 billion with a deficit of $5.3 billion. In his message, Mr. Johnson emphasized that increased expenditures for health, labor, housing and other welfare programs were the primary cause of the $2.2 billion increase in administrative budget outlays between fiscal 1965 (as estimated at that time) and fiscal 1966. He said that spending in these areas would increase by $3.6 billion, while outlays in other areas would produce a net decline of $1.4 billion. The emphasis on welfare spending was in contrast to the Budgets presented by President Kennedy. Mr. Kennedy had stressed the importance of increased defense outlays in pushing up total spending and played down over-all welfare spending.

There also was a noticeable contrast between the tone of President Johnson's first Budget Message, in January 1964, and the message sent to Congress Jan. 25. In the first message, the President had emphasized the importance of controlling federal expenditures. He had stressed that spending "in and of itself is neither bad nor good," and that "an austere budget need not and should not be a standstill budget." (1964 Almanac p. 865)

The fiscal 1966 Budget Message stressed the importance of Government activity and hinted at future spending trends. Mr. Johnson said the Budget "begins to grasp the opportunities of the Great Society." He also said: "It is evident that unless defense needs should decline substantially, Government expenditures will continue to rise over the long run. At the same time, we have good reason to expect that Government expenditures in the years ahead will grow more slowly than the gross national product, so that the ratio of federal spending to our total output will continue to decline."

The President said the fiscal policies represented by the Budget "are carefully designed to promote continued economic expansion...." This and other statements in the message came nearer than previous messages to an open expression of the view, held by many professional economists, that budget policy should be framed to meet broad-based national economic goals rather than merely to provide for government activities.

BUDGET REVISIONS

Fiscal 1965. The actual budget expenditures for fiscal 1965 were little changed from the estimates presented in Mr. Johnson's Jan. 25 Budget Message. The President estimated administrative budget outlays of $97.5 billion; the final figure was $96.5. Government figures released in January 1966 showed that final administrative budget spending for fiscal 1965 would have been $96.4 billion if "special Viet Nam costs" had been excluded from the actual total. According to these figures, the increased U.S. commitment in Southeast Asia during calendar 1965 had little effect on fiscal 1965 spending.

Fiscal 1966. Between January 1965, when Mr. Johnson submitted his fiscal 1966 Budget, and January 1966, there were substantial revisions in estimated spending for that fiscal year. (See table below)

Fiscal 1966 administrative budget expenditures were estimated in early 1966 to be $6.7 billion higher than had been estimated 12 months earlier. This was in large part -- $4.7 billion -- due to increased Viet Nam costs. Thus, the swift buildup of U.S. forces in Viet Nam in 1965 began to be reflected noticeably in the fiscal 1966 Budget. The $6.7 billion January-to-January spending increase also reflected a $2 billion rise in outlays for other than defense activities of the Government.

The major changes in the fiscal 1966 Budget were described by Government officials late in 1965 as follows:

- Defense Department spending originally was estimated at $49 billion, including military assistance to other nations. By January 1966, this figure was revised to $54.2 billion.
- Military and civilian pay raises approved by Congress in 1965 were far larger than the Administration had budgeted for. Officials said the military pay raise proposed by the Administration would have cost $240 million in 1966 and the civilian pay increase, $200 million, compared to the actual cost under the legislation enacted of $875 million and $480 million respectively.
- Farm costs in fiscal 1966 were expected to increase about $450 million above the original estimate of $3.9 billion due to higher output requiring bigger price support payments.
- Space expenditures were expected to rise from the original $5.1 billion estimate to $5.6 billion because contractors were finishing work and being paid ahead of schedule.
- Veterans' pensions and other compensation costs were expected to increase this part of the Budget by $500 million above the original $4.6 billion estimate.
- Interest on the national debt was estimated at $12 billion compared to the original $11.6 billion as money conditions tightened.

The Government officials releasing these figures also said that expected savings of $500 million would occur in all other federal programs.

Economic Stimulus from Budget. During calendar 1965, the federal Budget and federal fiscal policies continued to act as a stimulus to the nation's economy. This was seen in the performance of the national income accounts budget, which is regarded by economists as the most useful set of figures for studying the impact of federal activities on the economy. It includes all transactions, including those of the trust funds, directly affecting current income and production. In the first half of 1965, the income accounts budget moved into balance and showed a surplus of $3-1/2 billion, according to the Council of Economic Advisers. This resulted, the Council said, as federal expenditures "grew very modestly in 1964 and early 1965...." But in the second half of 1965, the Council said, the budget swung into a $2-1/2 billion deficit as a result of "several important deliberate stimulative measures plus the unforeseen rise in defense spending." Among the factors influencing the switch were a federal excise tax reduction, an increase in Social Security payments retroactive to Jan. 1, 1965, but paid in September, the last step of a federal income tax cut provided by 1964 legislation and an "unexpectedly strong" rise in federal purchases. Together, these factors produced a net fiscal stimulus of about $7 billion (at an annual rate) in the second half of 1965, according to the Council. In addition, the stimulus was reflected in the deficits recorded for the administrative and consolidated cash budgets.

In spite of the increased Government stimulus to the economy in the second half of 1965, officials contended that inflation would not result. In late November, Secretary of the Treasury Henry H. Fowler said that the revised Budget estimates (see above) "don't imply any major inflationary threat stemming from the increased expenditures and the higher deficit, although the situation obviously calls for careful watching."

New Budgeting Method. President Johnson Aug. 25 said he had directed heads of federal agencies to introduce what he called a "revolutionary system" of preparing the federal Budget. The system, called "planning-programing-budgeting system," was described as an extension of the "cost-effectiveness" budgeting system used in the Defense Department and in a few other Government agencies. The new system was intended to permit agencies to better determine goals and objectives and alternate methods of achieving them, to measure the anticipated results of each dollar spent under each alternative and to do this throughout a year (rather than in just a few months in the fall when the Budget is being prepared) and for a period of five years at a time. Government agencies were instructed by the Budget Bureau in March 1965 to begin establishing the new system. The system reportedly was to be in effect for preparation of the fiscal 1968 Budget in the fall of calendar 1966.

New Budget Director. President Johnson April 20 announced the appointment of Charles L. Schultze as Director of the Bureau of the Budget. Schultze was sworn in June 1, replacing Kermit Gordon, who had held the post since Dec. 28, 1962. Schultze was an assistant director of the Bureau from 1962 until his resignation early in 1965 to return to teaching. Gordon left to become vice president of Brookings Institute in Washington, D.C.

APPROPRIATIONS

Congress in 1965 enacted appropriations totaling $107,037,566,896. In combination with permanent appropriations (mostly for interest on the national debt) estimated at $12.3 billion, total appropriations during the session came to $119,307,566,896. It was the fourth consecutive year in which appropriations exceeded $100 billion. (See table p. 150)

The total was distributed among fiscal years as follows: fiscal 1965, $5.6 billion (including some carried in a fiscal 1966 bill); fiscal 1966, $112.8 billion; fiscal 1967, $926 million (advance funding for airport, mass transit and urban renewal grants).

The $119.3 billion total was about $13.2 billion larger than the amount appropriated during 1964. House Appropriations Committee figures indicated that this increase was distributed among numerous programs and agencies, including the following major ones: education, $1.3 billion; welfare, $700 million; health, $400 million; anti-poverty, $700 million; international funds, $1.7 billion; Commodity Credit Corp. (farm price supports), $2.3 billion; urban renewal grants (including advance funding), $1.5 billion; housing, $600 million.

In terms of fiscal years, the $112.8 billion appropriated during the session for fiscal 1966 was about $3.7 billion larger than the final appropriations for fiscal 1965 (including supplementals). These totals included the permanent appropriations. By far the largest fiscal 1965 to 1966 increase for an agency went to the Department of Health, Education and Welfare -- $2.1 billion. Other highlights of appropriations action included: special Viet Nam appropriations of $2.4 billion ($700 million supplemental for fiscal 1965, page 180, and $2.7 billion for 1966, page 168); elimination of backdoor financing for the urban renewal program (page 154); and denial of funds for two major Great Society programs, rent supplements and Teacher Corps (page 182).

Mahon's Remarks on Spending. At the end of the session, Rep. George H. Mahon (D Texas), chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, said that the continually increasing appropriations appeared to be inevitable and had met with little public resistance. "Increased Government spending is a phenomenon so predictable as to constitute a third dimension of the law of inevitability," Mahon said. "It is a relentless thing, reflecting the relentless growth -- for better or for the worse -- of centralized government in response to the demands of a majority of the people.... There is no groundswell of sentiment for fiscal restraint from across the country -- certainly I have not seen strong indications of it." He noted that many of the bills for new or expanded programs (such as housing, medicare, poverty, education, economic development) authorized more appropriations than the Administration had requested. He also noted that "big budgets are a political fact of life. And big spending is not inherently bad; much of it is essential." He added, however, that the nation had an "abundance of problems... (but) not, unfortunately...an overabundance of money."

VA, NASA GET TOP FUNDS IN INDEPENDENT OFFICES BILL

HR 7997 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 320) May 6, 1965.

- Passed, amended, by the House by voice vote May 11.
- Reported, amended, by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 384) June 30.
- Passed, amended, by the Senate by an 84-2 roll-call vote July 13. (See p. 1058)
- Conference report (H Rept 727) agreed to by voice votes of the House and Senate Aug. 5.

PL 89-128 -- Signed into law Aug. 16.

HR 7997 appropriated $14,246,167,800 in fiscal 1966 for 16 independent agencies, three small agencies in the Executive Office of the President, the General Accounting Office in the Legislative Branch, the President's disaster relief fund and civil defense. The total included $27 million in indefinite appropriations, in the form of authority for the General Services Administration to spend funds obtained through the sale of stockpiled materials and certain other items.

The final sum was $319,855,200 less than the Administration's final request, $136,259,800 more than the amount carried in the House version of the bill, $53,730,180 less than the amount in the Senate version, and $318.9 million more than appropriated for the previous fiscal year. The largest appropriations in the final bill were $5,688,405,600 for the Veterans Administration and $5,175,000,000 for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

HR 7997 contained a large cut below the Administration request for civil defense. The final bill provided $106,780,000 for civil defense purposes while the Administration had requested $193,900,000. Most of the cut came when an Administration request for $114,700,000 for civil defense research, shelter survey and marking was reduced to $42,700,000 by Congress. The bill prohibited construction of fallout shelters except in new federal buildings built by the GSA.

The final version of HR 7997 forbade the Urban Renewal Administration to make urban renewal grant commitments unless funds for the grants had first been provided in appropriations bills, thus eliminating the agency's authority to enter into contracts which obligated funds prior to their actual appropriation by Congress (the contract authorization method of financing).

The urban renewal program was one of the few remaining Government programs which still used contract authorization financing. Similar financing for numerous other activities had been eliminated over a period of several years. Contract authorizations were frequently criticized by Congressmen in the past as a form of "backdoor spending" which prevented Congressional supervision and control of programs.

The new requirements for urban renewal grants were adopted by the House Appropriations Committee, deleted by the Senate Appropriations Committee, and restored by the conferees. In Senate discussion of the conference report, Sen. Joseph S. Clark (D Pa.) called the change in law a "gross abuse of the legislative process" and contended that without contract authorization financing, the urban renewal program would come to a "standstill" in more than 400 cities.

In order to carry out the transition from a contract authorization system to a prior-appropriations system of financing, the final version of HR 7997 appropriated $438,675,000 for the Urban Renewal Administration (a part of the Housing and Home Finance Agency). Of the total, $13,175,000 was earmarked for administrative expenses, and $331 million to pay off obligations under contract authorizations incurred earlier. The remaining $94.5 million was to be used for urban renewal grants in the early part of fiscal 1966, and would use up the remaining unused grant authorizations for the urban renewal program previously voted by Congress and still available at the time HR 7997 was passed.

Subsequently, after a new authorization bill (HR 7984 -- PL 89-117) was passed by Congress, providing another $2.9 billion in authorizations for urban renewal grants over the next four years, additional appropriations of $675,570,000 for fiscal 1966 and $725 million for fiscal 1967 were provided for the urban renewal grant program in a separate measure, the supplemental funds bill (HR 11588 -- PL 89-309). (See stories, p. 358, 182)

PROVISIONS -- As signed by the President, HR 7997 appropriated:

National Aeronautics and Space Council	$ 525,000
Office of Emergency Planning	10,600,000
Office of Science and Technology	1,070,000
President's disaster relief funds	55,000,000
Civil Defense, Defense Department	106,780,000
Civil Aeronautics Board	91,967,750
Civil Service Commission	120,670,000
Federal Aviation Agency	714,794,500
Federal Communications Commission	16,992,500
Federal Power Commission	13,230,000
Federal Trade Commission	13,550,000
General Accounting Office	46,900,000
General Services Administration	549,678,250
Housing and Home Finance Agency	1,038,861,200
Interstate Commerce Commission	26,915,000
National Aeronautics and Space Administration	5,175,000,000
National Capital Housing Authority	37,000
National Science Foundation	479,999,000
Renegotiation Board	2,500,000
Securities and Exchange Commission	16,442,000
Selective Service System	49,250,000
Veterans Administration	5,688,405,600
TOTAL	$14,219,167,800
Indefinite Appropriations, GSA	27,000,000
GRAND TOTAL	$14,246,167,800

The bill also:

Prohibited use of funds for fallout shelter construction, except for work on new public buildings during fiscal 1966 that were under GSA jurisdiction.

Authorized use of funds to distribute currently held supplies to shelters, but prohibited expenditures to acquire additional stocks.

Prohibited use of funds for area medical offices of the Veterans Administration.

Stipulated that funds in the bill could not be used to finance the entire cost of a research project conducted under a federal grant.

Barred further use of contract authorization financing in the urban renewal program.

BACKGROUND -- The Administration submitted to the House requests for $14,531,023,000 for the agencies covered in HR 7997. (Subsequently, the Administration, in a request to the Senate after the House had acted, asked for an additional $35 million for disaster relief funds). The largest increases sought over fiscal 1965 funds were for civil defense, housing agency funds for open-space land grants, urban renewal, the rehabilitation loan fund, urban mass transportation grants and the National Science Foundation. The mass transportation grant request proposed the single biggest increase -- from $60 million in fiscal 1965 to $300 million in fiscal 1966.

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- May 6 reported HR 7997 (H Rept 320), recommending $14,086,408,000. Of the $444,615,000 cut by the Committee from the Administration request, the major reductions were: $104,710,000 from the Defense Department civil defense funds request; $16,166,000 from the Federal Aviation Agency; $76,639,000 from the General Services Administration; $57,740,000 from the Housing and Home Finance Agency; $100 million from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration; $50 million from the National Science Foundation; and $17,431,000 from the Veterans Administration.

The Committee criticized operating inefficiency in many of the agencies and urged that every agency review "excessive" expenditures for travel and printing. The report said that generally 15 percent had been cut from budget requests for these areas, unless the sums requested already reflected reductions from the previous year.

On specific items the Committee took these actions:

Civil Defense, Department of Defense. The Committee recommended $89,190,000 for civil defense purposes, a reduction of $104,710,000 under the request. The report said the amount provided brought total appropriations for civil defense to $1,331,227,000 since inception of the program in 1951. The over-all reduction was due largely to an $84.5 million cut in the $114.7 million requested for civil defense research and to step up fallout shelter surveys, marking and stocking. The Committee provided $30.2 million for these purposes, the same amount provided for fiscal 1965. (President Johnson in his fiscal 1966 Budget did not renew the request that he and President Kennedy made for legislation to authorize a nationwide fallout construction program).

CAB, Helicopter Subsidies. The report said the Civil Aeronautics Board was "top heavy in its legal staff." It reduced funds for that area by $107,000 below the existing level. For subsidy payments to air carriers, the Committee recommended $80 million, a $3.5 million cut in the request. The Committee denied the entire $2.1 million requested for subsidies for helicopter operations. The report said federal subsidies should not be available for "inefficient operating expenses" or for "adventures into non-transport speculations." The Johnson Administration proposed to eliminate the helicopter subsidy program at the end of calendar 1965. President Johnson's fiscal 1966 Budget requested the $2.1 million appropriation to carry the program through Dec. 31.

Federal Communications Commission. For FCC salaries and expenses, the Committee reduced the request by $594,000, providing $16.9 million. The report said FCC executive direction costs were "too high."

General Services Administration. The Committee recommended $523,913,000 in direct appropriations for the GSA, a reduction of $76,639,000 in the Budget requests. Included was $105,577,000 for construction or major alteration of 31 public buildings and for acquisition of one building by purchase. The amount was $78,174,000 below the requests. Funds were approved for all projects proposed except a courthouse and federal office building in Dallas, Texas, and a new FBI building in the District of Columbia. The report said that construction of the FBI building was not possible before June 1966 and that the plans showed a space efficiency ratio of 68.8 percent, which "is much too low."

For the GSA public buildings repair program, the Committee recommended $90 million, an increase of $10.4 million above the amount requested and the same appropriation as provided in 1965. It urged the GSA to reduce the "backlog of needed repairs and improvements." The Committee urged the GSA "to go slow" in demolishing temporary buildings in the District of Columbia because of the space shortage it was creating.

The Committee recommended $50,000 for continued payment of Mrs. John F. Kennedy's staff expenses, and noted that "a need still exists for such assistance in answering several hundred letters daily."

Housing and Home Finance Agency. The report noted the total $1,016,195,000 recommended by the Committee for the HHFA represented a $400,310,600 increase over 1965 appropriations, due to increased funding for the Urban Renewal Administration in 1966 and for increased urban mass transportation grants. The recommendation was $57,740,000 under Budget requests. Major actions in this area included:

Urban Planning Grants. The Committee recommended $18,675,000 for the program -- a $16,325,000 cut from the request -- and noted the recommended funds would exhaust the present balance of authorized appropriations for the program: the 1964 Housing Act authorized $30 million for planning grants, $11,325,000 of which was appropriated under the 1964 Supplemental Appropriations Act for fiscal 1965. (1964 Almanac p. 175)

Training Grants and Fellowships. The Committee denied any funds -- $10,145,000 was requested -- to begin a program of matching grants to states to train state and local employees in community development activities. The report stated the program "opens a Pandora's box as far as training state, city and county employees is concerned, which can hardly be justified in view of the broad general education programs recently approved by Congress." Funds for such a program were also denied in the 1964 and 1965 Supplemental Appropriations Acts for Fiscal 1965. (1964 Almanac p. 175; this volume p. 227)

Open Space Land Grants. The Committee approved $20 million of the $60.5 million requested, most of the cut representing requests requiring authorization. The funds were for grants to states and local public agencies for the acquisition of land in urban areas for parks, recreation and similar purposes.

Urban Renewal Administration. The Committee recommended $438,675,000 (the Administration had requested $331 million for liquidation of contracts), but said it was "greatly concerned over the lack of Congressional control" over the urban renewal program. The Committee recommended language to require that funds for all new urban renewal grants be provided in appropriation bills in advance of the making of commitments.

In its report, the Committee said that Congress "had lost control over the expenditure of $4,725,000,000 by granting the right to make binding contracts before money is appropriated." It said that the General Accounting Office reports and "other publications" had made "valid criticisms" of the urban renewal program. It said the change in financing was "designed to reduce future criticism while there is still time.... (The Committee) is solidly behind the program." Of the total recommended, $331 million was to liquidate contracts for urban renewal grants incurred in prior years, $94.5 million was for estimated new grants and the balance was for administrative expenses.

Urban Mass Transportation. The Committee recommended $240 million -- a $60 million cut in the request -- for grants, $120 million for fiscal 1966 and an equal amount for advance funding for fiscal 1967. The recommendation was $180 million above fiscal 1965 appropriations. The Committee cut in half, to $5 million, the request for mass transit loan funds.

Housing for the Elderly or the Handicapped. The Committee noted that no additional funds were requested or recommended for the program's revolving fund because legislation was pending "to make the program more responsive to middle- and lower-middle income needs."

Federal Housing Administration. The Committee said the cost of FHA "housekeeping activities" was high and should be reduced. The agency, the report said, "has grown by leaps and bounds -- far greater than the workload warrants." The Committee also urged that more attention be paid to selling acquired properties, particularly where Government investment is "substantial," before their value declines.

National Aeronautics and Space Administration. The Committee recommended $5,160,000,000 in NASA funds, a cut of $100 million in the amount requested and $90 million under the fiscal 1965 level. The total recommended included $4,521,000,000 for research and development, a reduction of $54.9 million in the request and $157,406,000 above fiscal 1965. It also included $60 million for construction of facilities, a cut of $14.7 million under the request and $202,880,500 under fiscal 1965. The Committee noted that major construction funding reached its peak in 1963 and 1964 "and has shown a rapid decline since that time as requirements for major facilities are fulfilled." The Committee said that no part of the reduction in the Budget request could apply to the Electronics Research Center "if and when it is approved." (See story p. 712)

National Science Foundation. While cutting the request by $50 million -- to $480 million -- the Committee specified that none of the reduction should be applied to the program "to develop centers of excellence in science and engineering," a program initiated in fiscal 1964. The Committee recommended language to prevent more than 10 percent of the fellowships from being awarded to residents of any one state.

Securities and Exchange Commission. The report stated that while the Commission had grown "it has not utilized its personnel properly. There are too many chiefs and not enough Indians." The Committee recommended $16,442,000 -- $958,000 less than the request -- which included $1 million for new quarters.

Veterans Administration. The Committee recommended a total of $5,663,192,000 in appropriations for the Veterans Administration. The total represented an increase of $22,445,000 over fiscal 1965 appropriations and a reduction of $17,431,000 in the amount requested. The report noted the bill specifically precluded use of funds for area or regional medical offices.

The Committee approved the full request of $1,177,417,000 for medical care and said that no funds were recommended for VA facilities which the Administration had proposed closing.

FLOOR ACTION

The House May 11 passed HR 7997 by voice vote, amended, providing $14,109,908,000.

The House version included $23.5 million more for the VA than recommended by the Appropriations Committee. The additional funds (not requested by the Administration) were designed to pay for the continued operation of certain VA hospitals and regional offices which the Administration had proposed closing and which many Congressmen wanted kept open. The amendment to add the funds was offered by Olin E. Teague (D Texas), chairman of the Veterans' Affairs Committee, and was accepted by voice vote.

Teague said that the funds were the amount needed to operate the disputed VA facilities during fiscal 1966, and should be made available pending a final decision on whether to close some or all the facilities. Teague said that if the additional funds were not appropriated there would be no money to keep the facilities open beyond June 30. (For details on VA closing dispute and its outcome, see p. 395.)

The House rejected by a 32-50 standing vote an amendment by Eugene J. Keogh (D N.Y.) to add $2.1 million for payments of commercial helicopter subsidies from July 1 through Dec. 31, 1965. The Administration, proposing the elimination of the subsidy program at the end of calendar year 1965, had requested the $2.1 million for the six-month period, but it had been denied by the Appropriations Committee. The subsidized lines were in New York City, Chicago and Los Angeles. Representatives from those areas strongly urged adoption of the amendment.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House HR 7997 appropriated:

National Aeronautics and Space Council	$ 525,000
Office of Emergency Planning	8,875,000
Office of Science and Technology	1,070,000
President's disaster relief funds	20,000,000

GRAND TOTAL	$14,109,908,000

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

May 11 -- Charles Raper Jonas (R N.C.) -- Delete wording which authorized funds appropriated for Washington National Airport to be used for acquisition of land at the airport. Voice vote.

Olin E. Teague (D Texas) -- Provide an additional $23.5 million for the Veterans Administration for the continued operation of regional offices and hospitals which the Administration proposed to close. Voice.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

May 11 -- Eugene J. Keogh (D N.Y.) -- Provide an additional $2,100,000 for fiscal 1966 for subsidy payments to helicopter operations. Standing vote, 32-50.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- June 30 reported HR 7997 (S Rept 384), recommending $14,291,450,980 -- $274,572,020 less than a revised Administration request and $181,542,980 more than the House figure. (Prior to the Committee's action, the Administration increased its request for disaster relief by $35 million over the amount it had initially sought from the House, thus raising its final, over-all request to $14,566,023,000).

Major increases went to the Office of Emergency Planning, disaster relief, civil defense, the Public Health Service, the Federal Aviation Agency, the General Services Administration, NASA and the VA. The Committee went almost $60 million over Administration requests for five items, granting: $25 million more than the expanded request for the President's disaster relief fund, $12.5 million over the requested grants-in-aid for airports; $5.4 million extra for the GSA public buildings repair program; and an additional $2,468,800 for VA operating expenses and $14,539,000 for VA medical care.

The Committee denied proposed agency contributions totaling $245,920 for the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity.

On other specific items the Committee made these changes in the House bill:

Disaster Relief. The report noted that a record number of natural disasters occurred in 1964, affecting over 55 million Americans in 30 states and territories. For fiscal 1965, the report said, over $86 million had been allocated and the figure was "still climbing." Since the President's May 27 request for an additional $35 million to meet these disasters, the report said, new floods had occurred in Colorado, Kansas and New Mexico. The Committee increased the revised request by $25 million, to a total of $80 million to meet the "critical situation."

Civil Defense, Department of Defense. The Committee recommended $124,370,000 for civil defense purposes, $69,530,000 less than the request but an increase of $35,180,000 over the House allowance. The report said $10,180,000 of the increase would go for civil defense operations and $25 million for "strengthening" shelter programs, which received a total of $55,200,000. The Committee authorized expenditures for "stocking" shelters, and deleted a House provision which would preclude use of funds for construction of fallout shelters.

Public Health Service, HEW Department. The Committee restored funds, denied by the House, for emergency -- civil defense -- health activities by the Public Health Service, in order to continue the medical stockpile program. The Committee approved $2 million of the $10,380,000 requested.

Civil Aeronautics Board. The Committee said it was "concerned" over air carriers engaging in non-carrier activities (i.e., helicopter operations) and urged the CAB to supervise these activities "vigorously" to ensure that such activities were not being subsidized.

The Committee added $785,000 to the $80 million approved by the House for air carrier subsidies and earmarked this for limited helicopter operations. The report said the funds would "allow Los Angeles Airways to phase out of subsidy operations by Jan. 1, 1966." (For Fact Sheet on helicopter subsidies, see this volume p. 907)

Federal Aviation Agency. The Committee restored a net $8,871,280 for FAA operations, approving $551,-471,280 -- a cut of $2,028,820 in requests. The Committee said it would hold FAA to its assurances that no closure of flight service stations was contemplated in the near future.

For fiscal 1967 grants-in-aid for airports, the Committee recommended $75 million, an increase of $12.5 million over the Budget and House figures.

Federal Communications Commission. The Committee urged the FCC to review its open records ruling "in the interest of fairness to all stations regulated by the FCC as well as the general public." (The April 5 ruling, which went into effect May 14, required licensees or license applicants for broadcasting stations to keep their files on communications with the FCC open for inspection by members of the community in which the station was, or was to be, located. Before the ruling, open files were kept only in the District of Columbia. The FCC Oct. 7 issued a memorandum making certain changes in the earlier ruling.)

General Services Administration. The Committee recommended $592,389,000 in direct appropriations for the GSA, an increase of $68,476,000 over the House figure. The major increase was in appropriations of $175,782,000 for construction of public buildings, which was $70,205,000 over the House allowance. The increases were allocated to a Dallas, Texas, federal building, a new FBI building in Washington, D.C., and fallout protection in these and other projects. The House cut of 10 percent over-all in construction items was changed to 5 percent.

For the GSA building repair program, the Committee cut House-approved funds by $5 million -- to $85 million -- an increase, however, of $5,400,000 over the amount requested. For site acquisition and planning, the Committee reduced the House allowance by $2,549,000 -- to $17,451,000. A cut of $2,476,000 was achieved by deletion of the proposed Patent Office building planned for Howard or Anne Arundel County, Md. The report stated that a new Patent Office building was needed, but there were "many differences of opinion (on a site) among those who would use the building." The Committee recommended that the Commerce Department or a Congressional committee study and make a definite recommendation "at an early date" on the choice of a site.

Housing and Home Finance Agency. The Committee recommended a total of $967,527,400 for the HHFA, representing a reduction of $48,667,600 in the House allowance. The major cut was $94,500,000 from House-approved appropriations for the Urban Renewal Administration. The $344,175,000 appropriated represented an increase over the amount requested by $13,175,000. The Committee deleted the House provision forbidding the use of contract authorizations for all new urban renewal grants. The report said, "Because of the special nature and characteristics of the urban renewal program, it can operate more efficiently" through a four-year contract authority. The annual appropriations process would be "disruptive and harmful" to the program's "forward planning and commitment levels," the Committee was advised.

Other major actions in this area included:

Federal-State Training Program. The Committee agreed with the House in denying appropriations for matching grants to states to train state and local employees in community development activities.

Urban Planning Fellowships. The Committee, like the House, denied funds to begin a new fellowship program authorized by the 1964 Housing Act.

Open Space Land Grants. The Committee restored $5 million, for a total of $25 million, for open space land grants, a cut of $35.5 million in the amount requested, but not yet authorized.

Urban Mass Transportation. The Committee restored $40 million to House-approved funds for urban mass transportation grants, approving $280 million, of which $140 million annually was for fiscal 1966 and 1967.

National Aeronautics and Space Administration. The Committee approved all but $91,000 of the $5,190,-396,200 authorized for NASA, adding $30,305,200 to the House allowance. This was $69,694,800 below the amount initially sought. On R & D funds, the Committee said it was "concerned" that a backup launch vehicle had not been provided for the Surveyor project (designed to test soft landings on the moon). It added $10 million to adapt the Titan 111-C booster to the Surveyor project. (For NASA authorization, see story p. 712)

National Science Foundation. The Committee reduced by $5,400,000 -- to $37,600,000 -- appropriations earmarked for a supplementary training program for secondary school mathematics and science teachers. However, the Committee called the program "very important" and urged the Foundation to "expand" the program's operations.

A House provision which would prevent more than 10 percent of NSF fellowships from being awarded to residents of any one state was deleted and the report urged the Foundation to continue its "more equitable distribution" of grants among states.

Veterans Administration. The Committee increased House appropriations by $5,669,600, to a total of $5,692,-361,600 for the VA. This represented an increase of $11,738,600. The Committee cut to $14,539,000 and $2,-586,000, respectively, sums of $20.5 and $3 million in excess of Administration requests which had been added in a House floor amendment by Rep. Teague. The Teague amendment had provided enough funds to keep open in fiscal 1966 some 11 VA hospitals, four domiciliaries and 16 regional offices that the Administration originally proposed to close as of June 30, 1965. The Administration finally agreed early in June to keep open five of the 11 hospitals, two of the four domiciliaries and 7 or 8 of the regional offices, and the Committee provided the funds sufficient for these.

Other major VA changes included restoration of a $100 million decrease in obligational authority for the direct loan revolving fund.

Research Grants. The Committee deleted a House provision preventing use of funds in the bill to finance the entire cost of a research project conducted under a federal grant.

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate July 13 passed HR 7997 by an 84-2 roll-call vote, carrying $14,299,897,980. (For voting, see chart p. 1058)

The Senate accepted by voice votes floor amendments adding funds to initiate the federal-state training program for city planners authorized in the 1964 Housing Act; to phase out helicopter subsidies in Chicago (the Senate Committee had approved similar funds for Los Angeles, whereas the House had denied any helicopter subsidies); and to build two new post offices.

The helicopter subsidies for Chicago were proposed by Thomas H. Kuchel (R Calif.) on behalf of Minority Leader Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.). The amendment was accepted by the bill's manager, Warren G. Magnuson (D Wash.), in view of the funds already approved for Los Angeles operations and the fact that the only other subsidized helicopter program, serving New York City, had been "taken over by Pan American Airways." William Proxmire (D Wis.), however, criticized the "inequities" involved in federal helicopter subsidies and the industry's demand "to be coddled by Congress and nursed by the taxpayer."

The funds to train city planners, proposed by Joseph S. Clark (D Pa.), had been disapproved by the Independent Offices Subcommittees and the House, Magnuson said, because of the program's "federal-state method of approach." However, Magnuson conceded that a need for such a program existed. At his suggestion, Clark revised the original request for $10,145,000 to $4 million, which was accepted. Another Clark amendment, to provide $530,000 for fellowships in city planning, was rejected.

Amendments Defeated. The Senate also rejected, by a 16-61 roll-call vote, an amendment by Proxmire to reduce NASA appropriations by 5 percent; and, by a 13-72 roll-call vote, an amendment by Stephen M. Young (D Ohio) to reduce Defense Department civil defense funds for operations and shelters from $124,370,000 to the House figure of $89,190,000.

Proxmire's amendment would have reduced NASA appropriations by $259,515,260. He called the space effort "one program in which there has been a lot of waste" and said NASA was "the prime example" of an agency "whose expenditures Congress has difficulty in controlling, let alone fully understanding." Proxmire contended NASA activities were consuming "too great a proportion of our national resources...monetary, material and manpower resources." Wayne Morse (D Ore.) described the space program as "the most elaborate, costly and uneconomical venture of our lifetime, all for the purpose of gratifying our national ego."

The amendment was strongly opposed by John Stennis (D Miss.), who called the proposed cut a "lick in the dark" and argued that the United States could not, in terms of national security, afford to let "anyone else become superior" to it in space.

Young justified his amendment to return civil defense appropriations to the House figure on grounds that the civil defense program was a "boondoggle" and an "unconscionable waste of taxpayers' money" -- arguments he had made for several years. Magnuson, however, said civil defense workers had done "a great job" in recent natural disasters and characterized the existing shelter program as a "barebones program."

CIVIL SERVICE FUND BOOST REJECTED

Also rejected, on a point of order, was an amendment by Sen. Dirksen to add $1,386,800,000 to the bill for accrued Federal Government obligations to the civil service retirement fund. Dirksen said he offered the amendment as a "moral duty" because the sum in the bill -- $67 million -- was "wholly inadequate to meet the Federal Government's responsibility" to provide a contribution equivalent to the percentage deducted from federal employees' salaries. Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.), supporting Dirksen, estimated the unfunded liability of the civil service retirement fund as over $40 billion at the end of fiscal 1965. Magnuson said the problem should be handled by legislation, rather than in an appropriation bill, and was upheld on his point of order against the amendment.

Referring to VA hospitals, Magnuson said that the General Accounting Office had ruled illegal a Budget Bureau proposal to care for Public Health Service beneficiaries (mainly merchant seamen) in VA hospitals. He said the Committee urged that veterans be assigned to Public Health Service hospitals "to maintain optimum caseload" and prevent closures. Magnuson said his statement was inadvertently omitted from the Committee report.

On the vote to pass the bill, Sens. Dirksen and Young alone voted "nay."

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate, HR 7997 appropriated:

National Aeronautics and Space Council	$ 525,000
Office of Emergency Planning	10,750,000
Office of Science and Technology	1,110,000

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

July 12 -- Warren G. Magnuson (D Wash.) -- Appropriate $368,000 for a site for a new post office and federal office building in Houma, La. Voice.

Thomas H. Kuchel (R Calif.) -- Appropriate $385,000 in subsidies for Chicago Helicopter Airways, Inc. Voice.

Gordon Allott (R Colo.) on behalf of Roman L. Hruska (R Neb.) -- Appropriate $792,000 for a site and $2,902,000 for construction of a new post office building in Lincoln, Neb. Voice.

July 13 -- Joseph S. Clark (D Pa.) -- Appropriate $4 million for federal-state training programs in city planning. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

July 12 -- William Proxmire (D Wis.) -- Reduce NASA appropriations by 5 percent. Roll-call vote, 16-61.

July 13 -- Stephen M. Young (D Ohio) -- Reduce Defense Department civil defense funds for research, shelter survey and marking from $124,370,000 to the House figure of $89,190,000. Roll call, 13-72.

Clark -- Appropriate $530,000 for fellowships in city planning and urban studies. Voice.

Conference

REPORT -- Conferees Aug. 4 reported a compromise version of HR 7997 (H Rept 727), recommending $14,246,167,800. On major differences, the conferees took the following actions:

Disaster Relief. Provided $55 million for disaster relief, the amount of the revised Administration request.

Civil Defense, Department of Defense. Provided $106,780,000 for civil defense purposes (request: $193.9 million; House: $89,190,000; Senate: $124,370,000). Earmarked $42.7 million for research, surveys and stocking of shelters (House: $30.2 million; Senate: $55.2 million) and accepted a Senate provision authorizing expenditures for shelter stocking, but stipulated that funds be used only to distribute existing supplies to shelters, not to purchase new supplies. Accepted House language, deleted by the Senate, prohibiting use of funds for construction of shelters, but amended the prohibition to allow expenditures in fiscal 1966 for construction of shelters in new GSA buildings.

Public Health Service, Department of HEW. Agreed to House denial of funds for emergency -- civil defense -- health activities by the Public Health Service (request: $10,380,000; Senate: $2 million).

Civil Aeronautics Board. Agreed to Senate-approved expenditures of $1,170,000 for helicopter services in Los Angeles ($785,000) and Chicago ($385,000) (request: $2.1 million; House: none). Provided a Dec. 31, 1965, cutoff date for all helicopter subsidies. Agreed to the Senate allowance of $81,170,000 for payments to air carriers, including the helicopter subsidies (request: $83.5 million; House $80 million).

Federal Aviation Agency. Provided $714,794,500 for the FAA (House: $700,584,000; Senate: $724,180,280). Earmarked $547,039,000 for FAA operations (House: $542.6 million; Senate: $555,471,280) and $71 million for fiscal 1967 grants-in-aid for airports which was $8.5 million over Budget and House figures and $4 million less than the Senate had approved.

General Services Administration. Provided $549,678,250 in direct appropriations for the GSA (request: $600,552,000; House: $523,913,000; Senate: $596,451,000). The major increase over House-approved funds was in appropriations of $132,303,000 for construction of public buildings, which was $26,726,000 more than the House allowance. The increase went for a Dallas, Texas, federal building and fallout protection in this and other projects. The $132 million final figure was $46,381,000 less than the Senate provided due to deletion in conference of Senate-approved funds for two projects: a post office building in Lincoln, Neb., which the report said had not yet been authorized; and for a new FBI building in the District of Columbia, which the report said would not be ready for construction until June 1966.

For the GSA building repair program, provided $87.5 million (request: $79.6 million; House: $90 million; Senate: $85 million). For site acquisition and planning, provided $18,629,250, which was $1,370,750 less than the Budget and House figures and $18,250 more than the Senate figure. No funds were included for a new Patent Office building "pending further study and recommendation" as proposed by the Senate.

Housing and Home Finance Agency. Provided a total of $1,038,861,200 for the HHFA, a major increase in both House and Senate allowances (request: $1,073,935,000; House: $1,016,195,000; Senate: $971,527,400).

Included in the total was $438,675,000 for the Urban Renewal Administration, the same amount provided by the House and $94.5 million more than the $344,175,000 provided by the Senate. Conferees agreed to a House provision, deleted by the Senate, which forbade the use of contract authorizations for urban renewal grants.

In the report, conferees said they supported the urban renewal program and recognized "its many outstanding benefits." In addition, the report said the conferees anticipated "at an early date" a supplemental request "for the balance of fiscal 1966 and for the entire fiscal year 1967"..."at which time two-year advance funding will be recommended." The conferees said this lead-time would give Congress an opportunity to review the program and give local communities "ample" opportunity for advance planning.

Other major actions in this area included:

Federal-State Training Program. Deleted a Senate provision, added to the bill by a floor amendment appropriating $4 million for matching grants to states to train state and local employees in community development activities (request: $10,145,000; House: none).

Open Space Land Grants. Provided $22.5 million for open space land grants (request: $60.5 million; House: $20 million; Senate: $25 million).

Urban Mass Transportation. Provided $130 million in both fiscal 1966 and 1967 for urban mass transportation grants -- for a total of $260 million (request: $300 million; House $240 million; Senate: $280 million).

National Aeronautics and Space Administration. Appropriated $5,175,000,000 for NASA, all but $15,396,200 of the $5,190,396,200 authorized (request: $5,260,000,000; House: $5,160,000,000; Senate: $5,190,305,200).

National Science Foundation. Agreed to Senate deletion of House language which specified that no more than 10 percent of NSF fellowships could be awarded to residents of any one state. Conferees noted that the NSF had been striving for a "more equitable distribution" of fellowships among states. They urged that fellowships go "not only" to major colleges and universities.

Conferees agreed to the Senate-approved appropriation of $479,999,000 in fiscal 1966 for the NSF (request: $530 million; House: $480 million) and accepted the Senate's earmarking $37.6 million in funds for a supplementary training program for secondary school mathematics and science teachers.

Veterans Administration. Increased Budget and House figures to $5,688,405,600 for the VA (request: $5,680,623,000; House: $5,686,692,000; Senate: $5,692,361,600). The two items exceeding the Budget were medical care and general operating expenses. For medical care, conferees agreed to the Senate allowance of $1,191,956,000, an increase of $14,539,000 over the Budget request, a cut of $5,961,000 in House-approved funds, and the amount needed to continue operation of five hospitals and two domiciliaries saved from closure.

For VA operating expenses, provided $160,238,000, which was an increase of $2,238,000 in the Budget request (House: $160 million; Senate: $160,468,800). The total included funds required to continue operation of eight regional offices that were to have been closed. Conferees agreed to a Senate amendment providing a $100 million decrease in obligational authority for the direct loan revolving fund. In addition, conferees agreed to and amended House language, deleted by the Senate, prohibiting use of funds for VA area medical offices.

Research Grants. Agreed to a House provision preventing use of funds in the bill to finance the entire cost of a research project conducted under a federal grant.

ACTION -- The House and Senate Aug. 5 agreed by voice votes to the conference report.

On the floor, Sen. Joseph S. Clark (D Pa.) criticized the requirement that funds for all new urban renewal grants be provided in appropriations bills prior to the making of grant commitments. He predicted that the urban renewal program would come to a "standstill" in 400 cities without use of the contract authorization method of financing.

In the House, Joe L. Evins (D Tenn.) said the General Accounting Office had criticized the urban renewal program and that the House Appropriations Committee had considered a two-year funding plan as "in line with the proposal to recapture control by the Congress and review the urban renewal program annually rather than through the backdoor spending approach."

Veterans' Certificates

Congress in 1965 enacted legislation (HR 225 -- PL 89-88) authorizing a White House program under which memorial certificates were sent to survivors of deceased veterans. Funds for the program in the Independent Offices Bill (HR 7997) were deleted from the bill on the House floor on a point of order because the authorizing legislation had not been enacted at that time. The program, however, was being continued, with funds from VA general operating expenses.

- Conference report (H Rept 791) agreed to by voice votes of the House Aug. 16 and the Senate Aug. 17.

PL 89-156 -- Signed into law Aug. 31.

HR 7765 appropriated $8,011,331,500 for the Departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare and related agencies in fiscal 1966. Of the total, $7,957,777,500 was for the two Departments; additional funds for the Departments were voted later in the session in two supplemental appropriations bills, bringing the total appropriated in 1965 for their activities to $9,759,224,000. In all, HEW funds increased over $2 billion from fiscal 1965 to fiscal 1966: from $6.986 billion to $9.037 billion. (See stories p. 166, 182)

The total in HR 7765 was $282,482,500 less than the Administration request, $47,297,500 more than the amount provided by the House and $11,770,000 less than the amount voted by the Senate. It was $308,936,500 more than the fiscal 1965 total appropriations for the agencies.

The largest sums in the bill were for manpower development and training, vocational education, higher education facilities construction, impacted areas school aid, National Defense Education Act activities, vocational rehabilitation, hospital construction, sewage works construction, grants to states for public assistance payments, grants for maternal and child welfare, and activities of the National Institutes of Health.

As it traditionally had in the past, Congress provided more than was requested for NIH; for the first time, NIH funds exceeded $1 billion. In recommending the funds for NIH, the Appropriations Committees of both chambers cited the favorable conclusions of a special Presidential committee which had made an independent study of NIH activities. (See below)

The largest single reduction in the President's requests -- $242.1 million from grants to the states for public assistance payments -- was agreed to in both chambers before the bill went to conference. Bill managers warned that because the payments were mandatory, additional funds would have to be appropriated when these ran out. In the general supplemental fiscal 1966 appropriations bill Congress restored part of the cut. (See story p. 182)

The final version of HR 7765 contained a House provision, originally deleted by the Senate, stipulating that federal funds for grant-in-aid research projects could not finance the entire cost of the project. The provision replaced language included in past years that limited the federal payment of indirect costs of a research project to 20 percent of the direct costs. President Kennedy had tried unsuccessfully to increase the limit from 20 to 25 percent. President Johnson requested removal of the limitation entirely. The Senate in effect granted the request; the House and final versions, while eliminating the 20 percent ceiling, required at least a token payment of non-federal funds.

REPORT ON STUDY OF NIH

A special Presidential committee concluded in 1965 that NIH's activities were "essentially sound" and that its budget was, "on the whole, being spent wisely and well in the public interest." It reported that NIH-supported research, which accounted for 40 percent of all biomedical research in the United States, was of "high quality." The committee warned, however, that unless organizational and procedural changes were made in NIH's operations, "substantial problems will arise in the future."

The 13-member committee, appointed by President Johnson in 1964, was composed of scientists, industrialists and educators and was chaired by Dr. Dean E. Wooldridge of the Thompson Ramo Wooldridge electronics firm. The report, "Biomedical Science and Its Administration, A Study of the National Institutes of Health," was made public by the President March 19.

The report said that NIH's "most important organizational need" was in the area of policy and planning. To meet this need, the committee recommended creation of an advisory Policy and Planning Council, to operate at the level of the Director of the Institutes. It also recommended that the autonomy of the separate institutes, such as the National Cancer Institute and the National Heart Institute, be "diminished" and that the authority of the Director be "increased." This re-balancing of authority, the report said, should also occur with respect to the Director's "access" to the "higher councils of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare."

Procedural changes, the committee recommended, should be aimed at enhancing the responsibility and authority of executives of universities conducting research under the auspices of NIH. The report said such changes should include authority for well-managed institutions to become eligible for more funding and authority for university executives to play a larger role in project decisions. "If proper changes are made, a decrease in the red tape harassments that currently annoy many scientific investigators, along with an increase in the quality of institutional accountability for government funds, should be simultaneously achievable," the report said.

The House Appropriations Committee said in reporting HR 7765 that it would "want to hear more next year" about action taken on the recommendations.

PROVISIONS -- As signed by the President, HR 7765 provided funds as follows (figures in parentheses are totals for major agencies):

LABOR DEPARTMENT

Manpower Administration	$ 431,119,000
Labor-Management Services Administration	8,580,000
Bureau of Labor Standards	3,242,500

Railroad Retirement Board	16,558,000
Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service	6,610,000
Interstate Commission on the Potomac River Basin	5,000
Federal Radiation Council	166,000
Subtotal	$ 53,554,000
TOTAL	$7,993,949,500
Indefinite HEW appropriations	17,382,000

In addition, HR 7765:

Prohibited use of funds in the bill for implementation of any provision of the 1964 Economic Opportunity Act.

Stipulated that none of the HEW funds could be used for additional permanent federal positions in the Washington, D.C., area if the new proportion of the total HEW employees in the area to those in other areas would exceed the proportion existing at the end of fiscal 1965 (44 percent).

Stipulated that federal funds could not be used to finance the entire cost of a research project conducted under a federal grant.

BACKGROUND -- In connection with HR 7765, Congress considered Administration requests totaling $8,293,814,000. The total included $588,144,000 for the Labor Department, $7,652,074,000 for HEW, $28,165,000 for the National Labor Relations Board, $2,050,000 for the National Mediation Board, $16,558,000 for the Railroad Retirement Board, $6,652,000 for the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, $5,000 for the Interstate Commission on the Potomac River Basin and $166,000 for the Federal Radiation Council.

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- April 29 reported HR 7765 (H Rept 272), recommending $7,964,034,000 in direct and indefinite fiscal 1966 appropriations. (The $17,382,000 in indefinite appropriations were estimated costs of retired pay of Public Health service officers and St. Elizabeths Hospital expenses.)

Through the report the Committee rebuked the Budget Bureau for many of the cuts it had made in the requests of various agencies. Several of the reductions made by the Committee, it said, were for programs whose authorizations had not yet been renewed or for new programs not yet authorized. These funds, the report said, would be considered in a supplemental bill later in the year.

Acting on the President's request that Congress remove limitations on payments to universities for indirect costs of research grants, the Committee provided instead that federal funds could not finance the entire cost of a research project. The report said "a determination of the extent of federal financial participation might be made on either a project-by-project basis, or on an institutional basis."

Other major actions taken by the Committee:

Health Funds. The Committee increased funds for the National Institutes of Health by $11.7 million, to $1,051,756,000. Lacking "the guidance of an adequate budget submission" for NIH, the report said, the Committee "added funds not requested...for several special new programs where the great need is obvious and where the promise of success is great." Included were increases of $2.5 million for the Heart Institute "to launch an artificial heart development program"; $2 million for the Institute of Arthritis and Metabolic Diseases for perfecting the artificial kidney and making possible its more widespread use; $1,650,000 for the Cancer Institute for an intensified task force program on breast cancer; $2.3 million for the Heart Institute for expansion of a study of drugs and coronary heart disease for which the Budget Bureau had not requested funds -- "one of many examples of completely irresponsible action on the part of the Bureau of the Budget in connection with the budgets for" the HEW and Labor Departments; $2 million for the Cancer Institute for an undergraduate training program in the treatment of cancer which was "budgeted to be discontinued...'for reasons of economy'" but the Committee had "not seen one shred of evidence that the American people want to economize by cutting back on productive programs that advance the fight against cancer;" and $1,250,000 "over the obviously inadequate budget of $1,467,000" for the Division of Computer Research and Technology. All other NIH programs were funded at the requested levels.

Under Public Health Service buildings and facilities, the Committee recommended an unbudgeted $1,670,000 for completion of construction of the Laboratory of Perinatal Physiology in Puerto Rico, for the joint use of the Institute of Neurological Diseases and Blindness and the Institute of Child Health and Human Development.

Because of expiring authorizations, the Committee deleted $8 million for a mass vaccination program and $3 million for domestic migrant agricultural workers' health programs. (For later authorization, see story p. 331)

It also denied a request for language changing the basic Hill-Burton hospital construction law's formula to permit use of a larger portion of hospital construction funds for modernization of existing hospital facilities, and made a corresponding cut in the request for funds for that purpose, leaving $259,089,000 for all hospital construction (request: $303,304,000).

The Committee increased the requests for air and water pollution control activities to provide $1.8 million for demonstrations in acid mine drainage in the Appalachian region and $975,000 for control of mine waste fires in the region, denied in the Second Supplemental Appropriations bill (HR 7091). (See story p. 227)

The Committee increased the request to provide $864,000 "to continue operating the Public Health Service hospitals at Chicago and Memphis," which HEW Jan. 19 had proposed to close. The report said "the saving in this bill if these two hospitals are kept open is $212,000" because compensation payments if they were closed would total $1,076,000. (See Labor Funds, below)

It also provided an unbudgeted $3,250,000 chiefly for training mental retardation personnel and $2 million -- a "conservative" increase -- for kidney disease activities.

In other PHS funds, the Committee provided the full request, $100 million, for waste treatment works construction, and the full requests for tuberculosis control, venereal disease control, nursing services and nurse training activities, health professions educational assistance, public health traineeships, graduate public health training, student loans for the health professions, construction of mental retardation centers and community mental health centers.

The Committee also provided the full request, $1,920,000, for initiation of a Clearing House on Smoking and Health which "will be primarily devoted to dissemination of information and general public education on the health hazards associated with smoking." A similar request was denied by both chambers in 1964. (1964 Almanac p. 175)

For the Food and Drug Administration, the Committee recommended $56,072,000, a cut of $604,000.

Education Funds. The Committee recommended $1,852,939,000 -- $4,378,000 more than the request -- for the Office of Education.

In recommending an increase of $5 million for vocational education, the report said the Budget had included $5 million earmarked for construction of a residential school in the District of Columbia, and the Committee had instead included $10 million for construction of two schools without designating the site of either.

The Committee recommended the full request, $347 million, for operation payments to school districts in federally impacted areas, and provided $50,078,000 -- a cut of $112,000 -- for impacted areas school construction.

The Committee provided the full requests for most other programs including $412,608,000 for National Defense Education Act activities, $641,750,000 for higher education facilities construction, $55 million for grants for public libraries, $21.5 million for education of the handicapped, and $25 million for cooperative research in education.

In a separate category, the Committee cut the request for educational television facilities by $3 million -- to $8,826,000 -- because "at the current rate of progress it appears that at least $3 million will not be needed until fiscal year 1967."

Welfare Funds. The Committee provided $3 billion -- a cut of $242.1 million -- for grants to the states for public assistance payments, saying the cut was "a modest one" in view of the expansion of welfare programs aimed at reducing dependency.

The Committee cut the $10 million requested for juvenile delinquency and youth offenses control to $1,750,000, the total authorized and needed for fiscal 1966.

For grants for maternal and child welfare, the Committee included the full request, $162 million, and as requested in the Budget did not include language from the 1964 bill requiring 50-50 state matching of federal funds for day-care services for children.

Labor Funds. The report said "the Budget presentation for the Department of Labor was a mass of confusion from beginning to end." It said the Budget had "left several items undecided" and had contained a number of "undistributed reductions," and it was "obvious on its face that these were arbitrary reductions to come within a preconceived over-all total rather than amounts determined by careful assessment of program needs."

The Committee provided the full request, $273.5 million, for manpower development and training activities authorized prior to 1965, but said it "expected that the Budget will be revised to take into account the liberalizing features of the recently enacted amendments" in PL 89-15. (See stories p. 810, 166)

The Committee recommended a cut of $10 million -- to $131 million -- for unemployment compensation for federal employees and former servicemen.

It reduced by $1,076,000 -- to $48,530,000 -- the request for employees' compensation claims and expenses, saying that $1,076,000 was "the additional cost to this fund if the" PHS hospitals "in Chicago and Memphis are closed as is proposed...." (See above)

The Committee disallowed a request for $39,280,000 to supplement trust funds available for grants to states for unemployment compensation and employment service administration and suggested that the Department instead submit legislation to increase the limit on expenditures from the trust fund.

The Committee recommended the full $412,000 requested to "further strengthen the domestic farm labor program."

FLOOR ACTION

The House May 4 passed HR 7765 by voice vote without amendment and sent it to the Senate, carrying $7,964,034,000 in fiscal 1966 funds.

John E. Fogarty (D R.I.), chairman of the Appropriations Subcommittee which considered Labor and HEW funds, May 4 explained that "just about 90 percent of the bill...is for grants -- grants to state and local governments, school and health facilities construction grants, research grants and training grants." He said that "with the growing public acceptance of grants-in-aid as a means of achieving national goals, there has been more and more of this type of legislation passed in recent years with the result that the Labor, Health, Education and Welfare appropriation bill has increased each year."

Fogarty and Melvin R. Laird (R Wis.), the Subcommittee's ranking GOP Member, warned that supplemental requests for new programs would increase the fiscal 1966 total substantially, probably in the vicinity of $5 billion.

The largest cut in HR 7765 was $242.1 million -- leaving $3 billion -- for grants to the states for public assistance payments which were considered mandatory. Although a similar cut had been made in the regular fiscal 1965 appropriations bill, it was restored in HR 7091, the Second Supplemental Appropriations bill for fiscal 1965. Appropriations Committee Member Frank T. Bow (R Ohio) May 4 suggested that "we are again in an annual situation.... You are going to get it back in a supplemental, so this $242 million in my estimation is not a true cut."

Fogarty chided the Johnson Administration for the budget it had submitted for the National Institutes of Health. He said, "I can wholeheartedly support the President's goals for a Great Society, but I cannot understand a program for achieving a Great Society which does not have as one of its primary aims the elimination of the scourge of disease, the tragedy of mental retardation and all other forms of congenital disabilities, and the ever-present threat of untimely death."

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House, HR 7765 appropriated the following:

Labor Department	$ 537,460,000
Health, Education and Welfare	7,355,638,000
Related agencies	53,554,000
TOTAL	$7,946,652,000
Indefinite appropriations, HEW	($17,382,000)
GRAND TOTAL	$7,964,034,000

Prohibited use of funds in the bill for implementation of any provision of the 1964 Economic Opportunity Act.

Stipulated that federal funds could not be used to finance the entire cost of a research project conducted under a federal grant.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- Aug. 3 reported HR 7765 (S Rept 537), providing $8,023,101,500 in fiscal 1966 funds, about $59 million more than the House provided.

The Committee deleted a House provision that federal funds could not finance the entire cost of a research project, thereby granting completely the President's request for removal of the ceiling on funds to be spent for indirect costs of research. The Committee said the "concept of cost sharing on research projects...is an appealing one" but there were many small research institutes which "would probably find it impossible to comply honestly with the proposed provision.... The saving that would accrue to the Federal Government from the small contribution, which is all that would be required under the cost-sharing provision, would be out of all proportion to the loss to the national research effort that would result from the inability of some of these institutions to continue their participation."

Other major changes in the House bill made by the Committee:

Health Funds. The Committee increased funds for the National Institutes of Health to $1,082,056,000 -- $42 million more than the request and $30.3 million more than the House sum. It said it had not included any increases in programs which would fall in categories expected to be covered in a supplemental request after enactment of a bill (S 596, HR 3140) authorizing regional medical centers to combat heart disease, cancer and stroke. (See stories p. 324, 166)

In addition to approving all the increases made by the House in NIH requests, the Committee provided further increases for every Institute, including $500,000 for expanding program planning activities of the director; $2.5 million for the Institute of General Medical Sciences to cover a backlog of applications for research and training grants and postdoctoral and special fellowships; $800,000 for the Division of Biologics Standards for a study of the oncological effects of viral vaccines (with the comment that the Budget Bureau "should be severely reprimanded for attempting to force so injudicious an economy" as to cut the funds requested by the Division); $1.5 million for the Institute of Child Health and Human Development for training of manpower in the fields of reproductive biology, embryology and developmental pharmacology; $5 million for the Cancer Institute to cover expansion of various aspects of its virus-leukemia program; $6.5 million for the Institute of Mental Health to "help close the gap between approved training applications and the amount needed to fund them" and an additional $500,000 for personnel to administer the Professional and Technical Assistance Branch of the Institute; $2 million for the Heart Institute for training and fellowship grants; $1.5 million to the Institute of Dental Research for research grants, collaborative research and fellowships; $1 million for the Institute of Arthritis and Metabolic Diseases for diabetes prevention and control activities, and $1 million for the Institute (in addition to $1 million added by the House) for work on the artificial kidney; $3 million for the Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases including $750,000 for development of respiratory virus vaccines, $500,000 for work on rubella vaccines, $1 million for research on emphysema and $750,000 for research on transplantation and immunology; and $4.5 million for the Institute of Neurological Diseases and Blindness including $1 million for clinical and information centers for brain research and speech and hearing research, $2.5 million for acceleration of eye research activities and $1 million to expand the level of training in the entire field of neurology.

The Committee added $1,896,000 for four unbudgeted Public Health Service buildings and facilities projects, but deleted $2,350,000 requested and provided by the House for construction of a Middle Atlantic water pollution control laboratory because no site had been selected. The result was a net cut of $454,000 in the House sum but a net increase of $1,196,000 in the request.

The Committee restored the full House cut in funds for hospital construction, providing $303,304,000. Like the House, the Committee denied a request to permit use of a larger portion of the funds for modernization.

The Committee denied $5 million requested and provided by the House for a special health program for Selective Service rejectees because "this activity should continue to be funded by the Office of Economic Opportunity as in 1965."

Noting that PHS closure of two hospitals at Chicago and Memphis (which the House had provided $864,000 to keep open) was "now, unfortunately, an accomplished fact," the Committee added to the $864,000 provided by the House another $1 million and directed that the total be used for replacement of equipment at the other PHS hospitals.

The Committee cut the $100 million requested for waste treatment works construction to $91 million, to be allotted to the states on the basis of $100 million and to remain available through Dec. 31, 1966.

Education Funds. For the Office of Education, the Committee recommended $1,833,889,000 -- $14,672,000 under the request and $19,050,000 below the House figure. It deleted $10 million provided by the House for construction of two residential vocational education schools (request: $5 million for one school) because the sites had not been selected. It cut $9,050,000 from the request and House figures for loans for construction of higher education facilities because unused fiscal 1965 funds were still available for that purpose.

For educational television activities, a separate category, the Committee provided $300,000 to be used only for administrative purposes and said unobligated fiscal 1965 funds could be used for grants, instead of the funds requested for fiscal 1966.

Welfare Funds. For juvenile delinquency and youth offenses control, the Committee added $6.5 million to the House amount to provide the full amount authorized in HR 8131 (PL 89-69) which was enacted after the House passed HR 7765. (See story p. 632)

Labor Funds. The Committee allowed $20 million of $39,280,000 requested but denied by the House to supplement trust funds available for grants to states for unemployment compensation and employment service administration and stipulated it was to be used for establishment and operation of Youth Opportunity Centers.

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate Aug. 5 passed HR 7765 by voice vote and sent it to conference with the House, carrying $8,023,101,500.

Like the House sponsors, Senate floor manager Lister Hill (D Ala.) explained that requests for supplemental funds for Labor and HEW programs would be considered later in the session and that the $242.1 million cut in the request for grants to states for public assistance payments "must be later appropriated if the estimates of need are borne out."

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate, HR 7765 appropriated the following:

Labor Department	$ 557,607,500
Health, Education and Welfare	7,394,558,000
Related agencies	53,554,000
TOTAL	$8,005,719,500
Indefinite appropriations, HEW	($17,382,000)
GRAND TOTAL	$8,023,101,500

Prohibited use of funds in the bill for implementation of any provision of the 1964 Economic Opportunity Act.

Stipulated that none of the HEW funds could be used for additional permanent federal positions in the Washington, D.C., area if the new proportion of the total HEW employees in the area to those in other areas would exceed the proportion existing at the end of fiscal 1965 (44 percent).

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

Aug. 5 -- Norris Cotton (R N.H.) -- Add stipulation on HEW personnel in Washington (see above). Voice vote.

Conference

REPORT -- The conference report on HR 7765 (H Rept 791) was filed Aug. 12, carrying $8,011,331,500.

The final bill contained the House provision, deleted by the Senate, stipulating that federal funds could not finance the entire cost of a research program. It retained the Senate floor amendment on HEW personnel.

Other major differences were resolved by the conferees as follows:

Health Funds. The final bill provided $1,072,956,000 for the National Institutes of Health (request: $1,040,056,000; House: $1,051,756,000; Senate: $1,082,056,000). It contained all the unbudgeted funds added by the House but reduced some of the further Senate increases as follows: provided $300,000 of the $2.5 million for the Institute of General Medical Sciences; appropriated $400,000 of the $800,000 for the Division of Biologics Standards; provided $3.5 million of the over-all $7 million for the Institute of Mental Health; deleted the $2 million for the Heart Institute and provided $3.5 million instead of $4.5 million for the Institute of Neurological Diseases and Blindness. In addition, the bill reallocated the Senate's $3 million increase for the Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases to provide $1 million for work on rubella vaccines (instead of $500,000) and $250,000 (instead of $750,000) for research on transplantation and immunology. (The remaining Senate allocations of $750,000 for development of respiratory virus vaccines and $1 million for research on emphysema remained unchanged.)

Conferees retained the Senate's net $1,196,000 increase in the request for Public Health Service buildings and facilities projects, which was a $454,000 cut in the House figure.

For hospital construction, the bill provided $303,304,000, the amount requested and provided by the Senate.

The conference version agreed with the Senate bill in denying $5 million requested and provided by the House for a special health program for Selective Service rejectees.

Conferees agreed to the Senate's appropriation of $91 million for waste treatment works construction, to be allotted to the states on the basis of $100 million and to remain available through Dec. 31, 1966.

The bill provided a compromise $1,364,000 for replacement of equipment at PHS hospitals.

Education Funds. For all Office of Education programs, the bill provided the Senate figures and language.

For educational television activities, a separate category, the bill provided the House's $8,826,000 instead of the Senate's $300,000.

Welfare Funds. The bill compromised on $6,750,000 for juvenile delinquency and youth offenses control.

Labor Funds. The conferees provided $10 million of $39,280,000 requested to supplement trust funds available for grants to states for unemployment compensation and employment service administration (House: none; Senate: $20 million).

ACTION -- The House Aug. 16 and the Senate Aug. 17 adopted the conference report by voice votes.

LABOR-H.E.W. SUPPLEMENTAL

HR 10586 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 818) Aug. 19, 1965.
- Passed by the House by voice vote Aug. 24. (For roll-call vote on recommittal, see p. 992)
- Reported, amended, by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 680) Sept. 2.
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote Sept. 7.
- Conference report (H Rept 970) agreed to by voice votes of the House and Senate Sept. 9.

PL 89-199 -- Signed into law Sept. 23.

HR 10586 provided $1,223,181,500 to supplement the $7,957,777,500 already appropriated in HR 7765 for the Labor and Health, Education and Welfare Departments in fiscal 1966. (See preceding story) Additional funds for the two Departments were voted at the end of the session in the General Supplemental Appropriations bill (HR 11588). (See story p. 182)

The bulk of the funds in HR 10586 went to HEW to initiate programs authorized in the 1965 Elementary and Secondary Education Act (PL 89-10). Lesser amounts were appropriated to the Labor Department for manpower training programs and farm labor activities and to HEW for programs to combat heart disease, cancer and stroke and to establish an Administration on Aging and a National Technical Institute for the Deaf.

The total in HR 10586 was $330,736,500 less than the Administration request, but the largest cuts -- those for elementary and secondary school activities -- were considered temporary. Other cuts were made because the programs involved would get underway about two months later than the budget requests anticipated. The final appropriation was the same amount voted originally by the House, and $184 million below the Senate sum.

The major difference between the House and Senate versions of the bill was in funds for HEW grants under PL 89-10 to local school districts in areas with concentrations of children from low-income families. The final version contained the lower House amount -- a substantial cut in the request -- but it included language which virtually guaranteed that if more funds were necessary, Congress would vote them.

Guns Versus Butter

The only controversy over HR 10586 arose in the House. In minority views to the Appropriations Committee report (H Rept 818), all 16 GOP members said the bill "should not be enacted at this time." They contended that "business as usual in the non-defense-spending area is not in the best interest of this nation and cannot be justified in light of the rapidly increasing budgetary demands of the war in Viet Nam."

To get a vote on this issue when HR 10586 reached the House floor, Melvin R. Laird (R Wis.) Aug. 24 moved to recommit the bill. The motion was rejected on a 139-263 roll call. (For voting, see chart p. 992)

Laird's recommittal motion carried no instructions, but it was a dilatory move designed not to kill the bill but to force Congress to consider all supplemental requests in a lump sum at the same time and to examine needs for domestic spending in light of increased needs for funds to finance the war in Viet Nam. "In a substantial degree," Laird said, "we are entering once again a period when a choice must be made between guns and butter, between absolutely vital war needs and some desirable domestic programs." He noted that the "major guideline" of President Johnson's fiscal 1966 Budget requests submitted in January was that expenditures would not exceed $100 billion. Only by reviewing "at one time all of the remaining supplemental budgetary requests" for fiscal 1966 could Congress "exercise its special responsibility" of "keeping the President's budget as closely within these guidelines as is humanly possible," he said. Supporting the recommittal motion were 108 Republicans and 31 Southern Democrats; all Northern Democrats voted against it. (One month later, Congress appropriated $4.7 billion in additional supplemental funds, cutting the President's requests by about $230 million. See story p. 182)

Bill manager John E. Fogarty (D R.I.) asserted that to recommit the bill "would do nothing but delay these programs which provide so basically for our national strength -- the education of our people, training of our manpower and better health for all. The delay might save a few dollars but they would be some of the most costly dollars ever saved. This would be one of the most classic examples of false economy we have ever seen." Winfield K. Denton (D Ind.) said the theme of those supporting recommittal was "that the Viet Nam situation calls for a choice between guns and butter. I maintain that they are incapable of recognizing the difference between guns and butter and their suggestion is a good example of fiscal myopia designed to weaken this country's defense efforts."

BACKGROUND -- Administration requests for programs in HR 10586 totaled $1,553,918,000 -- $156,968,000 for the Labor Department and $1,396,950,000 for HEW.

PROVISIONS -- As signed by the President, HR 10586 appropriated the following:

Labor Department
Manpower Administration	$ 154,803,000
Farm labor activities	1,723,000
Subtotal	$ 156,526,000
Health, Education and Welfare Department
Elementary and secondary education	$1,016,050,000
Heart, cancer, stroke activities	42,920,000
Administration on Aging	7,000,000
National Technical Institute for the Deaf	420,000
Office of the Secretary	265,500
Subtotal	$1,066,655,500
GRAND TOTAL	$1,223,181,500

In addition, HR 10586:

Stipulated that none of the HEW funds could be used for additional permanent federal positions in the Washington, D.C., area if the new proportion of the total HEW employees in the area to those in other areas would exceed the proportion existing at the end of fiscal 1965 (44 percent).

Actions on Requests

Manpower Development, Training. The Administration requested $155 million to cover the new and expanded programs and relaxed state matching requirements authorized in PL 89-15. Both chambers voted $154,803,000. (See story p. 810)

Farm Labor Programs. The House and Senate voted to cut the Labor Department's farm labor program requests from $1,986,000 to $1,723,000. The funds were to be used to determine the need for temporary entry into the United States of foreign agricultural workers and to assure that their use had no adverse effects on wages and conditions of domestic labor. The use of foreign labor had been curtailed by expiration of the Mexican farm labor program Dec. 31, 1964. (See story p. 132 and 1964 Almanac p. 116)

Elementary, Secondary Education. For the Office of Education, $1,345,184,000 was requested to implement PL 89-10. Congress voted $1,016,050,000, the amount of the House bill but $184 million less than the Senate sum. The two chambers differed only on the amount to be granted local school districts in areas with concentrations of children from low-income families (Title I of PL 89-10). For amounts granted under other titles of the Act, see p. 293.

Title I of PL 89-10 authorized appropriation of whatever sums were necessary to meet the formula for aid spelled out in the Act. The President's request for funds to initiate the grants was $1,070,684,000. Going on the assumption that the full amount could not be spent in the remaining 10 months of the fiscal year, both the House and Senate voted less than the request but wrote language into the bill that would permit allocation of more money than was appropriated if the school districts drew up their plans more quickly than Congress anticipated. This was a common procedure for new programs just getting under way.

The House voted an appropriation of $775 million, to be allocated on the basis of the full amount authorized in the Act (estimated at $1,174,900,000 in September). The Senate recommended appropriation of $959 million, to be allocated on the basis of the President's request for $1,070,684,000. The final version contained the House provisions. If the programs got underway swiftly, supplemental funds could be sought early in 1966.

Heart, Cancer, Stroke. To carry out recommendations of the President's Commission on Heart Disease, Cancer and Stroke which could be implemented under existing authorizations, Congress voted $42,920,000, denying a request for $1.2 million which was not yet authorized. (The new authorization (S 596 -- PL 89-239) was enacted Oct. 6.) Though in agreement on the overall total, the House and Senate disagreed on allocation of funds within the total which were earmarked for the National Institutes of Health. The final version contained the Senate's allocation, as requested by the NIH Director. Additional funds for new programs to combat these diseases were voted later in the session. (See story p. 324)

Other Items. To establish an Administration on Aging in HEW, authorized in PL 89-73, Congress increased the $6,931,000 request to $7 million. (See story p. 356)

Congress approved the full $420,000 requested for the proposed National Technical Institute for the Deaf, authorized in PL 89-36. (See story p. 357)

HR 9221 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 528) June 17, 1965.

- Passed by the House by a 407-0 roll-call vote June 23. (See p. 972)
- Reported, amended, by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 625) Aug. 18.
- Passed by the Senate by an 89-0 roll-call vote Aug. 25. (See p. 1068)
- Conference report (H Rept 1006) agreed to by a 382-0 roll-call vote of the House Sept. 17 (see p. 1004) and by voice vote of the Senate Sept. 21.

PL 89-213 -- Signed into law Sept. 29.

Congress in 1965 appropriated $46,887,163,000 to the Defense Department for fiscal 1966 in the annual defense appropriations bill (HR 9221). The bill contained funds for all military programs of the Department except military assistance abroad, military construction and family housing and civil defense. The total was $85,681,000 less than was requested by the Defense Department and, even with a $1.7 billion appropriation for the Viet Nam war, it was $795,282,000 less than was appropriated for the same purposes in fiscal 1965 (including deficiencies and supplementals).

The Viet Nam funds were requested in August after House action on the bill was completed, to cover part of the mounting costs of the U.S. military involvement in Viet Nam. Labelled the Southeast Asia Emergency Fund, the $1.7-billion request covered procurement and military construction associated with the Viet Nam war, but did not cover the personnel costs involved in a 340,000-man increase in the active armed forces. President Johnson announced that these and other additional costs of the Viet Nam involvement would be covered in a fiscal 1966 supplemental appropriation and in the fiscal 1967 defense budget, both of which would be announced in January 1966. Also to be covered in the supplemental was a billion-dollar military pay raise voted by Congress in 1965. (Additional Viet Nam funds, totaling $700,000,000, were provided in a fiscal 1965 supplemental passed in May. See story p. 180; for pay raise, see p. 702)

Excluding the Southeast Asia Emergency Fund, HR 9221 totaled $45,187,163,000, including $120,744,000 in bookkeeping transactions (reappropriations and liquidation of contract authority) affecting programs from earlier years.

Of the reductions made by Congress in Administration defense programs, $185.5 million was accomplished by S 800, the procurement and research authorization bill. (See story p. 684)

Congress in HR 9221 made further reductions totaling $152,472,000. Included in this sum was $105.5 million for a variety of small reductions in procurement of aircraft, missiles and other items; $25 million from the Department of Defense Emergency Fund, and $21.7 million, the entire sum requested, from a new Special Training and Enlistment Program (STEP) for volunteers who could not meet the Army's mental and physical standards. (See p. 175)

However, these reductions were partially offset by the addition of $133.6 million for two unbudgeted nuclear attack submarines; $83.3 million more than budgeted for the reserves, in order to maintain the Army National Guard and Army Reserve as two separate organizations instead of a single combined one as proposed by the Administration; $20 million, out of the $150.5 million authorized in S 800, for initial work on an unbudgeted nuclear-powered frigate; $7 million for continued development of a new bomber, in addition to the $15 million requested; and $8.4 million in scattered additions.

VIET NAM

The major controversy during consideration of HR 9221 was whether sufficient funds had been requested to carry on the Viet Nam engagement without crippling U.S. military forces elsewhere. Republicans charged that the Administration was deliberately holding down requests for Viet Nam and presenting a "phony" budget. They argued that the nation could not afford both "guns and butter" and implied that the Administration was not disclosing the true cost of Viet Nam because it did not want to endanger its ambitious program of domestic legislation.

Democrats in Congress supported the Administration position on funding the Viet Nam operation, holding that the armed forces currently had sufficient supplies and funds, and that it was best to wait until 1966 to see what more was needed. They pointed out that the Defense Department already had authority to spend whatever was needed to support necessary increases in military personnel and to transfer funds from low-priority programs to high-priority programs. They also noted that it could make use of the substantial amount of funds saved from prior years. However, Sen. John Stennis (D Miss.), chairman of the Senate Armed Services Preparedness Investigating Subcommittee, which conducted year-long closed hearings on the equipment and readiness of Army forces, warned in August that the drain on Army supplies created by the Viet Nam war had become "critical."

Viet Nam Buildup. United States military forces had seen action in Viet Nam since 1961. Through 1964, these forces were cast in the role of "advisors" to the South Vietnamese military in their war against the Viet Cong Communist guerillas. The total number of U.S. military personnel in Viet Nam on Dec. 31, 1964, was 23,000, and total U.S. deaths from hostile action from Jan. 1, 1961, through 1964 were 239.

Beginning in late 1964, Viet Cong forces stepped up their direct attacks on U.S. military personnel and bases in South Viet Nam. On Feb. 7, 1965, guerillas shelled a U.S. compound at Pleiku, and the same day President Johnson ordered U.S. carrier-based jets to attack military targets in Communist North Viet Nam in retaliation. In the following weeks, U.S. raids on North Viet Nam became a regular feature of the war, and air attacks on targets in South Viet Nam were also sharply increased. Much of the increased air activity originated from Danang airfield in South Viet Nam. By April, U.S. forces in Viet Nam had grown to 29,000, with the dispatch of a Marine anti-aircraft battalion to protect Danang. By May 8, the figure had reached 42,000. Several Marine battalions were sent to provide security for the Danang base and free Vietnamese troops for combat duties. In June, the first Army combat units were landed in Viet Nam. At about the same time, it was announced that U.S. troops would be committed to battle if requested by the Government of South Viet Nam.

During the summer, the phase of operations in which Americans served primarily as advisors to Vietnamese troops gave way to a phase in which large numbers of American troops were used for "search and destroy" operations against Communist troops. U.S. officials stated that there was an urgent need to blunt the "monsoon offensive" of the Communists. During the summer monsoon in South Viet Nam, it was believed, the Viet Cong, assisted by North Vietnamese regulars would abandon their guerilla tactics to launch attacks in strength and seek to destroy the South Vietnamese army before the rains ended and American airpower was able to operate effectively. The buildup in American military forces announced by President Johnson July 28 was designed to meet this Communist threat.

By September 2, the number of U.S. forces in Viet Nam had reached 100,000. By mid-December the number was in excess of 180,000, and the number of deaths from hostile action since January 1961 was in excess of 1,500.

OTHER DEBATE

Other points of controversy in HR 9221 concerned the proposed merger of the Army Reserves and Army National Guard and a formula allocating 35 percent of the funds for Navy ship conversion, alteration and repair to work done in private shipyards.

Both the House and Senate agreed in providing funds to maintain the Reserves and National Guard as separate organizations, and the final bill contained, as well, Senate language prohibiting the transfer of funds to achieve a reorganization of the Reserves and National Guard unless specifically authorized by Congress. It also directed that the two organizations be programmed to attain a combined strength of 650,000 personnel on paid-drill status by the end of fiscal 1966, somewhat higher than the figure planned by the Administration for the combined reserve force. Despite Congressional opposition, however, Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara, through his existing statutory authority, accomplished many of the objectives of his merger proposal by year's end. (See story p. 692)

The formula allocating Navy ship repair funds had been carried in appropriations bills since 1962. In 1965, the Defense Department asked, and the annual defense procurement and research authorization bill recommended, that it be dropped. The House agreed, but the Senate restored it to HR 9221. The House prevailed in conference. The House also prevailed on language eliminating a provision, carried in appropriations bills since 1962, which set a ceiling on the amount of indirect costs which could be charged to the Government by organizations receiving federal research grants. The new language stipulated that such organizations would have to make at least a token contribution toward the costs of the research project. (Similar language was included in the fiscal 1966 appropriation for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. See story p. 161)

PROVISIONS -- The breakdown of funds in HR 9221 as signed by the President:

Southeast Asia Emergency Fund	1,700,000,000
GRAND TOTAL	$46,887,163,000

The breakdown by service unit:
Army	$10,973,094,000
Navy and Marine Corps	13,957,200,000
Air Force	17,519,600,000
Defense Agencies	4,437,269,000

Totals include reappropriations from unobligated balances of previous appropriations of $12.3 million for Army personnel, $45.8 million for Air Force personnel and $8.6 million for Navy operation and maintenance, and contract authority liquidation of $54,044,000 for Army operation and maintenance.

The bill provided funds for an active military establishment slightly smaller than that of June 30, 1965. However, planned strength was higher than this figure by 340,000 men, as a result of the Viet Nam buildup announced in August. Expenditures for the additional manpower would be made up in 1966 in a supplemental appropriation. The following table compares the actual strength for each of the services on June 30, 1965, with the strength planned for fiscal 1966 before and after the Viet Nam buildup was announced.

	June 30, 1965 (Actual)	June 30, 1966 (January Estimate)	June 30, 1966 (August Estimate)
Navy	671,448	684,848	719,848
Marine Corps	190,213	193,190	223,190
Air Force	824,662	809,134	849,134
TOTALS	2,655,389	2,640,266	2,980,266

The bill also:

Continued the President's authorities to spend any amount required to institute an airborne alert and to fund any increases in military personnel above the level for which funds were provided in the Act, and required the Secretary of Defense to report monthly to the Congressional Appropriations Committees the expenses incurred under these authorities.

Authorized the Secretary of Defense to transfer up to $150 million from other fiscal 1966 Department funds for use in the Defense Department Emergency Fund (to which $125 million was appropriated), provided that no transfer could exceed 7 percent of the appropriation from which it was drawn.

Authorized, in addition to amounts appropriated, transfer from stock and industrial funds of $470 million for military personnel expenses.

Authorized transfer from the Defense Stock Fund of $30 million for the Defense Industrial Fund.

Stipulated that defense funds could not be used to finance the entire cost of a research project conducted under a defense grant.

Earmarked $150 million of Air Force R&D funds for the manned orbiting laboratory (MOL) program and $22 million for the development of an advanced manned strategic aircraft.

Prohibited use of funds in the Act for expenses of the Army's Special Training and Enlistment Program (STEP).

Directed that the Army National Guard be programmed to attain an end strength of 380,000 in fiscal 1966 and the Army Reserve an end strength of 270,000.

Prohibited transfer of funds in the Act for support of a realignment or reorganization of the Army reserve components unless the realignment or reorganization was specifically approved by Congress "through the enactment of law."

Background

REFERENCE -- 1964 Almanac p. 153.

President Johnson Jan. 18 sent to Congress a message on his defense program for fiscal 1966. (For text, see Presidential Messages p. 1387)

In the message, Mr. Johnson announced that "the United States today is stronger militarily than at any other time in our peacetime history." However, he said, "arms alone cannot assure the security of any society or the preservation of any peace. The health and education of our people, the vitality of our economy, the equality of our justice, the vision and fulfillment of our aspirations are all factors in America's strength and well-being."

Because of the "rigorous Cost Reduction Program" initiated by Defense Secretary McNamara in 1962, and because "we have achieved many of the needed changes and increases in our military force structure," the President said, defense expenditures were beginning to level off after a steep climb from $43 billion in fiscal 1960 to more than $51 billion in fiscal 1964 -- a sum which represented "more than one-half of every dollar paid in taxes to the Federal Government." He estimated that fiscal 1965 expenditures would be about 49.3 billion and fiscal 1966 expenditures about $49 billion. (These figures included funds for four programs not covered by the defense appropriation bill: military foreign assistance, military construction, military family housing and civil defense. In July, the Defense Department announced that fiscal 1965 spending for these purposes had actually amounted to $47.4 billion, a $1.9 billion reduction in the figure cited by the President in January. For comparable figures for earlier years, see 1964 Almanac p. 155)

"Barring a significant shift in the international situation," Mr. Johnson continued, defense expenditures would "constitute a declining portion of our expanding Gross National Product, which is now growing at the rate of 5 percent a year." If defense expenditures remained at about the projected fiscal 1966 level, he said, "an ever-larger share of our expanding national wealth will be free to meet other vital needs, both public and private." (For 1964 debate on defense spending, see 1964 Almanac p. 155-156)

Past defense programs had built "a strength of arms greater than that ever assembled by any other nation and greater now than any combination of adversaries," the President said. He said the strategic retaliatory forces included more than 850 land-based intercontinental ballistics missiles, more than 300 Polaris missiles in submarines and more than 900 strategic bombers, half of them on 15-minute alert. (Some of the bombers and missiles were scheduled for retirement in 1966. See McNamara statement, below)

The President said the nation's non-nuclear forces had been strengthened in a variety of ways since 1961: The Special Forces, for fighting counter-guerilla wars, had been expanded eightfold; the number of combat-ready Army divisions had been increased by 45 percent; the Marine Corps had grown by 15,000 men; airlift capacity had doubled; and Air Force tactical firepower for combat support had been doubled.

He announced plans for development of several new weapons, including a longer-range, higher-payload version of the Polaris missile, named the Poseidon; a large-capacity cargo aircraft, the C-5A, capable of carrying up to 750 passengers; and a Short Range Attack Missile (Sram) to be launched from bombers. The President also announced that the Defense Department would ask Congress for an increase in the size of the military Joint Staff from 400 officers to 800 officers, and for a procedure for annual review and automatic adjustment of military pay. The former proposal was not acted on; the latter was rejected by Congress. (See military pay story, p. 702)

Defense Appropriations Request. The Department of Defense requested an appropriation of $45,248,844,000 for the military activities of the Department of Defense in fiscal 1966 (not including military construction and family housing, civil defense or military foreign assistance). The breakdown, by major appropriations title and by service, follows:

Military Personnel	$14,618,100,000
Operation and Maintenance	12,510,244,000
Procurement	11,411,700,000
Research and Development	6,708,800,000
TOTAL	$45,248,844,000
Army	$10,961,403,000
Navy	13,932,600,000
Air Force	17,602,100,000
Defense Agencies	2,752,741,000
TOTAL	$45,248,844,000

The table below compares planned obligations for these same military functions in fiscal 1966 with the June 1965 estimates for fiscal 1965, in millions of dollars (figures are rounded off, so may not add to the totals):

	Fiscal 1965	Fiscal 1966
Strategic Offensive Forces	$ 5,219	$ 4,482
Continental Air and Missile Defense Forces	1,664	1,575
General Purpose Forces	17,877	18,638
Airlift, Sealift Forces	1,507	1,530
Reserve and Guard Forces	2,057	1,974
Research and Development	5,046	5,308
General Support	13,179	13,148
Retired Pay	1,399	1,529

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

HELD HEARINGS -- Intermittently between Feb. 3 and April 14 on U.S. defense posture and the fiscal 1966 defense appropriations bill (HR 9221). Defense Secretary McNamara March 2-5 presented his annual review of U.S. global defense policy. (He presented substantially the same testimony to the House Armed Services Committee in February.)

McNAMARA TESTIMONY

In his statement, McNamara said, "The decline in our defense expenditures from a high of $51.2 billion in fiscal year 1964 to an estimated $49.0 billion in fiscal year 1966 simply reflects the substantial completion of the buildup started in 1961 and the results of our highly successful cost reduction program."

McNamara prefaced his remarks on the defense budget with a lengthy "assessment of the international situation as it bears on military policies and programs." Following are excerpts from his statement:

THE INTERNATIONAL SITUATION

"Although the change in the leadership of the Soviet Union and the detonation of a nuclear device by Communist China were two of the most widely noted developments on the international scene during the past year, a more fundamental though less heralded change has been taking place which, over the long run, could be of much greater significance to our national security.... the gradual relaxation of the previously rigid bi-polarization of world power, which has been gaining momentum in recent years....

"For many years after the last great war, the world scene was dominated by two giant power blocs, one a voluntary alliance of free nations led by the United States, and the other a conquered empire ruled by the Soviet Union. In the Free World alliance, the United States was the leading member because of the predominance of its economic and military power. In the Communist camp the Soviet Union was the undisputed ruler....

"Some time in the last five or ten years this situation began to change. On the Free World side, the nations of Western Europe, as well as Japan in the Far East, began to get back on their feet politically and economically, and today, the United States is no longer the only important economic and political power. On the Communist side, the absolute control of the Soviet Union has been successfully challenged, and now not only Yugoslavia, but also China, Albania and, to a lesser extent, other Communist nations of Eastern Europe, are following policies directed to their own national interests. Long frozen positions are beginning to thaw and in the shifting currents of international affairs there will be new opportunities for us to enhance the security of the Free World and thereby our own security. But there will also be new problems which will have to be faced, particularly how best to maintain the unity of the Free World during this period of flux, while old positions, attitudes and relationships are being re-examined....

"It was difficult enough when there were two power centers competing for the ideological allegiance of (the) new nations. Now, with the internal cohesiveness of these power blocs weakening, particularly in the Communist camp, the situation is becoming far more complicated."

COMMUNIST STRATEGY

"Like their predecessors, the new leaders of the Soviet Union fully appreciate the perils of general nuclear war and the danger of local wars escalating into nuclear war. I also believe that the leaders of Communist China, too, are reluctant to challenge the full weight of our military power. But both the Soviet Union and Communist China continue to support...'wars of national liberation' or 'popular revolts' which we know as covert armed aggression, insurrection and subversion.... To the extent that we deter the Communists from initiating larger wars, we may anticipate even greater efforts on their part in so-called 'wars of national liberation.'... We must face up to the fact that the Communists have a distinct advantage over the democracies in this type of conflict. They are not inhibited by our ethical and moral standards -- political assassination, robbery, arson, subversion, bribery are all acceptable means to further their ends.... We still have a long way to go in devising and implementing effective countermeasures against these techniques....

CHINESE MILITARY STRENGTH

"The nuclear explosion last October provided confirmation that the Chinese Communist leaders are determined to produce modern armaments even though the cost be great.... Although the results may be slow in coming, there is no reason to suppose that the Chinese cannot in time produce medium-range and even long-range ballistic missile systems and arm them with thermonuclear warheads. Given the hostility the regime has shown, this is a most disturbing long-term prospect...." But there was currently little danger of a direct Chinese intervention in Viet Nam, McNamara indicated.

VIET NAM

"A Communist Chinese success in South Viet Nam would be claimed as proof positive that the Chinese Communist position (vis-a-vis the Soviets) was correct and they will have made a giant step forward in the struggle for control of the world Communist movement. Such a success would also greatly increase the prestige of Communist China among the non-aligned nations and strengthen the position of their following everywhere. Thus, the stakes in South Viet Nam are far greater than the loss of one small country to Communism.... All of this is not to say that the loss of South Viet Nam to the Communists would automatically mean the loss of all of Southeast Asia. Yet, we may be certain that as soon as they had established their control over South Viet Nam, the Communists would press their subversive operations in Laos and then in Thailand and we would have to face this same problem all over again in another place or permit them to have all of Southeast Asia by default. Thus, the choice is not simply whether to continue our efforts to keep South Viet Nam free and independent but, rather, whether to continue our struggle to halt Communist expansion in Asia. If the choice is the latter, as I believe it should be, we will be far better off facing the issue in South Viet Nam. The present situation in South Viet Nam is grave but by no means hopeless."

NATO

"We believe that the strategic nuclear forces assigned to NATO must be controlled under a single chain of command and must be fully coordinated with external strategic forces. We (the NATO allies) have all agreed that an attack upon one member of NATO would be considered an attack upon them all. Therefore, a decision by any NATO nation to invoke the use of strategic nuclear weapons in retaliation against another nuclear power (i.e., the Soviet Union) might risk the involvement of all the members of the Alliance in a global nuclear war. Moreover, the complex of targets against which such weapons would be used must, as a practical matter, be viewed as a single system.... The essential point here is not that this force must be under exclusive U.S. control but, rather, that we must avoid the fragmentation and compartmentalization of NATO nuclear power, which could be dangerous to us all.

"In pursuing the objective of an allied nuclear force, we have no fixed timetable. Indeed, inasmuch as we have repeatedly stated our own views, we prefer that our European NATO partners now take the initiative in developing their proposals for such a force. But I want to make it very clear that the basic concept of an allied nuclear force has the full support of our Government since it will advance the principle and the practice of collective strategic defense as against the proliferation of separate nuclear deterrents, and we shall not be laggard in responding to such proposals." (McNamara made no mention of the main U.S. proposal for nuclear sharing with the NATO allies, the multilateral force (MLF) of seaborne missiles.)

NUCLEAR POLICY

McNamara said the U.S. had three general types of nuclear war forces which would be used if the U.S. or its allies were attacked in such a manner as to require general nuclear retaliation:

- Strategic Offensive Forces -- manned bombers, intercontinental ballistic missiles and submarine-launched missiles, strategic reconnaissance aircraft, etc.
- Strategic Defensive Forces -- anti-aircraft defenses (manned interceptors, surface-to-air missiles, etc.); anti-ballistic missile defenses (anti-missile missiles, anti-submarine warfare forces, etc.); anti-satellite defenses (interceptor missiles, etc.).

● Civil Defense Programs -- fallout shelters, warning systems, etc.

McNamara cited two strategic objectives of U.S. general nuclear war forces:

"1. To deter a deliberate nuclear attack upon the U.S. and its allies by maintaining a clear and convincing capability to inflict unacceptable damage on an attacker, even were that attacker to strike first." McNamara defined this capability as "Assured Destruction" of the enemy.

"2. In the event that a war should nevertheless occur, to limit damage to our populations and industrial capacities." McNamara defined this capability as "Damage Limitation."

Assured Destruction. McNamara said projections of the nuclear competition with the Soviets into the early 1970s showed that "even after absorbing a first strike, our already authorized strategic missile force, if it were directed against the aggressor's urban areas, could cause more than 100 million fatalities and destroy about 80 percent of his industrial capacity. If our manned bombers were then to mount a follow-on attack against urban areas, fatalities would be increased by 10 to 15 million and industrial destruction another percent or two."

Discussing the Strategic Offensive Forces actually needed, McNamara said that "only a portion of our total programmed ICBM and Polaris force and none of the strategic bombers would be required to inflict on an aggressor unacceptably high levels of destruction." McNamara said comparative cost estimates showed that any one of four possible strategic offensive forces -- the Minuteman ICBM; the Polaris; the B-52 bomber together with a short-range air-to-ground missile currently under development; or AMSA, a new bomber proposed by the Air Force -- could, alone, destroy the enemy even after absorbing a surprise attack. But he said the cost of the AMSA bomber system alone would be four times as great as that of the cheapest of the alternative systems, the Minuteman ICBM.

Reviewing current and planned strategic offensive forces, McNamara said that "with appropriate maintenance and modification, the current B-52s can be operated, safely and effectively, through the early or mid-1970s." Even with future phasing out of the older Guam-based B-52B force and the remaining B-47 force, "we would still have a force of about 670 manned bombers in 1970, and the B-52s would continue to be equipped with Hound Dog air-launched missiles," he said. (The Guam-based B-52Bs were used for numerous non-nuclear bombing missions over Viet Nam in 1965, but were still scheduled for early retirement.)

McNamara said there were at least two alternatives, in addition to immediate development of the AMSA, "which would preserve the manned-bomber option for the period following the retirement of the B-52 force. These are: (a) the procurement of a strategic version of the F-111 (TFX aircraft) (See related development, p. 179), and (b) the initiation of advance development work on long lead time components which would be needed for the AMSA as well as other new combat aircraft." McNamara said that a strategic version of the F-111 could be made available in the early 1970s at a much lower price than the Air Force-proposed AMSA force, estimated to cost between $8.9 billion and $11.5 billion over five years. Considering cost, "the still-existing uncertainty as to the kind of a new bomber we would want by the mid-1970s, and the remaining B-52 life which exceeds the lead time required for the development of new aircraft, I do not believe that we are ready to go ahead with full AMSA development at this time," McNamara said. But "to keep open the option," McNamara proposed spending $67 million, $28 million in FY 1965 and $39 million in FY 1966, to study alternative future aircraft design, initiate an advanced avionics development program and initiate an advanced propulsion program. Congress in 1964 appropriated an unbudgeted $52 million for developing advanced manned aircraft. McNamara proposed to use all of these funds and ask Congress for the additional $15 million as part of the FY 1966 budget. (See story p. 684; 1964 Almanac p. 444)

Turning to strategic missile forces, McNamara said the Department had earlier planned to seek funding for another 200 Minuteman silos in FY 1966-67 (estimated five-year cost, $1.3 billion), for a total of 1,200 missiles. But he said that request would not be made since he had concluded that the "kill" capabilities of the Minuteman force would be markedly increased through a number of qualitative improvements, leaving the target goal at 1,000 Minutemen.

McNamara also proposed beginning development in FY 1966 of a new, larger, submarine-launched missile to be called the Poseidon, which would increase the accuracy, payload and penetration capability of the submarine missile force. McNamara estimated total development costs of the Poseidon at $900 million.

McNamara said Atlas and Titan I missiles would be phased out during the current fiscal year because 800 Minuteman and 464 Polaris missiles would be in service by June 30.

Damage Limitation. McNamara said that against the forces the Soviets were expected to have in the next decade -- land-based missiles, submarine-launched missiles and manned bombers -- "it would be virtually impossible for us to be able to provide anything approaching perfect protection for our population no matter how large the general nuclear war forces we were to provide, including the hypothetical possibility of striking first." Any one of the Soviet systems, he said, could "inflict severe damage on the United States."

McNamara did provide estimates of reduced U.S. fatalities in a nuclear war which would result if various damage-limiting programs were undertaken well in advance. For instance, under current programs, based on a 1970 population of 210 million Americans, some 149 million would be killed in a Soviet attack centered on U.S. cities. If $5 billion were to be spent above current planning on fallout shelters for the entire population, that figure would be reduced to 120 million. If, in addition, another $10 billion were spent for increased missile defense systems and new manned bomber defenses, the losses from such an attack would be brought down to an estimated 96 million persons. Yet another $10 billion -- for a total of $25 billion -- on missile defenses and manned bomber defenses would bring losses down to 78 million Americans. He said that any program not including a fallout shelter effort would cost twice as much for each million persons saved.

McNamara said that most of the approximately 240 million shelter spaces needed by the 1970s could be obtained fairly inexpensively by identifying, marking or stocking the fallout shelter inherent in existing or planned structures. But he said the remaining requirement would have to be met by providing for dual-purpose fallout shelter areas in new construction, and that substantial federal cost-sharing would be required in this area. (The estimated cost of providing fallout shelters for the entire population was $5 billion in federal, state, local and individual funds.) For FY 1966, however, the recommended program continued to focus on marking and equipping of current shelters.

A major part of the damage limiting force, McNamara indicated, was made up of strategic missiles and bombers not needed for the assured destruction role. However, he said, "the utility of the Strategic Offensive Forces in the Damage Limiting role is critically dependent on the timing of the enemy attack on U.S. urban targets." Only if the enemy first attacked military targets and delayed his attack on urban centers ("an unlikely contingency"), could U.S. missiles and bombers significantly reduce his capacity to launch an attack on the urban centers.

McNamara said he had deferred a decision to go ahead with development of a new manned interceptor aircraft, which could cost $4 billion over five years. He said that the interim need for improved interception could be met by adapting the Navy version of the F-111 (TFX) for continental air defense. McNamara indicated that the basis for a new manned interceptor might be either the YF-12A or the SR-71, related versions of a 2,000 mile-an-hour aircraft with operating altitudes in excess of 80,000 feet. He said procurement costs for planned deployment of a reconnaissance version of the larger SR-71 were estimated at $950 million.

As for other defensive weapons, McNamara said the U.S. was continuing deactivation of parts of the Northern Canadian and Oceanic surveillance and warning network created during the bomber era of the 1950s. He pointed out that modern missiles would reach their targets long before a bomber attack wave. But he said that all three stations of BMEWS, the country's primary warning system against land-based ballistic missile attack, were already fully operational. He added that the Department also sought $27 million in fiscal 1966 for continued installation of over-the-horizon radar systems.

The Nike-X anti-ballistic missile (ABM) system, McNamara said, was still under development on an urgent basis, and a total of $400 million was included in the FY 1966 budget for that purpose, including $10 million for preliminary production engineering. However, he said, it was "still premature to make any commitment to production and deployment at this time." (Estimated five-year cost of the Nike-X ABM system was $24 billion.)

One of the problems of nuclear age defense, McNamara said, was that "at each successively higher level of U.S. expenditures, the ratio of our costs for Damage Limitation to the potential aggressor's costs for Assured Destruction become less and less favorable for us."

GENERAL PURPOSE FORCES

General purpose and airlift and sealift forces, including most of the Army's combat and combat support units, virtually all Navy units, all Marine Corps units and Air Force tactical units, were the forces McNamara said the United States would "rely upon for all military actions short of general nuclear war -- i.e., limited war and counterinsurgency operations." Though he stressed constant readaptation of these forces, especially of the Army's, to modern war requirements, McNamara revealed no significant changes in the planned active force levels. (Decisions concerning greater U.S. participation in the Viet Nam war were not made until later in 1965.)

Economic Impact of Defense Spending

Federal expenditures for military functions of the Department of Defense (including military construction, family housing and civil defense, but excluding military foreign assistance) totaled $46.2 billion in fiscal 1965. This sum represented 7.1 percent of the gross national product in the same year (roughly $650.0 billion) and 47.9 percent of total federal expenditures under the administrative budget ($96.5 billion).

Total federal expenditures for all national defense activities (including space) in fiscal 1965 amounted to $55.2 billion. This represented 8.5 percent of the gross national product.

In the same period, the net value of military procurement totaled $26.6 billion, down slightly from $27.5 billion in fiscal 1964 and $28.1 billion in fiscal 1963. The number of military personnel stationed in the United States at the end of fiscal 1965 was 1,641,244 and their salaries totaled $7.8 billion. In addition, the Department of Defense employed 940,763 civilians with an annual pay of $6.8 billion.

As these figures indicate, expenditures by the Department of Defense continued in fiscal 1965 to have a substantial impact on the economy, and represented by far the largest sector of federal expenditures. However, examination of the table below shows that fiscal 1965 expenditures for military functions of the Department represented the smallest percentage both of total federal expenditures under the administrative budget and of gross national product for any year since fiscal 1951.

Federal Expenditures for Military Functions of the Defense Department as Percentage of Gross National Product and of Administrative Budget, Fiscal 1939-65

DEFENSE AND THE ECONOMY

McNamara said that in recent years federal expenditures on goods and services for national defense and related purposes (atomic energy and space) had accounted for about one-tenth of the gross national product and nearly one-tenth of total employment. Currently, about 6.7 million persons were estimated to be in defense work, half employed directly by the Federal Government and others in defense industries. Touching on the politically sensitive issue of military base closings, McNamara said, "We recognize our obligation to do everything we properly can to minimize the disruptive effects of changes in our programs." While law forbids the Defense Department from awarding contracts to relieve economic dislocations, he said, the Federal Government would seek to assist through unemployment insurance, job information and placement services, training and retraining, relocation allowances, and assistance to communities and firms. (See box p. 174)

BALANCE OF PAYMENTS

McNamara said the net adverse impact of defense expenditures on the U.S. balance of payments had dropped from $2.8 billion in 1961 to $1.6 billion in 1964. "We find no cause for relaxing our efforts to reduce the net foreign exchange costs of our military programs," he said.

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- May 4 -- President Johnson sent a message to Congress asking for an appropriation of $700 million in additional defense funds for fiscal 1965 "to meet mounting military requirements in Viet Nam." The President said the additional funds were "needed to continue to provide our forces with the best and most modern supplies and equipment...to keep an abundant inventory of ammunition and other expendables,...(and) to build facilities to house and protect our men and supplies." (See story p. 180)

BILL REPORTED

ACTION -- The Committee June 17 reported HR 9221 (H Rept 528) appropriating $45,188,244,000. This was $60.6 million less than the sum requested.

The Committee added $250.9 million to the program proposed by the Administration and cut Administration requests by $126 million, which in addition to the $185.5 million cut made by the procurement and research authorization bill (S 800) led to a total reduction of $311.5 million in Administration requests. (For action on S 800, see p. 684)

The report said the bill would support a military force averaging 2,653,000 during fiscal 1966, at 628 active major installations, with about 30,000 active aircraft, about 900 active naval vessels, 16 Army divisions and three Marine combat divisions. It would also support 963,720 civilian employees (as of June 30, 1966) and over 1,000,000 active reservists.

The report said the major additions to the bill concerned the Army Reserves and National Guard, two additional nuclear attack submarines, a nuclear-powered frigate and development of an advanced design bomber (AMSA).

Other comments:

Adequacy of Funding. The report noted that the fiscal 1966 defense budget was prepared and submitted to Congress "prior to the recently expanded level of activity in South Viet Nam." The report said that despite the President's recent $700-million supplemental request, which was necessary because of the way the Defense Department computed its requirements for supplies and equipment, "our war reserve stocks and equipment levels are presently such that all our general purpose forces would be able to engage in combat for sustained periods of time." The report said that, in addition, the Department possessed "staggering totals" of unobligated appropriations approved in prior years that could be used for currently unforeseen combat contingencies.

Missile Defense. The report said funds were included to continue development of the Nike-X anti-ballistic missile system "on a high priority basis." However, the report said that deployment of the system had been deferred because of "the vast amount of development, test and evaluation work still to be accomplished...."

Ship Construction. The report said the Committee did not include in the bill a requirement, attached in previous years, that at least 35 percent of the funds for repair, alteration and conversion of naval vessels be allocated to private shipyards. The report explained, however, that the Committee "continues to favor...the most effective practical use of both the public and private shipyards." The House and Senate Armed Services Committees had inserted a provision in the military procurement authorization bill designed to discourage the Appropriations Committees from continuing the requirement. (See p. 684)

Reserve, National Guard. The Committee provided separate funding for the Army Reserve ($334.7 million) and the Army National Guard ($475 million) in order to maintain these organizations at the same strengths as in fiscal 1965, with a combined total of about 650,000 personnel on paid drill status. It rejected an Administration request for $751.8 million for a merged Army Reserve-National Guard force with a paid drill strength of 575,000. The report said the Committee had not "taken a position either for or against" the proposed merger of Army reserve components, but only approved separate funds for the components "pending legislative action" implementing the merger. (See story p. 692)

Major Committee Actions. Personnel -- The Committee approved $14,656,600,000 -- $38.5 million more than requested. Separate funding for the Army reserve components resulted in a $45 million increase; then the Committee cut $6.5 million from the $21.7 million requested to initiate a Special Training and Enlistment Program (STEP) for volunteers for enlistment who failed to meet the Army's mental or physical requirements. The report said the funds would not be needed since they were requested on the assumption that the program would begin before June 30, 1965. (See draft story, p. 689)

The Committee limited spending for permanent change-of-station travel to $852.2 million in order to discourage unnecessary transfers and rotation of personnel.

Operation and Maintenance -- The Committee approved $12,547,144,000 -- $36.9 million more than requested. It provided a net $12.9 million more than requested for the Army Reserve and National Guard, in line with its decision to make separate appropriations for each. It also added $24 million for claims against the Defense Department.

In addition to these actions, the Committee also made reductions totaling $104.2 million in various programs, but left the funds in the bill to be used for operation and maintenance of a higher priority, for instance, needs created by the Viet Nam war. The major cuts were in funds for field exercises.

Procurement -- The Committee approved $11,390,000,000 -- $21.7 million less than requested. Reductions totaled $183.7 million, including $64.2 million for two fast-deployment logistics ships (a reduction made by S 800), $26.8 million in communications and electronics equipment, $17.8 million in the F-111 aircraft procurement program, $26.5 million in the F-4 aircraft procurement program, and a variety of other reductions resulting in part from changes in budget estimates and in part from Committee actions designed to encourage economy.

Additions to the procurement item included $133.6 million for two nuclear submarines, $20 million for long-lead-time items for a new nuclear-powered frigate authorized by S 800 at a cost of $150.5 million, and scattered small additions totaling $8.5 million.

Research and Development -- The Committee made no changes in the program recommended by S 800, cutting $121.3 from Administration requests and adding $7 million for development of a new bomber. It earmarked a total of $22 million ($7 million above the estimates) for the bomber project and $150 million for the manned orbiting laboratory project. It also recommended development of a bomber version of the F-111. The total approved for R&D was $6,594,500,000 -- $114.3 less than requested. The sum included $150 million for the Department of Defense Emergency Fund.

The report said the Committee staff would undertake a study of the degree to which research projects financed by the Defense Department were coordinated with other federal agencies.

Additional Views. In a procedure unusual on an appropriations bill, the three Republican members of the Defense Appropriations Subcommittee submitted additional views. Reps. Laird (Wis.), Lipscomb (Calif.) and Minshall (Ohio) said they supported HR 9221, but felt "compelled" to point out certain defense policies which they said gave "cause for concern." They said the bill provided "inadequate funding" for the Viet Nam war; that testimony by defense officials reflected "an approach falling far short of what we believe must be done" to advance development of anti-submarine warfare and military uses of space; and that the Army's STEP program to give special training to rejected draftees was "ill conceived" and duplicated the Job Corps and other programs. The three also stated that they had "grave reservations" about the Administration's basic defense policy, which was "more of a policy of seeking to achieve a balanced deterrent, rather than insuring a decisive superiority."

FLOOR ACTION

The House June 23 passed HR 9221 by a 407-0 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart p. 972)

The House made no changes in the amounts and programs recommended by the Appropriations Committee. Only one amendment was offered; it was rejected by a 66-114 standing vote. Sponsored by Glenard P. Lipscomb (R Calif.), ranking Republican on the Defense Appropriations Subcommittee, it would have barred use of funds in the bill for the Army's Special Training and Enlistment Program (STEP). (For description of STEP, see p. 175)

During floor consideration of HR 9221, debate centered largely on the bill's lack of special funds to support the United States' increasing role in Southeast Asia. Lipscomb and the Subcommittee's other two Republican members, Melvin R. Laird (Wis.) and William E. Minshall (Ohio), led the criticism. Laird argued that the fiscal 1966 defense budget had been made up on the basis of guidelines established in 1963, well before a Viet Nam buildup was contemplated. He implied that the Administration was unwilling to revise its defense expenditures to reflect the greater costs of the Viet Nam effort because it wanted to keep fiscal 1966 spending below "the much-publicized $100 billion budget ceiling." The Republicans, Laird said, "will not refrain from telling the American people of their extreme displeasure at the cavalier way in which this Administration sees fit to inject political considerations into its defense proposals."

Lipscomb also asserted that certain other budgetary decisions -- such as a cutback in the number of Minuteman missiles, delayed deployment of the Nike-X anti-ballistic missile system, slow development of an advanced manned bomber and lack of efficient new weapons developments -- "are not based upon a realistic appraisal of and do not recognize fully the nature and magnitude of the Communist threat...." Current defense and foreign policies, he said, were based on the assumption that Communism was "mellowing."

Responding to Republican criticism of the adequacy of funds in the bill for Viet Nam, George H. Mahon (D Texas), chairman of the full Appropriations Committee and the Defense Subcommittee, said that in his judgment "the bill is adequate for the present." He noted that aside from the funds in HR 9221, the Defense Department currently had $29 billion in obligated "carryover" appropriations from previous years which could be transferred to priority items in case of emergency and $9.6 billion in unobligated carryover appropriations.

In other debate, Members attacked the proposed merger of the Army Reserve and Army National Guard and approved of separate appropriations for each. Also, several Members criticized the Committee for dropping the formula earmarking at least 35 percent of Navy ship conversion and repair funds for private shipyards.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House, HR 9221 appropriated the following funds for fiscal 1966:

Military Personnel	$14,656,600,000
Operation and Maintenance	12,547,144,000
Procurement	11,390,000,000
Research and Development	6,594,500,000
TOTAL	$45,188,244,000

The breakdown by service unit:

Army	$10,963,903,000
Navy	13,942,200,000
Air Force	17,519,600,000
Defense Agencies	2,762,541,000
TOTAL	$45,188,244,000

In addition, the bill:

Limited use of military personnel funds for permanent change of station travel to $852.2 million.

Stipulated that defense funds could not be used to finance the entire cost of a research project conducted under a defense grant.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

June 23 -- Glenard P. Lipscomb (R Calif.) -- Bar use of funds in the bill for the Army's Special Training and Enlistment Program (STEP). Standing vote, 66-114.

Viet Nam Buildup

Between June, when the House considered HR 9221, and the end of July, the Administration reached a decision to expand direct participation by U.S. forces in the Viet Nam war. This decision was announced July 28 by President Johnson, who said, "We intend to convince the Communists that we cannot be defeated by force of arms or by superior power.... In recent months they have greatly increased their fighting forces and their attacks and the number of incidents. I have asked the Commanding General (of U.S. forces in Viet Nam), Gen. (William C.) Westmoreland, what more he needs to meet this mounting aggression. He has told me. We will meet his needs.

"I have today ordered to Viet Nam the Air Mobile Division and certain other forces which will raise our fighting strength from 75,000 to 125,000 men.... Additional forces will be...sent as requested. This will make it necessary to (raise) the monthly draft call.... It is not essential to order Reserve units into service now...." (See story on draft, p. 689)

The President said Defense Secretary McNamara would ask "the Senate Appropriations Committee to add a limited amount to present legislation to help meet part of this new cost until a supplemental measure is ready... in January."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

HELD HEARINGS -- Aug. 4 on an Administration request for an additional $1.7 billion in fiscal 1966 defense appropriations to meet part of the costs of the Viet Nam buildup. The funds would be used for procurement of aircraft engines, helicoptors, rockets, cartridges, repair parts and other items, and for construction associated with the expansion of U.S. involvement in Viet Nam.

TESTIMONY -- Defense Secretary McNamara said that in addition to extra procurement and construction, the armed forces would be increased by 340,000 men: Army, 235,000; Navy, 35,000; Marine Corps, 30,000; and Air Force, 40,000. He stated, "At various times in recent months, I have called attention to the continued buildup of Communist forces in South Viet Nam. I pointed out that although these forces had not been committed to combat in any significant degree, they probably would be after the start of the monsoon season. It is now clear that these forces are being committed in increasing numbers and that the Communists have decided to make an all-out attempt to bring down the Government of South Viet Nam.... Clearly, the time has come when the people of South Viet Nam need more help from us and other nations if they are to retain their freedom and independence."

ACTION -- The Committee Aug. 18 reported HR 9221 (S Rept 625), appropriating $46,877,063,000. This was $1,688,819,000 more than provided by the House and $95,781,000 less than revised Administration requests.

The Committee considered Administration requests totaling $46,972,844,000, which was $1,724,000,000 more than was considered by the House. Of the added requests, $1.7 billion was for a Southeast Asia Emergency Fund and $24 million was for claims against the Defense Department. (The Administration originally asked that the claims funds be drawn from permanent, indefinite appropriations, but the House disallowed this and appropriated $24 million. The Administration subsequently added that sum to its appropriations requests.)

Excluding the $1.7-billion Viet Nam funds, the Senate version totaled $11,181,000 less than the amount provided by the House.

The report said the $1.7 billion would "provide the necessary funds for procurement and military construction projects" in connection with the Viet Nam war "that will be required before the Congress will have an opportunity to consider the necessary legislation to authorize and appropriate the full amount required for these purposes." It said the funds would not be used to cover the personnel costs of the 340,000 men to be added to the armed services. However, it said, HR 9221 contained the President's usual authority to spend more than appropriated for military personnel if he determined the increases necessary. The extra spending could then be covered by a supplemental appropriation in 1966.

Reserve, National Guard. The report said the Committee recommended separate funding for the Army Reserve and Army National Guard, in light of the House Armed Services Committee's conclusion that the proposed merger of the two components was "not in our national interest." (See story p. 692)

To make its position "absolutely clear," the Committee required, in HR 9221, that the Army Reserve be maintained at an average strength of 270,000 in fiscal 1966, and that the Army National Guard be maintained at an average strength of 380,000. It also prohibited transfer of any funds in the bill to carry out a merger unless it had been specifically approved by Congress. The Committee added $25.4 million to the sums provided by the House for the Army reserves. (See below)

Project Camelot. The report said a proposed Army research project, Camelot (see below), had made it clear that Defense Department research efforts in foreign countries should be coordinated with the State Department and other agencies of Government. The Committee cut $1.1 million from the Army R&D appropriation for behavioral sciences research, to eliminate funds for the project, hastily cancelled after protests by the U.S. Ambassador to Chile. However, the reduction was made a part of the amount eliminated from Army R&D by S 800, the procurement and research authorization bill, and so did not result in an actual reduction in the appropriation.

Project Camelot was to be a study of the causes of unrest and potential revolution in Argentina, Chile, Colombia, Peru and Venezuela. It was under the direction of the Special Operations Research Office (SORO), a contract research group affiliated with American University in Washington, D.C., but working principally for the Department of the Army. A public stir was created in Chile when a representative of SORO made preliminary inquiries in that country in preparation for the Camelot study. The U.S. Ambassador to Chile, Ralph Dungan, protested that he had not been informed about the project, which was wholly financed by the Defense Department. As a result of the controversy, the Defense Department July 8 cancelled Project Camelot. On the same day, a subcommittee of the House Foreign Affairs Committee began a month of closed hearings on Army research projects carried on by SORO. On Aug. 4, the White House released a letter from President Johnson to Secretary of State Dean Rusk ordering him to establish procedures "to assure the propriety" of Government-sponsored social sciences research which might have an impact on U.S. foreign relations.

Major Committee Actions. Following are the major changes made by the Committee in HR 9221:

Personnel -- Added $11.4 million for training of Army Reserve and Army National Guard components and $5.6 million for support of Army National Guard personnel, but eliminated all funds for the Army's STEP program. This left the allowance for personnel in fiscal 1966 $1,791,000 larger than the House version. The report said the STEP program "was not a proper program to be administered by the Army" but should be assigned to a civilian agency such as the Office of Economic Opportunity.

Operation and Maintenance -- Increased House funds by a net $8,128,000 by adding $8.4 million to handle costs of the separately authorized Army reserve components and by disallowing $272,000 for Defense Agencies operations and maintenance programs. The Committee retained in the bill $8,999,000 which the House had provided for the STEP program, but stipulated that the sum be used instead to defray costs of combat operations in Viet Nam.

Procurement -- Increased House allowances by a net $28.9 million by cutting $1 million for an electronic-communications system at a classified Army site and by restoring $29.9 million cut by the House in anticipation of savings and recoupments in Navy procurement programs.

Emergency Fund, Defense -- Cut $50 million from the request and House allowance of $150 million for the "emergency fund" for research and development. The Committee said it was "particularly concerned" by the use of the fund for other than emergency purposes. It said such use tended "to subvert the Congressional review and appropriation process."

Ship Construction -- Restored language, not included in the House version, requiring that at least 35 percent of the funds in the bill for repair, alteration and conversion of naval vessels be allocated to private shipyards. The Committee said the requirement was reasonable, "particularly in view of the fact that approximately 80 percent of all new ship construction is accomplished in private shipyards," and that it had no "deleterious effect on either private or public yards."

Other Actions -- The Committee deleted a House provision limiting to $852.2 million the amount of military personnel funds available for permanent change of station travel and revised a House provision stipulating that federal funds could not be used to finance the entire cost of a research project conducted under a defense grant. The Committee said its action on the first item was necessary because the House-approved provision imposed a restriction on movements of personnel inconsistent with the needs of the Viet Nam situation. On the second item, the Committee substituted a provision, included in previous defense appropriations bills, limiting federal payment of indirect costs of defense research to 20 percent of direct costs.

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate Aug. 25 passed HR 9221, amended, by an 89-0 roll-call vote. There were no floor amendments. (For voting, see chart p. 1068)

During Senate floor debate, John Stennis (D Miss.), floor manager of the bill and chairman of the Armed Services Preparedness Investigating Subcommittee, and Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.), top-ranking minority member of the full Armed Services and Appropriations Committees, said that HR 9221 represented the minimum amount necessary to maintain a superior defense posture, that there were no present shortages in military supplies in Viet Nam and that additional funds would be needed in 1966 to make up for the "drain" on other military divisions whose supplies were being diverted to the Viet Nam effort. Saltonstall estimated that the annual cost of the Viet Nam war might be between "$7 and $10 billion, at least."

Stennis said he thought "we are getting a toe-hold... a grip on things" in Viet Nam. But, he said, military operations there were rapidly draining the armed forces' stocks of supplies, and these stocks would soon have to be replaced if the armed forces were to remain effective, not only in Viet Nam, but elsewhere. "Congress and the Executive Branch must realize," he said, "that the war on poverty is not the only war which we are engaged in at this time. American boys are dying every day in Viet Nam for American ideals that are as important to us as raising the standard of living in local communities."

Prior to passage of the bill, the Senate rejected two amendments. One, by Gaylord Nelson (D Wis.), would have restored $15.2 million, cut in committee, for the Army's STEP program. The other, by Daniel B. Brewster (D Md.), in effect would have barred Great Britain from bidding on $60-million worth of Navy ship construction by adding language to the bill prohibiting use of funds for procurement of vessels or construction of vessel components in foreign shipyards. Nelson's amendment was rejected by a 27-67 roll-call vote; Brewster's, by a 20-72 roll call.

In other floor developments, a group of Senators representing states with naval shipyards -- Russell (D S.C.), Thurmond (R S.C.), McIntyre (D N.H.), Muskie (D Maine), Scott (R Pa.) and Fong (R Hawaii) -- protested inclusion in the bill of a requirement, dropped by the House, that 35 percent of naval ship repair funds be allocated to private shipyards. In addition, Wayne Morse (D Ore.) praised the elimination from the bill of funds for Project Camelot, which he called "intervention under the name of research."

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate, HR 9221 appropriated the following funds for fiscal 1966:

Military Personnel	$14,658,391,000
Operation and Maintenance	12,555,272,000
Procurement	11,418,900,000
Research and Development	6,544,500,000
Southeast Asia Emergency Fund	1,700,000,000
TOTAL	$46,877,063,000

The breakdown by service unit:

Army	$10,973,094,000
Navy	13,972,100,000
Air Force	17,519,600,000
Defense Agencies	2,712,269,000
Southeast Asia Emergency Fund	1,700,000,000
TOTAL	$46,877,063,000

In addition, HR 9221:

Limited federal payment of indirect costs of research under Defense Department grants to 20 percent of direct costs.

Provided that at least 35 percent of funds for repair, alteration and conversion of naval vessels be earmarked for private shipyards (leaving 65 percent for Navy yards) and authorized the Secretary of Defense to waive the formula if he thought it inconsistent with the public interest "based on urgency of requirement of the fleet."

Prohibited use of funds in the Act for expenses of the Army's Special Training and Enlistment Program (STEP) or similar programs.

Directed that the Army National Guard be maintained at an average strength of 380,000 through fiscal 1966 and the Army Reserve at a strength of 270,000.

Prohibited transfer of funds in the Act for support of a realignment or reorganization of the Army reserve components unless specifically approved by Congress "through the enactment of law."

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Aug. 25 -- Gaylord Nelson (D Wis.) -- Restore $15.2 million for the Army's Special Training and Enlistment Program (STEP) and delete language prohibiting use of funds in the bill for STEP. Roll-call vote, 27-67.

Daniel B. Brewster (D Md.) -- Bar use of Navy ship construction and conversion funds for the procurement of vessels or the construction of vessel components in foreign shipyards. Roll Call, 20-72.

Conference

The House Sept. 17, by a 382-0 roll-call vote, and the Senate Sept. 21, by voice vote, approved the conference report (H Rept 1006) on HR 9221, appropriating $46,887,-163,000 for the Department of Defense in fiscal 1966. The action sent the bill to the President. (For voting, see chart p. 1004)

The total appropriated was $10.1 million more than provided by the Senate and $1,698,919,000 more than provided by the House. It was $85,681,000 less than the sum requested, but included the entire $1.7 billion requested Aug. 4 for the Viet Nam war. Excluding this sum, the final version of the bill was only $1,081,000 less than approved by the House.

During House debate Sept. 17, Laird and House Minority Leader Gerald R. Ford (R Mich.) described the Administration's fiscal 1966 budget as "phony," a "fraud" and "inaccurate." Laird asserted that the Administration disregarded the increasing financial requirements of the Viet Nam war in order to "perform the magic" of keeping federal expenditures in fiscal 1966 below $100 billion. "An effort was made by the President of the United States to mislead the people," Laird charged.

Mahon expressed shock that Laird would use such "intemperate and unjustified language." He said Laird's remarks were "unfortunate and indefensible." The Budget, Mahon said, was prepared in the fall of 1964, and at that time it was not possible to "foresee the full extent of developments in Viet Nam...."

Senate debate Sept. 21 centered largely on the conferees' decision to uphold Senate action disallowing the proposed Defense Department merger of the Army Reserve and Army National Guard. Stennis said the conferees concluded that "any reorganization such as this would not hasten readiness but would destroy some of the readiness we have." Stennis added that Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara had been "factually incorrect" in stating that failure to approve the merger would perpetuate "unneeded, wasteful and useless units."

In addition, Stennis noted that the conferees also rejected a compromise merger plan initially affecting only 17 states. "This partial merger plan, if approved, would have gone so far that a complete merger would ultimately have been inevitable," he said. (See story p. 692)

CONFERENCE AGREEMENT

Following were the major actions by conferees on HR 9221:

Personnel -- Accepted the Senate version, which provided $1,791,000 more than the House version.

Operations and Maintenance -- Accepted the Senate version, which provided $8,128,000 more than the House version.

Procurement -- Approved $11,404,000,000 -- $14 million over the House figure and $14.9 million less than the Senate figure. The conferees accepted a Senate reduction of $1 million for an electronic-communications system at a classified Army site, but restored only $15 million of a $29.9-million House cut in anticipation of savings and recoupments in Navy procurement programs. The Senate version had restored the full $29.9 million.

Emergency Fund, Defense -- Appropriated $125 million for the Defense Department's "emergency fund" for research and development. The House had allowed $150 million, the Senate only $100 million.

Ship Construction -- Deleted the Senate formula allocating 35 percent of ship repair funds to private shipyards. However, the conference report stated that "the most effective, practical use of both public and private shipyards must continue to be made since both are essential to the security of the nation." In addition, the conferees "requested" the Secretary of Defense to inform Congress quarterly of his efforts to distribute vessel work between public and private yards "on a reasonable and equitable basis." (The Defense Department estimated that at least 23.6 percent of the funds for vessel work on HR 9221 would be allocated to private yards.)

Army Reserve-National Guard Merger -- Followed both the House and the Senate in providing funds to continue the Army Reserve and Army National Guard as separate organizations, contrary to Administration plans. The conferees stipulated that the former be programmed to attain an end-strength of 270,000 personnel on paid-drill status in fiscal 1966 and the latter an end-strength of 380,000, thus continuing both organizations at about their fiscal 1965 strengths. The Senate, but not the House, had required that the reserves be programmed to attain average strengths of those amounts, meaning a higher total of men on paid-drill status during the fiscal year. The conferees also adopted Senate language prohibiting the transfer of funds to carry out a reserve realignment not approved by Congress.

Other Actions -- In addition, the conferees approved: Senate deletion of House language limiting to $852.2 million the amount of military personnel funds available for permanent change of station travel; inclusion of Senate language prohibiting use of funds in the Act for expenses of the Army's STEP program; and inclusion of House language stipulating that defense funds could not be used to finance the entire cost of a research project conducted under a defense grant. On the latter item, the Senate had attached language limiting federal payment of indirect costs of defense research to 20 percent of direct costs. The conference report said that restoration of the House language "does not intend to approve the granting of funds in excess of the total amount justified in the Budget presentation."

RELATED DEVELOPMENTS -- April 12 -- The Defense Department announced the award of a $1.5-billion production contract, to the General Dynamics Corp. of Fort Worth, Texas, for 431 F-111 fighter aircraft. (1963 Almanac p. 1089) (Continued on next page)

Aug. 25 -- President Johnson directed the Defense Department to proceed "immediately" with development of a $1.5-billion manned orbiting laboratory (MOL). It would be the Department's first manned space assignment, all previous manned space activities having come under the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. The President said unmanned test flights of the MOL were scheduled for late 1966 or early 1967, the first unmanned launching for 1968, and the first manned flight for late 1968.

Sept. 16 -- McNamara announced that the Defense Department planned to hire an additional 60,000 civilians, beginning in 1966, to free military personnel for combat duty. McNamara said the Department planned to place civilians in military jobs wherever possible.

Sept. 30 -- The Defense Department announced the award of a $2-billion contract to Lockheed Aircraft Corp. of Marietta, Ga., to develop and build 58 giant C-5A jet transport planes. The first planes were expected to be delivered in 1969. The Department said the C-5A, with a gross weight of 350 tons, twice that of the largest existing military cargo plane, would be capable of carrying 50 tons of equipment non-stop across the Pacific, or more than 360 fully equipped soldiers.

Dec. 6 -- McNamara announced plans for closing or consolidating of 149 military installations, at an estimated savings of $410 million a year. On Dec. 8, he announced that, in connection with these plans, the Strategic Air Command (SAC) bomber fleet would be reduced by two-thirds by 1971. The entire fleet of 80 B-58s and all but 255 of the 600 B-52s would be retired before that time.

Dec. 10 -- McNamara announced that 210 models of a bomber version of the variable, swept-wing F-111 (TFX) fighter, the FB-111, would replace some of the B-58s and B-52s. He said the FB-111 would have twice the speed and about the same range as the B-52. The $1.75 billion cost of the FB-111s, McNamara said, would be less than the cost of modifying the B-52 fleet.

VIET NAM SUPPLEMENTAL

H J Res 447 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 286) May 5, 1965.
- Passed by the House by a 408-7 roll-call vote May 5. (See p. 958)
- Reported by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 176) May 5.
- Passed by the Senate by an 88-3 roll-call vote May 6. (See p. 1036)

PL 89-18 -- Signed into law May 7.

Congress in May 1965, by nearly unanimous roll-call votes of both chambers, quickly passed and cleared for the President's signature a bill (H J Res 447) making fiscal 1965 supplemental appropriations of $700 million for U.S. military operations in Viet Nam. The action came less than 53 hours after President Johnson appealed to Congress to show "prompt support of our basic course: resistance to aggression, moderation in the use of power, and a constant search for peace," by enacting the appropriation.

The supplemental request marked the first time that the Administration had asked for a defense appropriation specifically for Viet Nam, as an addition to the regular military budget. As U.S. involvement in the Viet Nam war was escalated during 1965, however, the Administration returned to ask Congress for $1.7 billion more for fiscal 1966. This sum was added to the regular defense appropriation of fiscal 1966. (See p. 177)

The House Appropriations Committee pointed out that the fiscal 1965 supplemental was not strictly necessary, since the Defense Department could transfer unspent funds from other programs to meet Viet Nam needs. (In July, the Department reported that defense expenditures in fiscal 1965 were $1.9 billion less than had been anticipated in January. See p. 170)

In the eyes of President Johnson, however, H J Res 447 was not only an appropriation but also a vote "to persist in our efforts to halt Communist agression in South Viet Nam." In his May 4 statement to members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, the House Foreign Affairs Committee, and the Senate and House Armed Services and Appropriations Committees, the President said, "Each Member of Congress who supports this request...is saying that the Congress and the President stand united before the world in joint determination that the independence of South Viet Nam shall be preserved and Communist attack will not succeed." (See text p. 1372)

Viewed in this light, the bill was similar to the 1964 resolution (H J Res 1145 -- PL 88-408) declaring Congressional support of "all necessary measures...to prevent further aggression" in Southeast Asia. But some Members of Congress refused to consider the appropriation bill a "declaration of war" or a "blank check" in support of the Administration's Viet Nam policy. (1964 Almanac p. 331)

PROVISIONS -- The allocation of funds in H J Res 447 as outlined by Defense Secretary McNamara in a May 18 memorandum to President Johnson:

(in millions)

	Army	Navy	Air Force	Total
Ammunition and Ordnance Procurement	$117.9	$135.9	$115.0	$368.8
Operation and Maintenance Expenses	46.6	56.2	49.8	152.6
Military Construction Projects	44.8	22.0	41.0	107.8
Aircraft Procurement	8.7	32.0	14.0	54.7
Other Operating Items	---	4.9	11.2	16.1
TOTAL	$218.0	$251.0	$231.0	$700.0

McNamara's memorandum also noted that ammunition and ordnance procurement funds would be spent for such items as air-to-ground rockets, cartridges, bombs, flares, etc.; operations and maintenance funds for supporting increased overhaul and maintenance loads, including additional spare parts procurement; constructions funds for warehouses, repair facilities, port facilities, airfields, hospitals, etc.; aircraft procurement funds for components of such aircraft as the HH-1B helicopters and the F-4 and TA-4E fighter bombers; and other operating item funds for patrol boats, special tropical gear, communications equipment, etc.

May 6 -- Ernest Gruening (D Alaska) -- "This is not a rubber stamp Congress. We should resent being dragged around like a dog on a leash.... Let's consider this bill on its merits."

Gaylord Nelson (D Wis.) -- "Obviously you need my vote less than I need my conscience.... In the cloakrooms and on the floor numerous distinguished Senators from both sides of the aisle have expressed their concern over the precipitous manner in which we are disposing of this matter."

Minority Leader Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) -- "There is no substitute for victory.... It would be a sorry spectacle indeed" if the South Vietnamese learned that "you've let us down as (Morse) wanted you to do." (In response, Morse said, "You've heard it now from within the Senate as well as from within the White House: 'You criticize the war-making power of this Administration and you're aiding Communism.' ")

Funds Requested

In making his request for the $700 million supplemental appropriation May 4, President Johnson noted that U.S. armed forces personnel had increased from 3,164 men in December 1961 to over 35,000 at the end of April 1965, that U.S. helicopter activity had increased from 30,000 flying hours in the first quarter of 1963 to 90,000 flying hours in the first quarter of 1965, and that U.S. air strikes "against military targets in North Viet Nam" had increased from 160 sorties in February to over 1,500 sorties in April.

The President also noted that over 400 Americans had died in Viet Nam. Mr. Johnson said although he did not ask for "complete approval" of his Viet Nam policy from Members of Congress, "an overwhelming vote" on the appropriation would clearly show national unity.

Deputy Defense Secretary Cyrus Vance May 4 said $200 million of the appropriation would be spent in fiscal 1965, and the balance in fiscal 1966. He said the funds would bring the total of U.S. defense and other expenditures in Viet Nam during fiscal 1965 to $1.7 billion. Based on figures released April 26 by Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara, that total was comprised of $70 million for food distribution (PL 480); $300 million for economic assistance; $330 million for military assistance; and $1 billion for military operations, including air and naval operations and advisory and logistical support of the South Vietnamese armed forces.

Vance said the extra funds were made necessary not only by the cost of escalation in Viet Nam, but by the dispatch of military forces to the Dominican Republic. (See story p. 514)

House, Senate Action

HOUSE. The House Appropriations Committee May 5 unanimously reported H J Res 447 (H Rept 286) after a 25-minute meeting. The report stated: "The authorities in existing law could have been utilized in lieu of the proposed appropriation. Supplies and equipment could have been diverted from other, less active areas and replaced at a later date." The report added, however, that "prudence dictates the enactment of the proposed supplemental.... The Committee believes a position of plenty -- militarily -- is to be desired in the light of world conditions."

The House Armed Services Committee May 4 waived its jurisdiction over certain construction and procurement items covered by the supplemental, clearing the way for action by the Appropriations Committee. Defense Secretary McNamara and Gen. Earle Wheeler, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, May 4 briefed first the Armed Services Committee and then the Appropriations Committee.

Floor Action. The House May 5, after brief debate, passed H J Res 447 by a 408-7 roll-call vote and sent it to the Senate. The seven dissenting votes were all cast by Democrats: George E. Brown Jr. (Calif.), Phillip Burton (Calif.); John Conyers Jr. (Mich.), John G. Dow (N.Y.), Don Edwards (Calif.), Edith Green (Ore.) and William F. Ryan (N.Y.). Conyers and Dow were freshman Members. (For voting, see chart p. 958)

DEBATE -- May 5 -- Appropriations Committee Chairman George H. Mahon (D Texas) -- Although the money could have been provided in a less dramatic way, "the President asked us to counsel with him and work with him, as members of the team...." Disregarding Congress while it was in session "would have been ill advised."

Minority Leader Gerald R. Ford (R Mich.) -- Congress' action "should convince our enemies that we, Democrats or Republicans, can stand together to do that which is right, legislatively speaking, in conjunction with the requests of the Executive Branch...."

George E. Brown Jr. (D Calif.) -- "What we are being asked to do is approve a policy of the Administration in waging war in Viet Nam. This I cannot do." The President is "gambling the security of the United States on the illusion that Communism can be defeated by the slaughter of peasants...."

John Conyers Jr. (D Mich.) -- "I do not support the present policy in Viet Nam."

John G. Dow (D N.Y.) -- "The bill is equivalent to a declaration of war with little warning to show it does not mean that."

SENATE. The Senate Appropriations Committee May 5 unanimously reported H J Res 447 (S Rept 176) after a closed session meeting with members of the Armed Services Committee to hear McNamara and Wheeler.

Floor Action. The Senate May 6 passed H J Res 447 by an 88-3 roll-call vote following five hours of heated debate May 5 and 6. The action cleared the bill for the President's signature. Senators opposing the measure were Ernest Gruening (D Alaska), Wayne Morse (D Ore.) and Gaylord Nelson (D Wis.). (For voting, see chart p. 1036)

DEBATE -- May 5 -- A number of Senators, including Joseph S. Clark (D Pa.), Frank Church (D Idaho), and Jacob K. Javits (R N.Y.), expressed approval of H J Res 447, but stressed that their votes should not be construed as endorsement of a "command decision" or "blank check" permitting the President to use U.S. troops in ground combat in Viet Nam.

John Stennis (D Miss.) -- Agreed that H J Res 447 was "an appropriation bill, not a declaration of war...or a blank check." One of its major functions was to "replenish" fiscal 1965 funds, "and leave them available to be carried over," for fiscal 1966 operations, Stennis said.

Wayne Morse (D Ore.) -- "I say sadly and solemnly, but out of deep conviction, that today my Government stands before the world drunk with military power" and is about to lay the foundation for "intense Asiatic hatred." H J Res 447 gives "the President power to make undeclared war." Senators "can violate your constitutional trust if you want to, but I'll not be with you."

Albert Gore (D Tenn.) -- "I propose that after this escalated firepower, the President propose a cease-fire... provided it is met by the Viet Cong with a cease-fire. This would be a manifestation of good faith."

NEW PROGRAMS FUNDED IN SUPPLEMENTAL BILL

HR 11588 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 1162) Oct. 13, 1965.

- Passed by the House by a 242-100 roll-call vote Oct. 14. (See p. 1020)
- Reported by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 912) Oct. 19.
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote Oct. 20.
- Conference report (H Rept 1198) agreed to Oct. 21 by a 250-84 roll-call vote of the House (see p. 1022) and by voice vote of the Senate.

PL 89-309 -- Signed into law Oct. 31.

In clearing HR 11588, the last money bill of the year, Congress appropriated $4,741,644,602 in supplemental appropriations for fiscal 1966. The bill contained funds for many of the new and expanded programs enacted during the session, including $1.5 billion for antipoverty activities, $1.4 billion for urban renewal over a two-year period, $332 million for regional development, and financing for numerous other undertakings, including "medicare" and college improvements.

Controversies. Two of President Johnson's key proposals, rent supplements for low-income families and a Teacher Corps for slum areas, were denied funds in HR 11588. And the House failed by only four votes to knock out planning funds for the first public power plant in New England, the Dickey-Lincoln School project in Maine.

The rent supplements, authorized in the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1965 (PL 89-117), were intended to aid low-income families who were unable to obtain standard housing with their own incomes. (See story p. 358) The controversial program was only narrowly approved by both chambers when the authorization bill was considered. It was criticized as a radical social development and for the haziness of its administrative guidelines.

President Johnson sought authority in HR 11588 to contract for $30 million in rent subsidies. The House Appropriations Committee recommended only $6 million in contract authority but even this sum was deleted on the House floor. A coalition of Republicans and Southern Democrats succeeded in deleting the item on a 185-162 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart p. 1020) After the Senate Committee reinstated $12 million for contracts the proposal came within eight votes of being deleted on the Senate floor. With a majority of Senate conferees on record as opposing the appropriation and House conferees bound by the House vote to disapprove funds for the program, the final version of HR 11588 provided no contractual authority or funds for rent subsidies but appropriated $450,000 for administrative costs of drawing up a "sound" program for resubmission to Congress in 1966.

The National Teacher Corps, a part of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (PL 89-329), was intended to improve lower education in slums and other impoverished areas by sending in teams of experienced teachers and teacher-interns to strengthen local school programs. Authorization of the Corps was criticized on the House floor and was approved only after a motion to delete the program was rejected Oct. 20 by a 152-226 roll-call vote. The same day the Senate approved funds in HR 11588 to initiate programs in the Higher Education Act, including $13.2 million for the Teacher Corps. This sum was dropped in conference with the House.

The final sum appropriated by HR 11588 was $297,684,250 less than the Administration request, which included funds previously passed over by Congress, $527,214,992 more than the amount approved by the House, and $125,603,500 less than the Senate sum. The difference in the House and final bills was largely attributable to the fact that the final version carried funds for programs, such as college aid, requested by the Administration and approved by the Senate after the House had passed the bill.

New Programs Financed

HR 11588 provided the initial financing for numerous programs authorized by the first session of the 89th Congress. Following are the major new programs funded. Both the House and Senate appropriated the same amount for each program unless specified otherwise below.

Housing Programs: Rent Supplements -- Denied the $30 million requested for contracts for rent supplements and the $900,000 requested for actual supplement payments in fiscal 1966, but appropriated $450,000 for administrative expenses of preparing the program. The House had struck out contract and payment authority on the floor (see preceding column) but appropriated $170,000 for administrative expenses. The Senate provided $12 million in contract authority, $360,000 in payments and $450,000 (instead of the requested $850,000) for administrative expenses.

Rural Housing -- Approved the full Budget request of $100 million to create a revolving fund to insure rural housing loans, as authorized by the 1965 Housing Act (PL 89-117). The program is administered by the Department of Agriculture's Farmers Home Administration.

Housing for the Elderly and Handicapped -- Provided the full $50 million request for direct loans, authorized in the 1965 Housing Act. The House had cut it to $35 million, but the Senate voted the full amount.

Urban Renewal -- Provided the requested and Senate-approved total of $1,400,570,000 for urban renewal programs. Of this amount, $675,570,000 was to finance new grants and administrative expenses in fiscal 1966 and $725,000,000 was for advance funding for fiscal 1967. The House had voted $50,000 less for administrative expenses in fiscal 1966. (The Independent Offices appropriations bill, HR 7997, required annual appropriations for the program in place of contract authority previously used. See story p. 154.)

The House added language stipulating that no more than $1,500,000 of urban renewal funds could be used for rehabilitation grants during each of the fiscal years 1966-67, and that no more than an annual $75 million could be used for code enforcement grants. This provision was deleted by the Senate, but restored in conference.

Urban Planning Grants -- Compromised on $8,162,000, which was $8,163,000 less than the request. The House had provided $6,325,000; the Senate, $10 million.

Open Space Land Program -- Carried the House figure of $26,975,000, about half of the $52,925,000 requested. The Senate had provided $36 million. Of the final appropriation, $5 million was for a new program of parks in built-up areas and $4 million was for a new urban beautification program authorized in the 1965 Act.

Neighborhood Facilities -- Compromised on $12 million for grants to assist local public bodies and agencies, build community centers and other neighborhood facilities. The request was $25 million; the House provided $9 million and the Senate $15 million. The grants were authorized by the 1965 Housing Act.

Mortgage Relief -- Denied the entire $1 million requested by the Federal Housing Administration and the Veterans Administration to make loans covering one year's principal and interest on federally insured mortgages to persons who were unemployed as the result of the closing of a federal installation. The House Committee said that no applications had yet been filed with either agency "and it seems unlikely that any funds will be required." The program was authorized in a House floor amendment to the 1965 Housing Act.

Natural Disaster Study -- Approved $1 million of the $1.6 million request (not considered by the House, but recommended by the Senate) for a study by the Department of Housing and Urban Development of alternative programs which could be established to provide financial assistance to persons suffering property loss in floods and other natural disasters. The study was authorized in the Southeast Hurricane Disaster Relief Act of 1965 (HR 11539 -- PL 89-339). (See story p. 676)

Social Security Amendments, Medicare. The bill carried funds for several programs included in the Social Security and "medicare" bill enacted in July -- PL 89-97. (See story p. 236)

Mental Retardation Planning -- Approved the full request of $2,835,000 to permit the Public Health Service to assist state programs for combatting mental retardation (item carried under the heading, chronic diseases and health of the aged).

Home Health Services -- Provided the full $9 million requested for formula grants to help the states develop home health services for medicare recipients. (This was to be carried out under the PHS community health practice program).

Health Insurance for the Aged -- Approved the requested transfer of $2,100,000 from the Social Security trust funds to the Public Health Service for administrative expenses related to the professional health aspects of medicare.

Social Security Expenses -- Authorized the use of $125,212,000 from the trust fund, as requested, to cover administrative expenses incurred by the Social Security Administration in implementing PL 89-97. The House Committee said that testimony substantiated the estimate that the programs authorized by PL 89-97 would result in a 40 percent increase in the work load of the Social Security Administration. The funds were to increase the number of employees from 36,615 to 44,910.

Public Assistance -- Appropriated $222 million, the entire request, to finance the PL 89-97 program increasing grants to the states for public assistance payments.

Maternal and Child Welfare -- Provided the full request and House figure of $25 million. The Senate had cut out the $15 million program of grants for health care of preschool and school-age children, explaining that it seemed to overlap the "Head Start" program administered by the Office of Economic Opportunity. The other funds provided $5 million for the program of maternal and child health services and $5 million for additional grants to crippled children services. Conferees directed the Department of HEW's Welfare Administration to coordinate its child health care program with the health services for children provided by the antipoverty program.

Regional Medical Programs. Provided the full Senate figure of $25 million, requested after the House acted on the bill, to provide PHS grants for planning and establishing regional medical programs to combat heart disease, cancer and stroke. The grants were authorized by the Heart Disease, Cancer and Stroke Amendments of 1965 -- PL 89-239. (See story p. 324)

Mental Health Staffing. Agreed to the Senate figure, $20.2 million (request and House figure, $19.7 million), to provide grants and technical assistance for the staffing of community mental health centers. The grants by the National Institute of Mental Health were authorized in the Community Mental Health Centers Amendments of 1965 -- PL 89-105. (See story p. 329) The bill included Senate language earmarking $500,000 of the appropriation for an unbudgeted grant program for research in emotional illnesses of children. This was authorized in the Social Security Amendments, PL 89-97 (above).

Educational Improvement for the Handicapped. Approved the full request of $4 million to increase grants for research and demonstration activities aimed at improving educational opportunities for handicapped children. The increase was authorized in the community mental health bill, PL 89-105 (above).

Health Professions Education. Approved the Senate figure of $11 million, of a $23,246,000 request not considered by the House, to carry out the provisions of PL 89-290, the Health Professions Educational Assistance Amendments of 1965. (See story p. 333) The programs funded were: grants to improve teaching programs, $10,482,000 (request: $20 million); scholarships for current students, $200,000 plus authority for advance commitments for the next academic year (request: $2,778,000 for first-year students in the 1966-67 academic year); student loan funds, $200,000, as requested; administrative expenses, $118,000 (request: $268,000).

Air Pollution. Provided the full $625,000 requested and approved by the Senate, for anti-pollution activities authorized by the Motor Vehicle Air Pollution Control Act, a part of PL 89-272. (See story p. 780). Of the funds appropriated, $470,000 was earmarked to establish standards on automobile emissions and the remaining $155,000 for studies on the abatement of international air pollution and the prevention of air pollution problems. This grant was not considered by the House.

Solid Waste Disposal. Approved the Senate figure of $4 million (the request for $6,525,000 was not considered by the House) for Public Health Service grants to encourage the development of new and improved methods of solid waste disposal. Also provided $1,400,000 of a $2,100,000 request for research by the Interior Department's Bureau of Mines to develop economically feasible methods for utilizing junked automobiles. The programs were authorized in the air pollution bill, PL 89-272 (above).

Water Treatment, Storm Water Control. Provided the full $50,628,000 request (not considered by the House but approved by the Senate) for a new waste treatment program, including $30 million in grants for constructing waste treatment works, $20 million in grants and contracts for sewer overflow and storm water control, and $628,000 for administrative expenses and the establishing of water control standards. The Senate Committee said the construction grants would "be made to the states on the basis of population only." The funds were authorized by PL 89-234, the Water Quality Act of 1965. (See story p. 743)

Rural Water and Waste Disposal Systems. Provided $20 million (request not considered by the House: $17 million; Senate figure: $30 million) for matching grants to help develop water supply and waste disposal systems in rural areas. The program is administered by the Farmers Home Administration and was authorized in PL 89-240. (See story p. 138)

Basic Water and Sewer Facilities. Provided the full request of $100 million to fund a 1965 Housing Act authorization of grants for construction or improvement of basic water and sewer facilities, to be administered by HUD.

Public Works Planning. Provided the full $5 million requested to carry out Housing Act authority for public works planning funds, and $5 million of the $10 million requested to initiate a Housing Act program of grants to encourage communities to acquire land for future construction of public works and facilities.

Communicable Disease Activities. Approved the full request of $8 million for the immunization program as broadened under the Community Health Services Extension Amendments of 1965 -- PL 89-109. (See story p. 331)

Migrant Health Grants. Provided the full $3 million requested for migrant workers' health project grants extended by PL 89-109 (above).

Higher Education. Provided $160 million of the request for $274 million, not considered by the House. The Senate had approved $173.2 million, including $13.2 million for the Teacher Corps which was deleted in conference. (For breakdown of the college aid funds appropriated, see story on the Higher Education Act, p. 294.)

Vocational Rehabilitation. Provided the entire request of $9,310,000 to expand vocational rehabilitation programs. The funds were not considered by the House. The new program was authorized by the Vocational Rehabilitation Act Amendments of 1965 -- PL 89-333. (See story p. 337)

Foundation on Arts and Humanities. Appropriated $10,700,000, which was $7,310,000 less than requested, to initiate grant programs for the visual and performing arts and for the humanities. In making the cuts, the House Committee said it would be "more prudent to first establish sound and practical operating procedures...than to administer the program in haste and commit costly and serious errors...." Also approved $1 million requested by the Office of Education for the procurement of school equipment and materials, and to train teachers in the arts and humanities. The grant programs were authorized under PL 89-209, the National Foundation on the Arts and Humanities Act of 1965. (See story p. 621)

Voting Rights. Appropriated $2 million for the Civil Service Committee's responsibilities in sending voting registrars to Southern states under the Civil Rights Act of 1965. Also provided $3,750,000 for the Census Bureau to collect statistics on registration and voting, as authorized in the 1964 and 1965 Civil Rights Acts. This was $2,205,000 less than the request. (For 1964 Act, see 1964 Almanac p. 338; for 1965 Act, see this volume, p. 533)

Antipoverty Program. Provided the entire request and House figure, $1.5 billion, to fund the antipoverty program. The Senate had provided an additional $10 million, earmarked for community action conservation work. The conference committee deleted the additional funds but permitted up to $10 million of the total appropriation to be used for the program, at the discretion of the Director.

Conferees agreed to Senate language: (1) extending the availability of funds for antipoverty contracts from the one-year period provided in the House bill to 24 months; and (2) stipulating that funds could not be made available for any grant until the Director of the Office of Economic Opportunity had certified the recipient's ability to administer the proposed program, and the recipient agreed that the General Accounting Office should have access to records which pertained exclusively to the grant.

The House Committee report commended OEO for its "remarkable ability" to get the "complex, multifaceted program moving expeditiously and in an efficient manner." The Senate Committee, however, said more care should be taken to learn from errors committed in the program's first year.

The funds were authorized under the Economic Opportunity Amendments of 1965. (See story p. 405)

Crime Programs: Crime Prevention -- Approved $7,249,000, which was $2,078,000 less than requested, to implement the Justice Department crime prevention and rehabilitation programs authorized by the Law Enforcement Assistance Act of 1965 -- PL 89-197. (See story p. 634)

Correctional Rehabilitation Study -- Provided the full $560,000 requested, not considered by the House, for grants partially covering costs of research study of personnel practices and needs in the field of correctional rehabilitation. The program, administered by the Vocational Rehabilitation Administration in HEW, was authorized by the Correctional Rehabilitation Study Act of 1965 -- PL 89-178. (See story p. 631)

Crime Commissions -- Appropriated $900,000 -- $600,000 less than the request -- for the President's commissions studying nationwide crime problems and crime in the District of Columbia. (See story p. 628)

Regional Development. Provided the House figure, $332,425,000, for the new Economic Development Administration in the Commerce Department and $50,000 for the new Assistant Secretary and staff responsible for the program. The appropriation was broken down as follows: $203.2 million (request and Senate figure, $254.5 million) for development facility grants in redevelopment areas; the full request of $105 million for economic development; the House figure of $18,125,000 for technical and community assistance of various types ($1,200,000 less than the Senate figure and $6,325,000 less than the request); and the House and Senate sum of $6,100,000 for regional economic planning ($3,200,000 less than the request). Activities under this program were authorized by PL 89-136, the Public Works and Economic Development Act of 1965. (See story p. 798)

State Technical Services. Provided $3.5 million, contrasted with the request for $7 million, to begin the program of grants to state technical information programs and to establish a Commerce Department clearinghouse of scientific and technological information. The program was authorized in PL 89-182, the State Technical Services Act of 1965. (See story p. 918)

High-Speed Ground Transportation. Provided the House figure of $18,250,000, cutting the request and Senate sum by $1,750,000. PL 89-220, the High-Speed Ground Transportation Act, authorized the Secretary of Commerce to undertake research, development and demonstrations in high-speed ground transportation. (See story p. 901)

D.C. Subway. Approved $7,679,000 for initial construction costs of a 24.9 mile rapid transit system for the District of Columbia, $4 million less than the request. Only the $3,679,000 appropriated for the National Capital Transportation Agency was from federal funds; the remaining $4 million was from local D.C. funds. An additional $320,551 had previously been appropriated for this purpose to the Agency. The transit system was authorized under PL 89-173, the National Capital Transportation Act of 1965. (See story p. 672)

Highway Beauty, Safety. Provided the Senate figure, $70,750,000 (the request for $92,750,000 was not considered by the House) for landscaping, scenic enhancement and billboard and junkyard control programs authorized by the Highway Beautification Act -- PL 89-285. (See story p. 724). Within the appropriation, $60 million was provided for grants for landscape and roadside development ($20 million less than the request), $10 million for control of outdoor advertising and junkyards ($2 million less than the request) and $750,000 to cover expenses of administering the programs.

Also provided the entire $290,000 request, not considered by the House, for administrative expenses of establishing standards of highway safety to be met by the states. This was authorized in the federal-aid highway bill, PL 89-139. (See story p. 734)

U.S. Capitol. Provided the entire request and House figure, $300,000, which had been deleted by the Senate, to fund preliminary plans and cost estimates for rebuilding and extending the west front of the U.S. Capitol building. The conference report repeated a statement in the House report on HR 11588 that the Capitol Architect was not to proceed with construction, contracts or detailed plans until there was further consideration of the proposal and Congress appropriated the money. Costs were roughly estimated at $24 to $31 million.

Both chambers approved the request for $500,000 to plan the newly authorized James Madison Memorial Building for the Library of Congress. (See story p. 633)

In addition, HR 11588:

Stipulated that no part of any appropriation contained in the bill could remain available for obligation beyond fiscal 1966 unless extension was expressly provided.

Stipulated that not more than $1.5 million of urban renewal funds appropriated by the bill could be used for rehabilitation grants during each of the fiscal years 1966-67 and that no more than an annual $75 million could be used for code enforcement grants.

Authorized additional expenditures of $3,375,000 for matching grants to cover certain expenses of state and local civil defense organizations and provided additional authorization of $750,000 for management expenses of civil defense functions administered by the Department of Defense.

Merged an additional $320,551 in previously appropriated funds with the appropriations for initial costs of a rapid transit system for the District of Columbia.

Provided that certain antipoverty funds would be available for contracts lasting up to 24 months.

Stipulated that none of the antipoverty funds appropriated by the bill could be made available for any grant until the Director of the Office of Economic Opportunity had certified the recipient's ability to administer the proposed program and the recipient had agreed that the General Accounting Office should have access to records which pertained exclusively to the grant.

Made all appropriations, authorizations and authority provided by HR 11588 retroactive to July 1, 1965, (in order to cover fiscal 1966 obligations made in anticipation of the Act).

Background

When HR 11588 was before the House Appropriations Committee, the Administration requested $4,364,120,110 in supplemental fiscal 1966 funds. It also repeated requests for $68,125,000 in funds that had been denied when the regular appropriation bills were considered by Congress: $59,125,000 for expanded housing programs; $1 million for the Public Land Law Review Commission; and $8 million for an enlarged immunization program for children. The House passed the bill Oct. 14 carrying $4,214,429,610.

The Administration requested an additional $607,083,742 in supplemental funds after the House passed the bill. This brought the total considered by the Senate Committee to $4,971,203,852 in supplemental funds plus the $68,125,000 previously passed over -- $5,039,328,852 in all.

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- Oct. 13 reported HR 11588 (H Rept 1162), recommending $4,214,609,610, a reduction of $217,635,500 from the combined Administration requests for supplemental and previously passed over funds. The largest cuts were made in housing programs, the new Economic Development Administration in the Commerce Department and Post Office operations funds.

In actions taken on major items not covered in the preceding section of this story on New Programs Financed (p. 182), the Committee did the following:

Refugee Assistance. Approved the full request, $12,600,000, to finance the reception, assistance and resettlement services to an expected 42,500 Cuban refugees seeking asylum in the United States. Said it was the Committee's intention that the appropriation was to cover expenses of "all governmental agencies concerned in the processing of these refugees upon their arrival in the United States." The funds went to HEW's Welfare Administration.

Supersonic Aircraft Development. Provided for appropriation of $140,000,000, the full amount requested, for continuation of research on a civil supersonic transport aircraft. Urged that "progress by the contractors be closely monitored" by the Federal Aviation Agency (FAA) and added that "if technological progress warrants," the FAA should cut back the 18-month, $220 million research and testing period preceding prototype construction. (See story p. 881)

FBI Academy. Provided the full $901,000 requested for planning and site preparation of a new FBI training academy, but deferred all but $1,300,000 of a $14,763,000 request for actual construction funds. Indicated that the balance of the request would be provided when detailed plans were developed by the General Services Administration.

Housing. Appropriated $1,590,641,500 -- $76,183,500 less than requested -- for housing and urban development programs administered by the Housing and Home Finance Agency (HHFA). Of the total budget estimates, $1,607,650,000 was requested to fund new programs authorized by the 1965 Housing Act. The remaining $59,175,000 was for public works planning, urban planning and open space land grants authorized under PL 88-560, the Housing Act of 1964, and expanded in the 1965 Act. (For details of 1965 bill, see story p. 358; for PL 88-560, see 1964 Almanac p. 274.)

In actions on major HHFA requests, the Committee:

Rent Supplements. Cut the $30 million request for contractual authority under the 1965 Act's rent supplements program to $6 million for fiscal 1966. Also reduced funds for rent supplement payments in fiscal 1966 to $180,000 -- $720,000 under the request -- and cut an $850,000 request for administrative expenses to $170,000. The Committee report said the reduced funds were sufficient to provide 10,000 subsidized units -- "a strong beginning for the program." The report added that "this level of operation in the first year will provide much needed experience as a basis for refining and perfecting program standards and demonstrating the merit of this type of housing assistance" prior to expansion of the plan in subsequent years.

Also added language limiting both contractual authority and payment of rent supplements to projects which were either part of a "workable program" -- the basis for federal housing aid for a locality -- or had been specifically approved by local officials. The report said the new requirement "...strengthens local planning and ensures local participation in the rent supplement program similar to that required for other housing programs involving a federal contribution of funds."

Civil Defense. Approved Budget language providing a $3,375,000 increase in the authorization for matching grants to cover personnel and administrative expenses of state and local civil defense organizations and providing a $750,000 increase in authorization for management expenses of civil defense programs administered by the Department of Defense. This was a transfer of existing funds.

Disaster Relief. Provided all but $1 million of the $23,500,000 requested for repair, replacement or restoration of national forests, roads and trails destroyed or damaged by floods which struck the Pacific Northwest during December 1964 and January 1965. Also provided $6,320,000, a reduction of $2 million in the Budget request, to finance the remaining cost of road and bridge repair on Oregon and California grant lands damaged or destroyed by the same floods. The funds were authorized by PL 89-41 -- Pacific Northwest Disaster Relief Act -- (See story p. 676)

National Aquarium. Provided $9,240,000 for continued construction of the National Fisheries Center and Aquarium in Washington, D.C., authorized in 1962. (1962 Almanac p. 475)

Additional HEW Staff. Cut to $163,000 the $326,000 requested for four new Assistant Secretaries of HEW and staffs. The Health Research Facilities Amendments of 1965 (PL 89-115) created two new Assistant Secretaries and converted the existing position of special assistant to the Secretary for health and medical affairs to the position of Assistant Secretary for Health and Medical Affairs. In addition, the water pollution control bill (PL 89-234) authorized a new Assistant Secretary for Water Pollution. (See stories, p. 342, 743)

The Committee disapproved funds for the proposed Assistant Secretaries for Special Programs and for Water Pollution and their staff. It approved 18 new staff positions, half the number requested.

Water Resources Planning. Approved $200,000 -- a $35,000 reduction from Budget estimates -- for establishment and first-year operation of the Federal Water Resources Council, which was to coordinate federal water resource planning and aid state and regional programs. Also provided the full $110,000 requested to create the first of a number of federal-state river basin planning commissions. Both bodies were established under the Water Resources Planning Act of 1965 (PL 89-80). (See story p. 759)

USIA Southeast Asia Activities. Recommended the full request of $12,604,000 to increase information activities in South Viet Nam and Thailand and to build more broadcasting facilities to reach the area.

Small Business Administration. Provided the full $76 million requested for additional capital for the Small Business Administration revolving fund, to meet disaster loan requirements.

Coinage Production. Appropriated $13 million -- $877,000 less than requested -- to continue the Bureau of the Mint's crash program for the production of coins and to provide funds to initiate production of coins of the new alloy authorized under PL 89-81 -- Coinage Act of 1965. (See story p. 882)

Mint Facilities. Approved the full request of $21,300,000 to redesign plans for a new mint at Philadelphia, Pa., to develop plans for a cladding capability and for related construction at the existing Denver mint, and to provide the new Philadelphia facility with additional equipment suitable for use with the alloy for silver coinage authorized by PL 89-81.

Post Office Department. Denied the entire $41,500,000 requested by the Post Office Department to cover costs of an expected sharp increase in the volume of mail throughout fiscal 1966. The Committee report said that the Bureau of the Budget's apportionment of funds to the Department on a deficiency basis would ensure funding of all operational requirements until the fourth quarter of fiscal 1966. "At that time," the report added, "the Department will be in a better position to determine the actual amount of additional funds required."

FLOOR ACTION

The House passed HR 11588 Oct. 14 by a 242-100 roll-call vote. As passed, the bill appropriated $4,214,429,610 -- $217,815,500 less than the President's requests and $180,000 less than the amount recommended by the Appropriations Committee. (For voting, see chart p. 1020)

The largest sums in the measure included $1.5 billion for the antipoverty program, $1.4 billion for urban renewal, $332 million for area redevelopment and related programs, $222 million in grants to states for public assistance, $140 million for development of a supersonic aircraft, $100 million for water and sewer facility grants and $76 million for the Small Business Administration revolving fund, to meet disaster loan requirements. Together, these items encompassed 90 percent of the funds appropriated by the bill.

Debate on the measure bypassed the major money sections and centered on an attempt to eliminate funds for the rent supplements program. After a heated discussion, an amendment by James Harvey (R Mich.) to drop the $6 million contract authority and $180,000 allowance for supplement payments was accepted by two non-record votes and by a 185-162 roll call.

In their assault on the supplement plan, proponents of the Harvey amendment contended that recently promulgated regulations by the Housing and Home Finance Agency (HHFA) overstepped the bounds of the original provision by increasing income limits for eligibility. Under the new regulations, Harvey argued, a family with assets of as much as $25,000 would be eligible for subsidized housing. Administration forces supporting the amendment were unprepared for a statistical rebuttal, a factor thought to considerably weaken their position. (A HHFA spokesman told CQ Oct. 15 that the $25,000 asset limitation was "beyond anything" that could be computed under the formula provided by the regulations).

In his move to eliminate the rent supplements, Harvey made clear that his intention was not to kill the program but to delay its administration "until we can get these regulations rewritten." Paul A. Fino (R N.Y.) went farther. Fino said the program passed Congress under "false pretenses." He said it was "a social planner's dream disguised in housing terminology (by) giving the Housing Administrator a blank check to federalize American residential patterns and subsidize forced economic integration .... The rent supplements program is not worth a penny."

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

Oct. 14 -- James Harvey (R Mich.) -- Delete language providing $6 million in contractual authority and $180,000 in appropriations for a new program of rent supplements to low-income families. Standing vote, 99-95; teller vote, 111-104, and roll-call vote, 185-162.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Oct. 14 -- Glenn R. Davis (R Wis.) -- Reduce new loan authority for the District of Columbia from $2 million to $250,000. (The $2 million appropriation was intended for the District's one-third share of the initial costs of a rapid transit system for the metropolitan Washington area). Standing vote, 20-76.

Charles Raper Jonas (R N.C.) -- Delete the appropriation of $5 million for a new program of grants to encourage communities to acquire land for future construction of public works and facilities. Voice vote.

Jonas -- Delete language authorizing use of up to $75 million in urban renewal funds for a new program of code enforcement grants; substitute a provision specifically prohibiting use of any of the urban renewal appropriation to fund the code enforcement program. Voice.

Davis -- Reduce the initial federal share of D.C. rapid transit construction funds provided in the bill from $3,679,000 to $500,000. Voice.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- Oct. 19 reported HR 11588 (S Rept 912) recommending $4,782,218,102 -- $257,110,750 less than the revised budget requests for $4,971,203,852 in supplemental funds and $68,125,000 in previously passed-over funds, or a combined request of $5,039,328,852.

Changes made in major new programs funded in the bill appear in the preceding section on New Programs Financed (p. 182). Other changes made by the Senate Committee in the House-passed version were as follows:

Housing. Appropriated $1,626,980,000 -- $41,355,000 less than requested but $36,518,500 over the House sum -- for housing and urban development programs administered by the Housing and Home Finance Agency (HHFA).

The Committee restored $12 million of the $30 million requested but denied by the House for contractual authority under the rent supplements program for fiscal 1966. Also restored $360,000 of a $900,000 request for rent supplement payments in fiscal 1966 under the contracts and provided $450,000 (request: $850,000; House: $170,000) to draft plans and regulations for the program. The appropriation was designed to provide 20,000 subsidized units -- a level which the Committee cited as necessary to get the program off to a "strong beginning" in fiscal 1966.

Federal Contract Compliance. Provided $444,000 -- of $464,000 requested, not considered by the House -- to finance contract compliance functions transferred from the President's Commission on Equal Employment Opportunity to the Department of Labor and to meet costs of terminating the Committee. (See story p. 570)

Vocational Education. Disallowed the entire $3,500,000 requested, not considered by the House, for planning seven residential vocational schools in crowded and slum areas. Said the funds had been deleted because no sites had been selected for any of the seven schools. The projects were authorized under the Vocational Education Act of 1963 (PL 88-210). (1963 Almanac p. 201)

Water Research. Recommended an unbudgeted $1 million to fund the full authorization of $2 million in fiscal 1966 for matching grants to the states for water research projects. The report said 99 projects calling for $3 million in federal funds had been proposed by the states. The program was authorized in the Water Resources Research Act of 1964 (PL 88-379). (1964 Almanac p. 507)

Additional HEW Staff. Appropriated $275,000 -- $51,000 under the request but $112,000 over the House sum -- for four additional Assistant Secretaries of HEW and staffs. The increased funds were designed to restore the two Assistant Secretary posts and 10 of the 16 staff positions denied by the House.

Power Projects. Recommended an appropriation of an unbudgeted $1,950,000, not considered by the House, for initial planning of two controversial Army Corps of Engineers flood control and hydroelectric projects; $1,850,000 for preconstruction planning on the Dickey-Lincoln School Project on the St. John River, Maine, and $100,000 for the same purpose at the Rowlesburg project on the Cheat River, W. Va. The funds were authorized by PL 89-298 -- the omnibus rivers and harbors bill. (See story p. 751)

Auburn-Folsom South. Provided the entire $500,000 requested, not considered by the House, for advanced acquisition of rights-of-way on the Auburn-Folsom South Dam and Reservoir unit of the Central Valley Project in California. The Committee report indicated that a rapid increase in land values made immediate acquisition necessary even though construction funds had not yet been appropriated. (See story p. 739)

Balance-of-Payments Statistics. Restored $165,000 of the $260,000 requested but denied by the House to finance a study by the Commerce Department's Office of Business Economics of a second accounting system, in addition to the one currently in use, to determine the U.S. balance-of-payments position.

HemisFair 1968 Exposition. Provided the full request of $125,000, not considered by the House, for a study on the extent of U.S. participation in the exposition to be held in San Antonio, Texas. The funds were authorized by PL 89-284. (See story p. 664)

Small Business Administration. Provided the full revised request, $160 million, for additional capital for the Small Business Administration revolving fund, to meet disaster loan requirements. Of the total, $76 million was initially requested and approved by the House. A later request for $84 million was made contingent on passage of legislation increasing the authorized ceiling on SBA loans. (This was enacted as PL 89-334 Nov. 8. See story p. 862)

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate Oct. 20 passed HR 11588, with amendments, by voice vote, carrying $4,867,248,102 -- $652,818,492 more than the sum approved by the House.

Of programs considered by the Senate after House passage of the bill, the largest sums appropriated were $173.2 million for higher educational activities, $84 million for additional Small Business Administration disaster loans, and $71,040,000 for highway beautification and safety programs.

Prior to passage, the Senate agreed by voice votes to four amendments adding $85,030,000 to the total recommended by the Appropriations Committee. The most important of the proposals was one by Russell B. Long (D La.) providing $70 million to repair public facilities damaged by Hurricane Betsy during September 1965.

Debate on the measure centered on an attempt by opponents of rent supplements to delete or reduce the $12 million in contractual authority and $360,000 for supplement payments written into the House bill by the Appropriations Committee. Following a heated discussion, an amendment by Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.) to delete all the operating funds for the program but increase the pre-implementation planning appropriation was defeated by a 37-45 roll-call vote. A subsequent attempt by Saltonstall to cut funds for the program in half was repulsed on a 37-41 roll call. (For voting, see chart p. 1079)

In leading the assault on supplements, Saltonstall contended that the program should be delayed until exhaustive studies had been made to determine proper individual standards for "every locality and every city in the United States." Edmund S. Muskie (D Maine) retorted that "a great amount of lead time" was needed between appropriation of funds and the actual implementation of housing programs. If HHFA were given "no authority to move" and no commitment or promise for contracts with private industry, he added, "the program will come to a screeching halt. They (HHFA) will have to stand on the sidelines until Congress decides to provide the money authorized by the legislation."

Of the 18 Senate conferees later appointed to the conference committee on HR 11588, 10 voted in favor or were paired for one or the other of the Saltonstall amendments. Five of the conferees opposed both of the amendments, and three did not vote.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Oct. 20 -- A. S. Mike Monroney (D Okla.) -- Add $15 million to cover a final award made by the Indian Claims Commission to the Cheyenne-Arapaho Indian Tribes of Oklahoma. Voice vote.

Russell B. Long (D La.) -- Provide an additional $70 million in disaster relief to repair public facilities damaged by Hurricane Betsy during September 1965. Voice.

Lister Hill (D Ala.) -- Earmark $100,000 in administrative funds appropriated for higher educational activities to the National Advisory Committee on Education of the Deaf and an additional $100,000 to the National Conference on Education of the Deaf. Voice.

Ross Bass (D Tenn.) -- Add $30,000 for a U.S. Army Corps of Engineers study of means to improve flood control, navigation, hydroelectric power and related land resources in the Red River Basin, located in Kentucky and Tennessee. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Oct. 20 -- Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.) -- Delete language providing $12 million in contractual authority and $360,000 in fiscal 1966 appropriations for a new program of rent supplements for low-income families, and also increase the appropriation for pre-implementation planning of the program from $450,000 to $850,000. Roll-call vote, 37-45.

Saltonstall -- Delete half of the contract authority for the rent supplements program and half the appropriation for rent supplements and provide a $400,000 increase in funds for planning. Roll call, 37-41.

Conference

ACTION -- The conference report (H Rept 1198) on HR 11588 was filed Oct. 21, carrying $4,741,644,602.

In their major decision the conferees denied all contractual authority for rent supplements and all funds for supplement payments but allowed the Senate figure of $450,000 for administrative expenses in drawing up the program. The conferees, declaring that this action was "without prejudice" to the program, said the new Department of HUD needed to have more time to work out "sound plans and criteria." (President Johnson Oct. 23 criticized this action and said he would resubmit his request for funds when Congress reconvened in 1966).

For other decisions on funds for new programs on which the House and Senate disagreed, see section on New Programs Financed, p. 182.

For existing programs, funds provided by the House for refugee assistance, supersonic aircraft development, USIA and mint production, among others, had already been accepted by the Senate without change. On items on which the two chambers had disagreed (see Senate section), conferees recommended the following:

Federal Contract Compliance. Accepted the Senate's $444,000 appropriation.

Water Research. Provided $500,000 -- half the Senate figure -- for grants for water research projects.

Additional HEW Staff. Agreed on a compromise figure of $219,000 (request: $326,000; House: $163,000; Senate: $275,000) for four additional Assistant Secretaries of HEW and a staff of 21.

Power Projects. Recommended $900,000 (no request; Senate: $1,950,000; House: none) for initial planning of the two projects: $800,000 for the Dickey-Lincoln School project in Maine, and $100,000 for the Rowlesburg project, W. Va. Also accepted the Senate floor amendment providing $30,000 for a study of the Red River Basin.

Auburn-Folsom South. Accepted the Senate's $500,000 appropriation for the Reclamation Bureau.

Balance-of-Payments Statistics. Deleted the Senate appropriation for a study of a second accounting system.

Hemis Fair 1968 Exposition. Accepted the Senate funds for a study of participation in the fair.

Small Business Administration. Recommended the full Senate figure of $160 million for the revolving fund.

Southeast Hurricane Disaster. Accepted $35 million of the unbudgeted $70 million added on the Senate floor.

Indian Claims. Accepted the Senate amendment adding $15 million for payment of Indian claims, bringing the total claims and judgment payments to $26,508,212.

Programs for the Deaf. Accepted the Senate's earmarking of funds for the Advisory Committee and National Conference on Education of the Deaf.

FLOOR ACTION

The House Oct. 21, by a 250-84 roll-call vote, and the Senate the same day, by voice vote, adopted the conference report on HR 11588, appropriating $4,741,644,602. The actions cleared the measure for the President's signature.

The appropriation of $800,000 to start planning the controversial $227 million Dickey-Lincoln School power project in Maine brought protests from many House Members. Authorization of the project originally had been deleted on the House floor Sept. 22 by a 207-185 vote, though it was ultimately reinstated in the final version of the authorization bill (S 2300). (See story p. 751)

When the House acted on the supplemental appropriation bill Oct. 21, a motion by George H. Mahon (D Texas) to concur in the appropriation for the Maine project was approved by a 105-95 standing vote and then by an even narrower 166-162 roll call. (For voting, see chart p. 1022)

Bill Signed. President Johnson Oct. 31 signed HR 11588 into law (PL 89-309).

CCC SUPPLEMENTAL FUNDS

H J Res 234 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 2) Jan. 26, 1965.

- Passed by the House, amended, by voice vote Jan. 26. (For roll-call vote on recommittal, see p. 934)
- Reported, amended, by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 52) Feb. 1.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, by voice vote Feb. 3. (For roll-call vote on amendments, see p. 1026)
- Conference report (H Rept 36) agreed to by voice vote of the House and Senate Feb. 10. (For Feb. 8 House roll call on attempt to instruct conferees, see p. 936; for Senate roll call on a conference report provision, see p. 1027)

PL 89-2 -- Signed into law Feb. 11.

Passage of H J Res 234 provided $1.6 billion in fiscal 1965 supplemental appropriations to reimburse the Agriculture Department's Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) for losses on price supports and other activities. One controversial provision also prohibited the Agriculture Department from using funds in the bill to finance shipments of surplus farm products to the United Arab Republic (Egypt) under Title I of PL 480 (the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954), unless the President deemed it in the "national interest." Other disputed provisions barred the closing of 31 Veterans Administration facilities and 20 agricultural research stations before May 1, 1965. (See below for details)

Congress was under some pressure to complete action on the bill rapidly, in order to keep the farm price support program and other activities financed by the CCC in operation. Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman Nov. 24, 1964, had said he would have to ask Congress for supplementary funds to keep the commodity programs going through fiscal 1965. Freeman Feb. 9, 1965, said the CCC had no more price support funds, and therefore needed the funds in H J Res 234 in order to keep making payments under the price support programs.

In debate, House Republicans complained about the federal farm programs and their costs, and the periodic requests for funds to reimburse the CCC. They charged that the Administration's request for supplemental funds was the result of a "phony" budget submitted to Congress by President Johnson in 1964, keeping estimated fiscal 1965 expenditures below $100 billion.

MAJOR CONTROVERSIES

Food Shipments to Egypt. A major foreign policy controversy arose when the House, before passing H J Res 234 Jan. 26, added to the bill wording which specified that appropriations in the measure could not be used to finance the export of farm commodities to Egypt under Title I of PL 480 (sales of U.S. farm goods for foreign currencies). The action was taken in retaliation for anti-American incidents in Egypt. However, the Administration strongly opposed this wording, saying it could tie the President's hands in deciding whether to permit shipment of about $37 million worth of food constituting the final installment under an Oct. 8, 1962, Title I agreement with Egypt that was due to expire June 30, 1965.

President Johnson Jan. 27 sent Secretary of State Dean Rusk to a special Capitol Hill meeting to brief Senators on relations with Egypt. Rusk said that surplus food shipments provided one of the few remaining levers left in U.S. relations with Egypt. As a result, the Senate relaxed the House ban by writing in language that gave the President discretionary authority to continue PL 480 Title I shipments to Egypt with funds in the bill, provided he found such shipments were in the U.S. national interest. At a press conference Feb. 4, Mr. Johnson urged the House to accept the Senate version, calling it a matter of the "highest importance" that he "have freedom of action to act in the best interest" of the nation.

The House finally complied and approved the Senate language leaving discretionary authority with the President. Subsequently, the State Department June 22 announced that the President, exercising the discretionary authority given him in the bill, had approved the final $37 million shipment to Egypt. The discretionary authority left with the President in the final version of H J Res 234 corresponded to the way the problem of aid to Poland and Yugoslavia had been handled in the past. (1962 Almanac p. 298, 301; 1963 Almanac p. 260; 1964 Almanac p. 124, 302)

Later in 1965 the House, acting on the fiscal 1966 agriculture funds bill (HR 8370), rejected proposals to insert provisions barring use of funds in the bill for PL 480 Title I shipments to Egypt and Indonesia. (See story and vote comparison, p. 194)

In a related action, the Senate Sept. 23, acting on the foreign aid funds bill (HR 10871), adopted floor amendments barring the use of any funds in that measure for aid to Egypt or Indonesia, unless the President determined such aid to be in the U.S. national interest. This provision was retained in conference. (See story, p. 441)

VA Closings. Another controversy on H J Res 234 involved a provision, inserted in the Senate, barring the Veterans Administration from carrying out a plan announced Jan. 12 to close down 11 veterans' hospitals, four old soldiers' (domiciliary) homes and 16 regional benefit offices. The Administration insisted on its right to close these installations if it wished, and as a result, the final version of H J Res 234 placed a ban on the closings only until May 1, 1965 (enough time, some claimed, for Congress to study the matter). Subsequently, the dispute was compromised when the President June 8 announced that only six of the hospitals, two of the old soldiers' homes and nine of the regional benefit offices would be closed. (See story p. 395)

Farm Research Closings. A similar controversy on H J Res 234 arose when the Senate added a provision barring the proposed closing of 20 agricultural research facilities and curtailment of projects at many other such facilities. The final version of H J Res 234 placed a prohibition on the closings only until May 1, 1965, but the Administration later agreed to rescind some of the proposed closings and curtailments. (See story p. 194)

PROVISIONS

As signed by the President, H J Res 234:

Provided $1.6 billion in supplemental appropriations for the Agriculture Department in fiscal 1965 to reimburse the CCC for losses. The breakdown of these funds was: $1.1 billion for realized net losses on price supports and related items sustained during fiscal 1963; $250 million for costs under Title I of PL 480 (sales for foreign currencies) through fiscal 1965; $200 million for costs under Title IV of PL 480 (long-term supply contracts) through fiscal 1965; and $50 million for costs incurred under the International Wheat Agreement through fiscal 1965.

Prohibited use of the funds to finance export of surplus farm products to Egypt in fiscal 1965 under any PL 480 Title I agreement unless the President deemed it in the national interest to make shipments to carry out a 1962 agreement with that nation.

Prohibited the closing of certain agricultural research stations and the termination of certain farm research projects before May 1, 1965.

Prohibited the closing or relocating of certain Veterans Administration hospitals, facilities and services before May 1, 1965.

Background

President Johnson Jan. 19 asked Congress to appropriate $1,742,209,000 in supplemental funds to reimburse the Commodity Credit Corporation for price support and other activities. Of the total amount requested by the President in a special communication to Congress (H Doc 59), $1,180,853,000 was to reimburse the CCC for price support and related losses through fiscal 1963. In addition, the President asked for fiscal 1965 supplemental appropriations of $506,400,000 for surplus food distribution overseas under Public Law 480 and $54,956,000 spent under the International Wheat Agreement. (For description of PL 480, see "Background," 1964 Almanac p. 125.)

The CCC, created by Congress in 1933, is charged with supporting prices for certain crops and for financing such programs as PL 480 and the International Wheat Agreement of 1949. To finance its activities, the CCC has a borrowing authority of $14.5 billion. As of Jan. 20, 1965, according to Rep. George H. Mahon (D Texas), chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, all except $54 million of this was committed.

The CCC conducts price support activities mainly by buying and storing specified commodities, paying a guaranteed "support price" to farmers who cannot sell their goods elsewhere. The CCC operates at a loss. It has to pay storage and carrying charges on its inventories, including interest on the money it borrows from the Treasury. It seldom can dispose of its inventory of surplus farm goods without a loss.

One purpose of the PL 480 program, which began in 1954, was to dispose of CCC inventory, which permits the CCC to liquidate its assets and redeem part of its borrowing authority or "capital." Since its surpluses are disposed of at a loss, the CCC may then ask Congress for an appropriation to restore the loss. It then can use the appropriation to conduct operations or to reduce its debt to the Treasury, thus "repairing" its borrowing authority.

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- Jan. 26 reported H J Res 234 (H Rept 2), providing $1.6 billion.

FLOOR ACTION

The House Jan. 26 passed H J Res 234 by voice vote, carrying $1.6 billion.

Before passage, the House recommitted the bill and added language barring the use of any funds in the bill to finance the export of U.S. agricultural commodities to Egypt under Title I of PL 480.

The House voted twice on the restrictive wording. First, it rejected, by a 122-128 standing vote, a floor amendment by Rep. Robert H. Michel (R Ill.) which would have added the language to H J Res 234. Michel then moved to recommit the bill to the House Appropriations Committee with instructions to include the defeated amendment. The recommittal motion was adopted by a 204-177 roll-call vote. The amended bill was immediately reported back and passed. (For voting, see chart p. 934)

On the roll call, Republicans voted solidly -- 128-0 -- in favor of recommittal. Republicans were joined by 31 Southern Democrats and 45 Northern Democrats, including a number from districts with large Jewish populations. The Democratic defections came in spite of a plea by Speaker John W. McCormack (D Mass.) not to restrict the President in the conduct of foreign policy. McCormack seldom participates in debate.

The Michel proposal was another in a series of efforts by various Members of Congress in recent years to limit or halt U.S. aid to Egypt and some other nations, usually those with Communist governments. In 1964, Congress cut off some PL 480 aid to Poland and Yugoslavia and gave the President authority to limit PL 480 assistance to Egypt. A proposed flat ban on aid to Europe was rejected.

Supporters of Michel's amendment cited anti-U.S. actions by the UAR and its President, Gamal Abdel Nasser, such as the burning of the Kennedy Memorial Library in Cairo Nov. 26, the shooting down of an unarmed U.S. commercial plane Dec. 19 and a speech by Nasser Dec. 23 in which he voiced support for the Congolese rebels and told the U.S. to "jump in the lake." Opponents argued that the amendment would "tie the hands" of the President in foreign affairs and that it should be taken up as a separate matter from the supplemental appropriation bill.

DEBATE -- Robert H. Michel (R Ill.) -- "Nasser's record of interference in the affairs of other countries in the past has been extensively documented many times. Under a variety of pretexts, our aid has nevertheless continued.... If we do not wish to see the dignity of the laws of the United States flouted by every petty national leader who wishes to enhance his position, we must act."

William F. Ryan (D N.Y.) -- "I have repeatedly... pointed out that Nasser is preparing for aggression against the democracy of Israel and that the economic assistance he receives under our foreign aid programs permits him to allocate his resources to the ever-spiraling arms race in which he is engaged."

Carl Albert (D Okla.) -- "The issue here is whether a matter of major foreign policy should be determined by legislative action on an appropriation bill without the advice, the information, and the help of the President in his handling of this delicate international matter."

George H. Mahon (D Texas) -- "I am not advocating the sale or gift of agricultural commodities to Egypt. My position is that we should not restrict the President in his handling of this delicate international matter."

Jan. 26 -- Paul Findley (R Ill.) -- Prohibit any of the supplemental appropriations from being used during fiscal 1965 to pay subsidies to U.S. cotton textile mills. Standing vote, 45-105.

Robert H. Michel (R Ill.) -- Prohibit any of the supplemental appropriations from being used during fiscal 1965 to finance export of agricultural commodities to the United Arab Republic under Title I of PL 480. Standing, 122-128. (The same wording was later adopted in the recommittal motion on the bill. See above)

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- Feb. 1 reported H J Res 234 (S Rept 52), recommending $1.6 billion. Although the bill's total funds were the same as the House version, the Committee recommended three amendments making changes in language which were later approved on the Senate floor (see below).

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate Feb. 3 passed H J Res 234 by voice vote, carrying $1.6 billion. Before passage, the Senate accepted three committee amendments recommended by the Appropriations Committee and also adopted a floor amendment involving closing of veterans' facilities. Details:

Aid to Egypt. By a 44-38 (D 38-17; R 6-21) roll call, the Senate agreed to an Administration-backed committee amendment substantially weakening the House ban on food shipments to Egypt under Title I of PL 480. (For voting, see chart p. 1026)

The committee amendment substituted wording which allowed the President to approve the shipments if he decided they were in the "national interest." Sen. Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.), floor manager of the bill, said the committee amendment applied only to the $37 million in commodities that had not yet been authorized by the U.S. for shipment to Egypt; no other aspects of PL 480 aid were involved. President Johnson supported the Senate change.

Holland said the Appropriations Committee approved the amendment by a 17-6 vote after hearing testimony from Secretary of State Dean Rusk and Under Secretary of State George W. Ball. "It is proposed (by the House version) that we pull the rug out from under the officials and leave the world with the feeling that we do not propose to stand behind the officials whom we have confirmed and the law which we have enacted and entrusted to them to administer," Holland said.

Sen. Wayne Morse (D Ore.), an outspoken critic of the U.S. foreign aid program, objected to changing the House's ban. "We hear from the Administration that it needs flexibility, although it never flexes but only bends before any demands made upon it by a foreign government," he said.

Majority Leader Mike Mansfield (D Mont.), speaking in support of the amendment, said the President had "a responsibility which transcends all of our responsibilities." Minority Leader Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) also supported the amendment.

Prior to approval of the committee amendment, the Senate rejected, by a 7-75 roll-call vote, an amendment by Sen. Jack Miller (R Iowa) to change the wording of the committee amendment to permit shipments to Egypt under the 1962 agreement only with Congressional approval.

The only Democrat voting for the Miller amendment was Sen. Thomas J. Dodd (Conn.). Republicans voting for it were Miller, Bourke B. Hickenlooper (Iowa), Roman L. Hruska (Neb.), James N. Pearson (Kan.), Winston L. Prouty (Vt.), and Milward L. Simpson (Wyo.).

Agriculture Stations, Research. The Senate by voice vote accepted two other committee amendments together. One amendment prohibited the Agriculture Department from closing down 20 research stations and ending research projects at 28 other stations until Congress could study and act on the proposed cutbacks. Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman announced the changes Dec. 31.

The other amendment authorized use of up to $220,000 in funds already available to the Agriculture Department to install temperature and humidity control equipment at the Metabolism and Radiation Laboratory at Fargo, N.D. Holland said the amendment was proposed by Sen. Milton R. Young (R N.D.), a member of the Appropriations Committee, and requested by the Agriculture Department.

VA Facilities. The Senate accepted by a standing vote an amendment by Sen. Karl E. Mundt (R S.D.) to prohibit use of VA funds for closing down 11 VA hospitals, four domiciliaries and 16 regional offices throughout the country. The VA announcement of plans to close the facilities brought strong objections from Members of Congress and others.

Mundt said his amendment was to delay the closings until Congress could review the situation. Mansfield supported the amendment. No one spoke in opposition. However, Holland said the amendment was out of order because it was legislation on a subject not covered in the appropriations bill. Mundt made a motion that the rules be suspended so the amendment could be considered. The Senate by a standing vote approved the motion, which required a two-thirds majority.

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

Feb. 3 -- Karl E. Mundt (R S.D.) -- Prohibit the Veterans Administration from using existing appropriations to implement its plans to close or relocate VA facilities. Standing vote.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Feb. 3 -- Jack Miller (R Iowa) -- Amend Senate Appropriations Committee amendment to require Congressional approval for shipping $37 million in surplus U.S. farm products to Egypt under a 1962 PL 480 agreement with that country. (The committee amendment permitted the shipments if the President deemed them in the national interest). Roll call, 7-75.

Conference

Instruction Move Fails. The House Feb. 8, by a 165-241 roll-call vote, rejected a motion by Robert H. Michel (R Ill.) to instruct House conferees not to accept the Senate amendment giving the President discretionary authority to continue PL 480 Title I shipments to Egypt. (For voting, see chart p. 936)

One Republican and 240 Democrats voted against Michel's motion, while 37 Democrats joined 128 Republicans to support the motion. The single Republican opposing the motion was Ogden R. Reid (N.Y.), the only member of his party to desert the solid GOP bloc that had supported the original House ban. Thirty-two Northern Democrats, including 12 from New York, and nine Southern Democrats switched their stand from the earlier vote to support the Administration on the Feb. 8 vote. Seventy-six Democrats had supported the original House ban.

In debate on the motion to instruct the House conferees, Michel said the President did not have exclusive authority to determine the Nation's foreign policy and that the House ban "makes clear the serious concern of the Congress" with "the contemptuous attitude" of the UAR toward this country.

Emanuel Celler (D N.Y.), who had supported the original House ban, noted the "crisis" in South Viet Nam and called for "a united front in support of our President." He said there "should not be the slightest doubt that the Congress does sustain our President." The House ban admonished the President and "deprecated" UAR President Gamal Abdel Nasser's "nose-thumbing attitude," Celler said, but the next move in relations with Egypt should be up to the President.

James Roosevelt (D Calif.) said there could be no doubt that Egypt was "an aggressor against countries friendly to the United States" and that shipments of U.S. food permitted Egypt to "divert its own resources to the production of a vast arms industry and propaganda machinery."

Majority Leader Carl Albert (D Okla.) charged that Republicans were taking advantage of a political opportunity. "The course they have chosen is not just a case of naked political opportunism," he said. "It is more than just a cheap political trick. It is a course which was chosen despite consequences for the security of the United States and it violates the cardinal principle of American partisan politics which is 'Will it hurt my country?'"

Minority Leader Gerald R. Ford (R Mich.) said the Viet Nam situation had nothing to do with the vote on Michel's motion. He said a vote in support of the ban would "help and not hinder the President and will be beneficial and not detrimental to the foreign policy of the United States."

Initial Agreement Collapses. The conferees Feb. 9 reached an initial agreement which accepted the Senate discretionary-authority wording on PL 480 shipments to Egypt and deleted the Senate provisions forbidding closing down of veterans' and agricultural research facilities. The agreement was reached on the basis of assurances from some Administration spokesmen that closing of the veterans' and agricultural research facilities would be held up administratively until July 1, 1965, to give Congress time to study the closing proposals.

The initial agreement collapsed, however, when President Johnson Feb. 10 informed the conferees that he did not agree to delay closing the facilities until July 1, as that would be too late to prepare for the next fiscal year. He agreed to delay to May 1, however, and conferees finally accepted that date as the basis for a second, final conference agreement.

Conference Report Filed. Conferees finally reached agreement and filed a report Feb. 10 (H Rept 36).

The conference report was signed by eight of the 10 Democratic members and by only one of the five Republican members. The one Republican, Michel, said he voted for the agreement to get the matter to the House floor. On the Senate floor, Milton R. Young (R N.D.) asked that his name and those of the other two Senate Republican conferees, Leverett Saltonstall (Mass.) and Karl E. Mundt (S.D.), be attached to the report.

The conferees recommended the following provisions on disputed points:

- Agreed to the Senate language giving the President discretion on whether to continue PL 480 Title I shipments to Egypt. A statement by House conferees accompanying the report said the President was expected to keep Congress advised of any actions connected with the shipments. Sen. Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.), chairman of the Senate conferees, told the Senate that the statement meant the conferees were "serving notice on the Chief Executive that Congress expects to be informed step-by-step" on the matter in the future.
- Barred the proposed closing down of veterans' facilities and agricultural research facilities, but only until May 1, 1965 (the date accepted by the President).
- Dropped the Senate committee amendment involving equipment at the Fargo, N.D., laboratory. Conferees said this matter could be taken up later by Congress.

Conference Report Approved. The House and Senate Feb. 10, by voice votes, agreed to the conference report. Separate votes in each chamber were taken Feb. 10 to approve several of the provisions recommended by the conferees, as follows:

VA Facilities -- The conference provision barring the closing down of VA facilities, but only until May 1, 1965, was accepted by a 157-72 standing vote in the House and a 62-9 (D 52-0; R 10-9) roll call in the Senate. (For voting, see chart p. 1027)

Agricultural Research -- The conference provision barring a shutdown of agricultural research facilities, but only until May 1, 1965, was agreed to by a voice vote in the House and standing vote in the Senate.

Egypt -- The House agreed by voice vote to the language giving the President discretionary authority on PL 480 Title I shipments to Egypt. The Senate did not take a separate vote on the matter, its approval being included in its vote on the conference report as a whole.

DEBATE -- Nearly all the debate involved the proposed closings of veterans' facilities. Many Members said the May 1 deadline would not give Congress adequate time to study the matter. They favored the original Senate amendment which did not stipulate a date after which the Administration could proceed with its closing plans.

Rep. William H. Harsha (R Ohio) said Congress established the VA facilities in good faith and that "this action by the Administration breaks faith with the veteran and his family." He said savings could be made by many other means, such as cutting off shipments of the Government-subsidized commodities to Egypt.

In the Senate, Majority Leader Mike Mansfield (Mont.), who had been an outspoken foe of the plan to close the VA facilities, endorsed the conference amendment, saying it would give Congress an opportunity to study the matter.

Sen. Clinton P. Anderson (D N.M.) said the amendment meant "absolutely nothing." He said that "May 1 will come and we will find that hearings have not been held. May 1 will come and we shall find that not one of the hospitals has remained in use." However, Anderson, like all other Democrats, voted for the amendment.

CONGRESS VOTES $6.2-BILLION FARM FUND

HR 8370 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 364) May 20, 1965.

- Passed by the House by a 354-41 roll-call vote May 26. (See p. 962)
- Reported, amended, by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 423) July 6.
- Passed by the Senate by an 86-2 roll-call vote July 13. (See p. 1058)
- Conference report (H Rept 1186) agreed to by voice votes of the House Oct. 20 and the Senate Oct. 21.

PL 89-316 -- Signed into law Nov. 2.

Congress in 1965 appropriated $6,242,929,500 to the Agriculture Department in fiscal 1966. The total was $39,704,500 below the amount requested by the Administration.

During consideration of the fiscal 1966 agriculture appropriations bill (HR 8370), Congress refused to accept two Administration economy moves. One called for the closing of 15 agricultural stations and the curtailing of research at 36 other sites, at an annual savings of $5,-151,000. The other proposed a $120-million cut in funds for agricultural conservation. Congress finally agreed to the closing of 8 research stations and the curtailing of work at 21 others, for an annual saving of $2,761,100. But it added 20 unbudgeted research projects to HR 8370 at a cost of $3,369,000. All of the conservation funds were restored.

On another issue, Administration forces in the House narrowly defeated, 187-208, a Republican motion to recommit HR 8370 to the Appropriations Committee with instructions to add a ban on food shipments to the United Arab Republic (Egypt) and Indonesia. The vote reversed a House stand taken earlier in the session on a 204-177 vote during consideration of a bill to provide $1.6 billion in supplemental fiscal 1965 funds to the Commodity Credit Corporation. (See story p. 190; for voting analysis, see House action, p. 196.)

Also, pressure from the Senate forced the Administration to increase by $500 million its request for funds to repay borrowing by the Commodity Credit Corp. (CCC) to cover 1964 losses incurred in price support and food distribution programs. The original request for CCC reimbursements was $2.3 billion, almost $1 billion under the actual amount of losses. The final version of the bill set reimbursements at $2.8 billion.

While the bill was pending in Congress, the Administration also submitted a supplemental request for an additional $20 million for emergency conservation measures and for elimination of the entire $52.5 million originally sought for bartered material for the supplemental stockpile. Both requests were honored in the final version of the measure. The increase in funds for emergency conservation was to combat storm damage in the Midwest. The request to freeze appropriations for the barter program during fiscal 1966 was prompted by an administrative review of the program and did not signal an end to the program.

Authorized $375 million to be spent from Farmers Home Administration direct loan account: $75 million for real estate loans and $300 million for operating loans (including a reserve of $50 million).

Background

Congress appropriated a total of $6,827,048,200 to the Agriculture Department in fiscal 1965, of which $5,137,-162,200 was voted in the regular appropriations bill in 1964. (1964 Almanac p. 194)

The additional amount included $1.6 billion in supplemental funds for the Commodity Credit Corporation and $28,320,000 for Department activities connected with the Appalachian Regional Development Act, both voted in 1965. (See stories p. 190, p. 788)

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- May 20 reported HR 8370 (H Rept 364) providing $5,692,537,000 for fiscal 1966. The total was $122,597,000 less than requested.

The report said that the President's requests for agriculture funds reflected an "extremely tight" budget for the Department, so "further reductions by the Committee have been nominal."

Apparently in reference to President Johnson's Budget Message statements on the "rapidly declining need for people to operate our farms" and the need to "find ways to help provide a greater share of our national prosperity for those rural families that do not farm or who can no longer look to farming as a sole source of income," the report said that "the elimination of small family farms as a part of our national existence would seriously increase our social and welfare problems in every urban area in the United States." It said, "It is apparent, therefore, that the only practical approach to the farm problem is to continue programs which will make it possible for the present 3.5 million farmers to earn a living on the farm." To accomplish this, the Committee said, "minimum price supports, adequate short and long term credit, continued research and technical assistance...must be continued."

Discussing the Agriculture Department programs for export sales, the Committee insisted that the Department "(1) return to offering commodities for sale on a competitive bid basis, (2) make 'payment-in-kind' payments from commodity stocks in lieu of cash payments and (3) conform to the Export Sales Act of 1956 by announcing to the world the quantity of cotton the United States will sell each year on world markets," adding that "the same policy would be good for other commodities." The Committee also recommended strengthening of the sales program of the Commodity Credit Corp. (CCC) by "bringing in additional directors...who have had prior business and industrial experience" and by "relocating the sales manager in the departmental structure to give him more independence of action and less exposure to restrictive international influences."

Commenting on efforts to control pesticides, the Committee was "pleased to note that progress is being made in efforts to coordinate the programs of all agencies involved and to develop a realistic and practical approach to the establishment of levels of pesticide residues which can be safely observed without adverse effect on the public health."

Major Committee actions follow:

Agricultural Research. For Agricultural Research Service research the Committee recommended a cut of $2,498,000, to $114,394,000. Included was an unbudgeted appropriation of $2,760,000 for construction of four cotton research facilities (for a total of six in the bill) for which planning funds had been provided in fiscal 1965. The Committee provided $71,119,000 -- a cut of $2,041,000 -- for plant and animal disease and pest control, including funds for two programs aimed at eradication of screwworms and for continuation of the fire ant eradication program.

In its general remarks, the Committee said it had "not been able to fund all of the...special requests" to fund research not included in the Budget, but it had included the full $1 million requested for a contingency research fund and suggested that "high priority" be given to "additional mechanization research in California as the result of the discontinuance of the bracero (Mexican farm labor) program." (See story p. 132)

Agricultural Conservation. For the Agricultural Conservation Program, the Budget requested appropriation of $220 million in fiscal 1966 to cover payments under contracts entered into in previous years. In addition, it asked for an authorization for the activities totaling $120 million for fiscal 1966, compared with $220 million approved by Congress for fiscal 1965. The Committee recommended appropriation of $220 million for payments and -- as it had during the last 10 years -- eliminated the proposed cut in the amount authorized for the coming year, providing the full $220 million figure. (See p. 200)

Commodity Credit Corp. The Committee recommended the full $2.3 billion requested for CCC price support operations in fiscal 1964, a $357-million reduction from fiscal 1963. It approved language providing that, beginning June 30, 1964, interest on CCC borrowings for losses during a particular fiscal year would be charged only during -- but not after the end of -- that fiscal year. It said "this would limit interest expenses to borrowings for current operations and would avoid increasing future appropriation requests by interest charges resulting solely from deferral of reimbursement to the Corporation for realized costs and losses applicable to past operations."

Soil Conservation Service. The Budget for fiscal 1966 said legislation would be submitted to establish a revolving fund to charge farmers and landowners up to 50 percent of the cost of Soil Conservation Service technical assistance they received, thereby permitting a $20 million reduction in federal expenditures for the program in fiscal 1966. The Budget, however, included a request for the full cost of the program, $60 million, in case such legislation was not enacted. The Committee, noting that the legislation had not been submitted, approved the full $60 million. There was no subsequent action on the request during 1965. (See p. 200)

FLOOR ACTION

The House May 26 passed HR 8370 on a 354-41 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart p. 962)

Two amendments, adding a total of $25,295,000 to the amount recommended by the Appropriations Committee, were accepted by voice votes. This action increased the total of the bill to $5,717,832,000.

Before passage the House rejected, on a 187-208 roll call, a motion to recommit the bill to the Appropriations Committee with instructions to add an amendment, which the House had rejected earlier in the day by voice vote, banning use of fiscal 1966 funds for the Department to finance the export of U.S. agricultural commodities to the United Arab Republic (Egypt) or Indonesia under Title I of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 (PL 480). The House thus reversed the position it took Jan. 26, when it included a similar ban in the Commodity Credit Corp. fiscal 1965 supplemental appropriations bill (H J Res 234). The Jan. 26 action was approved by a 204-177 roll-call vote. (See story p. 190)

In a related action, the Senate Sept. 23, acting on the foreign aid funds bill (HR 10871), adopted floor amendments barring the use of any funds in that bill for aid to Egypt or Indonesia, unless the President determined such aid to be in the national interest. This provision was retained in conference. (See story p. 441. For an earlier controversy on the same issue, see 1963 Almanac p. 260.)

Of the two amendments added on the floor, one proposed by Jamie L. Whitten (D Miss.) on behalf of the Committee raised funds for the food stamp program from $75 million to $100 million, the full Administration request. The other, offered by William H. Natcher (D Ky.), increased money for general administration by $295,000 to provide the sum the Department said it would need for enforcement of Title VI (compliance activities) of the 1964 Civil Rights Act. The final total voted by the House was $97,302,000 less than the $5,815,134,000 requested by the Administration.

In support of restoring funds for the food stamp program, Leonor K. Sullivan (D Mo.) contended that "cutting the program back from $100 to $75 million would have meant either canceling the start of projects in 25 (of 28) new areas scheduled to come into the program in the coming fiscal year, or else a cutback in the 110 projects in operation during this fiscal year." On May 24, Mrs. Sullivan had inserted in the Congressional Record a list of the 28 areas scheduled to enter the program in fiscal 1966 and another list of 339 areas which had formally requested food stamp projects, along with the names of the Representatives from those areas. On May 26 Whitten, who was Chairman of the Subcommittee which handled agriculture appropriations, said, "It is my personal opinion that this food stamp money is not apt to be fully used by the Department of Agriculture, but I do know many, many people are very much interested in the program."

PL 480 Aid Ban. Under Title I of PL 480, the United States was allowed to sell surplus farm goods to foreign countries for the currency of the recipient nation. The Jan. 26 and May 26 proposals were two of a series of efforts in recent years to limit or halt aid to some nations, usually those with Communist governments. The Jan. 26 proposal (later modified to give the President discretionary authority, instead of imposing a flat ban) applied only to the UAR.

Both of the May 26 proposals sought to insert the same language in the bill, applying the ban to both the UAR and Indonesia. The House first rejected the amendment, offered by Paul Findley (R Ill.), by voice vote with little debate. Findley said his amendment would have "the beneficial effect...of serving notice to (UAR President Gamal Abdel) Nasser and to (Indonesia President Achmed) Sukarno that we resent the insults (they) have directed our way in recent months; that we are putting on record our desire to shut them off from this form of foreign aid."

The second May 26 vote was on the recommittal motion, offered by Frank T. Bow (R Ohio). The motion instructed the Committee to add the language of the Findley amendment and report the bill back to the House. The 187-208 vote rejecting the motion was almost an exact reversal of the 204-177 vote Jan. 26 accepting the similar motion.

Voting Switches. Between the two votes, 48 persons switched positions. Of these, the largest single group was the Northern Democrats, mostly from Eastern states.

Of those who voted for the January motion, 34 (27 ND; 5 SD; 2 R) voted against the May motion. They were Northern Democrats Addabbo (N.Y.), Burke (Mass.), Carey (N.Y.), Celler (N.Y.), Delaney (N.Y.), Donohue (Mass.), Dulski (N.Y.), Grabowski (Conn.), Green (Ore.), Green (Pa.), Helstoski (N.J.), Howard (N.J.), Kelly (N.Y.), Keogh (N.Y.), Krebs (N.J.), Minish (N.J.), Multer (N.Y.), Murphy (N.Y.), O'Neill (Mass.), Philbin (Mass.), Reuss (Wis.), Rooney (N.Y.), St. Germain (R.I.), St. Onge (Conn.), Staggers (W.Va.), Stalbaum (Wis.) and Tenzer (N.Y.); Southern Democrats Burleson (Texas), Casey (Texas), Dorn (S.C.), Gettys (S.C.) and McMillan (S.C.); and Republicans Reid (N.Y.) and Reifel (S.D.).

Of those who voted against the January motion, 14 (7 ND; 7 SD) voted for the May motion. They were Northern Democrats Corman (Calif.), Hicks (Wash.), Huot (N.H.), Jacobs (Ind.), Moeller (Ohio), Patten (N.J.), and Tunney (Calif.); and Southern Democrats Fulton (Tenn.), Rogers (Texas), Scott (N.C.), Selden (Ala.), Taylor (N.C.), Teague (Texas), and White (Texas).

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House, HR 8370 appropriated the following amounts in fiscal 1966:

Agriculture Department
General activities	$1,633,693,000
Credit agencies	60,367,000
Federal Crop Insurance Corp.	7,478,000
Commodity Credit Corp., reimbursement for net realized losses, fiscal 1964	2,300,000,000
Foreign assistance, PL 480	1,658,000,000
International Wheat Agreement	27,544,000
Bartered materials	30,000,000
Subtotal	$5,717,082,000
Food Marketing Commission	$ 750,000
TOTAL	$5,717,832,000

The bill also:

In addition to appropriating $114,394,000 for research by the Agricultural Research Service, authorized transfer of an additional $24,600,000 in Section 32 funds for the same purpose.

In addition to appropriating $51,695,000 for the Cooperative State Research Service, authorized transfer of an additional $400,000 in Section 32 funds to the Service for grants for support of basic scientific research.

In addition to appropriating $155 million for the school lunch program, authorized transfer of an additional $45 million in Section 32 funds for the program.

In addition to appropriating $20,574,000 to the Foreign Agricultural Service, authorized spending of an additional $3,117,000 in Section 32 funds by the Service.

In addition to appropriating $111,714,000 for expenses of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, authorized transfer of an additional $96,615,000 from the Commodity Credit Corp. for expenses of the Service.

Continued a 1963 provision (also continued in 1964) barring use of federal funds to influence legislation or the vote in a referendum, or to pay salaries of members of county and local farmer committees for other than prescribed functions.

Authorized $220 million for the Agricultural Conservation Program in calendar 1966.

Authorized $447 million for Rural Electrification Administration loans: $350 million for electrification loans (including a reserve of $65 million) and $97 million for telephone loans (including a reserve of $7 million).

Authorized $340 million for the Farmers Home Administration direct loan account: $40 million for real estate loans and $300 million for operating loans (including a reserve of $50 million).

Authorized the Farmers Home Administration to transfer up to $500,000 within its over-all appropriation for temporary field employment to meet heavy workloads.

Directed that after June 30, 1964, interest on Commodity Credit Corp. borrowings for losses during a particular fiscal year would not be charged after the end of that fiscal year.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

May 26 -- Jamie L. Whitten (D Miss.) -- Increase funds for the food stamp program from $75 million to $100 million. Voice vote.

William H. Natcher (D Ky.) -- Increase funds for general administration from $3,553,000 to $3,848,000. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

May 26 -- Paul Findley (R Ill.) -- Prohibit use of any of the funds during fiscal 1966 to finance export of agricultural commodities to the United Arab Republic or Indonesia under Title I of PL 480. Voice vote.

Robert H. Michel (R Ill.) -- Bar use of any funds during fiscal 1966 for payments to feed-grain producers in excess of 20 percent of the fair market value of any acreage diverted under the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act. Standing, 41-105.

John D. Dingell (D Mich.) -- Prohibit use of Commodity Credit Corp. funds for any tobacco price support program. Voice.

Dingell -- Limit to $50,000 the total amount of price support payments to any person, partnership or corporation. Voice.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Apropriations.

ACTION -- July 6 reported HR 8370 with amendments (S Rept 423), providing $6,711,908,800 in appropriations for fiscal 1966. The total was $929,274,800 more than revised Administration requests and $994,076,800 more than the amount voted May 26 by the House.

The Senate Appropriations Committee considered requests for $5,782,634,000 in appropriations -- $32,500,000 less than the House considered. The reduction was the result of a June 22 request by the President for the elimination of all of $52.5 million requested for bartered material for the supplemental stockpile, pending review of the barter program, and the addition of $20 million to the request for emergency conservation measures, due to recent storms in the Midwest. Major changes in the House bill:

Commodity Credit Corp. Increased by $926.8 million, to $3,226,800,000, the $2.3 billion approved by the House and requested by the Administration to restore CCC capital depleted as a result of price supports and other operations of the CCC. The Committee stated, "For the past several years, including this year, it has been necessary to provide supplemental appropriations so that the Corporation would have sufficient operating capital to carry out its authorized programs. This is not good financial management. The Executive Branch and the Congress, to some degree, are both at fault in allowing these reimbursements to fall so far behind.... The Committee strongly believes that appropriations to reimburse CCC should be kept current and, to make a start in this direction, is including in the bill $927 million, representing the balance of the 1964 losses, which was not in the Budget nor in the bill as passed by the House." The Committee added that it "expects" favorable Budget Bureau action on requests from the Agriculture Department for appropriations to clear up "at an early date" an additional $1,137,900,000 in CCC capital impairments dating back to the fiscal 1961-63 period.

The Committee also deleted from the House version the provision which eliminated the requirement that CCC unreimbursed losses shall no longer bear interest charges after July 1, 1964. However, the Committee stated it was "sympathetic with the interest provision and will concur in its approval following action to request proper and full reimbursement of all outstanding unreimbursed losses."

Electrification Loan Funds Released

The Budget Bureau June 30, yielding to pressure applied by the Senate Appropriations Committee and by the National Rural Electric Cooperatives Assn., released, on the last possible day, $37 million in unused fiscal 1965 contingency funds for electrification loans to rural electric cooperatives. Authority to use the funds was scheduled to elapse at midnight June 30.

The dispute over the funds began in May, when the Agriculture Department requested that the Budget Bureau approve the use of $90 million in REA contingency loan funds that had been authorized by Congress in 1964 for use when the regular $275 million in REA loan authorizations for fiscal 1965 had been used up. (1964 Almanac p. 194) The Budget Bureau May 28 agreed to release $33 million, and June 18 another $20 million, but not the remaining $37 million.

In an effort to get Members of Congress to intercede with the Budget Bureau, the National Rural Electric Cooperatives Assn. (NRECA) organized an extensive letter-writing campaign, coupled with personal visits to Members of Congress by officials of rural cooperatives. The campaign concentrated particularly on members of the Senate Appropriations Committee, which was then considering the fiscal 1966 agriculture appropriations bill (HR 8370). NRECA General Manager Clyde Ellis June 30 telegraphed the President, and Sens. Ralph W. Yarborough (D Texas), Karl E. Mundt (R S.D.) and Milton R. Young (R N.D.), among others, contacted the Budget Bureau.

In a Senate speech July 13, Sen. Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.), chairman of the Agriculture Appropriations Subcommittee, said that as late as 10 a.m. June 30 the Budget Bureau said it would not release the funds. Shortly afterwards on the same day, the Senate Appropriations Committee met and voted unanimously to increase fiscal 1966 REA electrification loan authorizations from $350 million to $400 million to make up for the $37 million in unreleased funds, Holland said. A few hours later, he said, he was notified that the Budget Bureau had agreed to release the $37 million -- an act, Holland added, that was ordered directly by the President about 11 a.m. June 30. The Appropriations Committee subsequently reduced the fiscal 1966 authorization to $380 million, and the final version of HR 8370 provided $365 million for REA electrification loans, the same figure as in fiscal 1965. Of this sum, $90 million was again set aside as a contingency authorization.

Rural Electrification. The Committee recommended $380 million for electrification loans -- $30 million more than the Administration requested and the House voted. Of the $380 million, $50 million was placed in a contingency fund for use only if needed. It said an additional $37 million in contingency funds left over from fiscal 1965 would also be available. (See box above)

The Committee reiterated 1963 and 1964 instructions to the REA Administrator that, before making a loan to rural electric cooperatives for construction of generating and transmission facilities, he must attempt to get private power companies in the area to provide the rural cooperative with wholesale power on a reasonable basis. (1963 Almanac p. 148)

Farmers Home Administration. The Committee recommended $65,892,000 in direct appropriations for the Farmers Home Administration, restoring almost the entire cut made by the House. The House had approved $48,433,000. The Administration had requested $67,692,000. The Committee recommended restoration of $10 million cut by the House for rural housing grants and loans (the entire amount requested); restoration of the $3 million cut by the House for rural housing for domestic farm labor, bringing the appropriation up to the $5 million requested; restoration of the $2.5 million for rural housing for the elderly cut by the House, bringing that amount up to the requested $5 million; and restoration of the $1,959,000 for salaries and expenses cut by the House, bringing that amount to the full $44,692,000 requested. The Committee further recommended authorization of $375 million in direct loans from the FHA revolving loan fund, instead of the $340 million authorized by the House and recommended by the Administration.

Migratory Labor. The Committee requested the Agriculture Department to make "a comprehensive study of the entire agricultural labor situation," including: the need for and availability of qualified agricultural labor; the impact of labor shortages on production and processing, on employment, on farmers' costs, and on consumer prices; on the extent to which production of competing crops has increased overseas; and the impact of United States trade for affected commodities on the balance-of-payments situation. (See story p. 132)

In addition, the Committee:

Approved a total of $140,969,800 for agricultural research, including transferred funds. The House had voted $138,994,000. The total requested by the Administration was $141,492,000. Of the $140,969,800, $16.6 million was to come from funds available under Section 32 instead of $24.6 million, the House figure; the $8 million difference was made up by adding direct appropriations.

- Approved $108 million for the special milk program. The Budget request and House figure was $100 million.
- Approved the full $100 million requested for the food stamp program but specified that only $80 million should come from regular appropriations and the remaining $20 million from unused funds left over from the $60 million fiscal 1965 appropriation. The House had provided the entire $100 million as a direct appropriation.
- Approved $30 million for emergency conservation, compared with $4 million voted by the House. The increase resulted from a June 22 request by the President to add $20 million to combat flood and wind damage from recent storms in the Midwest. The report said the Agriculture Department's request to the Budget Bureau for approval of the additional funds had totaled $26 million.
- Restored the $750,000 cut made by the House in funds for the Food Marketing Commission, thus providing the full $1.5 million requested.

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate July 13 passed HR 8370 by a roll-call vote of 86-2. Two amendments, adding a total of $2,075,000 to the amount recommended by the Appripriations Committee, were accepted on the floor. (See vote chart, p. 1058)

The only major floor amendment was offered by Philip A. Hart (D Mich.) and accepted by voice vote. It added $2 million to the amount earmarked for the school lunch program. The additional $2 million, requested by the Administration but deleted by both the House and Senate Appro-propriations Committee, constituted the first funds made available under a 1962 amendment of the School Lunch Act which authorized appropriation of special funds (in addition to those distributed under the regular school lunch program) for aid specifically for schools in poor areas. (1962 Almanac p. 222) Hart said the eventual aim was to reach about 1.4 million really needy children, 900,000 of whom were attending schools with no school lunch program.

The other amendment, accepted by voice vote, added $75,000 for a water basin survey of Shelby Co., Tenn. It was offered by Ross Bass (D Tenn.).

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate, HR 8370 appropriated the following amounts in fiscal 1966:

Agriculture Department
General activities	$1,713,835,800
Credit agencies	77,826,000
Federal Crop Insurance Corp.	8,478,000
Commodity Credit Corp., reimbursement for net realized losses, fiscal 1964	3,226,800,000
Foreign assistance, PL 480	1,658,000,000
International Wheat Agreement	27,544,000
Subtotal	$6,712,483,800
National Food Marketing Commission	$ 1,500,000
TOTAL	$6,713,983,800

The bill also:

Authorized the following transfers of Section 32 funds to various agencies, to be spent for their programs in addition to amounts provided through direct appropriations: Agricultural Research Service, for research, $16.6 million; Cooperative State Research Service, $400,000; school lunch program, $45 million; Foreign Agricultural Service, $3,117,000.

Authorized $20 million left over from the fiscal 1965 appropriations for the food stamp program to be used for the program in fiscal 1966, in addition to the new appropriations provided.

Authorized the transfer of $75,390,000 from the Commodity Credit Corp. for expenses incurred by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, in addition to funds included in direct appropriations for the same purpose.

Continued a 1963 and 1964 provision barring use of federal funds to influence legislation or the vote on a referendum, or to pay salaries of members of county and local farmer committees for other than prescribed functions.

Authorized $220 million for the Agricultural Conservation Program in calendar 1966.

Authorized $477 million in REA loans: $380 million for electrification loans (including a reserve of $50 million) and $97 million for telephone loans (including a reserve of $15 million).

Authorized $375 million to be spent from Farmers Home Administration direct loan account: $75 million for real estate loans and $300 million for operating loans (including a reserve of $50 million).

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

July 13 -- Philip A. Hart (D Mich.) -- Add $2 million to the school lunch program for a special program earmarked for needy children. Voice vote.

Ross Bass (D Tenn.) -- Add $75,000 for a water basin survey for Shelby County, Tenn. Voice.

Conference

The House Oct. 20 and the Senate Oct. 21 by voice votes adopted the conference report on HR 8370 (H Rept 1186) making direct appropriations of $6,242,929,500 for the Agriculture Department and National Commission on Food Marketing in fiscal 1966.

The total appropriated was $471,054,300 less than the original Senate version, $525,097,500 more than the original House measure and $39,704,500 less than the revised Administration request.

The main difference between the versions approved originally by the two chambers was $926.8 million in funds to reimburse the Commodity Credit Corp. for fiscal 1964 losses on price supports and other operations. The House appropriated $2.3 billion, the amount requested by the Administration at the time the bill was before the House in May. The Senate in July voted $3,226,800,000. The Senate Appropriations Committee criticized the Administration for not asking for the full $3.2 billion, the actual amount of losses. When HR 8370 was in conference, the Administration made a supplemental request of $500 million in CCC funds. The conferees granted this request, setting the total figure at $2.8 million.

The bill was delayed in conference for more than three months while Congress was deliberating on the Administration's omnibus farm measure (HR 9811).

Other conference actions:

Agricultural Research Service. Conferees recommended an expenditure of $141,722,500 for research, slightly more than the different amounts approved by each chamber. Of the total, $18,100,000 was to come from funds available under Section 32 of PL 88-250 instead of $24.6 million as specified by the House and $16.6 million as approved by the Senate.

Soil Conservation Service. The conferees recommended $106,373,000, the figure approved by the Senate for regular soil conservation activities. This was $1 million more than the House figure and $2.3 million over the Budget request.

Other significant SCS program recommendations:

Watershed protection -- Conferees recommended $65,671,000, a compromise between the House's slightly lower figure and the Senate's slightly higher amount. Conferees recommended $5.5 million in loan funds, the amount proposed by the Senate and $1.5 million above the House figure.

Great Plains Conservation Program -- Conferees recommended $16 million, $1.1 million more than the House figure and $1.4 million less than the Senate total.

Resource Conservation and Development -- Conferees ratified a Senate decision to restore a $1,490,000 cut made by the House in the Administration request, setting the total appropriation at $4,303,000. The additional funds were for new project planning and for acceleration of resource development operations in existing projects.

Special Milk Program. The conferees recommended $103 million, which was $3 million more than the House measure and $5 million less than the Senate total.

Food Stamp Program. The conferees recommended the full $100 million requested and adopted a Senate provision specifying that only $80 million should come from regular appropriations and the remaining $20 million from unused funds left over from the fiscal 1965 appropriation.

The House had provided the entire $100 million as a direct appropriation.

School Lunch Program. Conferees recommended $157 million as approved by the Senate instead of $155 million passed by the House. The conference report specified that the additional $2 million for distribution to needy schools under Section 11 of the School Lunch Act was to be considered as an experimental program for 1966 only and should not be considered a part of the regular permanent school lunch program.

Stabilization and Conservation. For expenses of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, conferees recommended $126,278,500 in direct appropriations which was $9,071,500 less than the Senate figure and $14,564,000 more than the House figure, and $81,-933,500 in a transfer of funds from the CCC, about $15 million less than the House figure and about $7 million more than the Senate amount.

Cropland Conversion. The conferees approved a $2.5 million cut made by the House in the Administration request, setting the total figure at $10 million. The Senate had restored the cut.

Conservation Reserve Program. Conferees recommended $146 million as approved by the Senate instead of $140 million, the House figure.

Emergency Conservation. Conferees recommended $24 million instead of the $4 million approved by the House and $30 million passed by the Senate. The President June 22 requested that $20 million be added to his original $4 million request, to take care of flood and wind damage caused by storms in the Midwest.

Rural Electrification. Conferees split the difference between the Senate loan authorization figure, $380 million, and the House amount, $350 million, setting the final amount at $365 million, the same as in fiscal 1965.

Farmers Home Administration. Conferees recommended $50.7 million in direct appropriations for the Farmers Home Administration, $2,267,000 more than the House figure and $15,192,000 less than the Senate figure. The conferees deleted the Administration's entire request of $10 million for rural housing grants and loans (granted in full by the Senate but denied by the House). Conferees recommended authorization of $375 million in direct loans from the FHA revolving loan fund, the figure recommended by the Senate and $35 million more than the House amount.

PROPOSED CUTS IN SOIL CONSERVATION PROGRAMS REJECTED

Congress in 1965 refused to go along with two Administration economy proposals calling for cuts in funds for soil conservation. The programs which the Administration wanted to cut were the Agricultural Conservation Program and the Soil Conservation Service. The cuts, which would have amounted to $120 million a year, were restored by the House Appropriations Committee.

ACP. The President's fiscal 1966 Budget called for a $100-million cut in the Agriculture Department's Agricultural Conservation Program (ACP), which provided financial assistance to farmers for carrying out conservation practices. The Budget asked for new obligational authority (NOA) of $120 million for calendar 1966 for the ACP, compared with $220 million in NOA approved by Congress for calendar 1965. However, estimated expenditures for the ACP for fiscal 1966 were $222.8 million, only slightly less than estimated fiscal 1965 expenditures of $225.6 million. This was because fiscal 1966 expenditures reflected spending under obligational authority granted by Congress in previous years. The proposed calendar 1966 NOA cut would not have been reflected in expenditures until the fiscal 1967 Budget.

SCS. The Budget recommended passage of legislation to set up a revolving fund to charge up to 50 percent of the cost of technical assistance provided by the Soil Conservation Service (SCS). It said this would result in savings of $20 million annually. However, the Budget requested the full $60 million required to operate the program of technical assistance. Presumably the request would have been reduced if Congress had enacted the separate legislation advocated in the Budget. However, the legislation was never introduced, due to Congressional opposition to the plan, and the full $60 million was appropriated.

The Administration plan was to have the fund go into effect July 1, 1965. The Agriculture Department said that under the plan, the SCS would be curtailed for several years while the fund was being built up, operating on the federal share of $40 million plus whatever was paid in by farmers -- $2 million to $3.5 million annually in the first two or three years. It was estimated that it might take ten years before farmers were paying the full annual amount of $20 million into the fund.

Reaction. Both programs, started in the 1930s, have been highly popular among farmers, especially in the South, and with most Democratic and farm-state Members of Congress.

There were few, if any, public statements directly supporting the proposed cuts, but strong opposition was voiced by some key Democrats and Republicans in Congress, conservation officials and farm groups.

Most of the critics blamed the Budget Bureau for the proposals and made no direct criticism of the President. An Agriculture Department official told Congressional Quarterly that the cuts originated in the Budget Bureau for economy reasons and were not initiated by the Department. He indicated that the Department did not favor the decreases.

According to Congressional sources and Budget Bureau officials, the cuts were among those needed to help finance new Great Society programs in such fields as education, job training, poverty, urban transportation and mental health.

The proposal to charge farmers and landowners for receiving SCS assistance was in line with the Administration's policy of shifting more of the financial burden for certain services and privileges to the recipients.

Opponents said the cuts would seriously damage conservation efforts and argued that the proposals were inconsistent with the Administration's emphasis on preserving the nation's resources and natural beauty.

Most of the criticism centered on the proposed cut and changes in the SCS program, apparently because this program was receiving its first major threat, while the ACP had successfully withstood numerous cutback proposals. President Johnson in 1964 and Presidents Eisenhower and Kennedy in previous years proposed decreases in ACP funds, but Congress always restored the amount to the usual level.

The ACP and SCS cuts were among a number of proposed Administration economy moves which the Congress refused to approve. In addition to these two matters and the closing of agricultural research stations and projects (see story p. 203), Congress forced the Administration to alter announced plans to close 11 Veterans Administration hospitals, 4 old soldiers homes and 7 Public Health Service hospitals and to consolidate 16 VA regional offices. Under compromises reached with Congress, the Administration was able to close only 6 of the 11 VA hospitals, 2 of the 4 old soldiers homes and 2 of the 7 PHS hospitals and to consolidate only 9 of the 16 regional offices. (See story p. 395)

Congress also spiked Administration economy proposals in the omnibus farm bill. Mr. Johnson had proposed increasing the value of the domestic wheat marketing certificate to increase farmers' income and instituting a certificate plan for rice. Both plans were designed to shift part of the expense for price support programs from the Government to the consumer. But Congress directed that the higher wheat farmers' income be paid out of the Treasury and rejected the rice certificate program outright. (See story p. 114)

Background

The federal soil conservation program was initiated in 1929 when Congress appropriated $160,000 for soil erosion investigations by the Secretary of Agriculture. The nation had been suffering heavy losses from wind and water erosion.

The National Industrial Recovery Act of 1933 provided for erosion control work as a means of employment. Under this Act, 41 soil and water conservation demonstration projects were established, and about 50 Civilian Conservation Corps camps were assigned to erosion control work.

The Soil Conservation Act of 1935, a landmark in federal soil conservation activities, created the SCS program of technical assistance to farmers for carrying out conservation measures. The 1936 Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, an amendment to the 1935 Act, set up the ACP program of financial assistance. (For details of the two programs, see below.)

Other major legislation on conservation matters included the Watershed Protection and Flood Prevention Act of 1954, establishing a permanent small watershed program under the SCS; the Eisenhower Administration's 1956 soil bank program that sought to reduce crop production by retiring cropland to soil conserving practices for long periods; the Great Plains Conservation Act of 1956 setting up a program to fight erosion in the Great Plains area; and the Food and Agriculture Act of 1962 authorizing various programs to help farmers shift low-income land to better uses.

The 88th Congress, which President Johnson called "the greatest conservation Congress in our entire history," passed more than 30 conservation measures, including bills creating a National Wilderness Preservation System and a Land and Water Conservation Fund.

The growing concern in recent years with protecting the nation's soil and water resources has been due to the increasing population and demands on land for food and fiber, living and working space and recreation. The general objectives of the federal conservation programs have been to promote farm prosperity, to assure that each acre of land in the nation would make the maximum contribution to public and private needs, and to preserve and expand soil and water resources.

A report on soil and water conservation needs issued by the Agriculture Department in March 1965 showed that almost two-thirds of the non-federal rural land in the 48 contiguous states (about 888 million acres out of 1.4 billion acres) needed conservation treatment. The study reported that the Department had spent more than $10 billion on its various conservation programs since they were started in the 1930s.

SCS. The SCS program has been the Government's most important long-range soil resource program. At the end of fiscal 1964, the program was servicing 94 percent (1.1 billion acres) of the farmland in the 50 states, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

This program, unlike the ACP and other farm conservation programs such as the soil bank, is entirely a long-term soil conservation program and not an agricultural subsidy program or a short-term land-retirement program designed to control production. The SCS program is aimed at the installation of permanent soil and water conservation practices and land management systems.

The program does not provide any Government payments to farmers for retiring cropland or financial assistance to farmers for installing soil conservation measures. The form of assistance provided by the SCS is technical assistance -- the making of soil surveys and investigations, the planning of balanced use and conservation measures designed to meet the needs and land capabilities of individual farms and areas, the drafting of designs and specifications and the furnishing of supervision when conservation plans for a farm or area are being carried out.

Wherever possible, the SCS works out an over-all plan for an entire farm or even for all the farms in an area. By installing interrelated soil and water conservation practices over a whole farm and using each area for the purpose to which it is best suited, a farmer can better enhance the productivity of the farm and preserve it against erosion and other soil hazards.

The SCS services are carried out by soil conservation districts, which are local farmers' organizations chartered by the states. The districts do such tasks as promoting soil conservation, obtaining equipment and machinery needed for conservation work, coordinating conservation projects involving several farms and handling requests for technical assistance. A SCS soil expert is assigned to each district. He lives in the area and provides technical advice and assistance required by farmers seeking to install conservation practices. In some cases, the state governments and local communities provide clerical and technical workers to assist the SCS agent.

At the end of fiscal 1965, soil conservation districts in the 50 states, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands totaled 2,989 and covered 98 percent (3.7 million) of the farms. More than 2 million farmers were carrying out SCS conservation programs on 664.6 million acres. In fiscal 1965 the SCS provided direct services to 1,139,487 landowners and farmers. About 2.2 million acres of cropland were converted to other uses during the year as a result of conservation plans worked out by the SCS. The SCS soil conservation program cost $103.2 million during fiscal 1965.

ACP. Under the ACP, the Federal Government pays farmers about 50 percent of the costs of carrying out soil conserving practices. During the 1963 program year, $218.6 million in ACP funds were spent to assist 1.2 million farmers to carry out conservation projects. The program operated at about the same level in 1964 and 1965.

Some of the ACP practices are long-term measures similar to those under the SCS program. However, much of the ACP funds have gone to compensate farmers for the costs of fertilizer and limestone for land treatment purposes. Such spending has repeatedly been criticized as a subsidy to help farmers raise or sustain their income by paying part of what should be their normal operating costs. With ACP funds, a farmer could sow a cover crop on depleted soil for a short period, treat the land with fertilizer and limestone and bring it back into production with high fertility. In recent years, about 40 percent of ACP funds have gone for fertilizer and limestone.

Defenders of the ACP said serious soil depletion and erosion would occur without the program in areas where farmers were too poor to install conservation practices.

Past Disputes

There have been frequent disputes over the ACP, but most major attempts to reduce funds for the program have been defeated.

In 1947 the ACP became involved in one of the bitterest fights in Congress that year. The Republican majority in the House made sharp cuts in funds and advance authorizations for the ACP and for other agricultural programs. The Senate, led by George D. Aiken (R Vt.) and Milton R. Young (R N.D.), restored most of the cuts but not before the House Republicans, led by Rep. Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.), now the Senate Minority Leader, had forced two conferences on the issue.

Many observers believed that Aiken's prediction that the cuts would convince farmers that the GOP was anti-farmer and "blast the Republican Party off the map" was borne out by the 1948 elections in which Democrats made big gains in farm states to gain control of both chambers and return President Truman to office.

For about the past 10 years, Congress has annually restored cuts made in the ACP by the Administration.

Budget Bureau Criticized

The House Appropriations Committee, in recommending in 1964 that the Administration's proposed $100-million cut be restored, said that ACP funds returned "the greatest possible" conservation benefits. "This program provides the best possible means of meeting local conservation needs in all areas of the country," the Committee reported (H Rept 1387). "It is far more effective than many other approaches adopted in recent years... Apparently the Bureau of the Budget and others who do not support this program are not aware of the important part it plays in building terraces, waterways and erosion control structures and in financing other conservation practices."

FARM RESEARCH PROGRAMS

Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman and Congress clashed in 1965 over the Secretary's proposal to close 15 agricultural research stations and curtail research at 34 other stations as an economy move. The projected annual savings would have been $5,151,000.

A compromise eventually was reached under which savings of $2,761,100 were effected for fiscal 1966 and $2,389,900 was appropriated to continue for at least one year some lines of research which the Administration had proposed to terminate. The Secretary proposed to effect additional savings by phasing out some of these activities in fiscal 1967, but indications were that Congress would not accept his additional cuts without a struggle. Congress agreed to the closing of 8 research stations and the curtailing of work at 21 others. However, the savings thus made were more than offset by the addition to the agriculture appropriations bill (HR 8370) of 20 unbudgeted research projects at a first-year cost of $3,369,000.

A list of the stations and lines of research closed under the compromise is carried below. Stations and or lines of research which were slated for closure by the Secretary but remained active under the compromise were located at: Glendale, Ariz.; Albany and Pasadena, Calif.; Washington, D.C.; Quincy, Fla.; Athens, Cairo, Experiment, Fleming and Tipton, Ga.; New Orleans, La.; Beltsville and Hyattsville, Md.; Meridian, Miss.; Huntley, Mont.; Mitchell, Neb.; Geneva and Ithaca, N.Y.: Stillwater, Okla.; Newell, S.D.; Bushland and College Station, Texas; Pullman and Puyallup, Wash.; Lancaster and Madison, Wis.; and Cheyenne, Wyo. Some locations may appear on both lists.

The proposed economies in agricultural research were announced by Freeman Dec. 31, 1964. The plans immediately met strong opposition from Members of Congress. The Senate Feb. 3 attached an amendment to a Commodity Credit Corp. fiscal 1965 supplemental appropriations bill (H J Res 234) to prohibit the closing of the stations and cutbacks in research projects. The House and Senate Feb. 10 adopted a conference report that delayed the closing of the agricultural facilities and cuts in the agricultural research projects until May 1, 1965 -- a compromise reached between conferees and the President. (See story p. 190)

The Senate Appropriations Committee April 9 issued a report (S Rept 156) recommending indefinite continuation of research activities totaling $2.6 million a year and the elimination or reduction of research activities totaling $2.5 million.

Sen. Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.), chairman of the Senate Agriculture Appropriations Subcommittee, April 27 told the Senate that an agreement had been reached between the Subcommittee and Secretary Freeman over planned cutbacks in agricultural research and that the matter could be considered "as closed or in process of being closed." Holland said projects costing $2,165,200 a year to operate would continue and projects costing $2,985,800 a year to operate would be eliminated. That arrangement was written into the Senate version of the appropriations bill. The House previously had limited cutbacks to $2,500,000. House-Senate conferees ultimately settled on a figure of $2,761,100 for cutbacks during fiscal 1966.

Following is a list of research stations and projects terminated under the agreement.

STATIONS CLOSED DURING FISCAL 1966

Station	Type of Research
Petersburg, Alaska	Fur animal research
Clarkedale, Ark.	Weed control research
Fontana, Calif.	Breeding and disease research on rabbits
St. Anthony, Idaho	Dryland moisture conservation practices and tillage
Bogalusa, La.	Tung nut research
Durham, N.H.	Clover disease and soil erosion research
Morgantown, W. Va.	Watershed hydrology and watershed management
Prosser, Wash.	Fruit and vegetable utilization research

PROJECT ELIMINATED BUT STATION NOT CLOSED DURING FISCAL 1966

Auburn, Ala.	Bamboo culture
Albany, Calif.	Research on processing of sugarbeets
	Research on composition and processing of castor beans
	New crop research
Davis, Calif.	Castor bean breeding and diseases
Pasadena, Calif.	Research to improve processing of sugarbeets
	Research on composition and processing of castor beans
	New crop research
Belle Glade, Fla.	Harvesting, decorticating and retting ramie, kenaf and sansevieria
Experiment, Ga.	Cordage fiber breeding and culture evaluation of new fiber crops
	Research on sesame production and on castor beans
Savannah, Ga.	Bamboo culture
	Cordage fiber breeding and culture evaluation of new fiber crops
Peoria, Ill.	Research on improved use of molasses
Hays, Kan.	Soil moisture evaporation control
Houma, La.	Research to improve processing of sugarcane
New Orleans, La.	Development of new and improved industrial products from tung oil
	New crop research
Beltsville, Md.	Clothing and Housing Research Division*
	Production research on fibers other than cotton
	Research on bamboo production
	Fertilizer research
	Research on castor beans and sesame
State College, Miss.	House foundation problems on plastic clay subsoils
University Park, N.M.	Reclamation, nutritional and soil studies for irrigated land
Raleigh, N.C.	Evaluation of potential fiber crops
Stillwater, Okla.	Harvesting and farm handling of castor beans
Woodward, Okla.	Water problems in dryland soils
Philadelphia, Pa.	Improved methods and new food products for maple and honey*
	New crop research
Brownsville, Tex.	Breeding cotton varieties resistant to insects
College Station, Tex.	Evaluation of potential fiber crops
Logan, Utah	Research on sugarbeets and vegetables

* Partial elimination in fiscal 1966 with the remainder planned for fiscal 1967.

In addition to the above economy measures, the Department terminated cooperative research agreements with the following 14 states on bloat and mucosal diseases of cattle and poultry: California, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Indiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Mississippi, New York, Oregon, Texas, Virginia and Wisconsin.

INTERIOR APPROPRIATIONS

HR 6767 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 205) March 25, 1965.

- Passed by the House, amended, by voice vote March 30.
- Reported, amended, by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 172) April 29.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, by a 77-0 roll-call vote May 26. (See p. 1042)
- Conference Report (H Rept 513) agreed to by voice votes of the House and Senate June 15.

PL 89-52 -- Signed into law June 28.

HR 6767, the first major fiscal 1966 funds bill cleared by Congress, appropriated a grand total of $1,228,739,070 for the Interior Department and related agencies in fiscal 1966 -- $46 million more than had been provided for fiscal 1965. The bill covered all Interior Department agencies except the Reclamation Bureau and the power marketing agencies, for which appropriations were made separately in another bill, the Public Works Appropriations Act. (See story, p. 208)

The $1,228,739,070 total in HR 6767 included definite and indefinite appropriations and borrowing authority, and was $42.1 million less than the $1,270,829,500 requested by the Administration. The reduction stemmed chiefly from Congressional cuts of $35.2 million from funds requested for American Indian schools (most of this cut was merely deferred for later consideration); $6.5 million from funds requested for the saline water conversion program; and all $12.5 million requested in new contract authority for the Interior Department's helium program. A few items in the request were increased by Congress.

The definite appropriations in the final version of HR 6767 totalled $1,074,505,070; the indefinite appropriations, $138,234,000 (of which $125 million was to come from the Land and Water Conservation Fund established in 1964); and the borrowing authority, $16 million for the Interior Department's helium program.

The major definite appropriations in HR 6767 were $296,192,000 for the Agriculture Department's Forest Service; $205,164,000 for the Interior Department's Bureau of Indian Affairs; $118,668,000 for the National Park Service and $80,143,000 for Indian health activities conducted by the Health, Education and Welfare Department.

PROVISIONS -- The breakdown of funds in HR 6767, as signed by the President:

INTERIOR DEPARTMENT

Bureau of Land Management	$ 54,230,000
Bureau of Indian Affairs	205,164,000
National Park Service	118,668,000
Bureau of Outdoor Recreation	3,398,000
Office of Territories	31,923,000
Alaska Railroad Revolving Fund	4,100,000
Geological Survey	71,680,870
Bureau of Mines	42,927,000
Office of Coal Research	7,220,000
Office of Oil and Gas	704,000
Office, Commissioner of Fish and Wildlife	444,000
Bureau of Commercial Fisheries	34,592,000
Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife	52,169,500
Office of Saline Water	22,485,000
Office of Water Resources Research	5,890,000
Office of the Solicitor	4,487,000
Office of the Secretary	4,452,200
Subtotal, definite appropriations	$ 664,534,570
Appropriations from Land and Water Conservation Fund	($ 125,000,000)
Other indefinite appropriations	(12,454,000)
Borrowing authority (helium program)	(16,000,000)
TOTAL	$ 817,988,570

RELATED AGENCIES

Agriculture Department, Forest Service	$ 296,192,000
Federal Coal Mine Safety Board of Review	71,500
Commission of Fine Arts	123,000
HEW, Public Health Service
Indian health activities	66,193,000
Construction of Indian health facilities	13,950,000
Indian Claims Commission	347,000
National Capital Planning Commission	800,000
National Council on the Arts	50,000
Smithsonian Institution	26,020,000
Civil War Centennial Commission	100,000
Corregidor-Bataan Memorial	1,425,000
Lewis and Clark Trail Commission	25,000
Transitional grants to Alaska	4,500,000
Subtotal, definite appropriations	$ 409,970,500
Indefinite appropriations (Forest Serv.)	(780,000)
TOTAL	$ 410,750,500

BACKGROUND -- For fiscal 1966, the Administration initially requested $1,102,625,500 in definite appropriations, $138,224,000 in indefinite appropriations (including $125 million from the Land and Water Conservation Fund), $16,780,000 in borrowing authority for the helium program and $12,500,000 in new contract authority for the helium program -- a grand total of $1,270,129,500. After House action, the Administration submitted extra requests of $700,000 in definite appropriations -- all for construction of Indian facilities -- raising the grand total requested to $1,270,829,500.

Conservation Fund. In order to assure acquisition of recreation land adequate to meet the nation's needs before it became either unavailable or prohibitively expensive, Congress in 1964 established (PL 88-578) a Land and Water Conservation Fund. The Fund was to be financed from four federal sources, including fees charged to users of federal recreation areas. From the Fund, 40 percent of the money was to be appropriated to agencies of the Federal Government and 60 percent to the states. However, the law allowed Congress, in appropriating money from the Fund, to alter the 40-60 federal-state allocation formula, and it permitted the President, during the first five years, to alter the over-all state share of the money by 15 percentage points. The states were required to provide an amount at least equal to their appropriations from the Fund (50-50 percent matching); however, the Federal Government could require the states to provide a larger share. The money allotted to the federal agencies was to be used solely for acquisition of new land, but the states were permitted to use their portion for development of existing lands as well. (1964 Almanac p. 477)

For fiscal 1966, the first full fiscal year of the Fund's operation, the Administration requested appropriation of $125 million from the Fund as follows: $74,136,000 (59 percent) for the states; $49,424,000 (39 percent) for federal agencies ($26,031,000 for the Interior Department's Park Service, $20,279,000 for the Agriculture Department's Forest Service and $3,114,000 for the Interior Department's Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife); and $1,440,000 (2 percent) for administrative expenses.

The Budget also requested that the state-federal matching formula be on a 60-40 basis.

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- March 25 reported HR 6767 (H Rept 205) recommending a grand total of $1,200,090,300, which was made up of $1,045,866,300 in definite appropriations, $138,224,000 in indefinite appropriations (including $125 million from the Conservation Fund), and $16 million in borrowing authority for the helium program. The total was about $70 million below the Administration request. In major cuts, the Committee deleted the $12.5 million requested for new helium contract authority; reduced the Indian school construction funds request by $36.2 million; and cut $6.5 million each from the saline water program request and transitional grants to Alaska. On specific items, the Committee took the following major actions:

Conservation Fund. The Committee approved the full $125 million requested. However, the Committee exercised its option to alter the federal-state allocation formula suggested in the Budget and provided the following allocations: $90 million (72 percent) to the states; $33,600,000 (26 percent) to federal agencies ($21,600,000 for the Park Service, $12 million for the Forest Service, and no funds for the Bureau of Sports Fisheries); and $1,400,000 (2 percent) for administrative expenses. The Committee also:

State Matching -- Included language to require state matching on a 50-50 basis (rather than requiring states to pay 60 percent) because "it was the intent of PL 88-578 that the receipts...should be appropriated so as to provide an amount equal to the state portion." House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee Chairman Wayne N. Aspinall (D Colo.) agreed that this action kept "intact" the policy of the Interior Committee.

National Park Service -- Provided the full Park Service request of $13,599,000 for land acquisition at newly authorized areas including the Cape Cod National Seashore, the Fire Island National Seashore and the Ozark National Riverways. Deleted $4,019,100 from other Park Service requests pending further study of their necessity by the Park Service and the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation. Suggested that where acquisition costs were "unusually high," the Park Service should "avoid acquisition except where essential to provide for planned recreation facilities" and "where acquisition is deemed essential, greater use of condemnation proceedings should be resorted to in order to assure fair and equitable prices."

Forest Service -- Cut $8,279,000, the bulk of which was requested for acquisition of 18,532 acres in the Sylvania tract in northern Michigan because it was "not evident to the Committee that this transaction has received proper consideration."

Fish and Wildlife -- Deleted the full $3,114,000 requested by the Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife for acquisition of 19,000 acres for refuges for endangered species of birds, including whooping cranes, "pending a review of the total proposed program and a determination of the essential need" for acquisition of the lands.

General Fund Policy -- Suggested that "there is an urgent need to develop a long-range federal land acquisition program that identifies, insofar as possible, areas that are expected to be acquired from appropriations from" the Fund. Directed the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation to: develop the long-range program, giving emphasis to land acquisition "in those areas...where outdoor recreation needs are greatest" and coordinating the program with state, local and private plans; review and evaluate "the land acquisition requests of all the federal agencies and be prepared to present annually to the Committee a detailed analysis of the federal programs of acquisition"; and give special attention to requests of the National Park Service. Permitted the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation to approve changes in planned acquisitions of tracts involving cost increases of up to 15 percent; it also could approve substitutions of new acquisitions costing up to $100,000, but stipulated that "any proposed reprogramming that exceeds these limits must be submitted to the Committee for advance approval."

Helium. The Committee approved $16 million in borrowing authority (request: $16,780,000), in addition to an estimated $9 million carryover, to finance helium purchases under existing contracts. It deferred action on a request for a $12,500,000 increase over the current annual ceiling of $47,500,000 in new contracting authority for purchase of helium, "pending completion of renegotiation of existing contracts, and the acquisition of sufficient operating experience under these contracts to serve as a yardstick in new contract negotiations." (For background, see 1963 Almanac p. 161)

Desalination. The Committee cut the $26,515,000 requested by the Office of Saline Water to $20 million pending new authorizing legislation, noting that the higher request was "based on the assumption that the present authorization for the program will be greatly expanded and extended by new legislation." (President Johnson March 29 sent Congress proposed legislation to increase the existing appropriations. A bill later enacted -- PL 89-118 -- increased the current authorizations and extended the expiration date of the program through fiscal 1972. See story p. 764)

Water Resources Research. The Committee approved the full request, $5,890,000, for administration of the Water Resources Research Act (PL 88-379). (The Senate March 25 passed a bill to amend PL 88-379 -- see story p. 739; 1964 Almanac p. 507.)

National Arts Council. The Committee reduced from $150,000 to $50,000 the request for the National Council on the Arts. (A bill to provide an annual authorization of $150,000 for the Council was signed into law (PL 89-125) Aug. 13 -- see story p. 621; 1964 Almanac p. 427.)

Public Land Law Review. The Committee deferred consideration of $1 million requested for the newly established Public Land Law Review Commission "in view of the fact that the Commission has not yet been organized." During hearings on HR 6767, Wayne N. Aspinall (D Colo.), a member of the Commission and also chairman of the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee, had asked that no funds be granted to the Commission. He announced earlier that he would attempt to prevent the Commission from operating until he was satisfied with its membership. Subsequently, the Commission became operative with Aspinall as chairman, and $750,000 was provided for it in the supplemental funds bill, HR 11588. (See p. 182)

FLOOR ACTION

The House March 30 passed HR 6767 by voice vote. One floor amendment was adopted (see below), but it did not change the $1,200,090,300 total recommended by the Appropriations Committee.

Floor manager Winfield K. Denton (D Ind.) said a larger share of the Land Conservation Fund money had been given to the states than requested by the Administration because money given to the states yielded better returns in benefits, through state matching and state construction of recreation facilities.

PROVISIONS -- The breakdown of funds in HR 6767 as passed by the House:

Interior Department	$ 652,316,800
Agriculture Department Forest Service	290,795,000
Health, Education and Welfare Department, Indian health	75,193,000
Other related agencies	27,561,500
TOTAL	$1,045,866,300
Appropriations from Land and Water Conservation Fund	($125,000,000)
Other indefinite appropriations	(13,224,000)
Borrowing authority (helium program)	(16,000,000)
GRAND TOTAL	$1,200,090,300

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

March 30 -- Durward G. Hall (R Mo.) -- Stipulate that counterpart funds used overseas for grants for archeological research be available only to U.S. institutions. Voice vote.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- April 29 reported HR 6767 (S Rept 172). The Committee recommended $1,246,752,770, consisting of: $1,092,518,770 in definite appropriations (including a $700,000 Administration request, submitted after House passage, to increase construction funds for Indian facilities); $138,234,000 in indefinite appropriations; and $16 million in helium program borrowing authority. Like the House, the Senate Appropriations Committee rejected the Administration request for $12.5 million in new helium contract authority. The Committee bill was nearly $47 million greater than the House version.

Major changes in the House bill:

Conservation Fund. The Committee, like the House, approved appropriation from the Land and Water Conservation Fund of the full $125 million requested. However, the Committee altered the allocations recommended in the Budget and by the House to provide the following allocations: $79,576,350 (63.6 percent) to the states; $43,983,650 (35.2 percent) to federal agencies ($23,098,500 for the Park Service, $19,785,150 for the Forest Service and $1,100,000 for the Bureau of Sport Fisheries); and $1,440,000 (1.2 percent) for administrative expenses of the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation. In other specific actions involving the Fund, the Committee:

National Park Service -- Restored $1,498,500 of the $4,019,100 deleted by the House for acquisition of inholdings in 42 park areas by the Park Service, providing a total of $7,911,400.

Forest Service -- Restored all funds cut by the House for acquisition of wilderness, primitive and other recreation areas, including the Sylvania tract in northern Michigan, because "if it is not purchased within the next year it will not be available to the Forest Service."

Fish and Wildlife -- Of the $3,114,000 cut by the House for acquisition of land for refuges for endangered species, restored $1,100,000 for purchase of additional lands for the protection of whooping cranes and other rare and endangered species. Directed "that the Department make every effort to acquire lands and interests therein by lease or easement rather than by fee title."

Visitor-Day Report -- Directed the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation to submit an annual report, beginning in time for hearings on the fiscal 1967 Budget, on the number of visitor-days during the previous year in areas for which admission fees were charged (and paid into the Fund). Also directed the Bureau "to finalize the definition of a visitor-day and to institute uniform methods for measuring use that shall be used by all federal agencies involved under" the Land and Water Conservation Fund Act (PL 88-578). (Under the Act, money was to be appropriated from the Fund to federal agencies in proportion to the number of visitor-days for which admission fees were charged at areas which they administered.)

General Fund Policy -- Concurred "generally" with the views of the House Committee on Fund policy. Directed the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation to submit to the Committee "a complete list of reprogrammings (a change in plans) with an explanation of the need for such actions." Set forth four criteria for Fund acquisitions: (1) reprogramming could be undertaken "only when an unforeseen situation arises, and then only if postponement" until the next appropriation year would increase the cost to the Government or damage other federal property; (2) land acquisition which was deferred once through reprogramming should then be funded through the regular appropriations process; (3) a proposed land acquisition should not be included in the Budget until there was "reasonable assurance" that the preliminary estimates were correct and that the acquisitions would be initiated in the fiscal year for which the funds were requested; (4) wherever possible, funds made available for land acquisition should be spent during the fiscal year in which they were appropriated.

Alaska Railroad. The Committee increased the $3 million requested and provided by the House to $5.2 million for payment to the Alaska Railroad revolving fund, to "more nearly" cover costs to the railroad of the 1964 earthquake in Alaska.

Coal Mining. The request and House figure of $6,945,000 for coal mining research was increased to $7,595,000 for the Office of Coal Research.

Fishing Vessels. The Committee recommended the request and House figure, $5 million, for construction differential subsidies for fishing vessels but also included language in the bill making fiscal 1965 funds for that purpose available through fiscal 1966. (For subsidy law, see 1964 Almanac p. 511)

Fisheries Research. The Committee increased funds for fishery research and development projects to $5.6 million (request: $2 million, House figure: $4 million) including $4.9 million to stimulate the projects and $400,000 for fishery resource disaster aid. (For research law, see 1964 Almanac p. 511)

Fish and Wildlife. The Committee provided $7,943,-700 for construction of fish hatchery and wildlife refuge facilities and fishery and wildlife research facilities (request: $2,992,000, House: $5,115,500).

Forest Research. The Committee increased funds for forest research by the Agriculture Department's Forest Service to $38,777,000 (request: $32,554,000, House: $32,939,000).

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate May 26 passed HR 6767 by a roll-call vote of 77-0, after adopting by voice vote a floor amendment adding $50,000. (For voting, see chart p. 1042)

As passed, the bill appropriated $1,246,802,770, which was $46,712,470 more than the amount voted by the House.

PROVISIONS -- The breakdown of funds in HR 6767 as passed by the Senate:

Interior Department	$ 675,654,270
Agriculture Department Forest Service	299,795,000
Health, Education and Welfare Department, Indian health	80,643,000
Other related agencies	36,476,500
TOTAL	$1,092,568,770
Appropriations from Land and Water Conservation Fund	($125,000,000)
Other indefinite appropriations	(13,234,000)
Borrowing authority (helium program)	(16,000,000)

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

May 26 -- J. W. Fulbright (D Ark.) -- Add $50,000 for planning of a park near Greers Ferry Dam, Ark., in memory of President Kennedy. (Fulbright said the Budget Bureau approved inclusion of the $50,000.) Voice vote.

Conference

● REPORT -- The conference report (H Rept 513) was filed June 14, carrying a grand total of $1,228,739,070, consisting of definite appropriations of $1,074,505,070; indefinite appropriations of $138,234,000 (including $125 million from the Land and Water Conservation Fund); and the borrowing authority of $16 million for the helium program. Action on major items:

Soil Conservation. The conference bill provided half of the Senate's $6 million increase over the House bill for Bureau of Land Management soil and water conservation activities.

Greers Ferry. Conferees retained $50,000 added on the Senate floor for planning a park near Greers Ferry Dam.

Conservation Fund. The conference bill, as requested and approved by both House and Senate, appropriated $125 million from the Land and Water Conservation Fund. Within the total, it allocated funds as follows: $84,377,000 (67.5 percent) to the states; $39,183,000 (31.3 percent) to federal agencies ($21,883,000 for the Park Service, $17,-300,000 for the Forest Service) and $1,440,000 (1.2 percent) for administrative expenses of the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation. (Allocations to the states were on a 50-50 matching basis.) In other compromises involving the Fund, the conferees:

National Park Service -- Provided $6,695,900 for acquisition of inholdings in park areas.

Forest Service -- Recommended $5 million, most of the amount requested and provided by the Senate but denied by the House, for Forest Service acquisition in the Sylvania tract in northern Michigan.

Fish and Wildlife -- Agreed with the House bill in deleting the full $3,114,000 requested for acquisition of land for refuges for endangered species.

Alaska Railroad. Conferees provided a compromise $4.1 million for payment to the Alaska Railroad revolving fund -- $1.1 million more than the request.

Coal Mining. Conferees provided a compromise $7,220,000 for the Office of Coal Research.

Fishing Vessels. Conferees accepted Senate language making fiscal 1965 funds for construction differential subsidies for fishing vessels available through 1966.

Fisheries Research. The conference bill contained a compromise figure of $4.8 million -- $2.8 million over the request -- for fishery research and development projects, including $4.1 million to stimulate the projects and $400,000 for fishery resource disaster aid.

Fish and Wildlife. Conferees recommended a compromise $7,077,200 for construction of fish hatchery and wildlife refuge facilities and fishery and wildlife research facilities.

Forest Research. The conference bill appropriated $36,689,000 -- $4,135,000 over the request -- for forest research by the Forest Service.

● ACTION -- The House and Senate June 15 by voice votes agreed to the conference report, clearing HR 6767 for the President's signature.

TIMBER REPORT

The Department of Agriculture Forest Service March 14 released a report on "Timber Trends in the United States." The report said that annual timber growth exceeded the amount cut. It said timber supplies would be adequate until 1990 to meet the projected 80% increase in demand for most products. Thereafter, more intensive forest management and continued technological improvements in production and marketing would be necessary to meet projected demands.

PUBLIC WORKS, AEC FUNDS

HR 9220 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 527) June 17, 1965.

- Passed by the House by voice vote June 22.
- Reported, amended, by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 632) Aug. 19.
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote Aug. 23. (For roll-call vote on amendment, see p.1068)
- Conference report (H Rept 1163) agreed to by voice votes of the House Oct. 14 and the Senate Oct. 15.

PL 89-299 -- Signed into law Oct. 28.

HR 9220 appropriated $4,292,866,500 for public works projects and the Atomic Energy Commission in fiscal 1966. The bill provided funds for at least one project in every state.

The total included $4,237,321,500 in definite appropriations and $55,545,000 in indefinites. More than half the total -- $2,365,895,000 in direct appropriations and $46,625,000 in indefinites -- was for the AEC. The remainder included direct appropriations of $1,307,955,500 for river, harbor and flood control projects of the Army Corps of Engineers; $324,480,000 for similar projects handled by the Interior Department's Bureau of Reclamation and $113,765,000 for the Bonneville Power Administration, a power marketing authority for the Interior Department.

Also included were funds for the Tennessee Valley Authority, the Interoceanic Canal Commission studying a replacement for the Panama Canal, and final administrative expenses of the Housing and Home Finance Agency in closing out the Public Works Acceleration Act of 1962, which was replaced in 1965 by the Public Works and Economic Development Act. (See story p. 798)

The total in the bill was $176,150,200 less than the fiscal 1965 appropriations for public works and the AEC and $94,749,500 less than the Administration requests for fiscal 1966 funds. The bulk of these reductions was in AEC funds, which was partially offset by increases made by Congress in public works funds.

The water project appropriations included funds for 68 new construction starts -- 62 under the Corps and six under the Bureau of Reclamation. Of the 68 starts, 42 were requested in the President's Budget (37 for the Corps, five for the Bureau) and 26 were added by Congress (25 for the Corps, one for the Bureau). The largest unbudgeted projects in the bill were four added by the House: Jones Bluff Lock and Dam, Ala., with an estimated total federal cost of $53 million; New Melones Reservoir, Calif., $122 million; Kaskaskia River, Ill., $66 million; and Joanna Dam and Reservoir, Mo., $71 million; and three added by the Senate: Four River Basins, Fla., $56 million; Kaw Reservoir, Okla., $87 million; and Hampton Road, Va., $33 million. (For list of major new starts, see p. 751.)

Five of the Corps and Interior new starts contained major power features. These were the Corps' unbudgeted new starts on Jones Bluff, Joanna and New Melones; its new start on Libby Reservoir, Mont.; and Interior's unbudgeted new start on the Central Utah project Bonneville unit.

For TVA, the bill provided funds requested to begin construction of the Tims Ford project, but denied funds requested for initial construction of the Tellico Dam.

PROVISIONS -- As signed by the President, HR 9220 appropriated:

HR 9220 forbade the Bonneville Power Administration to supply power directly, or indirectly through any preference customer, to any phosphorous electric furnace plant in southern Idaho, Utah or Wyoming.

BACKGROUND -- The Administration initially requested appropriation of $4,373,805,000 in HR 9220. After the House passed the bill, the Administration added a net total of $13,811,000 to its initial request, for a total revised request of $4,387,616,000.

The major requests: AEC, $2,481,000,000; Interior, $449,648,000; rivers and harbors, $1,279,824,000.

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- June 17 reported HR 9220 (H Rept 527), carrying $4,241,636,500.

The total was $132,168,500 less than the initial Administration request, with almost all of the reduction -- $126,005,000 -- cut from the AEC. The only major increase over the request was for the Corps of Engineers. Major actions taken by the Committee:

Construction Starts. The bill provided funds for 57 new construction starts -- 42 budgeted and 15 unbudgeted. Of the 15 new starts added by the Committee, 14 were to be constructed by the Corps of Engineers: Jones Bluff Lock and Dam, Ala.; De Queen Reservoir, Ark.; Corte Madera Creek, Calif.; Dana Point Harbor, Calif.; New Melones Reservoir, Calif.; England Pond Levee, Ill.; Kaskaskia River, Ill.; Marblehead Breakwater, Mass.; New Buffalo Harbor, Mich.; Joanna Dam and Reservoir, Mo.; Salamanca, N.Y.; Cooper Reservoir, Texas; Galveston Harbor and Channel, Texas; and Wallisville Reservoir, Texas. One, at the Bonneville unit of the Central Utah project, was to be constructed by the Bureau of Reclamation.

Five of the new construction starts in the bill contained major power features. These were the Corps' unbudgeted new starts on the Jones Bluff, New Melones and Joanna projects; the Administration-requested new start on Libby Reservoir, Mont.; and the unbudgeted new start on the Bonneville unit. Construction of the $352-million Libby Reservoir (by far the largest new start in the bill), which was authorized in 1950, was made possible by 1964 Canadian ratification of the Columbia River Treaty. (See 1964 Almanac p. 501)

The Committee also recommended funds to initiate planning on 25 budgeted and seven unbudgeted projects, and for 21 unbudgeted surveys.

In general remarks, the Committee expressed concern over "the apparent increasing conflict of interest between the Bureau of Reclamation and the Corps of Engineers in the development of western water resources," particularly in the northern coastal area of California. The Committee noted duplicating efforts on the flood-stricken Eel River, as an example. It supported development in the area but insisted "that it be accomplished without duplication of effort and without costly competition among the agencies involved." It directed the Budget Bureau, in cooperation with the agencies involved, to draw up by 1966 a plan for "delegation of responsibility that will assure an efficient, coordinated effort by the Federal Government in cooperation with the state."

Corps of Engineers. The Committee recommended $1,277,139,000 for all Corps activities -- a net $3,626,000 increase in the request.

The Committee cut construction funds for the Oroville Reservoir in California by $2,010,000, to $12,-830,000, saying this sum would permit reimbursing the state at an interest rate on the construction costs of 2-5/8 percent, "the going federal rate at the time the project was initiated," whereas the request had been based on use of a 3-1/2 percent interest rate. (For previous cuts based on these considerations, see 1963 Almanac p. 179)

Major increases included $3 million -- to an $80,-060,000 total -- for flood control in the Mississippi River and its tributaries, and $10.8 million for the 14 unbudgeted Corps construction projects (most of which was offset by decreases in several requested sums). Anticipated savings and "slippages" -- an item subtracted from sums appropriated -- were increased by $10 million, to a $90 million total.

Interior Department. For all Interior Department public works activities, the Committee recommended $448,751,500 -- a cut of $9,816,500.

Under the Bureau of Reclamation, the Committee provided funds for two investigations in California -- $50,000 for a "reconnaissance study" in the central coastal area and $388,000 ($102,000 over the request) to permit the Bureau "to more effectively participate in the coordinated study on the Eel River division of the north coast project" (see comments above).

For Bureau construction and planning, the Committee provided $196,661,500, a net cut of $3,988,500, most of which was based on anticipated delays on previously funded projects. It deleted $100,000 requested to start construction of a standby service line from the Trinity power plant to the Lewiston power plant (both in the Central Valley Project, Calif.) because "the private power company has agreed to improve present service in the area." Also in the Central Valley project, it approved the $10 million requested to start construction on the Westlands distribution and drainage system and the $2 million requested to start construction on the San Luis interceptor drain.

Under the Bonneville Power Administration, the Committee allowed the full $1 million requested to initiate planning of a 490-mile high-voltage transmission line from the Bonneville system into Southern Idaho. Funds for the line were denied in 1964 because of controversy between public and private power interests. During 1965 hearings, the $1 million appropriation was opposed by the spokesmen for private power companies (the Idaho Power Co. and Utah Power & Light Co.) and by the United Mine Workers, who said it would "cost the coal miners up to 1,000 year-round jobs" due to loss of the coal market. In denying the request in 1964, the Committee had directed the BPA to try to negotiate wheeling arrangements with private companies to transmit BPA system power to Southern Idaho for "preference customers only." The 1965 report noted that the negotiations had succeeded except for differing interpretations of "preference customers." It was "imperative," the Committee said, that the contracts "make provision for servicing all preference customers, present or future." It stipulated, however, that Bonneville "will not engage in any promotional activities encouraging or organizing any new preference customers in the Southern Idaho area." "With this clarification," the Committee hoped "that the companies will execute a wheeling contract with Bonneville." It said if the contract was executed, "Bonneville is directed not to spend the $1 million... for planning the construction of this facility." (Three Republicans submitted minority views on this item. See below)

From the Southwestern Power Administration request for $4.5 million, the Committee cut $2.8 million for construction of transmission lines and facilities to connect federal hydroelectric reservoir projects in Oklahoma and Arkansas "pending the outcome of the present negotiations between the Southwestern Power Administration and the private utilities in the area to establish a satisfactory regional power pool." It said if no satisfactory arrangements could be reported in time for consideration in the fiscal 1967 budget, the Committee "will invite a further proposal for federal construction."

Minority Views. GOP Reps. John J. Rhodes (Ariz.), Glenn R. Davis (Wis.) and Howard W. Robison (N.Y.) opposed appropriation of $1 million for planning of the transmission line from the Bonneville Power System to Southern Idaho. They said, "The private power companies...are entitled to the protection of their Government against the advertising for or proselytizing of" their customers and without such protection "these companies will find themselves wheeling power for a Government agency, at greatly reduced prices, to serve their former customers, taken from them through subsidized (public) power and transmission facilities with which they cannot fairly or reasonably compete."

They said BPA should include in a wheeling contract a guarantee "to protect the private power companies from the loss of their existing customers in the area into which Bonneville seeks to extend itself."

Atomic Energy Commission. The Committee cut $126,005,000 from the over-all request for the Atomic Energy Commission, leaving $2,401,620,000. Of the cut, $39,169,000 in projects had already been eliminated in the AEC authorization bill (HR 8122) cleared May 4. (See story p. 708)

In addition to the cuts made in HR 8122, the Appropriations Committee took the following action on AEC's budget:

Reduced funds for the raw materials program to $210 million because program costs had run considerably under budget estimates in recent years. For the same reason, it recommended further cuts in two other programs, appropriating $376 million for special nuclear materials and $702.4 million for the weapons program.

Under reactor development, recommended a further cut of $16.1 million, leaving $471,450,000. For civilian power reactors, cut an additional $1.5 million from the super-heat project-General Electric and said phasing-out of the program "should be accelerated"; $2 million was cut from the fast breeder reactor program, leaving $27,030,000.

Recommended $25 million, the amount authorized in HR 8122, for research and development on a large seed-blanket reactor prior to execution of a contract. For the high-temperature gas-cooled reactor project, provided the full $40,613,000 requested and authorized for operating expenses (the rest of the authorization was for capital equipment).

For merchant ship reactors, the Committee followed the authorization bill and recommended an increase of $1.1 million, to $2.5 million. Stipulated that it expected "more significant progress" on the program in the future and urged the AEC to "investigate possible cooperative efforts with industry in carrying out the various phases...." For Army power reactors, reduced the $4.8 million requested and authorized to $2.7 million, applying the cut to the project for development of a gas-cooled, portable reactor. For naval propulsion reactors, approved the full $96,550,000 requested but did not allow an additional $2 million authorized for destroyer nuclear core development, saying costs of this project could be met within the sum allowed.

For development of the advanced space power system (SNAP-50), appropriated $10 million -- an additional cut of $2 million.

Cut $3.2 million for advanced systems research and technology, including $2.5 million for the Pluto program to develop a nuclear reactor to propel low-altitude military missiles. Said Congress had provided $3 million in 1964 for "mothballing" the project until a military need for it was developed. (1964 Almanac p. 178)

Provided the full amounts authorized for general reactor technology ($58 million) and for nuclear safety ($34,450,000).

For the physical research program, cut $3 million from the $239 million requested and authorized, including $2 million for the high energy physics program, leaving $98 million, and $1 million for controlled thermonuclear research, leaving $21.5 million. For medium energy physics, followed the authorization bill in providing $9 million -- $1.5 million over the request -- and in stipulating that $2 million (the additional funds plus $500,000 in available funds) should be used for research and development and advanced design studies for a proposed Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory meson physics facility. (Also see below)

Allowed the full amounts authorized for biology and medicine ($83 million) and for the training, education and information program ($15,780,000).

Cut the request and authorization for civilian applications of nuclear explosives (Project Plowshare) by $2.5 million, to $15,375,000, and applied the cut to the request for the Project Schooner excavation project.

Plant and Equipment -- Provided $237,995,000, an additional cut of $10,705,000 including $3 million for additional computer facilities and $4.8 million for a new electron linear accelerator at the Oak Ridge National Laboratory. Disapproved an unbudgeted $1.2 million authorized in HR 8122 for partial architecture and engineering for the Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory meson physics facility. (Also see above)

Tennessee Valley Authority. In light of "extensive opposition," the Committee disallowed $5,775,000 requested to initiate construction of the Tellico Dam on the Little Tennessee River. It appropriated, instead, $100,000 for a TVA study of the possible pollution the dam would create in the river. Offsetting the decrease, the Committee provided an unbudgeted $5,570,000 to begin construction of the multipurpose Tims Ford project on the Elk River. It also increased by $1 million, to an $8 million total, funds for land acquisition for the Land Between-the-Lakes project.

FLOOR ACTION

The House June 22 passed HR 9220 by voice vote and sent it to the Senate, without change.

Most of the debate June 22 was directed at traditional charges that the bill was "pork barrel legislation." John J. Rhodes (R Ariz.), ranking GOP member of the Appropriations Subcommittee which drafted HR 9220, said "the two most important things this bill does is either keep water off the land or put water on the land, whichever is needed.... As long as we have disastrous floods on the one hand and dire shortages of water on the other, programs like these are needed. To indicate them as 'pork barrel' is ridiculous."

In further defense of the bill, Subcommittee Chairman Michael J. Kirwan (D Ohio) contended that "the value of existing projects was dramatically demonstrated during the devastating floods on the West Coast last December and January" when "the damages prevented by the Corps of Engineers and the Bureau of Reclamation projects already in service amounted to about $1 billion." He said, "It is essential that we take all reasonable steps to conserve and develop the water resources of the nation in the immediate years ahead. Fundamental to the continued growth of our nation is adequate provision for flood control, water supply, navigation, reclamation and power development." There were no dissents.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House, HR 9220 appropriated:

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- Aug. 19 reported HR 9220 (S Rept 632), carrying $4,327,589,000.

The Senate total was $60,027,000 less than the revised Administration request and $85,952,500 more than the amount included by the House. The Senate restored $22,050,000 of the House cuts in the AEC request; added unbudgeted funds, in addition to those already added by the House, for the Corps of Engineers; and granted two major Administration requests, submitted after the House passed the bill, for $5 million for emergency flood control measures in areas struck by recent disasters and for $7.5 million for the Interoceanic Canal Commission. These increases accounted for the bulk of the fund difference between the House and Senate versions.

Major actions taken by the Committee:

Construction Starts. The Committee provided funds for 72 new construction starts -- 42 budgeted and 30 unbudgeted. It included all starts recommended by the Administration, all 15 unbudgeted starts added by the House, and the following additional 15 unbudgeted starts to be constructed by the Corps of Engineers: Anchorage Harbor, Alaska; Snettisham power project, Alaska; Garland City, Ark.; Four River Basins, Fla.; Island Levee, Ind. and Ill.; Melvern Reservoir, Kan.; East Point Levee, La.; Saginaw River, Mich.; Las Cruces, N.M.; Kill Van Kull, N.Y. and N.J.; New Hope Reservoir, N.C.; Kaw Reservoir, Okla; Optima Reservoir, Okla.; Gulf Intracoastal Waterway Channel to Palacios, Texas; and Hampton Roads, Va. One of these projects, Snettisham, contained a major power installation.

The Committee also recommended funds to initiate planning on 32 unbudgeted projects.

Corps of Engineers. For all Corps activities, the Committee added $52,929,000 to the amount provided by the House, for a total of $1,330,068,000 -- a net $50,244,000 increase over the request.

The Committee restored the $2,010,000 cut by the House from construction funds for the Oroville Reservoir, Calif. Among the increases over the House total were $35,363,000 for general construction, $5 million for emergency flood control activities in areas struck by recent flood disasters (the request was submitted after the House acted on the bill), and $9,765,000 for flood control on the Mississippi River and its tributaries. The Committee also deleted the House's increase of $10 million for anticipated savings and "slippages," leaving $80 million to be subtracted from sums appropriated.

Interior Department. The Committee increased the House sum for all Interior Department public works activities by $4,268,500, for a total of $453,020,000 (request: $458,568,000). The increases were in funds for the Bureau of Reclamation.

Under the Bonneville Power Administration, the Committee agreed with the House in allowing the full $1 million requested to initiate planning of a high-voltage transmission line from the Bonneville system into Southern Idaho -- a major goal of public-power interests. It expressed views similar to those of the House Committee on negotiation of a wheeling contract with non-federal utilities.

The Committee also added language to the bill directing that the BPA not supply power, "directly or indirectly, to any phosphorous electric furnace plant in Idaho, Utah or Wyoming" and directing the BPA to cancel a 1964 power contract with the Monsanto Chemical Co. It said the BPA appropriation was approved "with the understanding" that the BPA "will agree not to serve any phosphate furnace load or other direct service industrial loads; and that the BPA will agree that the private power companies need not wheel to a preference customer of the BPA in order for that customer to serve a phosphate furnace load now being served by the companies, and will agree to wheeling capacity limitations which will effectively discourage preference customers from serving new phosphate loads."

Atomic Energy Commission. The Committee restored $22,050,000 of the cuts made by the House in the Administration request for the AEC, leaving $2,423,670,000. In major actions the Committee:

Restored $7.1 million for reactor development, including $1 million of the $1.5 million cut by the House from the super-heat project-General Electric and the House cuts for the fast breeder reactor program, Army power reactors and SNAP-50.

Restored the $3 million cut by the House from the physical research program, leaving the full $239 million requested and authorized.

Plant and Equipment -- Restored $6,250,000 of the $10,705,000 cut by the House, including the full House cut of $4.8 million for a new electron linear accelerator at the Oak Ridge National Laboratory and an unbudgeted $1.2 million for partial architecture and engineering for the Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory meson physics facility.

Tennessee Valley Authority. The Committee recommended the full $58,952,000 requested for TVA, a cut of $895,000 in the House figure. It approved funds for the Tellico Dam but deleted the Tims Ford project, the additional land acquisition funds and the pollution control study. During hearings on the TVA budget, Chairman Allen J. Ellender (D La.) of the Public Works Appropriations Subcommittee said he would seek a revision of the existing methods of TVA financing "before we spend any more money in the Tennessee Valley." Under existing law, TVA power facilities were financed from power sales and revenues from bonds, while other TVA projects -- like the multipurpose Tellico and Tims Ford projects -- were financed through appropriations.

Interoceanic Canal Commission. The Committee granted the full $7.5 million requested after House consideration of HR 9220 for initiating investigations of proposed routes for a sea-level canal to replace or supplement the Panama Canal.

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate Aug. 23 passed HR 9220 by voice vote and sent it to conference with the House.

Two amendments were rejected by the Senate before passage. One, by William Proxmire (D Wis.), would have deleted the budgeted $10 million for Corps of Engineers construction on the Cross-Florida Barge Canal, whose eventual cost was estimated at over $145 million. The other, by Gaylord Nelson (D Wis.), would have cut $10 million from Bureau of Reclamation funds for initiation of construction of a distribution and drainage system in the Westlands Irrigation District in the Central Valley project, Calif., a budgeted project. The Proxmire amendment was rejected by voice vote; the Nelson amendment by a 24-50 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart p. 1068)

In support of his amendment, Proxmire contended that the estimated benefits of the canal did not outweigh the estimated costs in sufficient proportion to justify continued construction. He described the project as "strictly pork barrel at its very worst." In addition, Proxmire said the canal would "destroy the treasured lower 45 miles of the Oklawaha River -- one of the most beautiful streams in America." Strong opposition to Proxmire's amendment was voiced by Florida Sens. Spessard L. Holland (D) and George A. Smathers (D). Holland said the cost-benefit ratio had not been overestimated; one of "the principal arguments for the early construction and completion" of the canal was a marked increase in "the traffic on the Mississippi River, on the Gulf intracoastal waterways and the East Coast and the Central waterways." Smathers said fears that the river would be damaged were "groundless" because the canal would "follow a straight line and not attempt to follow the meanders of the natural river." (For earlier dispute over the canal, see 1962 Almanac p. 180)

Nelson, in support of his amendment, said Congress should not appropriate funds for the Westlands project "without having before us recordable contracts guaranteeing compliance" with requirements of the reclamation law stating that irrigation water from federal projects was for the exclusive benefit of farms no larger than 160 acres, or 320 acres if owned by a man and wife. Under the law, no lands in excess of these limits could receive water from federal projects until their owners executed a recordable contract, approved by the Interior Department, for sale of the excess lands. Nelson said much of the land in the Westlands irrigation district was owned by the Southern Pacific Railroad in "checkerboard" blocks greatly exceeding the 160-acre limit. To appropriate funds for the project before a contract was executed, he said, would in effect continue "an interest-free subsidy" to the excess-land users. (For 1964 debate on a similar Nelson amendment and description of the 160-acre limit, see 1964 Almanac p. 192, 504)

Also before passage the Senate agreed by voice vote to a motion by Allen J. Ellender (D La.) to change language prohibiting the Bonneville Power Administration from supplying power to any phosphorous electric furnace plant in Idaho, Utah or Wyoming. The revised language applied to "southern" Idaho, Utah and Wyoming.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate, HR 9220 appropriated:

Army Department
Cemeterial expenses	$ 13,739,000
Rivers, harbors and flood control	1,330,068,000
Panama Canal	40,000,000
Interior Department
Reclamation Bureau	325,835,000
Bonneville Power Administration	113,765,000
Southeastern Power Administration	1,000,000
Southwestern Power Administration	3,500,000
Independent Offices
Atomic Energy Commission	2,377,045,000
Tennessee Valley Authority	58,952,000
Delaware River Basin Commission	140,000
Housing and Home Finance Agency	500,000
Interoceanic Canal Commission	7,500,000
TOTAL	$4,272,044,000
Indefinite appropriations (receipts)	(55,545,000)
GRAND TOTAL	$4,327,589,000

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Aug. 23 -- William Proxmire (D Wis.) -- Cut $10 million allotted for Corps of Engineers construction on the Cross-Florida Barge Canal. Voice vote.

Gaylord Nelson (D Wis.) -- Cut $10 million from Bureau of Reclamation construction funds for the Westlands Irrigation District in the Central Valley project in California. Roll call, 24-50.

Conference

REPORT -- The conference report (H Rept 1163) on HR 9220 was filed Oct. 13, carrying $4,292,866,500. Major actions by the conferees:

Construction Starts. Conferees provided funds for 68 new construction starts -- all 42 budgeted starts, all 15 unbudgeted starts added in the House and 11 of the 15 unbudgeted starts added in the Senate. Of the four Senate construction projects not included in the final bill, the conferees dropped two entirely (Island Levee, Ind. and Ill., and Las Cruces, N.M.) and provided planning funds, as requested in the Budget, for the other two (Snettisham power project, Alaska, and New Hope Reservoir, N.C.).

The conferees recommended funds to initiate planning on 59 projects -- all 25 budgeted planning starts, all seven unbudgeted planning starts provided in the House, and 27 of the 32 unbudgeted starts allowed in the Senate. For surveys, they provided a compromise $25,435,000 -- $758,000 above the request.

Corps of Engineers. Conferees recommended $1,307,955,500 for all Corps activities, about halfway between the House and Senate figures and $28,131,500 more than the request.

The conference version retained the House's $2,010,000 cut from construction funds budgeted for the Oroville Reservoir, Calif., which the Senate had restored. On over-all House-Senate differences on Corps funds, conferees provided $993,279,000 for general construction ($19,616,000 over the request; $19,543,000 above the House figure; $15,820,000 below the Senate sum); allowed the full $12 million requested and provided by the Senate for emergency flood control, hurricane and shore protection activities (including $5 million requested after the House passed HR 9220); and compromised at $84,942,500 for flood control on the Mississippi River and its tributaries -- halfway between the House and Senate figures and $7,882,500 more than the request. In addition, the conferees agreed to the House's increase of $10 million for anticipated savings and "slippages," so that $90 million (instead of $80 million) was subtracted from sums appropriated.

Interior Department. For all Interior Department public works activities, conferees compromised at $451,665,000 -- $6,903,000 less than the Budget request.

The conferees modified Senate language to direct that the BPA not supply power, directly or indirectly "through any preference customer," to any phosphorous electric furnace plant in southern Idaho, Utah or Wyoming. The language had the effect of making more specific the intent expressed in the Senate report on HR 9920 that BPA power should not be used in any manner to serve new phosphate loads. The provision had been proposed by Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield (D Mont.) to eliminate the possibility that the BPA would supply power to sulfur or phosphate plants in southern Idaho which would compete with similar plants in his state.

Conferees also dropped the Senate's provision directing the BPA to cancel a 1964 power contract with the Monsanto Chemical Co. The contract had been canceled Aug. 20.

Atomic Energy Commission. Conferees recommended $2,412,520,000 for the AEC -- about midway between the House and Senate figures and $115,105,000 less than the Budget request. They agreed to a portion of the Senate's restoration of cuts made by the House, including $1 million for the super-heat project-General Electric, $1 million for the fast breeder reactor program and $1 million for SNAP-50. They retained the House's $3 million cut, which the Senate had restored, in funds for the physical research program, leaving $236 million.

Plant and Equipment -- The conferees agreed with the Senate in restoring House cuts of $4.8 million for a new electron linear accelerator at the Oak Ridge National Laboratory and an unbudgeted $1.2 million authorized in HR 8122 for partial architecture and engineering for the Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory meson physics facility.

Tennessee Valley Authority. The final bill provided $59,347,000 for TVA -- $395,000 more than the request and Senate figures but $500,000 less than the House sum. Conferees deleted the Senate's funds for the Tellico Dam and reinstated the House-approved Tims Ford project and pollution study. They provided an unbudgeted $500,000 (half the House sum) for the Land-Between-the-Lakes project, for a project total of $7.5 million.

Interoceanic Canal Commission. Conferees recommended $7 million of the $7.5 million requested and provided by the Senate after the House completed action on the bill.

ACTION -- The House Oct. 14 and the Senate Oct. 15 agreed by voice votes to the conference report, sending the bill to the President.

TREASURY-POST OFFICE FUNDS

HR 7060 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 223) April 1, 1965.
- Passed by the House by a 347-7 roll-call vote April 5. (See p. 948)
- Reported, amended, by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 275) June 3.
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote June 8.
- Conference report (H Rept 550) agreed to by voice votes of the House and Senate June 28.

PL 89-57 -- Signed into law June 30.

The fiscal 1966 appropriations bill for the Treasury and Post Office Departments, the Executive Office of the President and four independent agencies (HR 7060) provided $7,669,444,000 -- $80,326,000 less than the amount requested by the Administration.

HR 7060 appropriated $1,291,239,000 to the Treasury Department, $5,324,400,000 to the Post Office Department, $15,805,000 to the Executive Office of the President, $3 million to the four independent agencies and $1,035,000,000 to the International Monetary Fund (IMF). Major Congressional reductions in Administration requests were $21,726,000 in Treasury funds, including $21,420,000 from the Internal Revenue Service (IRS), and $58.6 million in Post Office funds, including $29 million from operating estimates and $19 million from plant and equipment.

As usual, indefinite appropriations (funds that come to the Treasury from permanent appropriations already made available by Congress) were not included in the bill. They were estimated at $11,649,998,000, of which approximately $11.5 billion would be for interest payments on the national debt.

The House and Senate versions of HR 7060 differed in three major respects: funds for IRS revenue accounting and processing activities, Post Office operations and Coast Guard acquisition, construction and improvements.

For IRS accounting and processing activities, the House appropriated $154,600,000 and the Senate $164,500,000. Conferees accepted $5 million of the Senate increase, bringing the final amount to $159,600,000. At the same time, conferees deleted a $7.2 million increase approved by the Senate for IRS compliance activities.

Conferees accepted $11 million of the $27,450,000 increase voted by the Senate for the Post Office Department above the House's version. The increase approved by the Senate included funds for Post Office operations and plant and equipment.

For Coast Guard acquisition, construction and improvements, conferees accepted the Senate figure of $115,510,000 instead of the $101 million proposed by the House. Part of the Senate increase was to cover the cost of 17 small Coast Guard patrol craft which had been deployed to Viet Nam.

(The fiscal 1965 supplemental appropriations bill (HR 7091 -- PL 89-16) appropriated $22.3 million to the Treasury Department for program costs and for pay increases voted in 1964 and $200 million to the Post Office Department for the pay raises. For story on HR 7091, see p. 227.)

(The fiscal 1966 general supplemental appropriations bill (HR 11588 -- PL 89-309) appropriated $34.3 million to the Bureau of the Mint to continue the Mint's crash program of coin production and for production of new coins of the new alloy authorized by S 2080 (PL 89-81).) However, Congress denied $41.5 million in fiscal 1966 supplemental appropriations requested by the Post Office to cover costs of an expected increased volume of mail. For story on the supplemental appropriations bill, see p. 182. For story on the new coins, see p. 882.)

BACKGROUND -- The President's Budget requests for fiscal 1966 for the two departments, the Executive Office and the four independent agencies totaled $6,708,510,000. After House passage of the appropriations bill, the President's requests were increased to $7,749,770,000 -- $1,035,000,000 in fiscal 1965 supplemental funds to increase the U. S. contribution to the IMF and $6,260,000 to replace 17 small Coast Guard patrol craft that had been deployed to Viet Nam. The final request included $1,312,965,000 for the Treasury Department, $5,383,000,000 for the Post Office Department, $15,805,000 for the Executive Office and $3 million for the four independent agencies.

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- April 1 reported HR 7060 (H Rept 223), recommending appropriations of $6,604,404,000 -- a cut of $104,106,000 from total Budget requests.

The Committee said it was concerned with the "growing tendency on the part of Government officials, particularly junior officials, to satisfy personal egos by displaying certain status symbols," such as automobile telephones and short-wave radios and "special rugs and drapes and special office equipment...." The Committee said the cost of such items was "relatively small," but that every dollar of the taxpayer's money should be spent for "essential government service, and every dollar wasted is a dollar too much."

On specific items, the Committee took the following major actions:

Treasury Department. Bureau of the Mint -- Approved the full $13,350,000 requested, which the Committee said would "enable the Bureau of the Mint to continue its crash program to meet the serious coin shortage and prepare for requirements in connection with the proposed change in the silver content of present coinage." Testifying Feb. 15 on Treasury appropriations requests, then-Secretary of the Treasury Douglas Dillon had said it was "very clear we cannot continue with our present silver coinage" because of the growing shortage of silver. "The real question is in what way should we replace our present silver coinage," Dillon testified.

A new coinage system was subsequently authorized in the Silver Coinage Act of 1965 (S 2080 -- PL 89-81). The legislation provided for the minting of dimes and quarters of a cupro-nickel alloy and a new half dollar with a reduced silver content. (For story, see p. 882)

Coast Guard -- Reduced the request for funds for acquisition, construction and improvements by $8,250,000, to $101 million, which the Committee said was "sufficient to fund a reasonable increase in the program for modernizing the fleet and shore installations of the Coast Guard." The Committee said that "funds appropriated under this heading remain available until expended," and that the "unobligated balances carried over in this account in recent years have been significantly larger than estimated by the Department." The Committee also said it "specifically approves the expenditure of funds" for the acquisition from the Army of Fort Jay in New York City. (The appropriation was $13,250,000 below the authorized amount. For action on Coast Guard authorization bill (HR 4527), see story p. 718.)

Internal Revenue Service -- Reduced funds requested for compliance activities by $14.5 million to $439 million. The report said that for " the last several years the Committee has been concerned about the rapid growth in the size and staff of the Internal Revenue Service...." It said that while the Committee had "specifically approved" the concept of the automatic data processing program, it was "becoming rather apprehensive at the tremendous amount of equipment being purchased as well as the accelerated rate being pursued by the Service." The report said that when the automatic data processing system became fully operational, "the impact on compliance will be most significant," and as a result additional compliance personnel should not be added "at this time."

Secret Service -- Recommended $12,637,000 for salaries and expenses. This was $3,877,000 more than had been requested by the Administration. The higher figure had been recommended by Dillon. The Secret Service is part of the Treasury Department. In testimony to the Treasury-Post Office Appropriations Subcommittee Feb. 15, Dillon said he was aware that it was "perhaps unprecedented" for a Cabinet officer to ask for an appropriation in excess of that requested by the President, but that this was " a very special and indeed unique situation." Dillon said President Johnson felt that "these substantial additional expenditures required for the increased protection of the President...are so intimately connected with him that he should not personally pass upon them." Dillon said the President was aware of the request for additional funds and was "content to leave the decision to the wisdom of the Congress." In testimony to the Subcommittee Feb. 23, James J. Rowley, chief of the Secret Service, said the additional funds would permit the hiring of 183 agents and other new personnel and the purchase of equipment. Rowley said the equipment would include electronic data processing devices which would permit the Service to make quicker use of its index of approximately 240,000 persons and groups considered a potential danger to the President. Rowley said an average of 6,000 referrals a month were received from other agencies for addition to the list.

Post Office Department. Recommended appropriations of $5,313,400,000 which was $69,600,000 below the amount requested by the Administration. The Committee requested the Post Office Department to "carefully review each proposed new program as well as existing programs to eliminate activities which, while desirable, may not be essential...."

Independent Agencies. Approved the full Administration request for $3 million, which was $495,000 over the fiscal 1965 appropriation. Of this amount, $250,000 was accounted for by the addition to the bill of funds for the Administrative Conference of the United States. The Conference was established in 1964 (PL 88-499) to formulate recommendations for the improvement of administrative procedures within the federal agencies. (1964 Almanac p.441)

FLOOR ACTION

The House April 5 passed HR 7060 by a 347-7 roll-call vote. The $6,604,404,000 total was unchanged from Appropriations Committee recommendations. (For voting, see chart p. 948)

Tom Steed (D Okla.), chairman of the House Appropriations Treasury-Post Office Subcommittee and floor manager of HR 7060, said the Administration's requests were reduced by 1.55 percent, a "very modest reduction." He said that "these agencies traditionally bring in tight budgets, and it is not easy to make substantial cuts."

Before passage, the House rejected, by a 13-27 standing vote, an amendment by Durward G. Hall (R Mo.) that would have prohibited the use of funds appropriated by HR 7060 for the seizure of mail unless Government officials obtained a search warrant in connection with the seizure of property for collection of federal taxes. Hall said that although privacy of mail was guaranteed by the 4th Amendment to the Constitution, there had been 14 seizures of first-class mail since December 1962. The seizures were made by the Post Office Department for the Internal Revenue Service and involved IRS delinquent tax cases. (For story on Senate investigation of Government "mail covers", see p. 1526.)

Steed opposed the amendment. He said that although he did not disagree with Hall about "stopping a practice he finds obnoxious," the amendment concerned "something that the (Appropriations) Committee knows nothing about, never heard of before, except what we have heard today." He said it did not seem fair to adopt the amendment when the Committee had been given "no opportunity to take this matter up with the agency...."

Also prior to passage of the bill two provisions were removed on points of order by H. R. Gross (R Iowa), who said they represented legislative provisions in an appropriation bill. The provisions would have allowed the Treasury and Post Office Departments to transfer internally limited amounts of their appropriations and use the funds for purposes not originally intended. Steed said the language regarding transfer of funds within the Post Office Department had been in the bill "for many years" and gave the Department "the only device it has to cope with unexpected and unforeseen changes in the mail flow volume which can and frequently do occur." The transfer privilege for the Treasury Department was not previously contained in money bills for the agency.

PROVISIONS -- The breakdown of funds in HR 7060 as passed by the House:

Treasury Department	$1,272,252,000
Post Office Department	5,313,400,000
Executive Office of the President	15,752,000
Independent Agencies
U.S. Tax Court	2,190,000
Administrative Conference of the United States	250,000
Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations	410,000
President's Advisory Committee on Labor-Management Policy	150,000
TOTAL	$6,604,404,000

AMENDMENT REJECTED

April 5 -- Durward G. Hall (R Mo.) -- Prohibit the use of funds appropriated in the bill for the seizure of mail unless Government officials obtained a search warrant in connection with the seizure of property for collection of federal taxes. Standing vote, 13-27.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- June 3 reported HR 7060 (S Rept 275), appropriating $7,698,669,000 -- $1,094,265,000 more than the House-approved funds and $51,101,000 less than revised budget requests. (Continued on next page)

Following are the major changes made by the Committee in the House version:

Treasury Department. Bureau of Customs -- The Committee appropriated the same amount, $82,250,000, that had been approved by the House. The Committee said any savings resulting from the proposed reorganization of the field structure of the Customs Bureau "will be in the future and at an indefinite time" and that it "anticipated that the over-all workload of the Bureau of Customs will continue to increase...."(The reorganization plan abolished 53 offices in the Customs Bureau which were filled by appointment by the President. The offices were to be abolished not later than Dec. 31, 1966. For story, see p. 658.)

Coast Guard -- The Committee increased funds for acquisition, construction and improvement from $101,000,000 to $115,510,000. It said $6,260,000 of the increase represented an additional sum requested May 17 for replacement of 17 small Coast Guard patrol craft that had been deployed to Viet Nam. The Committee said deployment of the craft had "seriously reduced the search and rescue and law-enforcement capabilities off the shores of the United States," and that it was "most urgent that these capabilities be restored at the very earliest possible date."

Funds for replacement of the vessels were authorized in HR 7855 (PL 89-21). (For story, see p. 718)

Internal Revenue Service -- The Committee increased funds for revenue accounting and processing by $9.9 million. The Committee also increased funds for compliance activities by $7,250,000, which it said would provide sufficient funds to maintain current staffing and operational levels "on the additional 1.9 million tax returns expected," and "to raise operational levels and thereby improve taxpayer compliance." In addition, the Committee restored language, deleted from the House bill on a point of order, permitting the Internal Revenue Service to transfer a limited amount of its appropriations for use for purposes not originally intended.

Secret Service -- The Committee reduced funds by $522,000, saying that during the course of its hearings Secretary of the Treasury Henry H. Fowler "withdrew the request previously submitted for $522,000 for two Presidential armored vehicles. It was made clear to the Committee that the President did not approve the original request for these vehicles and that if they were built he would not use or condone their use in his protection." (For story on proposals for Presidential safety, see p. 582)

Post Office Department. The Committee increased funds provided by the House by $27,450,000, most of which it said would be used to provide 5,204 additional positions that had been requested to handle the estimated 3-percent mail volume increase and 15,000 additional positions to relieve excessive overtime. The Committee also restored language permitting the transfer of funds within the Department but disallowed $50,000 requested by the Administration and allowed by the House for transfer to the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity.

IMF. The Committee added $1,035,000,000 in fiscal 1965 supplemental appropriations to increase the U. S. contribution to the IMF. The amount, requested June 1, was authorized by HR 6497 (PL 89-31). (For story, see p. 486)

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate June 8 passed HR 7060 by voice vote. The total amount appropriated remained unchanged from the $7,698,669,000 recommended by the Appropriations Committee.

PROVISIONS -- The breakdown of funds in HR 7060 as passed by the Senate:

Treasury Department	$1,304,014,000
Post Office Department	5,340,850,000
Executive Office of the President	15,805,000
Independent Agencies
U.S. Tax Court	2,190,000
Administrative Conference of the United States	250,000
Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations	410,000
President's Advisory Committee on Labor-Management Policy	150,000
International Monetary Fund	1,035,000,000
TOTAL	$7,698,669,000

Conference

REPORT -- House-Senate conferees June 24 reported HR 7060 (H Rept 550) recommending $7,669,444,000, which was $1,065,040,000 above the amount appropriated by the House and $29,225,000 less than had been appropriated by the Senate.

Conferees resolved the major differences between the two versions of the bill as follows:

- Accepted the $14.5-million Senate increase in funds for Coast Guard acquisition, construction and improvements, part of which ($6,260,000) was for replacement of vessels that had been deployed to Viet Nam.
- Accepted $5 million of the $9.9 million added by the Senate for Internal Revenue Service accounting and processing activities but deleted a $7.2-million Senate increase in funds for IRS compliance activities.
- Accepted Senate deletion of $522,000 in Secret Service funds provided by the House for two Presidential armored vehicles, which Mr. Johnson said he did not want.
- Accepted $11,000,000 of the $27,450,000 increase voted by the Senate for the Post Office Department. Much of the increase was for additional personnel to eliminate excessive overtime.
- Accepted the Senate amendment to permit the transfer of certain Post Office funds within the Department but rejected a Senate proposal to permit the transfer of certain funds within the IRS.
- Accepted the $1,035,000,000 Senate addition to increase the U. S. contribution to the IMF.

ACTION -- The House and Senate June 28 agreed by voice votes to the conference report.

In House discussion of the conference report, H. R. Gross (R Iowa) noted that the Post Office planned to hire approximately 6,000 temporary summer employees and said he hoped the House Appropriations Treasury and Post Office and Executive Office Subcommittee would look into the "boondoggle" when it considered the fiscal 1967 appropriation bill. Tom Steed (D Okla.), chairman of the Subcommittee, assured Gross that "next year the Bureau of the Budget, as well as this Committee, are going into this entire picture quite thoroughly." (For story on summer Post Office hiring, see p. 1516.)

STATE-JUSTICE-COMMERCE BILL APPROPRIATES $2 BILLION

HR 8639 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 427) May 27, 1965.

- Passed by the House on a 322-60 roll-call vote June 1. (See p. 964)
- Reported by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 547) Aug. 10.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, by voice vote Aug. 12. (For roll-call vote on amendment see p. 1065)
- Conference report (H Rept 807) agreed to by voice votes of the House Aug. 19, and the Senate Aug. 24.

PL 89-164 -- Signed into law Sept. 2.

Congress in 1965 appropriated $2,057,597,150 for the Departments of State, Justice and Commerce, the Judiciary and 12 related agencies in fiscal 1966. The bill also authorized appropriation of $3,898,400,000 from the Highway Trust Fund to meet obligations incurred under federal-aid highway programs.

As enacted, HR 8639 totaled $114,338,450 less than Administration requests, $28,092,750 less than appropriated by the House and $5,125,350 more than appropriated by the Senate. The action of the Senate, in voting smaller appropriations than did the House, was unusual.

PROVISIONS -- As signed by the President, HR 8639 appropriated:

In addition, HR 8639:

Authorized appropriation from the Highway Trust Fund of $3,898,400,000 to meet federal-aid highway obligations.

Prohibited the use of funds in the Act for publicity or propaganda purposes not authorized by Congress or to administer programs funded from foreign currencies for which a specific dollar appropriation had not been made.

Background

The Administration's final requests totaled $2,171,935,600, including the following: State, $405,210,000; Justice, $378,834,000; Commerce, $937,030,000; the Judiciary, $87,865,500 (including indefinite appropriations for referees' salaries and expenses); and 13 related agencies, $367,996,100. The total included requests, made after House consideration of HR 8639, for expenses of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, created by Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, and $1 million for construction of a new chancery building in Saigon, Viet Nam, authorized in May.

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION-- May 27 reported HR 8639 (H Rept 427), recommending $2,085,689,900 in direct and indefinite appropriations. This total was $82,045,700 less than the original Administration requests of $2,167,735,600 which the Committee considered.

On specific items, the Committee took the following action:

State Department. Of the $404,210,000 requested for the State Department, the Committee allowed $388,202,000 -- a reduction of $16,008,000. The largest single cut, $5,275,000, was made in requests for Department salaries and expenses. A portion of this reduction was related to Committee disapproval of a request for 385 additional personnel positions. Secretary of State Dean Rusk Feb. 16 had volunteered a cut of 229 in these positions and the Committee denied the remaining 156. "The Department -- with help from this Committee -- has held the number of positions down to the same level as in fiscal year 1961," the report stated. However, funds were approved to tighten Department security measures, including the use of security trained Navy Seabees to supervise the construction of office buildings abroad. The Seabees' main function would be to insure that new buildings did not include listening devices such as were found in a U.S. building constructed in 1961 with foreign labor in Warsaw, Poland.

In addition, the Committee approved $6,640,000 -- $2 million below requests -- for the Chamizal settlement and $100,000 for a statue of Abraham Lincoln to be presented to Mexico in commemoration of that nation's independence. The Chamizal funds were part of a $44.9 million authorization approved by Congress in 1964 (PL 88-300) to settle a century-old dispute between the United States and Mexico over their common Rio Grande River boundary. Only $30 million had been appropriated to implement the Chamizal settlement in fiscal 1965.(1964 Almanac p. 199, 336)

Justice Department. Appropriations of $370,819,000 were allowed for the Justice Department -- a reduction of $3,015,000 in Administration requests. The Committee approved the full request of $165,365,000 for the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI), which was $4,285,000 above the appropriation for fiscal 1965, and approved 392 additional full-year FBI positions.

Commerce Department. The Committee approved $889,522,000 for the Commerce Department -- a reduction of $47,508,000 in budget estimates. In addition, the Committee authorized appropriations of $3,898,400,000 from the Highway Trust Fund for federal-aid highways -- a reduction of $1.6 million in estimates for administrative expenses. The bill appropriated directly from the Treasury $255 million for repayable advances to the Trust Fund which the Committe said were necessary because expenditures would exceed revenues to the Fund in the first half of the year. The money would be repaid by the end of the year. The appropriation was $25 million less than the request because of recent indications of higher than expected revenues, the report said.

For the Community Relations Service, which was established by Title X of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (PL 88-352), the Committee approved the full request of $1.3 million. (The Service later was transferred to the Justice Department. See story p. 565)

For the Census Bureau, $23,950,000 was allowed, of which $5 million was for tabulating the general agriculture census of 1964 and $2.2 million was for preparation for the 19th decennial census in 1970.

For the Maritime Administration, the Committee approved $349,811,000, which was $3,261,000 above budget estimates. The total included $190 million, the Administration request, for operating-differential subsidies for merchant marine vessels. The net committee increase over budget estimates resulted from a $7.3 million increase in funds for ship construction subsidies, a $4 million reduction in funds for research and development (because the nuclear vessel NS Savannah would be placed in experimental commercial operation rather than demonstration operation during fiscal 1966) and a $39,000 reduction in salaries and expenses. The ship construction increase was designed for a fifth ship planned by the American President Lines.

The Judiciary. The Committee allowed $70,372,900 for the Judiciary, which was $6,243,000 less than budget estimates. The total included $3.5 million -- $3,540,000 less than requests -- for the payment of fees and expenses of court-appointed counsels for indigent defendants under the Criminal Justice Act of 1964 (PL 88-455). The report noted that the appropriation "is purely an estimate." "When the original bill was submitted in 1963, the estimated cost by the Attorney General was $3,500,000. Now the request of the Judiciary is over twice that amount," the report said. (1964 Almanac p.430)

Related Agencies. For 11 related agencies, the Committee provided $356,035,000,which was $8,761,000 less than sought. On specific items, the Committee allowed $1.5 million for the Civil Rights Commission, which was $220,000 below requests; $4 million for desegregated school programs of the Health, Education and Welfare Department under Title IV of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, which was $4 million below requests; and $10 million for the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, which was $2,272,000 below requests. On the latter item, Congress had authorized only $10 million for fiscal 1966 (PL 89-27). (See story p. 497)

In addition, the Committee disallowed a $200,000 request for the Commission on International Rules of Judicial Procedure. Congress had provided $25,000 for the Commission in the Second Supplemental Appropriation bill for fiscal 1965 (PL 89-16) and had stipulated "that the Commission not incur any obligations payable with appropriated funds on or after May 1, 1965." (See story p. 227)

Other Action. The Committee denied an Administration request to allow the Executive Branch to use up to 5 percent of the foreign currencies held by the Treasury for U.S. uses in certain countries abroad. "This proposal would in effect have the Congress give up its authority to decide what these excess currencies (the equivalent of $82,400,000) are to be used for and turn that authority over to the Bureau of the Budget," the report said.

FLOOR ACTION

The House June 1 passed HR 8639 by a 322-60 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart p. 964)

No changes were made in the bill as reported by the Appropriations Committee.

During debate, Frank T. Bow (R Ohio), ranking Republican member of the Appropriations Committee, said HR 8639 was a "good" bill, but he objected to several small items. He also criticized the State Department for failing to work out arrangements with foreign countries whereby U.S.-owned foreign currencies of some countries could be converted into the currencies of other countries to finance U.S. operations there.

With reference to excess currencies, Henry S. Reuss (D Wis.) cited a March 22 report of the House Government Operations Committee's Foreign Operations Subcommittee (H Rept 199) proposing that in the future the Administration request direct appropriations from the Treasury's mounting stockpile of U.S.-owned foreign currencies. Reuss said these funds could be used to finance "foreign aid activities of a priority somewhat lower than that necessary to meet the test for a regular dollar aid appropriation." (For 1964 controversy on appropriation of these currencies, see 1964 Almanac p. 124)

Referring to the Committee's denial of the Administration request for blanket authority to use $82.4 million in U.S.-owned foreign currencies, Reuss said it "deserved to be turned down" because the Budget Bureau had failed to detail uses for the funds.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House, HR 8639 appropriated the following funds for fiscal 1966:

State Department	$ 388,202,000
Justice Department	370,819,000
Commerce Department	889,522,000
The Judiciary	70,372,900
American Battle Monuments Comm.	2,148,000
Civil Rights Commission	1,500,000
Health, Education and Welfare Department, Civil Rights Functions	4,000,000
Federal Maritime Commission	3,100,000
Foreign Claims Settlement Comm.	1,915,000
Small Business Administration	157,065,000
Trade Negotiations Ambassador	556,000
Subversive Activities Control Board	480,000
Tariff Commission	3,400,000
U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency	10,000,000
U.S. Information Agency	171,871,000
TOTAL	$2,074,950,900
Indefinite appropriations (Jud.)	10,739,000
GRAND TOTAL	$2,085,689,900

In addition, HR 8639:

Authorized appropriation from the Highway Trust Fund of $3,898,400,000 to meet federal-aid highway obligations.

Prohibited the use of funds in the Act for publicity or propaganda purposes not authorized by Congress or to administer programs funded from foreign currencies for which a specific dollar appropriation had not been made.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- Aug. 10 reported HR 8639 (S Rept 547), recommending $2,051,971,800. The total was $33,718,100 less than the House-approved funds and $119,963,800 below the revised budget request for $2,171,935,600.

Major changes in the House bill:

State Department. The Committee approved $390,125,000 for the State Department -- $1,923,000 more than the House. The Senate increases included: $348,000 for 38 additional positions, none of which was allowed by the House and $1 million for the Saigon chancery.

Commerce Department. The largest reduction in the House bill was an additional $25 million cut in repayable advances to the Highway Trust Fund. It was based on revised estimates of revenue. The Committee also deleted the $7.3 million unbudgeted ship construction subsidy and cut $10 million from operating subsidies which had not been obligated because of a maritime strike.

Among small increases, the Committee provided $250,000 for mobile fairs exhibiting U.S. goods abroad and $100,000 for a new export promotion program, "America Weeks."

The Judiciary. The Committee made an additional $500,000 reduction in funds for payment of court-appointed counsels under the Criminal Justice Act of 1964.

Related Agencies. For the 12 related agencies covered by HR 8639, the Committee allowed $359,111,000--$3,076,000 over House appropriations. Increases included $1 million for civil rights functions of HEW and $2,250,000 of the $3.2 million request for the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (the latter item was not considered by the House).

The Committee "strongly" recommended that the USIA conduct a detailed study with the view of curtailing operations in Western Europe.

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate Aug. 12 passed HR 8639 by voice vote, with amendments, and sent it to conference with the House. It voted $500,000 more than the Appropriations Committee had recommended.

During floor consideration, debate centered on four amendments offered to the bill. Two of the amendments -- one, by Gordon Allott (R Colo.), to prohibit the use of Bureau of Public Roads (BPR) funds for closing any BPR regional office; the other, by John O. Pastore (D R.I.) to increase from $2,250,000 to $2,750,000 funds for the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission -- were accepted by voice vote. According to John L. McClellan (D Ark.), the bill's floor manager, Allott's amendment was necessary because Alan S. Boyd, Under Secretary of Commerce for Transportation, considered language in the Appropriations Committee report designed to bar the closing of any BPR office, including the Denver, Colo., regional office, to be unconstitutional. Pastore argued that a $500,000 increase in the appropriation for the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, created by Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (PL 88-352), would allow the Commission to get off to a good start and more effectively carry out its responsibilities. The Administration sought $3.2 million in a request submitted to the Senate after the House acted on the bill. (1964 Almanac p. 338)

Rejected by an 18-66 roll-call vote was an amendment by Jacob K. Javits (R N.Y.) to increase from $5 million to $8 million funds for the Health, Education and Welfare Department's civil rights educational activities. Javits said his amendment was designed to bring the HEW appropriation up to the fiscal 1965 level and to impress on Congress " that anything we do in the field of civil rights can be directly eroded by the sheer lack of appropriation of funds." McClellan and Margaret Chase Smith (R Maine) argued, however, that during hearings HEW failed to justify the need for the full $8 million Budget request. Mrs. Smith added, "More than money is needed -- a good strong administration of this new and important program is vital to its success." (For voting, see chart p. 1065)

Also rejected, by voice vote, was an amendment by John J. Williams (R Del.) to prohibit the United States Information Agency (USIA) from producing domestic films depicting public officials' contribution to the nation's development. Williams specifically objected to the current USIA production of a film which he said portrayed the life and contributions of the Johnson family. Williams said Congress had never intended for USIA funds to be spent to "produce films of officeholders" or " in a manner. . . . so obviously political." He said his amendment would not prohibit the showing of the film about President Kennedy, "Years of Lightning, Day of Drums." (See story p. 659)

A USIA spokesman Aug. 12 told reporters that the film was not President Johnson's "life story" as such, but mainly told the story of economic development of the area of Texas of which Mr. Johnson was a native. He said the film showed " how through education, hard work and a democratic society, the people of that area of the Southwest were able to transfer a very lean countryside into an economically developed area." The spokesman said the movie, titled "A President's Country," was to be shown overseas and not in the United States.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate, HR 8639 appropriated:

State Department	$ 390,125,000
Justice Department	370,919,000
Commerce Department	851,122,900
The Judiciary	69,954,900
American Battle Monuments Comm.	2,148,000
Civil Rights Commission	1,500,000
Health, Education and Welfare Department, Civil Rights Functions	5,000,000
Equal Employment Opportunity Comm.	2,750,000
Federal Maritime Commission	3,180,000
Foreign Claims Settlement Comm.	1,915,000
Small Business Administration	157,065,000
Trade Negotiations Ambassador	556,000
Subversive Activities Control Board	480,000
Tariff Commission	3,400,000
U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency	10,000,000
U.S. Information Agency	171,617,000
TOTAL	$2,041,732,800
Indefinite appropriations (Jud.)	10,739,000
GRAND TOTAL	$2,052,471,800

In addition to the House provisions, HR 8639:

Prohibited the use of Bureau of Public Roads funds for the closing of any regional BPR field office.

Aug. 12 -- Gordon Allott (R Colo.) -- Add the BPR amendment, above. Voice vote.

John O. Pastore (D R.I.) -- Increase from $2,250,000 to $2,750,000 funds for the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Aug. 12 -- Jacob K. Javits (R N.Y.) -- Increase from $5 million to $8 million funds for Health, Education and Welfare Department civil rights educational activities. Roll-call vote, 18-66.

John J. Williams (R Del.) -- Prohibit the use of United States Information Agency funds for producing any domestic film to portray the contribution any public official or his family has made to the growth and development of the United States. Voice.

Conference

REPORT -- House-Senate conferees Aug. 18 reported a compromise version of HR 8639 (H Rept 807) recommending $2,057,597,150. Major compromises were:

State Department. Approved $389,602,000 for the State Department, which was $523,000 less than allowed by the Senate and $1.4 million more than allowed by the House. House conferees accepted Senate increases of $1 million for construction of a new U.S. chancery building in Saigon, South Viet Nam, and of $300,000 to allow 39 additional grants for the Center for Cultural and Technical Interchange Between the East and West in Honolulu, Hawaii. Senate conferees agreed to deletion of a $348,000 increase for 38 additional personnel additions.

Justice Department. Appropriated $370,869,000 for the Justice Department, accepting half of the $100,000 Senate increase for the Office of Criminal Justice.

Commerce Department. Approved $856,851,250 for the Commerce Department, which was $5,728,350 more than provided by the Senate and $32,670,750 less than provided by the House. House conferees agreed to Senate increases of $350,000 for mobile trade fairs and "America Weeks" export promotion projects and $200,000 for Coast and Geodetic Survey seismic surveys in Alaska and California, and to Senate decreases of $10 million from Maritime Administration operating-differential subsidies and $25 million from Bureau of Public Roads repayable advances to the Highway Trust Fund. Senate conferees agreed to the House increase of $7.3 million for Maritime Administration subsidies for construction of an unbudgeted fifth ship for the American President Lines. Other major differences between the House and Senate bills were split.

In addition, conferees deleted language, which was added to the bill by a Senate floor amendment, prohibiting use of Bureau of Public Roads funds for the closing of any Bureau regional office.

The Judiciary. Appropriated $69,954,900 for the Judiciary, which was $418,000 less than approved by the House but the same amount approved by the Senate, including the additional cut -- to $3 million-- for fees for court-appointed counsels for indigents under the Criminal Justice Act.

Related Agencies. Allowed $359,581,000 for related agencies, which was $30,000 under the amount provided by the Senate and $3,546,000 above the amount provided by the House. House conferees agreed to Senate increases of $1 million (for a total $5 million) for civil rights functions of the Health, Education and Welfare Department and of $2,750,000 for the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

ACTION-- The conference report was agreed to by voice votes Aug. 19 of the House and Aug. 24 of the Senate.

LEGISLATIVE FUNDS

HR 8775 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 442) June 3, 1965.

- Passed by the House by voice vote June 8. (For roll-call vote on recommittal with instructions, see p. 966)
- Reported, amended, by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 424) July 6.
- Passed, amended, by the Senate by voice vote July 12. (For roll-call vote on amendment, see p. 1057)
- Conference report (H Rept 630) agreed to by voice votes of the House and Senate July 21.

PL 89-90 -- Signed into law July 27.

The Legislative Branch appropriations bill for fiscal 1966 (HR 8775) appropriated $189,993,297, which was $14,871,079 above the fiscal 1965 appropriation.

Resolving the most controversial aspect of the bill, the final version of HR 8775 provided only $24,100 for the Joint Committee on Immigration and Nationality Policy, although the House originally voted $120,000. The issue of funds for the Committee led to considerable friction between Congress' two immigration leaders, Rep. Michael A. Feighan (D Ohio), who sought the higher amount, and Rep. Emanuel Celler (D N.Y.), who supported the lower figure and urged the Senate to reduce the amount the House had provided. Feighan, as chairman of the Joint Committee, was anxious to conduct investigations of immigration problems but his plans were opposed by Celler, who, as chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, had control over the Judiciary Committee's Subcommittee on Immigration, which Feighan also headed. The feud between the two Congressmen over the funds and activities of the two Committees first broke out publicly in 1964. (1964 Almanac p. 202, 324; 1965 Almanac p. 459)

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law, HR 8775 appropriated:

Senate	$ 36,379,790
House of Representatives	66,414,730
Joint House-Senate items	8,856,977
Architect of the Capitol	25,640,100
Botanic Garden	467,000
Library of Congress	25,905,700
Government Printing Office	26,329,000
TOTAL	$189,993,297

The bill also raised to six round trips a year the number of trips to his home state for which a Senator could be reimbursed, and made a similar increase for staff members of Senators from large states (those with a population of 10 million or more). The bill also increased Senators' allowances for offices in their home states, long-distance telephone calls and postage and directed a study of the uses of the stationery fund.

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- June 3 reported HR 8775 (H Rept 442) appropriating $150,589,107 -- $54,283,115 less than the total requests of $204,872,222 made by the Legislative Branch. Of the total, $66,414,730 was for the House of Representatives. The Senate, by tradition, was to add funds for its own operations when it considered HR 8775.

The Committee report said increases over fiscal 1965 were due to Congressional pay raises which became effective Jan. 3, remodeling of the Cannon Office Building, additional clerks for Members and the higher costs of handling franked mail in fiscal 1964, which followed "the biennial election-year pattern." No issue was made, however, of Congressmen's franked mail privilege which had generated controversy in previous years. (1963 Almanac p. 174, 1964 Almanac p. 202)

The Committee allowed funds to expand the activities of the Joint Economic Committee ($360,000 was granted) and to fund fully "for the first time" the Joint Committee on Immigration and Nationality Policy (granted $120,000). Each Committee received about $100,000 more than in fiscal 1965.

The Appropriations Committee approved funds to keep the Capitol open to the public until 10 p.m. daily during the tourist season and recommended $35,000 for 16 elevator operators in the Rayburn Building on an experimental basis during the height of the tourist season. (This was a cut of $245,000 from original plans). The Committee provided $7,300,000 to complete the Rayburn Building and said that the construction cost of the building "now stands" at $86,900,000.

The Committee deleted $700,000 requested for restoring the Old Senate and Supreme Court chambers to the condition in which they existed in 1859-60 when they were last used. The report said the project was not a "high priority need." In 1963, $37,500 was appropriated for preliminary plans to restore the two chambers. (1963 Almanac p. 176)

In its largest cut, the Committee deleted "without prejudice" the full $49,640,000 requested for construction of a new Government Printing Office plant. The report said there was still uncertainty about the site. In 1964, Congress provided $2.5 million for site selection and planning, but the Defense Department later indicated that the site chosen at Bolling Air Force Base in Washington, D.C., "will not be released." (1964 Almanac p. 202) The fiscal 1966 military construction bill (HR 10775 -- PL 89-188) banned transfer of any Bolling land until fiscal 1967.

FLOOR ACTION

The House June 8 passed HR 8775 by voice vote, appropriating the full $150,589,107 recommended by the Appropriations Committee.

Before passage, the House rejected by a 149-244 roll-call vote a motion by H.R. Gross (R Iowa) to recommit the bill with instructions that the Committee cut the $35,000 for 16 elevator operators in the Rayburn Building. Earlier, the House had rejected by a 29-47 standing vote an amendment by Gross proposing the cut. (For voting, see chart p. 966)

Gross said putting elevator operators on the "completely automatic" elevators in the Rayburn Building would compound "the felonies that have already been perpetrated" by constructing the building. (For background on the Rayburn Building, see 1965 CQ Weekly Report p. 629) Noting that elevator operators were hired on a patronage basis, Gross said he could not think "of any more unconscionable raid on the taxpayers" than to appropriate the $35,000 and "open the door to a probable future expenditure of some $300,000 a year for the satisfaction of political patronage." (Continued on next page)

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- July 6 reported HR 8775 (S Rept 424) with amendments. The Committee added $36,379,790 to the bill for Senate operations and increased other appropriations for a total of $190,840,167 -- $40,251,060 more than the House-passed bill.

The Committee raised from two to six the number of reimbursable round trips a Senator may make to his home state and increased other Senatorial allowances. (See final Provisions, above. For story on other Congressional allowances, see p. 648)

The Committee agreed with House recommendations to keep the Capitol open until 10 p.m. for the benefit of tourists between Easter and Labor Day and to deny "without prejudice" the request for a new Government Printing Office plant.

The Committee approved the $700,000 to restore the Old Senate and Supreme Court chambers which the House had deleted. Subcommittee chairman A.S. Mike Monroney (D Okla.) July 12 said the Committee believed "that this restoration would greatly enhance for these visitors (the 5 to 7 million who visit the Capitol annually) the tradition and significance of the building and, perhaps, contribute to a larger knowledge and deeper insight into the development of our Government."

At the request of Rep. Emanuel Celler (D N.Y.), the Committee reduced the appropriation for the Joint Committee on Immigration and Nationality Policy by $95,900, providing the fiscal 1965 sum of $24,100. The report said the "Committee believes that to enlarge the Joint Committee by allowing the amount in the House bill would be a duplication of effort" since only the Judiciary Committees can report legislation on immigration. (This action brought an angry request from Joint Committee Chairman Feighan July 9 for Celler's resignation from the Joint Committee.)

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate July 12 passed HR 8775 by voice vote with the committee amendments.

Floor debate centered almost entirely on the uses of the Senate's stationery fund, from which each Senator can draw $2,400 annually. Sen. John J. Williams (R Del.) first proposed that unused stationery funds be returned annually to the Treasury. Williams said he had returned his unused amounts each year since 1957, when he got the Treasury to reverse a decision that required him to keep the entire allotment whether it was used or not. Williams charged that under the current arrangement, a Senator could use funds not needed for stationery "for the purpose of trading cars or doing anything else he wishes."

The amendment was protested by Senators who said the fund helped them buy local newspapers, provide for office expenses and pay for taped radio and TV programs. Ross Bass (D Tenn.) said adoption of "this nit-picking amendment" might make the Senate a "rich man's club" open only to those who could afford to pay all their office expenses out of their own pockets.

Gale W. McGee (D Wyo.), asserting the amendment would make the Senate "more open to controversy and unfavorable publicity," moved to table (kill) Williams' amendment so that the uses of the stationery fund could be fully studied. After McGee's motion was rejected on a 37-42 roll-call vote, Williams modified his amendment, at McGee's suggestion, to state that the $2,400 allowance was available "only for purchases through the Senate stationery room." On a motion by Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.), the modified amendment was tabled by a 44-36 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart p. 1057)

At this point the Senate accepted by voice vote an amendment by Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.) directing the Legislative Appropriations Subcommittee to study the uses of stationery allowances and report to the full Appropriations Committee by Feb. 1, 1966.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

July 12 -- Norris Cotton (R N.H.) -- Permit a change in the basic salary rates set for the Assistant Secretaries for the Majority and Minority and for the two floor leaders' assistants. (This authorized a change in titles, rather than salary increases.) Voice vote.

Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.) -- Provide for a study of Senate use of stationery and a report on the subject. Voice vote.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

July 12 -- John J. Williams (R Del.), as modified by Gale W. McGee (D Wyo.) -- Limit Senate stationery allowances to purchases made through the Senate stationery room. Tabled by a 44-36 roll-call vote.

Printing Costs

Both Appropriation Committees asked for a study of procedures that would pinpoint Congressional printing costs by identifying the committee that requested each printing item. Sen. Monroney said July 12 that some committees "are extremely wasteful in their printing habits" and that Congress should consider putting each committee on a printing allowance.

The bill carried $16.5 million for Congressional printing and binding in fiscal 1966. The House hearings gave these costs, as of fiscal 1964, for printing:

Congressional Record, $103.73 a page;
Committee calendars, $11.56 a page;
Committee reports, $23.01 a page;
Hearings, $19.92 a page;
Bills and resolutions, $13.15 a page.

Conference

The House and the Senate July 21 by voice votes adopted the conference report on HR 8775 and sent the bill to the President. The House July 19 had agreed to Senate amendments which pertained only to Senate matters and the conference report (H Rept 630) was filed July 20. The final bill appropriated $189,993,297, which was only $846,870 below the Senate-passed bill.

Conferees accepted the Senate figure of $24,100 for the Joint Committee on Immigration and Nationality Policy. This decision caused a sharp exchange on the House floor between Celler and Feighan.

Conferees also deleted the Senate's $700,000 to restore the Old Senate and Supreme Court chambers. The report said the conferees found "much merit" in the proposal, but that a majority of the "House managers felt that this work could be efficiently and logically carried out when the west central front of the Capitol is rebuilt and this must be done very shortly." (For dispute over the West Front, see story on General Supplemental Appropriations bill, p. 188)

D.C. APPROPRIATIONS

HR 6453 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 185) March 18, 1965.
- Passed by the House by voice vote March 23.
- Reported, amended, by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 333) June 16.
- Passed, amended, by the Senate by voice vote June 22. (For roll-call vote on amendment, see p. 1051)
- Conference report (H Rept 568) agreed to by voice votes of the House July 1 and the Senate July 13.

PL 89-75 -- Signed into law July 16.

HR 6453 provided a $360,228,500 fiscal 1966 budget for the District of Columbia. The bill also provided federal payments of $46,122,000 -- $43 million to the D.C. general fund and $3,122,000 for water and sewage funds -- and authorized $26,311,900 in federal loans to the District.

HR 6453 resolved -- temporarily at least -- a long-standing House-Senate dispute over allowing the District to enter into the federal program of Aid to Families with Dependent Children of Unemployed Parents (AFDCUP). The House provided funds for the program; the Senate denied them. Instead, the Senate allowed $300,000 to permit assistance on a temporary basis to families whose unemployed heads were awaiting training under Title V of the 1964 Economic Opportunity Act, which formally began in the District July 1. The House finally accepted the Senate provision.

The $360,228,500 D.C. budget figure was $29,118,300 less than the amount requested, $3,928,000 more than the amount approved by the House and $4,129,847 less than the sum voted by the Senate. The $43 million federal payment to the general fund was $7 million under the request, $2 million more than the House sum and $3 million less than the Senate amount. The loan authorization was the full amount requested and provided by both chambers.

Several provisions of the bill were aimed at reducing crime in the District. They provided funds for 100 new policemen, for improved street lighting and for a nine-month demonstration program for combatting crime. In signing HR 6453 July 16, President Johnson emphasized the bill's anti-crime aspects, expressing his determination that crime in the District, "like crime in all our cities, must, and will, be brought under control." At the same time he announced establishment of a nine-member President's Commission on Crime in the District of Columbia. (See story p. 628)

Background

President Johnson Jan. 21 submitted to Congress a special message on the D.C. budget. He requested a budget of $387,467,800, a federal payment of $53,122,000 ($50 million -- the full amount authorized -- to the general fund and $3,122,000 for water and sewage funds), and a loan authorization of $26,311,900.

Among his specific requests were funds to permit D.C. entry into the AFDCUP program, requested since 1963. In previous years the House had provided the necessary funds but the Senate had deleted them, largely because of the opposition of Sen. Robert C. Byrd (D W.Va.), chairman of the Senate D.C. Appropriations Subcommittee. (1964 Almanac p. 164)

Other requests included funds for 525 additional teachers, funds to enlarge the police force by 100 men, and funds to acquire a new site for a junior high school that was scheduled to be built on the site of the John F. Kennedy Playground. (For other requests, see Presidential Boxscore, p. 106)

After the House passed HR 6453, the President March 30 sent a letter to Sen. Byrd urging restoration of education items deleted by the House and of funds to permit continued operation of the Kennedy Playground as well as funds to acquire a new junior high school site.

On May 14, an amendment to the original D.C. budget was submitted, adding $1,879,000 for a nine-month demonstration program to reduce crime. The revised D.C. budget was $389,346,800.

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- March 18 reported HR 6453 (H Rept 185), providing for a $356,300,500 D.C. budget -- $31,167,300 under the initial request. The Committee reduced federal payments to $44,122,000 by cutting $9 million from the payment to the general fund. It authorized the full $26,311,900 requested in federal loans to the District.

Included in HR 6453 were $341,753 and 32 positions to permit D.C. entry into the AFDCUP program. Also included were funds for 100 new policemen, to bring the police force to the full authorized strength of 3,100 men; funds for improved street lighting and funds to provide 274 of the 525 additional teachers requested. The Committee denied funds for further operation of the Kennedy Playground as well as for planning and acquisition of a new site for the junior high school scheduled for construction on the site of the playground.

The Committee said the budget as submitted was "out of balance -- by $21,800,000," and the Committee had made "reductions and adjustments in the financing and operation requests so that it is possible to report out a budget that is in balance with reasonable estimated surpluses in each fund." It said much of the revenue the budget estimated to be available was contingent on enactment of separate legislation, requested by the President (but not enacted in 1965), to increase the federal payment to the District, raise D.C. taxes and increase the highway fund loan authorization.

FLOOR ACTION

The House March 23 passed HR 6453 by voice vote and sent it to the Senate. No changes were made.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- June 16 reported HR 6453 (S Rept 333), providing for a $364,050,347 D.C. budget -- $25,296,453 under the revised request but $7,749,847 more than the amount provided by the House. The Committee recommended a federal payment of $49,122,000 including a $46 million payment to the D.C. general fund -- $4 million below the request but $5 million more than the House sum. The $26,311,900 federal loan authorization was not changed.

Although the D.C. Appropriations Subcommittee had voted 7-3 to approve funds for the AFDCUP program, the full Committee eliminated them, saying that training and subsistence payments under Title V of the 1964 Economic Opportunity Act, scheduled to begin in the District July 1, 1965, were "preferred" because the local Welfare Department could "establish and operate its own training programs and can provide for basic instruction to functional illiterates and can operate its own placement program for employment of trainees." The Title V funds were available on a pilot basis to employ and train heads of families receiving help under the federal program of Aid to Families with Dependent Children. (1964 Almanac p. 212)

The Committee partially restored House cuts in the education budget, providing 303 of the 525 additional teachers requested. It provided funds both for further operation of the Kennedy Playground and for selecting a new site for the junior high school. Finally, it provided most of the supplemental request for a nine-month demonstration program aimed at combatting crime in the District.

Acting on highway requests, the Committee directed "that all future budget estimates for the District...highway program be presented on the basis of prior authorization by the respective District legislative committees."

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate June 22 passed HR 6453 by voice vote, with two floor amendments, and sent it to conference. It provided for a District budget of $364,358,347.

The first amendment, accepted by voice vote June 21, added $8,000 to permit continuation of the Washington Youth Garden Program.

The other amendment, accepted on a 76-14 roll call, added $300,000 to permit assistance payments on a temporary basis to families whose unemployed heads were on the waiting list for training under the Title V antipoverty program. The amendment came as a surprise when it was offered by Byrd at the tail end of two days of debate. It was a substitute for an amendment by Abraham A. Ribicoff (D Conn.) to add $341,753 to permit D.C. entry into the permanent AFDCUP program (see amendment below). Before the Byrd substitute was accepted, a motion by Ribicoff to table it was rejected by a 40-47 roll call. (For voting, see chart p. 1051)

Debate began June 21 and was confined almost entirely to the AFDCUP controversy. On both June 21 and 22, Byrd staunchly defended his opposition to Ribicoff's proposal as he had in 1963 and 1964. At one point Byrd, who had voted consistently with Southerners against civil rights legislation, defended himself against what he termed implications that he opposed the AFDCUP program "because most of the participants...would likely be Negroes."

Byrd's substitute, however, was based on a new argument by him that D.C. residents would be covered under a variety of federal programs beginning July 1, but there would remain one major temporary hole which his amendment would fill. With the amendment, he contended, the alleged need for entry into AFDCUP would be eliminated. He said with the "plethora of new federal programs pouring money into the District...obviously there are ample activities underway already to meet the needs without initiating another...-- especially one which" would duplicate others. He mentioned specifically the training program authorized in Title V of the 1964 antipoverty bill.

In support of his substitute, Byrd said there was "only one little gray area which the Title V program would not reach, and that is those families which could not be serviced under the...program for training purposes immediately." He added that "this would be temporary assistance, not to exceed six months," it would be "wholly locally financed," and the maximum payment of $200 "would not be so high as to destroy the incentive of these parents to seek employment or to accept training."

Ribicoff argued that the substitute "would not accomplish the aim" of his amendment and "it is well understood that the antipoverty program is not a substitute for welfare." He said it would not reach many of the people who would be included in the AFDCUP program like those "who are mentally or physically incompetent to be trained for a job or a craft," but who under the AFDCUP program "could participate in work relief programs." It also would not reach "many unemployed people who... cannot, will not, or should not work," he said, and "these are the people who are taken care of in all 50 states under a general assistance program, but are not taken care of in the city of Washington."

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

June 21 -- Mike Mansfield (D Mont.) -- Add $8,000 for continuation of the Washington Youth Garden program. Voice vote.

June 22 -- Robert C. Byrd (D W.Va.) substitute for pending amendment of Abraham A. Ribicoff (D Conn.) -- Add $300,000 for temporary assistance payments to families whose unemployed heads awaited training scheduled to begin in the District of Columbia July 1 (the Ribicoff amendment would have added $341,753 to permit D.C. entry into the federal program of Aid to Families with Dependent Children of Unemployed Parents). Roll call, 76-14. The amended Ribicoff amendment then was accepted by voice vote.

Conference

REPORT -- The conference report (H Rept 568) was filed June 30, providing for a $360,228,500 D.C. budget, with federal payments of $46,122,000 and $26,311,900 in federal loans to the District.

The House abandoned its provision of funds to permit D.C. entry into the AFDCUP program and accepted the Senate's substitute appropriation of $300,000 for temporary assistance to those awaiting training under the Title V antipoverty program.

On other House-Senate differences, conferees provided funds for continued operation of the John F. Kennedy Playground, but denied funds for planning and acquisition of a new site for the junior high school scheduled for construction on the existing site of the playground. The final bill provided funds for 291 of the 525 new teaching positions requested. It included $5,800 of the $8,000 added on the Senate floor for continuation of the Washington Youth Garden program. The bill provided the full Senate amount -- nearly all of the supplemental request -- for a nine-month demonstration program to reduce crime in the District and included nearly the full requests for all categories of public safety.

In a statement on the conference report, House conferees said they were "not in agreement" with language in the Senate report on HR 6453 which directed that "all future budget estimates for the District of Columbia highway program be presented on the basis only of prior authorization by the respective District legislative committees."

ACTION -- The House July 1 and the Senate July 13 adopted the conference report by voice votes and sent the bill to the President.

MILITARY BASES FUNDS

HR 10323 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 738) Aug. 6, 1965.

- Passed by the House by voice vote Aug. 10.
- Reported, amended, by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 620) Aug. 17.
- Passed, amended, by the Senate by voice vote Aug. 20.
- Conference report (H Rept 1018) agreed to by voice votes of the House Sept. 17 and the Senate Sept. 21.

PL 89-202 -- Signed into law Sept. 25.

In HR 10323, Congress appropriated $1,756,635,000 in fiscal 1966 for construction at military installations in the United States and abroad and for military family housing projects. Of the total, $1,090,789,000 was for military construction and $665,846,000 was for family housing construction, operation, maintenance and debt payments. The family housing sum included funds for construction of 8,500 new units. All housing construction and some other projects later were indefinitely deferred. (See next column)

The final appropriation was $1,140,000 above the amount appropriated by the House, $2,869,000 below the sum voted by the Senate and $292,365,000 below the Administration's request for $2,049,000,000. It was also $185,667,000 over fiscal 1965 appropriations. (1964 Almanac p. 162)

The total was $23,427,000 less than the amount authorized in the military construction authorization bill enacted Sept. 16 (HR 10775 -- PL 89-188), but with the exception of family housing, the amounts in the two bills were not comparable. All the funds appropriated in HR 10323 for family housing, however, were for projects authorized in HR 10775. The Administration had requested funds for construction of 12,500 new units; HR 10775 authorized 11,180 units, but limited actual construction to 9,500 units. In HR 10323, the House provided funds for 9,500 new units, the Senate for 7,500 units and the final bill for 8,500 units. (For story on HR 10775, see p. 697)

PROVISIONS -- As signed by the President, HR 10323 appropriated:

Military Construction
Army	$ 323,443,000
Navy	316,305,000
Air Force	348,273,000
Defense Agencies	64,268,000
Loran Stations	5,000,000
Reserve and National Guard (Army, Navy, Air Force)	33,500,000
Total, Military Construction	$1,090,789,000
Family Housing (Construction, operation, maintenance, debt payments)	$ 665,846,000
GRAND TOTAL	$1,756,635,000

The bill also:

Prohibited use of funds appropriated by the Act for construction of hospitals or composite medical facilities which did not provide facilities for obstetrical services.

Housing, Other Construction Deferred

Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara Dec. 20 announced an indefinite postponement of $620 million worth of military construction, over one-third of the fiscal 1966 Congressional appropriation. He said the postponement resulted from "a new review of Defense Department expenditures focused on immediate requirements in direct support of combat forces in Viet Nam and elsewhere." Over 85 percent of the projects deferred were planned for the United States. Among them were: hospital additions, the replacement of barracks, the modernization of training centers and the entire military housing program of 8,500 units.

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- Aug. 6 reported HR 10323 (H Rept 738), recommending appropriations of $1,755,495,000, which was $293,505,000 below Defense Department requests. Of the reduction, $183,029,000 represented cuts already made by Congress in the military construction authorization bill (HR 10775). (See story p. 697)

The bill included $1,071,535,000 for military construction and $683,960,000 for military family housing. The latter sum included funds for the construction of 9,500 new housing units, the number authorized by HR 10775. In addition, the bill carried over a provision from the fiscal 1965 legislation, prohibiting use of funds for construction of military hospitals, which did not have obstetrical facilities.

In its report on HR 10323, the Committee said the bill met the need for "improved living quarters for military personnel." It stressed "the desirability of providing adequate and improved on-base family housing." The Committee said, "In past years the major segments of military construction programs have been for facilities to provide operational support of new weapon systems and forces.... The virtual completion of these more critical facilities now makes it possible to place the major emphasis of the military construction program on the long-neglected efforts to improve and modernize the basic capital plant, particularly those facilities concerned with providing troop housing and other support facilities for military personnel."

With regard to Department of Defense plans to close certain military installations, the Committee said that while it concurred "in the obvious fact that there is no justification for the continuation of a base that is not required, it does question certain factors utilized by the Department of Defense and others ignored by it in the review of various base closures." For example, the Committee said, the consolidation of installations, which would force certain communities to provide "housing and other essential support facilities," and would tie "a large segment of their economy to a potentially fluctuating defense workload," was a matter "requiring deep study." In addition, "concentration of military industrial-type facilities also creates inviting military targets," it said.

The Committee also said that while the "savings purported to be achieved as a result of base closures and consolidations are substantial," they represented "savings to the Department of Defense and not necessarily net savings to the Federal Government. For example, additional unemployment costs and unemployment compensation can be expected to occur from such closures."

The Committee concluded that "all of the factors involved in the closure or reduction of military installations are not, in all instances, receiving adequate consideration by the Department of defense." (For details of base-closure plans, see 1964 Almanac p. 160 and this volume, p. 697)

FLOOR ACTION

The House Aug. 10 passed HR 10323 by voice vote and sent it to the Senate. Before passing the $1,755,495,000 bill, the House rejected an amendment to reduce the appropriation by $2.3 million.

During House consideration, Robert L. F. Sikes (D Fla.), floor manager of the bill, noted that the measure had received "a more considerate approach" than recent previous military construction bills. He said that because of escalation of fighting in Viet Nam, "It does not seem to be a proper time to eliminate facilities we know we are going to need."

Discussing Defense Department plans to close certain military installations, Sikes said he believed the anticipated savings "have been overestimated and oversold," and that "considerations are not all on the side of base closings." He said the House Appropriations Committee had been assured by Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara that the bill was not "funding facilities which will be affected by another closing order."

The amendment to reduce funds, which was rejected by a 48-116 teller vote, was offered by Barratt O'Hara (D Ill.). The $2.3 million was intended for use in moving the 5th Army headquarters from Chicago, in O'Hara's district, to Fort Sheridan, Ill. O'Hara said the transfer "would be a colossal blunder that would cost the taxpayers of this country over $10 million" because of the necessity for new construction at Fort Sheridan. Sikes responded that there "is no question" that the move would result in annual savings of $1.5 million, and said the move "gets the Army out of a building that really is not satisfactory." He said the savings estimate did not include $2.8 million which the Government expected to realize from selling the converted Chicago hotel which served as headquarters for the 5th Army. He said the move had been postponed since 1963. "One reason for the postponement was consideration" for O'Hara, Sikes said; "I helped to do it and I do not apologize for it." (For earlier debates, see 1964 Almanac p. 163, 463)

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- Aug. 17 reported HR 10323 (S Rept 620), appropriating $1,756,604,000.

The bill provided $1,108,873,000 for military construction -- $37.3 million more than voted by the House -- and $647,731,000 for military family housing -- $36.2 million less than voted by the House. The housing figure included funds for 7,500 new housing units, which was 2,000 less than approved by the House.

The Committee also modified language in the House bill prohibiting the use of funds appropriated by the Act for construction of hospitals or composite medical facilities which did not provide facilities for obstetrical services. Under the language added by the Committee, funds could be utilized for such projects when the Secretary of the particular armed forces involved certified that obstetrical facilities were not necessary and were readily available in adjacent communities. The amendment brought the provision into conformity with language of the authorization bill.

In its report on HR 10323, the Committee noted that it lacked sufficient information to appropriate funds for a new program which authorized the Secretary of Defense to acquire properties for disposal by the Federal Housing Administration (FHA) and the Veterans Administration (VA) when persons put out of work by the closure of federal installations certified that they were unable to sell their homes on reasonable terms. The program was authorized by the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1965 (PL 89-117), signed into law on Aug. 10. The program was proposed in an amendment introduced late in floor consideration of the housing bill. As a result, the Defense Department did not have a budget request or an implementation plan for Committee consideration. Later, Congress, in considering the fiscal 1966 general supplemental appropriations bill (PL 89-309), denied separate $500,000 requests from FHA and VA to launch the program because no applications from affected persons had been made. (For housing story, see p. 358; for supplemental story, see p. 182.)

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate Aug. 20 passed HR 10323, with an appropriation of $1,759,504,000, by voice vote and sent it to conference with the House. Prior to passage, the Senate accepted an amendment which added $2.9 million to the amount recommended by the Appropriations Committee. The amendment made the Senate version $4,009,000 more than the House version and $289,496,000 less than budget requests.

In brief floor discussion, John Stennis (D Miss.), floor manager of HR 10323, said the measure was an "austere bill" that provided "only those essential items... which will materially contribute to the combat effectiveness and readiness of the U.S. military forces both home and abroad."

The amendment to increase funds, which was adopted by voice vote, was offered by Stennis at the request of A. Willis Robertson (D Va.). The $2.9 million was earmarked for construction of an education building at Ft. Lee, Va. Robertson said the project had been "urgently recommended" by the Department of Defense in 1962 but had been dropped in each succeeding session of Congress.

Conference

REPORT -- House-Senate conferees Sept. 16 filed the conference report on HR 10323 (H Rept 1018), carrying $1,756,635,000. The total included $1,090,789,000 for military construction, which was $19,254,000 over the House figure, $20,984,000 under the Senate figure and $222,611,000 below requests. The total also included $665,846,000 for family housing, which was midway between the House and Senate sums and $69,754,000 below requests.

The report said the housing appropriation would permit construction of 8,500 new units, compared with 7,500 units proposed by the Senate and 9,500 by the House. In addition, the conferees restored House language prohibiting the use of funds to construct hospitals which did not provide obstetrical facilities.

ACTION -- The House Sept. 17 and the Senate Sept. 21, by voice votes, adopted the conference report, clearing HR 10323 for the President's signature.

APPALACHIA FUNDS INCLUDED IN FISCAL 1965 SUPPLEMENTAL

HR 7091 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 224) April 2, 1965.

- Passed by the House by a 248-62 roll-call vote April 5. (See p. 948)
- Reported, amended, by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 167) April 23.
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote April 27.
- Conference report (H Rept 270) agreed to by voice vote of the Senate and a 316-55 roll-call vote of the House April 29. (See p. 956)

PL 89-16 -- Signed into law April 30.

HR 7091, the Second Supplemental Appropriations Act for Fiscal 1965, appropriated $2,227,563,977 for a variety of old and newly authorized programs not funded in the regular departmental appropriations bills enacted in 1964.

The total included $1,598,551,844 in direct appropriations for program costs, $610,597,133 for pay increases authorized in 1964 for military and civilian personnel, $16 million for appropriation from the Land and Water Conservation Fund and $2,415,000 in other indefinite appropriations.

The largest sum in the bill for new programs was $349,688,000 for development of the Appalachian region. These funds were appropriated at least through fiscal 1966 to permit the program to get underway before the fiscal 1966 appropriations were enacted. They were allotted as follows:

Agriculture Department activities (research, conservation, Farmers Home Admn. loans, forest work)	$ 35,395,000
Commerce Department activities (highways $200 million, supplemental grants-in-aid)	247,500,000
Army Corps of Engineers	16,153,000
HEW activities (vocational education, hospitals, sewage grants)	32,000,000
Interior Department activities (mining area restoration, fish and wildlife)	18,150,000
Appalachian Regional Commission	490,000
Total	$349,688,000

Among other large sums in HR 7091 were $250 million for the first of three equal U.S. payments to the Inter-American Bank's Fund for Special Operations, $150 million for the Veterans Administration for increased non-service-connected disability and death pensions authorized in 1964, $89 million for manpower development and training activities, $407.9 million for grants to the states for mandatory public assistance payments, $100 million for the Small Business Administration's revolving fund to meet disaster loan requirements, and $35 million to replenish the President's fund for disaster relief. The bill also authorized a $250 million withdrawal for highways.

The total was $52,687,350 less than the Administration's revised request, submitted after the House passed the bill, and $30,305,438 less than the Senate sum.

The largest cuts in the requests included $14 million in manpower development and training funds, $12,948,000 in funds for development of the Appalachian region, $10,245,000 in the over-all housing request, $6 million in funds for unemployment compensation payments for federal employees and former servicemen, $7.5 million for a survey of registration and voting in areas recommended by the Civil Rights Commission and $4,932,750 in the total request for pay increases. In addition, Congress deleted the full $942,000 requested for subsidies for helicopter services in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles.

GRAND TOTAL	$2,227,563,977

In addition, HR 7091:

Authorized appropriation of $250 million from the Highway Trust Fund.

Appropriated $1,563,600 from District of Columbia funds -- $1,057,800 for direct program costs and $505,800 for pay increases.

Extended from Jan. 31 to June 30, 1965, the authority of the Secretary of Agriculture under PL 88-452 -- the antipoverty act -- to make indemnity payments to dairy farmers ordered to remove their milk from the market because it contained pesticides. (1964 Almanac p. 208)

BACKGROUND -- The first fiscal 1965 supplemental appropriations bill (H J Res 234 -- PL 89-2) provided $1.6 billion for the Agriculture Department's Commodity Credit Corp. (See story p. 190)

In considering HR 7091, the House received requests totaling $2,226,456,933. After the House passed the bill the Administration increased its requests for veterans' compensation payments and for claims against the Government and asked funds for pay increases for Senate employees.

This brought the final requests considered by Congress in HR 7091 to $2,280,251,327, broken down as follows: Direct appropriations (exclusive of pay increases), $1,646,324,444; pay increases, $615,511,883; appropriations from the Land and Water Conservation Fund, $16 million; other indefinite appropriations, $2,415,000.

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- April 2 reported HR 7091 (H Rept 224), recommending $2,125,833,083, broken down as follows: direct appropriations (exclusive of pay increases), $1,500,537,395; pay increases, $606,880,688; appropriations from the Land and Water Conservation Fund, $16 million; indefinites, $2,415,000.

The total recommended was $100,623,850 less than the Administration request. Major cuts made by the Committee included $28 million in the request for manpower development and training activities, $35.6 million in funds for various housing programs, $18.3 million in the over-all request for the Appalachia program, $5.5 million requested to aid individuals owning homes damaged in a 1964 Alaska earthquake and $4.6 million from the over-all requests for pay increase funds.

In specific actions on major items, the Committee:

District of Columbia. Recommended expenditure of $1,563,600 in D.C. funds -- the full request -- including $971,000 for purchase of additional land for a new site for the D.C. Central Public Library.

Inter-American Bank. Approved the budget request of $250 million as the first of three equal annual U.S.

payments to increase the resources of the Inter-American Development Bank's Fund for Special Operations. Congress March 8 agreed (HR 45 -- PL 89-2) to authorize a $750 million increase in the U.S. contribution. (See story p. 492)

Peace Corps. Approved language requested in the Budget authorizing the Peace Corps to transfer $1,858,000 within its fiscal 1965 appropriation to finance increased administrative and other costs.

Civil Aeronautics Board. Provided the full $1,932,000 requested for air carrier subsidies but denied the full $942,000 requested for subsidies for helicopter services in three cities -- New York, Chicago and Los Angeles -- "to the exclusion of about 50 others." Said Congress had "served notice that the $3,358,000 provided for 1965 was to be the last money recommended for these projects exclusively." (1964 Almanac p. 174; also see story p. 907)

Alaska Mortgage Aid. Disallowed the full request, $5.5 million, for a new matching grant program to retire or adjust individual mortgages on homes destroyed or damaged in the March 27, 1964, Alaska earthquake. The grants were authorized in PL 88-451. Said that "in no instance has such relief been extended to individuals as is proposed here. Under this request the individual who owned his home and lost it would not be entitled to five cents." (1964 Almanac p. 437)

Housing. For the Housing and Home Finance Agency, provided the full request, $10,180,000, for payment to a revolving fund to provide low-interest loans to owners or tenants of residential or business property in urban renewal areas for rehabilitation of the property. Also provided the full request, $13 million, for subsidy payments to local public housing authorities under annual contribution contracts.

Denied the $5,050,000 requested to initiate a matching grant program for training technical and professional people for housing and community development programs at the state and local level; the $515,000 requested for a new program of fellowships for city planning and urban studies which "is not a federal responsibility"; and the $30 million requested for additional payments on urban renewal projects; the Committee said that requests for payments could be "carried forward into 1966 if necessary." All the HHFA programs were authorized in the 1964 Housing Act (PL 88-560). (1964 Almanac p. 274)

Veterans Administration. Provided the full Veterans Administration request including $108 million for increased non-service-connected disability and death pensions authorized in PL 88-664 and $8.8 million for costs of payments of educational benefits for children of disabled veterans under PL 88-361. To implement additional provisions of PL 88-664 which reopened the National Service Life Insurance program for specified veterans, added language requested by the VA authorizing transfer of initial capital for the program from the existing veterans' special term insurance fund to the veterans' reopened insurance fund. (See below and 1964 Almanac p. 268, 285)

Conservation Fund. Provided for appropriation of $16 million, the full amount requested, from the Land and Water Conservation Fund but, "in consonance with action already taken by the Committee on the 1966 appropriations bill," required the states to match the portion allocated to states on a 50-50 basis, rather than requiring them to pay 60 percent as the Budget had requested. Also changed the state-federal allocation formula suggested in the Budget as follows: The Budget proposed to appropriate $10 million (62.5 percent) to the states, $5,930,000 (37.06 percent) to federal agencies and $70,000 (.44 percent) to the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation for administrative expenses. The Committee instead appropriated $10,375,000 (64.84 percent) to the states, $5,555,000 (34.72 percent) to federal agencies and $70,000 to the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation for administrative expenses. The entire $375,000 cut in federal funds (which was transferred for allocation to the states) came from the National Park Service's request for acquisition of inholdings in 40 park areas, leaving $2,595,750 for that purpose. (For details of how the Fund works and action on the fiscal 1966 appropriation from the Fund, see story p. 204)

Desalination. Provided the request, $3.9 million, for the Office of Saline Water in the Interior Department for "initiation of preliminary studies" leading to design of large-scale water conversion facilities.

Water Resources Research. Reduced funds for the Office of Water Resources Research by $1,840,000 -- to $985,000 -- for grants for water resources research institutes because "these funds will be available for only about two months in 1965." The funds were authorized in PL 88-379. (1964 Almanac p. 507)

Manpower Training. Cut the $103 million requested for manpower development and training activities to $75 million. Said the amount in the bill "will...assure that no person will be deprived of training because of lack of funds during 1965."

Domestic Farm Labor. Agreed to the requested ceilings totaling $738,000 for expanded programs "for recruitment and better utilization of domestic farm labor" because of the expiration of the Mexican farm labor program Dec. 31, 1964. (See story p. 132)

Unemployment Compensation. Cut $3 million from the $17 million requested by the Labor Department for unemployment compensation payments for federal employees and former servicemen, but said the cut had been "volunteered by the Department on the basis of expenditure trends since the formal estimate was prepared."

Public Assistance. Approved the full request, $407.9 million, for grants to the states for public assistance payments.

Kennedy Grave. Appropriated $1,770,000, the full request, for the federal part of the cost of design and construction of a grave for President Kennedy at Arlington National Cemetery. (The cost of work in the immediate area of the grave, estimated at $321,000, was to be paid by the family.)

Federal Bureau of Investigation. Provided the full request, $5,030,000, to cover FBI workload increases resulting from enactment of the 1964 Civil Rights Act (PL 88-352). Said the sum provided for 415 additional full-year employees -- 228 agents and 187 clerks.

Voting Statistics. Approved the full request, $7.5 million, for a Census Bureau statistical survey of registration and voting in areas recommended by the Civil Rights Commission, as authorized in the 1964 Civil Rights Act. Made the funds available until Dec. 31, 1966. The Commission had recommended a survey throughout the states of Alabama, Louisiana and Mississippi.

International Commission. Denied the full $79,000 requested for the Commission on International Rules of Judicial Procedure in order to "terminate" the "temporary" commission.

Small Business Administration. Provided the full $100 million requested for additional capital for the Small Business Administration revolving fund, to meet disaster loan requirements.

Appalachia. Appropriated $344,328,000 -- $18,308,000 under the request -- for the over-all Appalachian regional development program authorized in PL 89-4. All the funds were available at least through fiscal 1966; most were available until expended. A small amount of the Appalachia funds in HR 7091 were appropriated under authorizations in laws other than PL 89-4; however, the Appropriations Committee, in its report on HR 7091, said, "In the opinion of the Committee, the full amount of appropriations...(for Appalachia) in the bill should be charged to applicable limitations" in PL 89-4. (For details of PL 89-4, see story p. 788)

In actions on major Appalachia requests, the Committee:

Highways -- Recommended the full request, $200 million, for construction of a highway system and access roads in the region.

Research -- Cut the $3,920,000 requested for Agriculture Department research activities to $900,000 because "the immediate needs of this area can be met best by making full use of information now available...."

Conservation -- Recommended $23,150,000 for additional watershed projects, conservation and development grants and state conservation programs. The request was $30,370,000.

Forest Protection -- Provided for the Agriculture Department $1.5 million (request: $2.5 million) for forest land management, primarily for the rehabilitation of strip-mined areas, including $1 million (request: $1.5 million) for soil and water management and $500,000 (request: $1 million) for acquisition of forest lands, chiefly in the Cumberland and Monongahela National Forests in Kentucky and West Virginia. Provided $1,125,000 -- $660,000 less than the request -- for acceleration of forestry research. Recommended a cut of $350,000 -- to $1 million -- for technical assistance and loans to establish timber development organizations.

Local Development -- Recommended the full request, $45 million, for increasing the federal share under existing grant-in-aid programs to permit Appalachian communities and states to take advantage of the grants.

General Investigations -- Provided $2 million -- $271,000 below the request -- to "accelerate the investigations work of the Army Corps of Engineers in the Appalachian region," including funds to initiate a study of the water resources of the region, to initiate eight new river studies and "to accelerate nine current studies."

General Construction -- Recommended $13,778,000, a cut of $1,222,000, for "accelerating the planning and construction on navigation and flood control projects in the Appalachian region." The Committee said the supplemental funds were to cover the period through fiscal 1966 and stipulated that this action "represents an exception, and not a precedent for changing, to its long established policy that public work projects should be funded only on a 12-month basis in the regular annual appropriations bill."

Health -- Recommended $21 million for grants for construction and operation of demonstration health facilities -- the full hospital request.

Vocational Education -- Provided the full request, $8 million, for grants to supplement Vocational Education Act funds for construction of vocational schools in the region.

Sewage Treatment -- Provided the full request, $3 million, for grants for construction of sewage treatment works in the region.

Air, Water Pollution -- Denied $975,000 requested for air pollution control and $1.8 million requested for water supply and water pollution control because "there is no specific authorization for these programs" in the Appalachia Act.

Mine Restoration -- Approved for the Interior Department $15,850,000, a cut of $400,000 for the federal share for restoration of areas in the region damaged by mining and for a nationwide study of problems created by strip and surface mining activity.

Fish and Wildlife -- Provided $1,350,000, a cut of $400,000, for a fish and wildlife restoration program in the region.

Appalachian Regional Commission -- Provided $490,000, a cut of $10,000, for salaries and expenses of the Appalachian Regional Commission (in addition to $800,000 previously appropriated) through fiscal 1966.

Pay Costs. Recommended $606,880,688 -- a cut of $4,604,750 -- for military and civilian pay increases authorized chiefly in PLs 88-422 and 426. (1964 Almanac p. 468, 416)

Supplemental Views. Three GOP members of the Appropriations Committee's Public Works Subcommittee filed supplemental views to the report -- John J. Rhodes (Ariz.), Glenn R. Davis (Wis.) and Howard W. Robison (N.Y.). They "emphatically opposed" the Committee's recommendations that funds be made available to "accelerate" work on existing public works projects in the Appalachian region. They said this was "another example of charging items in a new program to fiscal '65, to pad up that figure so that next year's fiscal aggregate won't look so outrageous by comparison."

FLOOR ACTION

The House April 6 passed HR 7091 by a 248-62 roll-call vote and sent it to the Senate. (For voting, see chart p. 948)

Although the purpose of the bill was primarily to appropriate funds necessary for fiscal 1965 (ending June 30), some of the funds -- notably the full $344,328,000 for Appalachia programs -- were made available not only for fiscal 1965, but also for part or all of fiscal 1966 and, in some cases, for an indefinite period. The lengthened periods of availability of the funds made these specific items subject to points of order on the House floor, but in all except one case -- funds for a survey of voting in three Southern states -- no point of order was raised.

The total in HR 7091 as passed was $108,123,850 less than the President had requested and $7.5 million less than the amount recommended by the Appropriations Committee. The $7.5 million had been approved for a Census Bureau survey of registration and voting in areas recommended by the Civil Rights Commission, as authorized in the 1964 Civil Rights Act. The Commission had recommended that the survey cover the states of Alabama, Louisiana and Mississippi. The Appropriations Committee approved the full request and added language making the funds available through Dec. 31, 1965. Robert L.F. Sikes (D Fla.) raised a point of order, which was sustained, against the entire appropriation because the "language...goes beyond the period of time set forth in the bill." Sikes' action removed the funds from the bill.

Although bill proponents admitted that a similar point of order could be sustained against the funds for Appalachia, no point of order was raised. William C. Cramer (R Fla.), however, objected that the "obvious reason" for allowing the funds to remain available through fiscal 1966 was so that the regular fiscal 1966 appropriation bill "will not properly reflect the expenditures in 1966." John J. Rooney (D N.Y.) contended that the fiscal 1966 sums were included so the program "can immediately get started." He said considerable money was for construction and "they cannot proceed with that sort of program unless they have the funds in hand." He added that "we gave this request the same attention that we give to regular items in the 1966 budget. We held hearings on this supplemental and the regular 1966 bill at the same time."

Howard W. Robison (R N.Y.) objected to the bill's inclusion of funds under the Appalachia program for acceleration of existing public works programs in the region because they were not authorized in the Appalachia legislation. He said the request "should have been treated in the same manner as was the request for air pollution and water supply and water pollution control money that was disallowed...in order to consider such needs in connection with the regular (fiscal 1966) requests."

Two other provisions recommended by the Appropriations Committee at the request of the Administration were stricken from the bill on points of order that they were legislation in an appropriations bill. One, objected to by H. R. Gross (R Iowa), authorized the Peace Corps to transfer funds for administrative purposes within its over-all budget. The other, objected to by John P. Saylor (R Pa.), allowed transfer of money from an existing Veterans Administration fund to a new VA fund to provide initial capital for reopening the National Service Life Insurance program for specified veterans, authorized in 1964. Saylor said the initial capital for the program was to be obtained from a Treasury loan, and the proposed authority was "highly irregular procedure."

Before passing the bill the House rejected, on a 33-73 standing vote, an amendment by Glenn R. Davis (R Wis.) to delete $971,000 which the bill appropriated from District of Columbia funds for purchase of additional land for a new site for the D.C. Central Public Library.

PROVISIONS -- The breakdown of funds in HR 7091 as passed by the House:

Agriculture Department	$ 67,310,000
Appalachian Regional Commission	490,000
Civil Aeronautics Board	1,932,000
Civil Service Commission	1,560,000

Appropriations from Land and Water Conservation Fund	($16,000,000)
Other indefinite appropriations	(2,415,000)
GRAND TOTAL	$2,118,333,083

AMENDMENT REJECTED

April 6 -- Glenn R. Davis (R Wis.) -- Delete $971,000 from D.C. funds for purchase of additional land for a new central library site. Standing vote, 33-73.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- April 23 reported HR 7091 (S Rept 167), recommending $2,257,869,415, broken down as follows: direct appropriations (exclusive of pay increases), $1,628,667,282; pay increases, $610,787,133; appropriations from the Land and Water Conservation Fund, $16 million; indefinites, $2,415,000.

The total recommended was $22,381,912 less than the revised Administration request (see Background, p. 228) but $139,536,332 more than the amount voted by the House. The largest increases over the House sum resulted partly from the Committee's restoration of the full request for manpower development and training and most of the request for housing funds. The increase was also due to the Committee's approval of the full revised requests (submitted after the House had passed the bill) for additional funds for VA compensation and pension payments and for claims and judgments. The Committee also approved most of the revised request for Senate pay increases.

The Committee made the following major changes in the House version of the bill:

Peace Corps. Restored language deleted on the House floor which authorized the Peace Corps to transfer $1,858,000 within its fiscal 1965 appropriation to finance increased administrative and other costs.

Civil Aeronautics Board. Reinstated the full $942,000 requested, which the House had deleted, for subsidies for helicopter services in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles, because "funds should be provided for payment of such subsidy obligations so long as the existing certification has not been discontinued by administrative or legislative action."

Disaster Relief. Increased by $10 million the $25 million request and House sums to replenish the President's fund for disaster relief because the $25 million would be needed for emergency aid for areas damaged earlier in the year, and "the more recent extended flood and tornado damage in the Midwest (in April) will require at least the additional amount recommended."

Alaska Mortgage Aid. Like the House, disallowed $5.5 million requested for matching grants to retire or adjust individual mortgages on homes destroyed or damaged in the March 27, 1964, Alaska earthquake. Unlike the House, said the request was disallowed "without prejudice, with the recommendation that it be considered with the regular budget estimates for 1966."

Housing. Restored three items deleted by the House for the Housing and Home Finance Agency: $5,050,000 for matching grants for training people for housing and community development programs; $515,000 for fellowships for city planning and urban studies; and $30 million for additional payments on urban renewal projects. Reduced to $8,320,000 the $13 million requested and provided by the House for subsidy payments to local public housing authorities under annual contribution contracts, saying any additional requirements could be funded in 1966.

Veterans Administration. Provided the full revised request, $150 million (original request and House sum: $108 million), for increased non-service-connected disability and death pensions authorized in 1964. Reinstated language requested by the VA but deleted on the House floor which authorized transfer of initial capital for reopening the National Service Life Insurance program for specified veterans from the existing veterans' special term insurance fund to the veterans' reopened insurance fund. Indicated it was not extending a provision of PL 89-2 which prohibited use of funds by the VA for closing 32 VA facilities before May 1, because VA Administrator William J. Driver April 9 had assured the Committee that the proposed closings had been put "in a state of suspension" until after a Presidential commission had studied the proposals and reported to the President by June 1. (See story p. 395)

Conservation Fund. Like the House, provided for appropriation of $16 million, the full amount requested, from the Land and Water Conservation Fund. Within the total, altered the state-federal allocation of funds to provide the following: $10,285,000 or 64.28 percent to the states (request: $10 million, House: $10,375,000); $5,645,000 or 35.28 percent to federal agencies (request: $5,930,000, House: $5,555,000); and $70,000 or .44 percent to the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation for administrative expenses. Applied the $90,000 cut from the amount which the House had allocated to the states to the federal fund category and earmarked it for acquisition of inholdings in park areas, providing $2,685,750 (request: $2,970,750, House: $2,595,750).

Water Resources Research. Restored $1,840,000 cut by the House, to provide the full $2,825,000 requested, for grants to support 37 state water resources research institutes authorized in PL 88-379. Said that "because of the planning that has already been done by the universities in preparation of their fiscal...1965 programs, the institutes are in a position to obligate $75,000 each by June 30, 1965."

Manpower Training. Restored $28 million cut by the House to provide the full request, $103 million, for manpower development and training activities. Said the full $103 million was provided because after the House had passed HR 7091, Congress had extended full federal financing of the programs through fiscal 1966, whereas the existing law had required states to pay one-third of the training costs beginning July 1, 1965. (See story p. 810)

Unemployment Compensation. Recommended $11 million (request: $17 million, House: $14 million) for unemployment compensation payments for federal employees and former servicemen because the Labor Department had advised that $11 million "should be adequate to fully meet the federal obligation in this program." Added language stipulating that any additional funds needed for payments after May 31 would be charged against appropriations for the following year.

Voting Statistics. Restored $293,000 of the $7.5 million requested but deleted on the House floor for a Census Bureau statistical survey of registration and voting in areas recommended by the Civil Rights Commission. Said the sum was "sufficient to meet obligations anticipated...in the current fiscal year."

International Commission. Restored $50,938 of the $79,000 requested but denied by the House for the Commission on International Rules of Judicial Procedure. Directed "that the Commission not incur any obligations payable with appropriated funds on and after May 1, 1965."

Appalachia. Appropriated $352,300,000 -- $10,336,000 under the request but $7,972,000 over the House sum -- for the over-all Appalachian regional development program. All of the funds were available at least through fiscal 1966. Noted that although most of the funds were for programs specifically authorized in PL 89-4, "there are specifically authorized projects which the Committee feels should not be charged against this authorization, and the Committee believes such type of project should be excluded from the authorization" in PL 89-4. (This was in contrast to the House Committee's statement that the total appropriations should be charged against authority in PL 89-4.)

The Committee made the following changes in House allowances for major Appalachian programs:

Research -- Provided $2.6 million (request: $3,920,000, House: $900,000) for Agriculture Department research activities.

Conservation -- Recommended $26,970,000 (request: $30,370,000, House: $23,150,000) for watershed projects, conservation and development grants and state conservation programs.

Forest Protection -- Provided $2 million (request: $2.5 million, House: $1.5 million) for the Agriculture Department's Forest Service. Said the increase over the House sum would provide the full $1 million requested for acquisition of land in the Monongahela and Cumberland National Forests. Recommended $1,325,000 (request: $1,785,000, House: $1,125,000) for acceleration of forestry research.

General Construction -- Recommended $14.7 million (request: $15 million, House: $13,778,000) for general construction by the Army Corps of Engineers, including $4 million "for acceleration of seven projects." Said the Corps had indicated that $4 million, rather than the original $4.3 million requested, would be adequate.

Mine Restoration -- Provided the full request, $16,250,000 (House: $15,850,000), for the federal share for restoration of areas in the region damaged by mining and for a nationwide study of problems created by strip and surface mining activity.

Fish and Wildlife -- Recommended the full request, $1,750,000 (House: $1,350,000), for a fish and wildlife restoration program in the region.

Pay Costs. Recommended $610,787,133 (original request not including Senate funds: $611,485,438, House: $606,880,688, request including Senate funds: $615,511,833) for military and civilian pay increases.

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate April 27 passed HR 7091 by voice vote and sent it to conference with the House.

The only major controversy on the floor concerned subsidies for helicopter services in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles. The House had denied additional subsidy funds, but the Senate Committee restored the full $942,000 requested. William Proxmire (D Wis.) April 27 strongly objected to the subsidies, but said he would not offer an amendment to delete the funds "because the Administration has decided that it will not oppose the payment of the additional $942,000." He said the Administration had "also decided that the helicopter subsidy should be phased out finally by the end of this calendar year -- Dec. 31, 1965." Milton R. Young (R N.D.), Jacob K. Javits (R N.Y.), Thomas H. Kuchel (R Calif.) and George Murphy (R Calif.) supported payment of the subsidies at least until they had been studied by a legislative committee.

PROVISIONS -- The breakdown of funds in HR 7091 as passed by the Senate:

Agriculture Department	$ 73,660,000
Appalachian Regional Commission	490,000
Civil Aeronautics Board	2,874,000
Civil Service Commission	1,560,000
Commerce Department	247,793,000
Commission on International Rules of Judicial Procedure	50,938
Defense Department	30,205,000
Disaster relief	35,000,000
District of Columbia	(1,563,600)
General Services Administration	14,586,900
Health, Education and Welfare Department	440,400,000
Housing and Home Finance Agency	54,065,000
Inter-American Development Bank	250,000,000
Interior Department	48,482,000
The Judiciary	250,000
Justice Department	9,330,000

Claims and judgments	31,411,444
Total, exclusive of pay increases	$1,628,667,282
Increased pay costs, all agencies	$ 610,787,133
Total, direct appropriations	$2,239,454,415
Appropriations from Land and Water Conservation Fund	($16,000,000)
Other indefinite appropriations	(2,415,000)
GRAND TOTAL	$2,257,869,415

Conference

REPORT -- The conference report (H Rept 270) was filed April 28, carrying $2,227,563,977, including $1,598,551,844 in direct appropriations exclusive of pay increases, $610,597,133 in direct appropriations for pay increases, $16 million in appropriations from the Land and Water Conservation Fund and $2,415,000 in indefinite appropriations.

The major differences between the Senate and House were resolved as follows in the final version of HR 7091:

Peace Corps. Retained language, deleted by the House but restored by the Senate, authorizing the Peace Corps to transfer $1,858,000 within its fiscal 1965 appropriation to finance increased administrative and other costs.

Civil Aeronautics Board. Accepted the House's deletion of $942,000 requested and provided by the Senate for subsidies for helicopter services in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles. (An effort to upset this decision was defeated on the House floor. See Final Action, p. 234.)

Disaster Relief. Accepted the Senate's appropriation of $35 million -- $10 million over the request and House figure -- to replenish the President's fund for disaster relief.

Housing. Accepted the House's deletion of two items requested for the Housing and Home Finance Agency, which the Senate had provided in full: $5,050,000 for matching grants for training people for housing and community development programs and $515,000 for fellowships in city planning and urban studies. Accepted the Senate's retention of another HHFA request which the House had deleted: $30 million for additional payments on urban renewal projects. Provided the Senate sum, $8,320,000 (request and House: $13 million) for subsidy payments to local public housing authorities under annual contribution contracts. (See Final Action, p. 234)

Veterans Administration. Accepted the full revised request and Senate figures, $150 million (initial request and House: $108 million), for increased non-service-connected disability and death pensions authorized in 1964. Also deleted language, requested by the VA and deleted by the House but restored by the Senate, which authorized transfer of initial capital for reopening the National Service Life Insurance program from the existing veterans' special term insurance fund to the veterans' reopened insurance fund. (See Final Action, p. 234)

Conservation Fund. Within the $16 million requested and agreed to by both chambers for appropriation from the Land and Water Conservation Fund, accepted the House's provisions for allocating the total.

Water Resources Research. Provided a compromise figure, $1,985,000 (request and Senate: $2,825,000, House: $985,000), for the Office of Water Resources Research for grants for research institutes.

Manpower Training. Provided a compromise sum, $89 million (request and Senate: $103 million, House: $75 million), for manpower development and training activities.

Unemployment Compensation. Provided the Senate figure, $11 million (request: $17 million, House: $14 million), for unemployment compensation payments for federal employees and former servicemen, and agreed to Senate language stipulating that any additional funds needed for payments after May 31 would be charged against appropriations for the following year.

Voting Statistics. Disallowed "without prejudice" the $7.5 million request for a Census Bureau survey of registration and voting. The conferees felt that "the matter should be settled...after action has been taken on pending voting rights legislation." After enactment of the voting rights bill, Congress voted $3,750,000 for the survey in the General Fiscal 1966 Supplemental Appropriations bill. (See stories p. 182, 533)

International Commission. Recommended $25,000 (request: $79,000, House: none, Senate: $50,938) for the Commission on International Rules of Judicial Procedure and specifically agreed with the Senate Appropriations Committee's direction "that the Commission not incur any obligations payable with appropriated funds on or after May 1, 1965."

Appalachia. Appropriated $349,688,000 for the overall Appalachian regional development program (request: $362,636,000, House: $344,328,000, Senate: $352,300,000). Did not specify whether the entire appropriation should be charged against authority in the authorizing legislation for the Appalachia program (PL 89-4). The conferees took the following actions on major programs on which the House and Senate had disagreed:

Research -- Provided a compromise $1,450,000 (request: $3,920,000, House: $900,000, Senate: $2.6 million) for Agriculture Department research activities.

Conservation -- Recommended a compromise of $26,820,000 (request: $30,370,000, House: $23,150,000, Senate: $26,970,000) for watershed projects, conservation and development grants and state conservation programs.

Forest Protection -- Retained the Senate's $2 million (request: $2.5 million, House: $1.5 million) for the Agriculture Department's Forest Service. Provided a compromise $1,225,000 (request: $1,785,000, House: $1,125,000, Senate: $1,325,000) for acceleration of forestry research.

General Construction -- Recommended a compromise $14,153,000 (request: $15 million, House: $13,778,000, Senate: $14.7 million) for general construction by the Army Corps of Engineers.

Mine Restoration -- Provided a compromise $16 million (request and Senate: $16,250,000, House: $15,850,000) for the federal share for restoration of areas in the region damaged by mining and for a nationwide study of problems created by strip and surface mining.

Fish and Wildlife -- Agreed to the House figure, $1,350,000 (request and Senate: $1,750,000), for a fish and wildlife restoration program in the region.

Pay Costs. Recommended a compromise $610,579,133 (original request: $611,485,438, House: $606,880,688, revised request: $615,511,883, Senate: $610,787,133) for military and civilian pay increases authorized chiefly in PL 88-422 and PL 88-426.

Final Action

Conferees on HR 7091 had resolved most of the major House-Senate differences before filing their report. A few items, contained in the Senate but not the House bill, were reported in disagreement and were voted on separately in each chamber after the report was adopted by both chambers April 29. The Senate approved the conference report by voice vote and the House by a 316-55 roll-call vote before taking a separate roll call on helicopter subsidies. (For voting, see chart p. 956)

On the three most controversial items -- helicopter subsidies, two housing programs, and Veterans Administration authority to transfer funds -- the Senate eventually receded so that funds for other programs would not be delayed. Following are details of final action on these major controversial items:

● The Administration and the Civil Aeronautics Board had requested $942,000 in additional funds to pay subsidies for helicopter services in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles. The sum was deleted by the House but restored by the Senate. When the House considered the conference report, Appropriations Committee Chairman George H. Mahon (D Texas) offered a motion that the House insist on its deletion of the funds; Eugene J. Keogh (D N.Y.) immediately offered a preferential motion that the House concur in the Senate's provision of the funds. The Keogh motion was rejected first on a 62-77 standing vote and then on a 144-228 roll call. Then the Mahon motion was adopted by voice vote and the funds were not included in the final bill.

● The Administration and the Housing and Home Finance Agency had requested $5,050,000 for matching grants for training people for housing and community development programs and $515,000 for fellowships in city planning and urban studies, both authorized in the 1964 Housing Act (PL 88-560). The House deleted the funds; the Senate provided them in full. In considering the conference report, the House by voice vote adopted a motion insisting on its deletion and the Senate, also by voice vote, accepted the deletion. The final bill did, however, contain funds authorized in 1964 for payments on urban renewal projects and for subsidy payments to local public housing authorities under annual contribution contracts.

● The Administration and the Veteran Administration had requested authority to transfer money from an existing VA fund for special term insurance to a new VA fund to provide initial capital for reopening the National Service Life Insurance program for specified veterans, authorized in 1964. The language was deleted on the House floor on a point of order that it was authorizing legislation in an appropriations bill. The Senate restored the language. On the House floor during consideration of the conference report, Mahon moved that the House accept the language. John P. Saylor (R Pa.) objected that the 1964 legislation authorizing the NSLI reopener had required that the program be financed initially through repayable direct appropriations from the Treasury, and that legislation to change this method should go through the Veterans' Affairs Committee. Olin E. Teague (D Texas), the Chairman of that Committee, said, "I very much resent the fact that (the VA) did not even approach the legislative committee but went to the Committee on Appropriations and asked for money which had not been authorized." Saylor added that VA representatives had "told us they do not need this language now" and that he had introduced a bill (HR 7597) which would authorize establishment of a veterans reopened trust fund. The Mahon motion was rejected on a 45-93 standing vote, and a motion to insist on deletion of the language was then adopted by voice vote. The Senate agreed by voice vote to delete the language.

The House May 5 and the Senate June 1 passed HR 7597 by voice votes and sent it to the President, who signed it into law (PL 89-40) June 14. The bill authorized establishment in the Treasury of a revolving fund, the Veterans Reopened Insurance Fund, and payment into the fund of up to $1,650,000 from the existing Veterans' Special Term Insurance Fund. The funds transferred were to be repaid with interest.

SOCIAL SECURITY MEDICARE PROGRAM ENACTED

HR 6675 -- Reported by House Ways and Means Committee (H Rept 213) March 29, 1965.

- Passed by the House by a 313-115 roll-call vote April 8. (See p. 950)
- Reported, amended, by Senate Finance Committee (S Rept 404) June 30.
- Passed, amended, by the Senate by a 68-21 roll-call vote July 9. (See p. 1057)
- Conference report (H Rept 682) agreed to by a 307-116 roll-call vote of the House July 27 and a 70-24 roll-call vote of the Senate July 28. (See p. 982, 1062)

PL 89-97 -- Signed into law July 30.

Throughout the post-World War II period, legislative proposals to establish a federal health insurance program for the aged provoked bitter, extended and unresolved Congressional debate. The controversy was finally ended in 1965 when Congress enacted a bill (HR 6675) establishing a medical care program for the aged under the Social Security System. HR 6675 made a multitude of other changes in Social Security law, including a 7-percent increase in retirement benefits, and was generally considered the most important welfare measure since passage of the original Social Security Act in 1935. Its estimated annual cost was $6.5 billion.

In its long legislative history prior to 1965, a federal hospital insurance program, "medicare", had been passed only once by the Senate, in 1964, and then by a narrow margin. It had never been approved by the House committee under whose jurisdiction it fell -- the Ways and Means Committee -- and thus had not been put to a House vote. Many political observers doubted that it could pass the House, which throughout the period was more conservative than the Senate.

The 1964 Congressional elections for the House, however, brought an increase of 42 Northern Democrats, almost all of them medicare supporters. Reflecting the Democrats' new two-thirds majority in the House, party ratios on committees were revised, and medicare for the first time had a majority on the Ways and Means Committee. The bill was reported from the Committee with all 17 Democrats in favor, all 8 Republicans opposed to it. It was passed by the House on a 313-115 vote after a Republican motion for a voluntary health plan, as opposed to medicare's all-inclusive Social Security approach, was defeated on a much closer vote, 191-236 (R 128-10; ND 3-188; SD 60-38).

Although the already heavily Democratic Senate gained only two more Democrats in the 1964 elections, the margin in favor of medicare on the 1965 key vote was far wider than on the favorable 1964 vote -- 64-26 contrasted with 49-44 in the previous year. The new margin of support was widely believed to be a recognition that the 1964 elections had shown the popular appeal of medicare.

Expansion of Medicare. In addition to the basic compulsory hospital insurance plan long sought by liberals, HR 6675 established a supplementary voluntary program covering doctor bills, laboratory costs and related services, to be financed by a $3 monthly premium matched from general revenues of the Government. Addition of the supplementary plan produced the greatest drama in the 1965 Congressional action on medicare. As in previous years, President Johnson had proposed only the basic program, and at the outset of 1965, medicare backers would certainly have been content with enactment of this program alone. However, during House committee consideration of the Administration plan, opponents charged that President Johnson's program was deficient because it failed to cover doctors' services; they proposed that it be replaced by a more comprehensive but voluntary health program. The Committee majority approved the Administration's plan, but also voted that the essence of the supplementary plan be offered in addition. Administration members and long-time medicare backers issued statements expressing delight with the new two-pronged program, but the original proponents of the voluntary plan refused to support the revised bill.

HR 6675 also made a number of other changes in the Social Security Act. These ranged from very important to very minor in nature, and all were virtually non-controversial. Chief among the changes were a 7-percent across-the-board raise in Social Security retirement benefits, a $300 increase in earnings permitted to Social Security recipients, coverage of self-employed doctors under the retirement program and expansion of the Kerr-Mills program for the "medically needy."

20-Year Effort for Medicare. A federally operated health insurance program covering the entire nation was considered by the Roosevelt Administration in 1935 but was never proposed to Congress. Such a system was endorsed by President Truman in 1945, beginning the mobilization of forces that were later to battle over the more limited medicare proposal.

By far the most active and vociferous opponent of the Social Security health care proposals over the years was the American Medical Assn., an organization which in June 1965 had as members 202,404 of the nation's 284,271 physicians. Through national publicity campaigns and individual lobbying, the AMA opposed the health care plans as likely to lead to socialized medicine, bring about bureaucratic interference with the practice of medicine and reduce the quality of medical care in the nation. The insurance industry and conservative business groups generally supported the AMA. This position was attacked by members of labor unions, welfare and liberal organizations, who argued that workers should have the right to pay a payroll tax to insure against potentially devastating costs of illness, especially in old age.

These forces met in a particularly vigorous and bitter lobbying campaign on President Truman's proposal in 1949, which would have covered persons of all ages. The campaign resulted in no action at all on the Administration plan; the AMA forces were considered to have won a notable victory.

After the 1949 defeat the issue subsided for a while, and the Eisenhower Administration, which came to office in 1953, opposed any such plan. But in 1957 the issue returned to public prominence with introduction by Rep. Aime J. Forand (D R.I.) of a bill which covered hospital and surgical costs of the aged under the Social Security retirement system. This became a major part of the legislative program of the AFL-CIO and marked the start of the campaign which ended with enactment of medicare in 1965.

By 1960, the Forand bill had become a very hot political issue, and in that year the key importance of the Ways and Means Committee to medicare legislation was made clear. The Constitution provides that revenue-raising legislation must originate in the House; therefore the medicare bill, as an amendment of the Social Security Act, was referred to the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee. Because non-germane amendments cannot be made on the House floor, approval by the Ways and Means Committee was the only practical way in which medicare could reach the House floor for a vote. When the Committee cast a 17-8 vote against the Forand bill in 1960, it was clear that medicare supporters had a long fight ahead. The vote was particularly discouraging to them because Committee Chairman Wilbur D. Mills (D Ark.) was among the opponents.

The anti-medicare Eisenhower Administration left office in 1961 and the pro-medicare Kennedy Administration came to power. The new Administration took every opportunity to place medicare supporters on Ways and Means. By 1963 the margin of opposition had shrunk to one vote, where it stayed until 1965. During this period Chairman Mills remained firm in opposition to the proposal. In 1964 he issued a statement expressing some sympathy with prepaid health insurance for the aged, but stressing his concern about overtaxing the Social Security System, particularly with a program covering ever-rising hospital costs. (Medicare supporters felt that Mills' reservations about the program went deeper than concern for the Social Security System and that he had some sympathy for the AMA's "socialized medicine" argument. He showed no interest in working out a compromise until 1965, when a majority of the Committee was clearly in favor of medicare, and the Committee amendments to HR 6675 that were designed to protect the Social Security System seemed less than far-reaching.)

While the Ways and Means Committee kept medicare from reaching the House floor during the 1961-1964 Kennedy-Johnson Administrations, medicare supporters worked at getting the program through the Senate in hopes that it might then be maneuvered through the House. In 1962 it lost in the Senate, 48-52, but in 1964 the Senate adopted it for the first time, 49-44. The victory was hollow, however, as it was impossible to avoid a Senate-House conference on the measure and a majority of the House conferees, led by Mills, were medicare opponents. The Senate-passed amendment died in conference, giving new stature to the view that it was necessary to get a pro-medicare majority on the Ways and Means Committee before the program could be enacted.

1965 Action. The opportunity came after the 1964 Congressional election. Three Republican Ways and Means Committee medicare opponents were defeated, and the gain of 42 Northern Democrats in the House enabled the Administration to revise party ratios on House Committees, thus adding Democratic medicare supporters to Ways and Means. This assured a pro-medicare Committee vote, and the 42 new Democrats seemed to assure a favorable House vote. Therefore on Nov. 4, the morning after the election, enactment of medicare, which had been uncertain for so long, seemed probable. Rep. Mills indicated to reporters that he would be receptive to a medicare proposal. After that, there was little tension on the part of supporters as the bill moved through the legislative process in 1965.

Failure of medicare in 1964 had been one of President Johnson's few serious legislative defeats. In 1965, he took no risks. He told Congressional leaders to give the bill top priority. It was assigned the numbers HR 1 and S 1 and the Ways and Means Committee ratio was revised from D 15-R 10 to D 17-R 8. The medicare proposal was coupled with a bipartisan-backed provision for a general 7-percent increase in Social Security benefits.

The Administration bill was introduced in the House by Ways and Means member Cecil R. King (D Calif.), who had sponsored it since Forand's retirement in 1960, but Mills took command during the Committee's executive sessions on the proposal. According to some sources,

Summary of HR 6675

BENEFITS

Basic Health Plan. Benefits about 19 million aged; provides up to 90 days of hospital care, 100 days of nursing-home care and 100 home health-care visits and outpatient diagnostic services. Some deductions required.

Supplementary Health Plan. Benefits about 16.9 million aged; pays 80 percent of the cost of a variety of health services, including services of doctors, after a $50 annual deduction.

Kerr-Mills. Medical assistance to the needy aged was extended to needy persons under all public assistance programs, and federal funds for the programs increased. About 8 million persons would be benefitted.

Child Health Care. Federal funds increased for existing programs, and new programs added.

Social Security. Cash benefits for about 20 million persons increased by 7 percent, and regulations liberalized to provide further benefits. Coverage extended to self-employed doctors and to tips.

Public Assistance. Federal funds increased, and income exemptions liberalized.

EFFECTIVE DATES -- Increased Social Security payments -- retroactive to Jan. 1, 1965. Most of the other Social Security benefits -- effective Sept. 1, 1965. Increased federal funds for most child health care programs -- retroactive to July 1, 1965. Increased federal funds for the new Kerr-Mills program and the public assistance programs -- available Jan. 1, 1966. Most benefits under the basic and supplementary health plans -- effective July 1, 1966, with the remainder becoming effective Jan. 1, 1967.

FINANCING -- Increased Social Security benefits and most of the basic health program -- financed by payroll taxes. The supplementary health plan -- financed by contributions from participants and general revenue. All other benefits in the bill -- to be financed by general revenue. First full year cost of operation (1967): basic health plan $2.5 billion; supplementary health plan $1.2 billion; Kerr-Mills $200 million; Social Security benefits $2.3 billion; child health and public assistance $339 million; grand total $6.5 billion. Sources of financing: $4.5 billion from payroll taxes; $1.4 billion from general revenue; $600 million from contributions from individuals.

Mills preferred to back the proposal once its passage was assured rather than injure his highly influential position in the House by taking a stand on the losing side. In addition, Mills' assumption of leadership enabled him to have a say-so in its provisions. In line with his concern for the protection of the Social Security System, the Committee amended the Administration bill to estimate costs on the basis of rising earnings and hospitalization costs over a 25-year period, with hospitalization costs rising faster than earnings.

Under Mills' leadership, the most important change was made in the original Administration proposal. This was the addition of the voluntary, supplementary health plan. Ironically, the plan had its origin in the AMA's final, concerted campaign against medicare. Despite the fact that most political observers considered enactment a certainty, the AMA in early 1965 began a new and extensive campaign against the bill. Recent surveys had shown that a large percentage of the population thought the Administration bill would cover doctor costs and approved of this. Although the Administration had omitted such coverage primarily to weaken the AMA's charge that the bill could lead to socialized medicine, the new AMA campaign emphasized that doctor costs were not included, and proposed an alternative plan in which they were. This plan, dubbed "eldercare", called for voluntary comprehensive medical insurance for the aged which would be optional with the states and which would vary in cost according to the income of recipients.

The eldercare program was introduced in the House by Republicans, but did not win the support of the GOP leadership. However, it apparently prompted the form of yet another alternative bill (HR 4351) which was introduced by ranking minority Ways and Means Committee member John W. Byrnes (Wis.) with the GOP leadership's blessing. This was also voluntary and covered most costs of illness to the aged, but it would be administered by the Federal Government. The Byrnes' bill formed the basis for the supplementary plan added to the Administration proposal under the guiding hand of Chairman Mills.

When the Administration's medicare plan plus the supplementary proposal and a number of less important changes were approved by the Ways and Means Committee, they were sent to the House floor in a clean bill (HR 6675), this time sponsored by Mills himself. The House version of HR 6675 called for expenditures of $6.2 billion annually.

Once the proposal reached the House floor, where it was considered under a closed rule that prohibited floor amendments, it moved through Congress with little controversy and great ease. The only House provision that was opposed by the Administration transferred from the basic hospital insurance plan to the supplementary plan coverage of services furnished by specialists in radiology, anesthesiology, pathology and physical medicine. The Senate, before passing HR 6675 by a 68-21 vote, returned those services to the basic plan and made numerous other changes. None of the amendments altered the basic structure of the bill, although several were very important. Some of these eliminated the period of hospitalization under the basic plan (to provide for catastrophic illness), made further increases in payroll taxes and lowered the retirement age for Social Security cash benefits. The only amendment accepted over opposition of the Democratic leadership substantially expanded the disability insurance program for the blind. In all, the Senate changes increased the annual cost of the bill by about $1.4 billion, to $7.6 billion.

House-Senate differences were resolved in six meetings of the conference committee. One-year costs under the final bill were estimated at $6.5 billion, and the provisions were very similar to the original House version -- Mills said over 95 percent of them came from the House version. Reflecting this dominance by the Ways and Means Committee, the manager of the Senate's bill, Russell B. Long (D La.), said July 28, "Frankly, I have sometimes gained the impression in conference with some of the senior House Members that they would be opposed, if they had the opportunity, to the great compromise, even, that brought this Union into being and created the U.S. Senate." The only major Senate amendment retained in the final bill was the additional increase in payroll taxes to finance medicare and the enlarged Social Security benefits. Hospitalization benefits were also longer than those under the House version (90 days), but were not unlimited. Age 60 retirement and most liberalized benefits for the blind were dropped, along with many lesser changes, and services such as anesthesiology were returned to the supplementary plan.

President Johnson signed HR 6675 into law (PL 89-97) July 30, proclaiming that, "No longer will older Americans be denied the healing miracle of modern medicine." He said the bill had a few defects, "such as the method of payment of certain specialists", but he was confident that they would be quickly remedied. Mr. Johnson flew to Independence, Mo., to sign the bill in the presence of Harry S. Truman, the first President to propose a national health insurance program.

In October the AMA ended months of suspense on the subject by making clear that it would not sponsor an organized boycott of the medicare program. In a sense it signalled acceptance of the program by resolving to participate in advisory committees "and to contribute whatever advice and suggestions are deemed advisable and necessary in the formulation and revision of regulations."

How PL 89-97 Would Work

Following is a summary of the major provisions of PL 89-97:

Basic Plan -- The basic health insurance plan provided for the Government to pay part of the costs for the hospital and nursing home care of all persons 65 or over, regardless of whether such persons were otherwise eligible for Social Security benefits. The only exceptions were certain categories of aliens and federal employees eligible for an existing federal employee health insurance program. With a few minor exceptions, doctor bills were not covered by the basic plan. Any person 65 or over was automatically entitled to benefits. The latter included the costs of: up to 90 days of hospital care per spell of illness, with certain deductible amounts to be paid by the patient; up to 100 days of post-hospital care in a nursing home, with deductible amounts, per spell of illness; up to 100 post-hospital home health care visits by a nurse; and certain outpatient diagnostic services.

The cost to the Federal Government of the basic plan was to be financed by increasing the Social Security payroll tax and placing the proceeds into a special hospital insurance trust fund which would pay for benefits. The cost of providing benefits for those persons 65 and over who were not otherwise covered by Social Security would be paid for from general federal revenues instead of payroll taxes.

Supplementary Plan -- Any person 65 or over could, if he wished, purchase for $3 monthly a supplementary, voluntary health insurance plan to cover doctor bills. The plan would pay 80 percent of the cost of doctor bills, after an initial deduction of $50 annually payable by the patient, on services provided by physicians, surgeons, radiologists, pathologists and other doctors in hospitals, clinics, offices and homes. Up to 100 home visits per year would be covered. The plan also would pay for X-rays, laboratory tests and similar services. To help finance the plan, the Federal Government from general revenues would match the $3 monthly payment by the purchasers.

Kerr-Mills -- Congress in 1960 established a program for aid to the "medically needy" -- elderly persons not poor enough to qualify for old-age public assistance, but too poor to meet medical bills. Persons were eligible for the program only if their state of residence chose to join and if they passed a means test. States were reimbursed by the Federal Government for 50 to 80 percent of costs under the program, depending upon each state's per capita income. PL 89-97 extended this program to persons under the dependent children, aid to the blind and disabled programs. The maximum federal share of matching funds was raised to 83 percent and the means test was made more flexible. This expanded program was coupled with all other federal public assistance medical programs in a new title of the Social Security Act, administration was simplified and a uniform grant formula was provided.

Child Health Care -- Federal funds were increased for the three Social Security Act child care programs -- maternal and child health services, crippled children's services and child welfare services. New programs were authorized for training personnel for care of crippled and mentally retarded children and for comprehensive health care services to children in low-income families.

OASDI -- A 7-percent across-the-board increase in Social Security retirement and disability benefits was authorized and made retroactive to Jan. 1, 1965. Among numerous other changes in benefits were: an increase in the amount an individual could earn without losing Social Security benefits; extension from age 18 to 21 of children's survivor's benefits for full-time students; continuation of survivor's benefits to widows and widowers who remarried; reduction from age 62 to 60 in the qualifying age for widow's benefits (optional, with a corresponding reduction in benefits); and easing of requirements for disability benefits.

Social Security retirement coverage was made compulsory for self-employed physicians and interns -- a move long fought by the AMA. Tips were made subject to Social Security taxes, and the Amish won a long fight for exemption from Social Security of religious sects which teach conscientious opposition to acceptance of insurance benefits.

To finance these changes and the basic medicare program, the Social Security annual taxable base was increased from $4,800 to $6,600, as of Jan. 1, 1966, and the employer-employee and self-employed Social Security tax rates were raised. (For tax rate raises, see chart p. 241)

Public Assistance -- Matching formulas were revised to increase the federal share under all state public assistance programs. A number of minor liberalizations were made in public assistance requirements.

PROVISIONS OF HR 6675

As signed into law, PL 89-97:

Added a new title (XVIII) to the Social Security Act to provide for persons over 65 a basic hospital and related care insurance plan and a voluntary supplementary insurance plan covering medical and other costs. Major provisions of the Health Insurance for the Aged Act follow.

BASIC HEALTH INSURANCE PLAN

Eligibility. Provided a basic health insurance plan for all persons 65 and older, except active or retired federal employees enrolled in the federal health benefits program, federal employees who were eligible for the federal health benefits program after Feb. 16, 1965, aliens who had not been lawfully admitted for permanent residence or who, though admitted for permanent residence, had not lived in the United States for at least five consecutive years and persons convicted of certain subversive crimes.

Benefits. Provided that the plan would pay:

- Inpatient hospital services for up to 90 days for each spell of illness, with the patient paying a deductible amount of $40 for the first 60 days and $10 a day for the next 30 days. Services covered included those ordinarily furnished by a hospital for its inpatients, except the services of radiologists, anesthesiologists, pathologists and physiatrists. Payments would not be made for private-duty nursing or hospital services of physicians, except services provided by dental and medical interns and residents under approved teaching programs. Psychiatric hospital care would be subject to a lifetime limit of 190 days and 60 days per spell of illness.
- Post-hospital care for up to 100 days in each period of illness after at least three days in the hospital, with the patient paying $5 a day after the first 20 days. The post-hospital facilities, such as nursing homes, must have arrangements with a hospital for the timely transfer of patients and for furnishing medical information on the patients or, in certain cases, must have sought such transfer agreement with a hospital. Christian Science nursing homes would be limited to providing 30 days of services to a patient during a period of illness with a $5 deduction.
- Outpatient diagnostic services with the patient paying the first $20 for diagnostic services provided by the same hospital during a 20-day period and 20 percent of the remaining costs. The $20 deduction would be credited against the annual $50 deduction required under the supplementary health plan. (See below) If the deduction for the supplementary plan had already been paid, then the diagnostic services deduction would be reimbursable under the supplementary plan.
- Up to 100 home health-care visits (such as by a nurse but not a doctor) after discharge from at least a three-day stay in hospital, or from an extended-care facility, and before the beginning of a new period of illness.

Defined a period of illness as beginning when a patient entered a hospital or nursing home and ending when the patient had not been an inpatient of a hospital or nursing home for 60 consecutive days.

Provided that the deductions required for the various services would be increased if necessary to meet rising health care costs but that no increases would be made before 1969.

Provided that payments to providers of the services would be "the reasonable cost" of the services.

Effective Date. Provided that post-hospital, extended-care benefits would become effective Jan. 1, 1967, and the other benefits July 1, 1966.

Financing. Provided a payroll tax, which would apply equally to employers, employees and self-employed persons, of: 0.35 percent in 1966; 0.50 percent in 1967-72; 0.55 percent in 1973-75; 0.60 percent in 1976-79; 0.70 percent in 1980-86; 0.80 percent in 1987 and thereafter.

Set the taxable annual earnings base for the health insurance payroll tax at $6,600, effective Jan. 1, 1966.

Provided that general revenue would finance the plan for persons not covered by Social Security or the Railroad Retirement Act.

Provided that the health insurance payroll taxes and the general revenue for the plan would go into a separate Hospital Insurance Trust Fund in the Treasury.

Administration. Gave the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) the main responsibility for administering the plan. Provisions were included for the Railroad Retirement Board to assist in the administration of benefits for its beneficiaries and to collect the Hospital Insurance Trust Fund taxes from its beneficiaries if the Board increased its taxable earnings base to equal that of the base for the health insurance payroll tax. (This was done in PL 89-212. See story p. 340)

Provided that the Secretary would use appropriate state agencies and private organizations to assist in the administration.

Provided that an Advisory Council would be created to advise the Secretary on administration of the plan.

SUPPLEMENTARY MEDICAL CARE PLAN

Eligibility. Provided the same eligibility requirements as those for the basic plan (above).

Enrollment. Provided that persons at least 65 years of age before Jan. 1, 1966, could enroll between Sept. 1, 1965, through March 31, 1966. Persons reaching 65 after Dec. 31, 1965, would have a seven-month initial enrollment period beginning three months before reaching 65. Future general enrollment periods would be from Oct. 1 to Dec. 31 in each odd year. The first such period would begin Oct. 1, 1967.

Provided that no person could enroll after three years from the close of the first period in which he could have enrolled. Persons who dropped out of the plan could re-enroll only once, and this must be done within three years after dropping out.

Provided that states could enroll and pay the premiums for their public assistance recipients.

Benefits. Provided that the plan would pay 80 percent of the patient's costs after an annual deduction of $50 on the following:

- Services of physicians, surgeons, radiologists, anesthesiologists, pathologists and physiatrists and certain services of dental surgeons, regardless of whether these services were provided in a hospital, clinic, office or home.
- Up to 100 home health-care visits each calendar year.
- Other medical and health services, whether provided in or out of a medical institution, including x-rays, laboratory tests, electrocardiograms, basal metabolism readings, radium and radioactive isotope therapy, certain ambulance services, certain surgical dressings, splints and casts, braces, artificial legs, arms and eyes, and rental of certain medical equipment. Payment for out-of-the-hospital treatment of mental, psychoneurotic and personality disorders would be limited in each calendar year to $250 or 50 percent of the costs, whichever was smaller. Payments would not be made for routine physical examination, dental care, eyeglasses or hearing aids.

Required that payments to institutional providers of care be based on reasonable costs and payments to doctors and non-institutional providers be based on reasonable charges.

Effective Date. Provided that the benefits would be effective July 1, 1966.

Financing. Provided that persons enrolled in the plan would pay monthly premiums of $3 each. The premiums would be deducted from the monthly retirement benefits received by those persons under the Social Security, railroad and civil service retirement systems.

Provided that the Federal Government would match from general revenue the $3 monthly premium paid by each enrollee, and make a preliminary appropriation to establish an operating fund.

Required that the individual and Government contributions go into a separate trust fund for the supplementary plan.

Authorized a Government appropriation equal to $18 per aged person to provide an operating fund when the plan took effect.

Provided that premium rates could be increased -- but not before 1968 -- as medical costs rose and also by 10 percent for each year out of the program for those persons who delayed enrollment until after the first period when enrollment was open to them and for persons who re-enrolled after dropping out.

Income Tax. Reinstituted for persons 65 and older the income tax provisions limiting medical expense deductions to amounts in excess of 3 percent of adjusted gross income and drug expenses in excess of 1 percent. (Under existing law, the limits applied only to persons under 65.)

Provided a separate income tax deduction for one-half of the cost of premiums on medical care insurance, with the deduction not to exceed $150 a year.

Removed all ceilings on income tax deductions for medical expenses. (Existing law provided a $10,000 ceiling for a single taxpayer, $20,000 for a married taxpayer or a single disabled taxpayer 65 and over and $40,000 for a married disabled taxpayer 65 and over.)

Administration. Provided that the HEW Secretary would contract with private carriers to perform the major administrative functions, such as determining rates of payments and disbursing funds.

KERR-MILLS PROGRAM

Provided a new title (XIX) to the Social Security Act to combine all the medical provisions for the needy covered in five titles of the existing Act.

Coverage. Extended the Medical Assistance for the Aged (MAA) program for the indigent aged to needy persons under the dependent children, blind and permanently and totally disabled programs (dependent children under 21 must be covered by July 1, 1967); if a state so provided, also made eligible for medical aid needy children who did not qualify for public assistance. Existing provisions of the Act covering medical assistance programs would terminate upon adoption of the new program by a state but not later than Dec. 31, 1969. The MAA program for the "medically needy" aged not on public assistance continued to be optional with the states, but if a state adopted the program it must also make it available to those in comparable need under the blind, disabled and dependent children programs.

Effective Date. Provided that the combined program would take effect Jan. 1, 1966.

Benefits. Required states participating in the new program to provide inpatient and outpatient hospital services, laboratory and x-ray services, skilled nursing home services and physicians' services. States could provide additional benefits.

Required that needy persons on the state programs be provided with assistance to meet the deductible amounts imposed by the federal basic health plan.

Means Test. Required states to provide a "flexible" income test to determine eligibility of the needy elderly for the program. The program could not be based on rigid income standards which adversely affected persons with large medical bills.

Financing. Increased the federal share over existing MAA matching so that states with an average per capita income would receive 55 percent (rather than the existing 50 percent) and states with the lowest level of per capita income could receive up to 83 percent (rather than 80 percent).

Provided a 75-percent federal share for compensation to and for the training of professional medical personnel used in the programs and a 50-percent federal share for other administrative expenses.

Provided that states would not receive additional federal funds unless they continued their own expenditures for the programs at their existing rate.

Administration. Provided that any state agency could be designated to administer the new program as long as the eligibility requirements were established by the agency administering the old-age assistance program.

CHILD HEALTH CARE

Increased federal funds for the maternal and child health services and for the crippled children's services by $5 million for fiscal 1966 and by $10 million in each succeeding fiscal year. This would bring total federal funds for each of the two programs to $45 million in fiscal 1966, $50 million in 1967, $55 million in 1968-69, and $60 million in 1970 and after.

Increased to the same authorizations as above the federal funds for the child welfare services program. Removed the $10 million limit on day-care services under the program.

Authorized $5 million in fiscal 1967, $10 million in fiscal 1968, and $17.5 million in each succeeding fiscal year for grants to schools for training personnel for care of crippled and mentally retarded children.

Authorized $15 million for fiscal 1966, $35 million for fiscal 1967, $40 million for fiscal 1968, $45 million for fiscal 1969 and $50 million for fiscal 1970 for grants to states, medical schools and hospitals to pay up to 75 percent of the cost of programs of providing comprehensive health care services, including dental work, to children in low-income families.

Authorized $2,750,000 in fiscal 1966 and in fiscal 1967 in grants to states to implement programs to combat mental retardation authorized by previous legislation.

Authorized $500,000 annually for fiscal 1966-67 for grants for research in emotional illness in children.

OASDI CHANGES

Benefits. Provided a 7-percent across-the-board increase in Old-Age, Survivors and Disability Insurance benefits, retroactive to Jan. 1, 1965, with a minimum

Social Security, Medicare Payroll Tax Increase

Here is a comparison of the combined health care payroll tax and Social Security payroll tax that workers under Social Security would pay annually under former (1961) law and under HR 6675. For a breakdown of the payroll tax to finance the basic health program and the increased Social Security tax to finance increased benefits, see Provisions. HR 6675 increased the taxable annual earnings base from the existing $4,800 to $6,600, effective Jan. 1, 1966.

monthly increase of $4. The monthly benefit range would be increased in 1965 from the existing $40-$127 to $44-$135.90. The maximum monthly payment would increase to $149.90 in 1966 and to $167.90 in 1971. The maximum benefits payable to a family would increase from the existing $254 to $312 in 1965 and to $368 in 1971. About 20 million persons would receive additional benefits of $1.4 billion in 1965.

Permitted children's insurance benefits for those eligible to continue from age 18 through 21 if the child was attending school full-time after reaching 18. An estimated 295,000 children were expected to receive annual benefits of $195 million under this provision, which was retroactive to Jan. 1, 1965.

Permitted widows to receive benefits at age 60, rather than 62, although at an actuarially reduced rate. The provision would take effect in September 1965. For 1966, it was estimated that 185,000 widows would take advantage of this provision and receive additional benefits of $165 million.

Provided that an insured worker would be eligible for disability benefits if his disability had lasted or was expected to last for 12 consecutive months. (Existing law required that the disability must be expected to result in death or be of long duration.) The new provision would take effect in September 1965. An estimated 60,000 disabled workers and dependents would be affected and would receive about $40 million in annual benefits.

Required that disability benefits be offset by payments under workmen's compensation laws when combined payments would exceed 80 percent of the beneficiary's average monthly pay before disability.

Provided reimbursement from Social Security funds to states providing vocational rehabilitation services to persons entitled to disability insurance benefits or a disabled child's benefits. The reimbursement funds could not exceed 1 percent of the Social Security disability benefits paid in the previous year.

Liberalized eligibility requirements to provide benefits to persons 72 and older with only three to five quarters of work in covered employment (instead of the existing minimum of six quarters). A worker or widow who qualified would receive a monthly benefit payment of $35, and a qualified wife would receive $17.50. About 355,000 persons would receive an estimated $140 million annually under the change, which would take effect in September 1965.

Authorized wife's and widow's benefits to a divorced wife 62 or older if she had been married to an eligible worker for at least 20 years. This provision would take effect in September 1965.

Continued benefits to widows 60 and over and to widowers 62 and over who remarry. (Under existing law, the benefits stopped when the survivor remarried.) The benefits for a remarried person would be 50 percent of the deceased spouse's primary insurance amount rather than the 82.5 percent received by widows and widowers not remarried. The change would take effect in September 1965.

Exempted the first $1,500 that an individual could earn a year without losing Social Security benefits; provided a $1 reduction in benefits for each $2 of earnings between $1,500 and $2,700 and for each $1 of earnings above $2,700. (Existing law exempted the first $1,200 and applied the $1-for-$2 ratio to earnings between $1,200 and $1,700 and the $1-for-$1 ratio to earnings above $1,700. It also exempted those 72 and over from the reductions.) Certain royalties from copyrights and patents would not be counted as earnings. The new provision would become effective in 1966 and would provide additional benefits of $295 million to about 750,000 persons.

Provided disability benefits to a person becoming blind before age 31 if he had worked in Social Security covered jobs for six quarters or half the time between 21 and the age when he became blind, whichever was greater. (Existing law provided that a blind person must have worked five years during the 10 years preceding his blindness.) Provided disability benefits to a person 55 and older who became blind if he was unable to work in his past occupation. (Existing law prohibited benefits to blind persons of all ages who were able to work in any substantial gainful job.) These provisions would benefit about 7 million persons at an annual cost of $5 million.

Coverage. Extended compulsory OASDI coverage to self-employed physicians in 1965 and to interns in 1966.

Provided that waiters and other employees receiving tips would pay Social Security taxes -- at the employee rate -- on tips received after 1965. The employer would withhold from the employee's wages the Social Security taxes and income taxes on tips reported by the employee if they exceed $20 a month. The employer would not be required to pay the matching employer Social Security tax on the tips.

Provided that farmers with annual gross earning of $2,400 (instead of the existing $1,800) or less could report either their actual net earnings or two-thirds of their gross earnings. Farmers with gross earnings above $2,400 would report actual net earnings if over $1,600 (rather than $1,200).

Added Alaska to the list of states which could bring state and local government employees under the Social Security system. Coverage was extended to certain hospital employees in California whose positions were removed from the state or a local government retirement system and to employees of the District of Columbia not already covered by a retirement system.

Exempted self-employed members of certain recognized religious sects -- such as the Amish -- from Social Security taxes and coverage. The sect must have been in existence since Dec. 31, 1950, and must teach conscientious opposition to acceptance of benefits from insurance or Social Security.

Financing. Increased the Social Security annual taxable base from the existing $4,800 to $6,600 beginning Jan. 1, 1966.

Increased the employer-employee tax rate from the existing 3.6 percent each to 3.85 percent in 1966; 3.90 percent in 1967-68; 4.40 percent in 1969-72; 4.85 percent in 1973 and thereafter. (For combined rate, including the health insurance rate, see chart on previous page.)

Increased the self-employed tax rate from the existing 5.4 percent to 5.8 percent in 1966; 5.9 percent in 1967-68; 6.6 percent in 1969-72; 7.0 percent in 1973 and thereafter.

Administration. Required the Social Security Administration, upon request by a local or state public assistance agency, to disclose the last known address of a person who had failed to support his or her destitute children under age 16. The information must be transmitted through a welfare agency, an actual public assistance case must be involved, a court order for support issued, and non-disclosure provisions must be complied with.

PUBLIC ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS

Revised matching formulas to increase the federal share under all state public assistance programs by an average of about $2.50 a month for the aged, blind and disabled and by an average of about $1.25 for needy children, effective Jan. 1, 1966. The additional federal funds would total about $150 million a year.

Extended the old-age and medical assistance programs to the needy aged and needy blind and disabled in mental or tuberculosis institutions, effective Jan. 1, 1966. Federal funds would be available only if states increased their support of mental health programs. This would cost the Federal Government an estimated $75 million a year.

Increased earnings exemptions under the Old-Age Assistance Program and the Aid to the Permanently and Totally Disabled Program so that a state could exempt the first $20 and one-half of the next $60 of a recipient's monthly earnings in deducting benefits. This would become effective Oct. 1, 1965.

Permitted states, in deducting benefits under the aid for dependent children program, to exempt up to $150 a month earned by dependent children under age 18 in the same home, with a $50 limit per child. The provision was retroactive to July 1, 1965.

Permitted states to disregard up to $5 a month in increased income, above other exemptions, before reducing public assistance payments.

Permitted states taking part in the Title XIX program to determine the federal share in the non-medical public assistance programs by using the matching formula provided in Title XIX for the medical assistance programs.

Non-Communist Pledge Required

In December, when application forms for participation in the basic health insurance plan were sent out, it was discovered that language in the medicare law required persons not covered by Social Security to swear that they were not members of Communist organizations. PL 89-97, in a section not discussed in the committee reports on the medicare bill or in floor debate, said the basic health plan was not available to any member of organizations "referred to in Section 210a (17) of the Social Security Act." The Section barred Social Security coverage for employees of Communist organizations.

Revelation of this previously unnoticed ban in PL 89-97 brought demands from some Members of Congress for repeal of the requirement for non-Communist affidavits.

PROPOSALS FOR FEDERAL HEALTH INSURANCE

The principle of compulsory national health insurance was suggested in 1935 in the report of President Roosevelt's Committee on Economic Security that formed the basis of the original Social Security Act. In later proposing the Social Security Act to Congress, Mr. Roosevelt said he was not recommending health insurance "at this time," but that studies of the issue were underway and "progress is being made." Although this statement seemed to indicate that the President would eventually recommend such a program, he failed to do so.

In 1943, Sens. Robert F. Wagner (D N.Y.) and James E. Murray (D Mont.) and Rep. John D. Dingell Sr. (D Mich.) introduced a bill calling for creation of a com-

'Medicare' Chronology

1935 -- The report of President Roosevelt's Committee on Economic Security, which formed the basis of the Social Security Act passed later that year, endorsed the principle of compulsory national health insurance.

1943 -- Sens. Robert F. Wagner (D N.Y.) and James E. Murray (D Mont.) and Rep. John D. Dingell Sr. (D Mich.) introduced the first "Wagner-Murray-Dingell" bill, proposing a broadening of the entire Social Security Act, including a compulsory national health insurance system financed by a payroll tax.

1945 -- President Truman's message on health legislation proposed a comprehensive, prepaid medical insurance plan for persons of all ages to be financed by raising the Social Security tax.

1949 -- Mr. Truman's health insurance proposals were among the hardest-fought of all issues before Congress in 1949, but no action resulted.

1954 -- President Eisenhower's plan to help meet the cost of health care proposed that the Government reinsure private insurance companies against unusually heavy losses on health insurance.

1957 -- Rep. Aime J. Forand (D R.I.) introduced a bill proposing that Social Security payroll taxes be raised to provide hospital care for needy old-age assistance beneficiaries.

1960 -- Democratic Presidential nominee John F. Kennedy (D Mass.), who had sponsored a Senate version of the Forand bill, announced in July 1960 that enactment of 'medicare' legislation was one of his chief legislative goals for the August session. Sen. Clinton P. Anderson (D N.M.) proposed a revised version of the Forand-Kennedy bill as a floor amendment to the omnibus Social Security bill. Opposed by President Eisenhower, the amendment was defeated 44-51 Aug. 23. The medical care provisions later added to the bill, and called the Kerr-Mills program after its sponsors, established a state-administered, flexible matching grant program for medical aid to needy persons not poor enough to qualify for public assistance.

1962 -- President Kennedy's 1961 medical care proposal, sponsored by Sen. Anderson and Rep. Cecil R. King (D Calif.), died in the House Ways and Means Committee. When Sen. Anderson offered a revised amendment to the Public Welfare Amendments bill, it was tabled (defeated) by a 52-48 Senate vote.

1963-64 -- Mr. Kennedy submitted his 1963 proposals for health care for the aged in a special message to Congress on "Aiding Our Senior Citizens." The Administration achieved a major but temporary victory Sept. 2, 1964, when a 'medicare' amendment to the Social Security Amendments bill passed the Senate, 49-44. The amendment, sponsored by Sen. Albert Gore (D Tenn.), and similar to the Administration bill, died in conference.

pulsory national health-insurance system for persons of all ages, to be financed through a payroll tax. They were to reintroduce similar plans in a number of succeedings Congresses, and the term "Wagner-Murray-Dingell" was for many years the common tag for what, in a more limited form, eventually became known as "medicare".

A compulsory national health insurance system financed through the Social Security System was proposed by the Social Security Board in 1944, but was not supported by President Roosevelt. However, several months after President Truman took office in 1945, he endorsed a Social Security health care plan for persons of all ages which was introduced by Sens. Wagner and Murray and Rep. Dingell. Hearings were held on the plan in succeeding years, but no action was taken and, with Republicans in control of both chambers of Congress in 1947-48, there was no chance for enactment.

After President Truman's upset 1948 election, with Democrats in control in both chambers, pressure from Northern Democrats, labor and liberal groups for national health insurance reached a high point. Hearings in 1949 on the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill produced bitter controversy with heavy lobbying on both sides of the issue and charges of socialized medicine from the American Medical Assn. (See lobbying section, p. 246) The proposal was not acted on, but the fight served to focus public attention on the issue.

The 1949 controversy convinced many supporters of national health insurance that there was not sufficient public support for the Truman-backed plan. Some backers suggested that as an immediate first step the Social Security System be expanded to pay for the hospitalization costs of persons eligible for Social Security retirement benefits and their dependents. This proposal was endorsed by Federal Security Administrator Oscar R. Ewing in 1952 and embodied in bills introduced by Sen. Murray and Reps. Dingell and Emanuel Celler (D N.Y.). However, national health insurance lost Administration support when President Eisenhower took office in 1953; during his election campaign he had labeled such proposals "socialized medicine." Mr. Eisenhower proposed an alternative plan to reinsure insurance companies against heavy losses on health insurance, but it was opposed by the AMA, some insurance companies and by backers of national health insurance, and got nowhere.

In 1957, the Social Security approach to health care for the elderly became associated with the name of Rep. Aime J. Forand (D R.I.). Forand introduced a bill (HR 9467), for which organized labor began a public campaign, proposing that the Social Security payroll tax be raised and the additional proceeds used to pay for up to 120 days of combined hospital and nursing-home care and necessary surgery for aged Social Security beneficiaries. There was no action by Congress, but the Forand bill began to draw increasing public interest. By 1960 it had become a major political issue.

House Committee Rejects Forand Bill

The 1960 fight got underway early in the year during House Ways and Means Committee hearings on Social Security Act amendments. On March 31, the Committee voted 17-8 (D 7-8; R 10-0) to table (kill) the Forand proposal. Democrats voting to kill the Forand bill were Committee Chairman Wilbur D. Mills (D Ark.) and six other Southerners. In August, Senators tried to add the proposal to the House-passed Social Security bill (HR 12580) on the Senate floor. Backed by Democratic Presidential nominee John F. Kennedy, the proposal was rejected on a 44-51 roll call (D 43-19; R 1-32). (For voting, see 1960 Almanac p. 515)

As a substitute for the Forand plan, Congress in 1960 did enact a complicated new federal-state matching grant (known as the Kerr-Mills program) designed to encourage the states to aid the "medically needy" elderly -- persons not poor enough to qualify for Old-Age Assistance but judged too poor to meet their medical bills. (See p. 245) The Kerr-Mills program was a stripped-down version of a 1960 Eisenhower Administration recommendation which it had labeled the "medicare" program. Somehow, in the succeeding year, the tag "medicare" was transferred to the Democrats' proposal for health care for the aged through Social Security.

Social Security health care was an issue in the 1960 Presidential campaign. Shortly after his inauguration in 1961, President Kennedy proposed to Congress a revised version of the Forand plan. The new proposal did not provide for payment of surgical services. It called for Social Security coverage of 90 days of hospital care (with a small deductible) and extensive nursing-home care and home health services. Rep. Forand had retired, and the new bill was introduced by Rep. Cecil R. King (D Calif.) and Sen. Clinton P. Anderson (D N.M.).

From 1961 through 1964, the King-Anderson bill was an annual Presidential proposal. A revenue-raising measure, the bill had to originate in the House Ways and Means Committee, where the Forand plan had been killed, 17-8, in 1960. During this period the Administration took every opportunity to fill Ways and Means vacancies with medicare supporters. By 1963 the margin of opposition on the Committee shrank to 13-12, but influential Chairman Mills stood solidly against the plan and Administration efforts to get a clear majority failed.

Sen. Anderson tried in 1962 to add a revised version of the plan to a Public Welfare Amendments bill (HR 10606). The new version blanketed into the program aged persons who were not entitled to Social Security, with costs to be paid from general revenues. For the first time, it earmarked funds collected to finance the medicare program to a trust fund set up separately from the regular Social Security trust funds. In a dramatic roll call that produced one of the year's major defeats for the Kennedy Administration, Senate Republicans and Southern Democrats united to table (kill) the Anderson amendment on a 52-48 (D 21-43; R 31-5) vote. (For voting, see 1962 Almanac p. 670)

The Senate again voted on medicare in 1964, and this time passed it on a 49-44 (D 44-16; R 5-28) roll call. (For voting, see 1964 Almanac p. 715) The plan, offered as an amendment to a House-passed bill (HR 11865) raising Social Security retirement benefits by 5 percent, was sponsored by Sen. Albert Gore (D Tenn.). It was very similar to the bill introduced by King and Anderson at the outset of the 88th Congress, covering all of the aged and providing an option of 45, 90 or 180 days of hospitalization with varying deductibles. Following Senate passage, HR 11865 died in conference when a majority of House conferees opposed any medicare plan and a majority of Senate conferees held firm in favor. The 5-percent Social Security increase died along with medicare as word reportedly came down from the White House that a raise in the Social Security tax for retirement benefits in 1964 would make Congress loath to raise the tax again to finance medicare in 1965. As the 1964 bill died, President Johnson spoke of hopes for a mandate in the November election, and pledged that he would try again for medicare in 1965.

Social Security Programs

The 1935 Social Security Act, the most important welfare legislation ever passed by Congress, contained a number of programs, all of which were amended and enlarged during succeeding years. Following is a brief discussion of those programs which were amended in 1965 by HR 6675 -- PL 89-97, whose formal title was the Social Security Amendments of 1965.

Old-Age Insurance. The most important program established by the original Social Security Act was old-age insurance, a giant national pension system financed by a federal payroll tax imposed equally on employers and employees. At first the program covered only industrial and some white-collar workers, but over the years it was expanded so that, by 1965, 15 million of the 18.2 Americans aged 65 or over were eligible for Social Security. Among the most important changes were: (1) 1939 amendments bringing dependents and survivors of covered workers under the system; (2) 1950 amendments extending coverage to the self-employed and agricultural, domestic and state and local government workers; (3) 1956 amendments adding a disability insurance system for the long-term and permanently disabled. In 1956 the name of the program became Old-Age, Survivors and Disability Insurance (OASDI). In addition to enlarging the scope of the system, Congress through the years steadily eased eligibility requirements. As the cost of living rose, benefits were increased. The maximum per person monthly benefit in 1940 (the first year benefits were paid) was $85; in 1964 the maximum benefit was $127. The last benefits increase before 1965 was in 1958. Congress in 1964 passed a bill increasing benefits by 5 percent, but it died when conferees became deadlocked over a medicare amendment added in the Senate. (See preceding page)

OASDI Financing -- The original Social Security Act provided a tax of 1 percent each for employers and employees on the first $3,000 of annual earnings. Through the years, as benefits increased, the tax and wage base were steadily increased also. The last increase in the wage base was made in 1958, when it rose to $4,800. In 1961 the employer-employee tax was increased to 3.6 percent, and was scheduled to rise to 4.1 percent in 1966. (See chart p. 241)

The Social Security Act set up a special trust fund to receive the proceeds of the payroll tax, and a second fund was established when the disability insurance system was added. Assets of the trust funds were required to be invested in federal securities of various types. Because the payroll tax could reasonably be expected to last into the indefinite future, it was not necessary for either trust fund to maintain full reserves, as required of a private insurance fund which had to be able to meet future obligations with no certainty that income from premiums would continue at any given rate. Therefore, the Social Security funds were considered to be actuarially in balance (that is, in sound financial condition) if expected income from the tax plus reserves and interest were estimated to be adequate to cover expected outlays at present and into the indefinite future. The 1965 annual report of OASDI trustees said long-range cost estimates indicated that the OASI program was in close actuarial balance, but that the disability trust fund would need a slight increase in annual income to remain in sound condition.

Public Assistance. The original Social Security Act also set up three charity programs designed to aid the indigent aged (OAA), blind (AB) and dependent children (ADC). These programs were to be administered by the states, state participation was optional, and the federal authorization for matching grants was open-end. During the postwar period a fourth program, aiding the disabled (APTD), was added in 1950. This period saw a steady increase in the federal matching share of total program costs and introduction of formulas under which federal reimbursements to the states varied in accord with state per capita income. The last increase in federal matching for the Aid to Dependent Children Program was made in 1958. Federal matching for the other three public assistance programs was raised in 1962. (See Congress and the Nation p. 1273 ff.)

Kerr-Mills -- An important aspect of the evolution of public assistance programs was provision for medical care of the indigent through a system of vendor payments (federal reimbursement to the states for medical aid outlays). The vendor payment system was established in the Social Security Amendments of 1950. In 1960, the so-called Kerr-Mills bill (named for Sen. Robert S. Kerr (D Okla.) and House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Wilbur D. Mills) increased federal matching for vendor payments for medical care under the existing Old-Age Assistance program. In addition, it created a new program called Medical Assistance for the Aged (MAA) under which the Federal Government would reimburse the states for 50 to 80 percent of their costs in providing medical care for the "medically needy" aged. The "medically needy" were defined as persons not poor enough to qualify for OAA, but judged too poor (by a means test) to pay their medical costs. State participation was optional. This program was endorsed by the American Medical Assn., and an important aspect of the campaign for medicare in succeeding years was the debate on the adequacy of the MAA program to aid the elderly. Opponents of medicare insisted that it was a preferable substitute, and that medicare would simply aid the rich who did not really need it. Medicare supporters objected to what they termed the program's "degrading" means test, to the fact that the program was optional with the states and to the wide leeway given the states to fix eligibility requirements.

Child Welfare Programs. One title of the 1935 Social Security Act contained three separate grant programs to meet health and welfare needs of children. These were: (1) the Maternal and Child Health program providing grants to states for pre-natal clinics and related services; (2) the Crippled Children's Services program, providing grants to the states for locating, diagnosing and treating crippled children; and (3) the Child Welfare Services program, authorizing grants for state welfare services for neglected and delinquent children in rural areas only. After initiation of the programs, state matching requirements were imposed, and in 1958 Congress removed the rural limitation from the child welfare services program. Initial annual authorizations for the programs had been $3.8 million for Maternal and Child Health, $2,850,000 for Crippled Children's Services and $1.5 million for Child Welfare Services. These amounts were increased eight times between 1935 and 1963. The last increase provided that annual grant authorizations for the Maternal and Child Health and Crippled Children's Services programs would be raised to $50 million each by 1970, and the annual authorization for Child Welfare Services would rise to $50 million by fiscal 1969. (Continued on next page)

Many Groups Active in Lobbying on Medical Care Issue

Over the years, the Social Security health care dispute was one of the most fiercely lobbied issues to come before Congress. The lobbying involved not only attempts to convince and pressure Congressmen in Washington, D.C., through visits by agents of interested organizations, but also attempts to convince the public, one way or the other, by means of radio and television broadcasts, public meetings and rallies, and repeated advertising campaigns in newspapers and magazines.

Preeminent among opponents of a compulsory national health insurance system was the American Medical Assn., which waged a vigorous and unflagging campaign right up to enactment. Other consistent opponents were the insurance industry and business groups such as the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S. Although the proposal was never tested in the House until 1965, for years it was generally assumed that most Republican and Southern Democratic Members could be numbered among the opponents.

No one organization was as important in support of a medicare program as the AMA was in opposition. However, the AFL-CIO worked ceaselessly for the program from 1957 until final passage. Other labor groups and public welfare organizations also lobbied for the program, and a vote for its enactment was usually a campaign pledge of Northern Democratic Members of Congress. Organizations such as the National Council of Senior Citizens and the Ad Hoc Physicians' Committee for Health Care for the Aged through Social Security were set up specifically to work for enactment of a medicare bill.

While representatives of both sides of the issue had some very specific reasons for their stands, there was also a broader, ideological question behind the dispute. The question was this: Should the federal role be limited to assisting the indigent, by means of federal grants to the states under the public assistance (charity) programs? Or should the Federal Government assume a broader responsibility, and undertake to pay for the medical and hospital costs of the entire population, or at least specified age groups, without regard to the financial status or ability-to-pay of the aid recipient? In arguing for a narrow federal role in health care, the AMA and conservative groups called for a federal policy of encouraging the growth of voluntary, private health insurance plans while providing federal health care aid only to those who really needed it -- namely, destitute or low-income persons qualifying under state welfare programs. Responding to this argument, Congress in 1950 for the first time authorized federal grants to the states to cover state costs for medical care of persons receiving public assistance (charity) aid. The terms of federal aid, particularly for state medical care of the indigent or nearly indigent elderly charity client, were substantially liberalized by Congress in 1960 and 1962. (See preceding page)

Backers of a national health insurance program countered that a compulsory national plan was necessary because private insurance companies, with high premiums for health insurance for the elderly, could not handle the job; and a state charity approach was demonstrably unsatisfactory because it helped only the poorest and because the states failed to program adequate benefits.

1949-50 Campaign. One of the great early public clashes on the issue occurred in 1949-50, after President Truman repeated his earlier requests for compulsory national health insurance for persons of all ages, to be financed by a federal payroll tax.

Hearings on bills embodying the Truman requests produced bitter controversy and charges of socialized medicine from the AMA.

Leading the 1949 campaign for the Truman proposals was the Committee for the Nation's Health, an ad hoc organization whose leaders included Eleanor Roosevelt, Mrs. Albert Lasker, Chester Bowles, Russell Davenport, AFL President William Green and CIO President Philip Murray, attorney Abe Fortas (later a Supreme Court Justice), Mrs. Leon Keyserling (later head of the Women's Bureau), and Robert F. Wagner Jr. (later the Democratic mayor of New York City, son of the Senator). Organizations recorded in favor included the AFL, CIO, Americans for Democratic Action, Physicians Forum, National Farmers Union, American Veterans Committee, Consumers Union, the railroad unions and American Assn. of Social Workers.

The leading opponent of the Truman proposals was the American Medical Assn. Other groups opposed were the American Dental Assn., American Pharmaceutical Assn., Blue-Cross-Blue Shield Commissions, Chamber of Commerce of the U.S., Committee for Constitutional Government, American Legion, American Farm Bureau Federation, National Grange, General Federation of Women's Clubs, Health Insurance Council and Health and Accident Underwriters Conference.

Supporters of the proposal took the general position that federal health insurance would relieve low-income persons of a crushing burden of health costs occurring when catastrophic and long-term illnesses struck, particularly in the case of older persons suffering terminal illnesses.

The AMA opposition, on the other hand, was based on fears of Government interference in medical practice. A nationwide AMA publicity campaign, masterminded by the California public relations firm of Whitaker and Baxter, warned the nation that national health insurance would mean "socialized medicine."

The insurance industry opposition to national health insurance was based primarily on fears that the Government would invade the insurance field, "competing" directly with private firms for business and possibly eventually widening the general scope of the types of federal insurance provided. Some business groups feared the increases in payroll taxes. The opposition of the Committee for Constitutional Government, American Farm Bureau Federation and some other groups, on the other hand, was primarily ideological, arising from fears of excessive growth of the Federal Government and federal entry into fields traditionally reserved for the states or private initiative.

Mr. Truman's compulsory national health insurance proposals were among the hardest fought of all issues before Congress in 1949 and 1950. When, in the end, the bloc opposed to Mr. Truman won out, and there was no action on his requests in either chamber of Congress, the AMA's campaign against "socialized medicine" was generally credited with being a major factor in the outcome.

The campaign was costly. According to reports filed by the AMA with the Clerk of the House under the 1946

Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act, the AMA spent $1,522,683 in 1949 and $1,326,078 in 1950 for lobbying purposes, the great bulk of it for the campaign against the Truman medical care proposals. These were the two highest lobby spending reports ever filed by any organization.

1957-65 Campaign. Following the defeat of the Truman proposals, the medical care issue faded from public view for a while. In 1957, however, the AFL-CIO began a strong campaign for a Social Security health care for the aged bill (HR 9467) sponsored by Rep. Aime J. Forand (D R.I.). Most of the same groups which had backed Mr. Truman's broader earlier proposals got behind the Forand bill. The AMA, as in the past, became the chief opponent.

There then began a prolonged campaign on the issue. A new factor came into play when, in 1961, several persons who had led the Senior Citizens for Kennedy political group during the previous year's Presidential campaign set up a National Council of Senior Citizens for Health Care Through Social Security, headed by Forand, who had retired from Congress. The new group sought to activate the political voice of the nation's 16 million and more elderly persons (65 or over), and so force through the Forand proposals.

Lobbying for and against the proposal reached a peak in late 1964 and 1965, although the massive Democratic victory in the 1964 elections made its passage almost a foregone conclusion in the 89th Congress.

The groups most actively working for the bill were the AFL-CIO and several independent unions; the National Council of Senior Citizens; the Group Health Assn. of America (spokesman for community group health service plans); the National Farmers Union's Senior Citizens Council; the National Medical Assn. (an organization of 5,000 Negro physicians); the American Nurses' Assn.; the Ad Hoc Physicians' Committee for Health Care for the Aged through Social Security (founded in 1962), headed by Dr. Caldwell Esselstyn and including among its members the famous baby doctor Benjamin Spock; the Social Welfare Council of the National Council of Churches; the National Conference of Catholic Charities; the National Social Welfare Assembly; the American Public Health Assn.; the American Public Welfare Assn.; the Women's Division of Christian Service of the Methodist Church Board of Missions; the National Council of Jewish Women; the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds; the Family Service Assn.; the National Assn. of Social Workers, and Americans for Democratic Action.

Leading opponent of the bill was, once again, the American Medical Assn., which lobbied both in the nation's capital and at the grass roots, unloosing two major nationwide publicity campaigns in newspapers, radio and television broadcasts. (The AMA reported spending $951,570 in the first quarter of 1965 to oppose the bill, chiefly for broadcasts and advertisements; it was the third highest amount ever recorded for lobby spending, exceeded only by the AMA's spending in 1949-50.) Much of the AMA spending in the first quarter of 1965 was for publicity for its own, alternative medical care bill (the "eldercare" plan -- see next page).

In the second quarter of 1965, shortly before the Senate vote on the medicare bill, AMA ran advertisements in about 100 major daily newspapers opposing the Administration-backed bill. The advertisements said passage of the bill would mean "lower quality medical care" and urged the public to "let your Senators, your Congressman and the President know your views on this vital issue." The AMA reported that its spending for lobbying purposes in the second quarter of 1965 amounted to $152,929, and for the third quarter, to $47,654. This brought its lobbying total for the first nine months of 1965 to $1,152,153.

Other major opponents reported as actively working against the bill in 1964-65: the Chamber of Commerce of U.S. and state chambers of commerce and junior chambers; state associations of manufacturers; some drug companies, many of whose salesmen, according to one source, included statements against the bill in speeches made to local trade groups and community organizations; the American Farm Bureau Federation and National Grange; and insurance organizations, particularly the Health Insurance Assn., which was reported as particularly active. Blue Cross in 1964 said it favored having the Government provide funds to enable individuals to purchase Blue Cross coverage, instead of the plan in the Social Security medical care bill.

Leading Groups Active in Politics

The top pressure groups active on the medicare issue carried their campaigns into a number of Congressional elections.

The AMA set up a political arm, the American Medical Political Action Committee (AMPAC), to receive voluntary contributions which were then used to support candidacies in Congressional races of persons favorable to the AMA position on the medical care bill and/or other legislation. AMPAC, which began its first full year of action in 1962, also sponsored educational courses. It received $301,311 in 1964 (only a portion of total resources; state units of AMPAC raised additional funds, the total of which was not made public). An AMPAC spokesman told CQ that in several campaigns AMPAC funds were used primarily to support House Ways and Means Committee members who had opposed the Social Security health care bill in the past.

The AFL-CIO, through its Committee on Political Education (COPE), a political organization supported by voluntary contributions, conducted hard campaigns in 1958, 1960 and subsequent years to defeat opponents of the Social Security health care bill, particularly on the Ways and Means Committee. In the 1964 primaries and elections to federal offices (Congress, the Presidency), COPE made contributions of about $900,000.

Rep. Forand (D R.I.) retired from Congress at the end of the 1960 session and in 1961 became the first head of the National Council of Senior Citizens. The Council in subsequent years received part of its support from the Democratic party.

From 1963-65, the Council's budget ran about $150,000 to $160,000 annually. About two-thirds of this came from dues and contributions by affiliated organizations. The remainder, a third of the budget or somewhat more, was supplied in recent years by donations from the Democratic party and the AFL-CIO -- a fact which led Dr. F.J. L. Blasingame of the AMA to charge June 12 that the Council was "nothing more than a lobbying appendage of the Democratic National Committee and the AFL-CIO."

The Democratic party contributed about $25,000 to the Council in 1964 and contributed $15,000 in the early months of 1965, according to a party spokesman. AFL-CIO convention records for 1963 show AFL-CIO contributions of $9,000 to the Council in fiscal 1962 and $22,000 in 1963. An AFL-CIO spokesman said the figure for fiscal 1964 was $24,000.

President Johnson, AMA and Republican Leaders Submit Bills

President Johnson's first special message to the 89th Congress, transmitted Jan. 7, dealt with health legislation. In the message he called 1965 the year "when, with the sure knowledge of public support, the Congress should enact a hospital insurance program for the aged.... In this way, the spectre of catastrophic hospital bills can be lifted from the lives of our older citizens." (For text, see p. 1383)

ADMINISTRATION BILL

The Administration's hospital care bill was the first measure introduced in the House and Senate in the new Congress (thus it was designated HR 1 and S1). It was introduced in the House by Rep. Cecil R. King (D Calif.) and in the Senate by Clinton P. Anderson (D N.M.), the chief sponsors of the proposal since 1961. Major provisions:

Eligibility -- HR 1 and S 1 called for a compulsory program to cover all persons 65 and older, except Government workers with federal insurance and certain aliens.

Benefits -- "Medicare" would provide: (1) 60 days of hospital care in each benefit period, with the patient paying the national average cost of one day's care (about $40); (2) 60 days of post-hospital care in each benefit period in facilities having arrangements with hospitals for the transferring of patients; (3) 240 home health-care visits (such as by a nurse) a year; (4) outpatient hospital diagnostic services (such as X-ray and laboratory services) with the patient in each 30-day period paying an amount (about $20) equal to one-half the deductible for inpatient hospital benefits. The post-hospital care would become effective Jan. 1, 1967, and the other benefits July 1, 1966. A new benefit period would not start until 90 days had elapsed during which the patient was in neither a hospital nor a post-hospital facility. The 90 days would not have to be consecutive but would have to fall within a period of not more than 180 consecutive days.

Certain medical costs (such as anesthetics) and drug costs in the hospital and post-hospital facilities would be covered but not medical and drug expenses incurred outside these facilities.

(The benefits provisions differed chiefly from past Kennedy-Johnson medicare proposals in providing a flat 60 days of hospital care in each benefit period. Previous Administration bills had permitted a benefit option of 180, 90 or 45 days, with varying deductibles.)

Financing -- The plan would be financed mainly by an increase in the Social Security tax rate. The rate for the employee and the employer would be raised from the existing 3.6 percent to 4.25 percent in 1966-67; 5.0 percent in 1968-70; and 5.2 percent in 1971 and thereafter. The rate for the self-employed would be raised from the existing 5.4 percent to 6.4 percent in 1966-67; 7.5 percent in 1968-70; and to 7.8 percent in 1971 and thereafter. The taxable annual earnings base would be increased from the existing $4,800 to $5,600, effective Jan. 1, 1966. The maximum amount of the employee's Social Security tax going to the health care program would be $25.20 a year. General revenues would finance the program for elderly people not receiving Social Security benefits.

Administration -- The program would be administered by the Social Security System and financed by a separate trust fund within the system. This fund would receive a certain portion of the Social Security taxes and the contribution from general revenues.

Two new provisions were put in the Administration's bill to meet the objections that the program would endanger the regular Social Security funds. The actuarial estimates of the health insurance fund were based on the assumption that hospital costs would rise faster than earnings for the next 10 years. The estimates in previous Administration bills were based on a five-year period. The second change in the new "medicare" plan called for that portion of the Social Security tax going into the health care trust fund to be listed separately on the W-2 income tax forms.

Total Cost -- Administration officials said the program would cost about $2 billion in its first full year of operation. About $200 million of this would come from general revenues.

Other Provisions -- HR 1 and S 1 also provided for a 7-percent increase in Social Security retirement benefits and an increase in the federal share in federal-state public assistance programs under the Social Security Act. The changes in the Social Security tax rates and taxable base would cover the increase in retirement benefits as well as the medicare plan. The benefit raises would be retroactive to Jan. 1, 1965.

The bill also authorized private insurance carriers to pool their resources to sell, on a non-profit basis, low-cost health insurance to the elderly to cover health costs not covered by the Administration's program. The bill brought self-employed physicians into the Social Security System and required that Social Security taxes be paid on tips.

ALTERNATIVE PROPOSALS

Herlong-Curtis-AMA Plan. With most political observers predicting that the landslide Democratic victory in the 1964 elections ensured final enactment of the medicare plan, the American Medical Assn., after publication of the Administration's 1965 bill, came forth with the most vigorous campaign of its years of opposition to the proposal.

In its last-ditch stand against medicare legislation, the AMA switched its major argument against the program. In previous years anti-medicare advertising had stressed that the plan would "lead the country down the road to socialized medicine." In 1965 the AMA apparently decided that its most effective argument against the bill was not that it would go too far, but that it would accomplish too little. A Jan. 2 Gallup Poll had shown that only 23 percent of persons questioned knew that fees of doctors, surgeons and dentists would not be covered under the Administration proposal. Of those who thought doctors' fees would be covered, 73 percent approved of the program. Of those who thought such fees would not be covered, 56 percent approved. Building on the idea of more comprehensive coverage, the AMA in January mobilized an intensive campaign of newspaper and television advertising attacking the Administration bill and proposing a new, alternative "eldercare" plan.

The eldercare plan was introduced Jan. 27 in the House (HR 3727, 3728) by Ways and Means Committee members Thomas B. Curtis (R Mo.) and A. Sydney Herlong Jr. (D Fla.) and Jan. 28 in the Senate (S 820) by John G. Tower (R Texas). It called for a voluntary medical insurance program which would be available to persons over 65 only if their state government signed up for the program. The coverage would vary, since it would depend upon the private insurance policy contracted for by each state, but it would include hospital, doctor and drug costs. The program would be financed by matching federal-state funds and by contributions from recipients for all, part or none of the premium costs, depending on their income and the state plans. Supporters estimated the program would cost $2.1 billion per year in federal and state funds.

Byrnes Bill. Instead of endorsing the AMA proposal, the House Republican Leadership set forth its own bill (HR 4351), introduced by the ranking minority member of the Ways and Means Committee, John W. Byrnes (R Wis.), Feb. 4. Like the eldercare plan, HR 4351 provided a voluntary health insurance program for all persons over 65 which would cover a large proportion of most costs of illness in old age. Unlike the eldercare plan, it would be administered by the Federal Government. It would be financed by a graduated premium contribution based on the individual's ability to pay, by contributions from states and by an annual appropriation from the Federal Government. Supporters estimated that the program would cost $3.4 billion annually with full participation.

Other Proposals. Numerous other medical care for the aged bills were introduced in Congress in early 1965. These included a proposal (S 395) by Sen. Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.) for a voluntary program for persons over 65 with incomes under $3,000 per year. Benefits would vary according to the individual's choice of one of three plans. The program would be administered by the states and financed by federal-state funds and graduated contributions by participants.

Rep. Frank T. Bow (R Ohio) Jan. 4 introduced a bill (HR 21) that would permit persons 65 or older with an annual income of not more than $4,000 to subtract up to $150 from their final federal tax bill to cover premiums for qualified private insurance coverage. The Government would pay all or part of the premiums for health insurance of those persons with a tax of less than $150.

Rep. Charles S. Gubser (R Calif.) Jan. 5 introduced a bill (HR 1031) that would provide federal general revenue funds to help states to buy private insurance policies for the elderly. Recipients would pay a small enrollment fee and would have the choice of four plans. The states would administer the program.

Reps. Stanley R. Tupper (R Maine) Feb. 17 and John V. Lindsay (R N.Y.) Feb. 25 introduced bills (HR 5081, 5491) that provided for a medical care program under Social Security, but the program would be voluntary.

Rep. Durward G. Hall (R Mo.), an AMA member, Jan. 13 introduced a bill (HR 2614) that would permit a 100-percent tax deduction for medical costs incurred by persons 65 and older. The bill would permit additional deductions for expenditures for catastrophic illness.

House Committee Expands Administration's Medicare Bill

The Ways and Means Committee, at its organizational meeting Jan. 25, 1965, decided by an undisclosed vote not to hold hearings on the Administration's medical care for the aged bill (HR 1). The Committee staff reported that a majority of members considered public hearings unnecessary because the Committee had held extensive hearings on a similar bill between Nov. 18, 1963, and Jan. 23, 1964, plus public hearings in preceding years. (1964 Almanac p. 232)

The Committee began holding executive sessions on HR 1 Jan. 27. The sessions continued regularly until March 24, when the Committee, by straight party-line vote (17 D - 8 R), ordered reported a clean, broader bill (HR 6675). HR 6675 was introduced the same day by Committee Chairman Wilbur D. Mills (D Ark.), who in past years had been the most influential opponent of medicare legislation. President Johnson March 24 called the Committee action "a tremendous step forward for all of our senior citizens." He praised the "hard-working" members of the Committee and added, "Chairman Mills deserves special credit for his statesmanlike leadership in working out, on a sound and practical basis, a solution to one of the most important problems which has been pending before the Congress for nearly 15 years."

ACTION-- HR 6675 was reported (H Rept 213) March 29. The 296-page bill included most of the hospital insurance and Social Security retirement provisions of HR 1. In addition, it contained a supplementary voluntary health plan for the aged covering physicans' fees and other costs not covered in the basic plan; expanded the Kerr-Mills medical assistance program to cover needy persons under the dependent children, blind and disabled programs; and increased the authorized funds for the maternal and various child health care programs and for all state public assistance programs. The supplementary plan was similar to provisions in the GOP-backed health care bill (HR 4351) introduced by the ranking minority member of the Ways and Means Committee, John W. Byrnes (R Wis.); the Kerr-Mills and other child health care provisions were similar to those in an Administration bill (HR 3699) introduced by Mills Jan. 27. (See next page)

The estimated cost of HR 6675 in its first full year was $6 billion, broken down as follows: $2.2 billion for the basic health care plan, $1 billion for the supplementary health care plan (based on 80-percent participation), $2.3 billion for increased Social Security cash benefits, and $500 million for the liberalization and expansion of the public assistance programs. To finance the Social Security retirement increases and basic medicare plan, the bill raised the taxable earnings base from the existing $4,800 to $5,600 in 1966 and $6,600 in 1971. Also, for the Social Security raise, it increased the employer-employee tax rate from 3.6 percent to 4.0 percent in 1966 and provided that this would rise in steps to 4.8 percent in 1973; for medicare, the bill imposed a tax of 0.35 percent in 1966, rising in steps to 0.8 percent in 1987.

Majority Views. The Democratic majority said the Committee had been concerned with the problem of medical care for the elderly "for a number of years." In 1960, it said, the Committee recommended that the Kerr-Mills program of federal-state medical assistance to the needy elderly should be undertaken to determine whether such a program could adequately meet the national need.

"Although your Committee believes that the Kerr-Mills legislation as a whole has been very beneficial to the needy aged in our country," the report said, "it has now concluded that the over-all national problem of adequate medical care for the aged has not been met to the extent desired under existing legislation because of the failure of some states" to implement the existing program fully. The majority said it had therefore "concluded that a more comprehensive federal program as to both persons who can qualify and protection afforded is required."

Most of the 264-page Committee report dealt with a technical explanation of the bill and the Committee's reasons for its actions. Some highlights of the majority views:

- The health care plans under HR 6675 would provide coverage of a quality that few older people could afford on their own. Most of the elderly would be expected to be covered by the programs.

- The earnings base of the payroll tax for the basic health insurance program would be the same as the Social Security tax so that record-keeping tasks of employers and the Government would not be increased, but there would be a "complete separation of hospital insurance financing and benefit payments...to assure that the hospital insurance program will in no way impinge upon the financial soundness of the Old-Age, Survivors and Disability Insurance trust funds." The report said the separation would be assured through such devices as separate trust funds and a separate statement of the hospital insurance tax on W-2 tax forms. Also, unlike the OASDI system, the hospital insurance system would be financed on the assumption of rising earnings levels and rising hospitalization costs (instead of level-earnings assumptions) and the estimates would be for a 25-year period rather than 75 years.

- "The bill specifically prohibits the Federal Government from exercising supervision or control over the practice of medicine, the manner in which medical services are provided and the administration or operation of medical facilities...The physician is to be the key figure in determining utilization of health services...It is a physician who is to decide upon admission to a hospital, order tests, drugs and treatments and determine the length of stay."

- The estimated cost of the health care programs under HR 6675 was "in long-range balance with contribution income."

- The need for an increase in Social Security cash benefits "is obvious," since the benefits were the major source of income for a majority of the 20 million recipients, and the last general benefit raise was in 1958.

- Self-employed doctors were "the only group of significant size" whose income was excluded from Social Security coverage, and there is "no valid reason why this single professional group should continue" to be excluded. The bill brought self-employed physicians under Social Security.

- The majority indicated it favored bringing federal employees under the Social Security system. However, the report said it was withholding recommendations on the matter because it had been advised by the Health, Education and Welfare Department that the Executive Branch was making a study of the federal retirement system and of "the proper role which should be played by Social Security" in the system. The study was expected to be completed by Dec. 1, 1965.

Minority Views. The Committee's eight Republicans endorsed the bill's provisions for Social Security cash benefits and public assistance programs -- many of which they said had been proposed by Republicans -- but they opposed the basic health care plan that would be financed through the Social Security system.

The Republicans recommended that HR 6675 be replaced by Byrnes' bill (HR 4351) to provide a voluntary health and hospital insurance plan financed by general revenue and contributions from participants. (See p. 249)

Highlights of the minority views:

- "We...fully support the concept that adequate health insurance should be made available to the aged at a reasonable cost. Such a program, however, should be voluntary. It should reflect ability to pay. Participation on the part of the Government should be financed out of the general revenues, and not by a regressive payroll tax."
- HR 6675 "would impose" a $35-billion "liability" on the present working force to finance the basic health care plan for those persons already 65 and older.
- Benefits under the original Administration bill (HR 1) were so inadequate that Democrats had to borrow from Repubican proposals to meet criticism of the original plan.
- HR 6675 would not provide coverage for two "basic concerns" of the aged: the cost of drugs and catastrophic illness. Both would be covered by HR 4351.
- ..."The so-called separation of the hospital benefits from the Social Security system of cash benefits...is purely illusory...A real threat to the integrity of the Social Security cash benefit system is inherent in the Committee bill."
- The minority recommended that the Kerr-Mills program be amended to provide additional federal matching funds to the states for purchasing private medical insurance for the aged. This concept was embodied in HR 3727, the "eldercare" plan of the American Medical Assn. (See p. 248)

Additional Views. Joel T. Broyhill (R Va.), a sponsor of the eldercare proposal, said he supported the minority views but he thought it "appropriate" to discuss "the superiority" of the eldercare bill over the Administration's medicare program.

He said he supported the eldercare program because it would be noncompulsory, be administered by the states, minimize Government management and would not require a regressive payroll tax or endanger the Social Security cash payments system.

Major Provisions and Changes from Administration Bill. Basic Health Care Plan -- As proposed in HR 1, the basic plan set forth in HR 6675 provided compulsory coverage for all persons over 65 except federal employees (already covered under a separate plan) and certain aliens. Coverage for persons not eligible for Social Security would be financed from general revenues.

But the Committee bill provided somewhat different (and generally fewer) benefits than had HR 1: the basic hospital coverage remained the same (60 days) but post-hospital (such as nursing home) care was changed from a flat 60 days to 20 days plus additional time for each day a person's hospital stay had been less than 60 days; the period of eligibility for outpatient hospital diagnostic services was reduced from 30 to 20 days; and the number of home health-care visits was reduced from 240 a year to 100 in a spell of illness. The employer-employee Social Security tax increases under HR 6675 were also higher than those proposed by HR 1: 0.35 percent in 1966 instead of 0.3 percent, rising to 0.8 percent in 1987 as opposed to 0.45 percent in 1969 and thereafter. HR 6675 also increased the taxable earnings base to $6,600 in 1971 while HR 1 took it only as far as $5,600 in 1966.

In the other major change in the Administration bill, HR 6675 removed from the basic plan coverage of the costs of hospital services of radiologists, pathologists, physiatrists and anesthesiologists and included such coverage in the supplementary plan (below).

Supplementary Plan -- The Committee bill created a voluntary additional plan which would pay for physicians' and surgical services, psychiatric costs on a limited basis, laboratory tests and prosthetic devices, and home health-care visits when the patient was not previously hospitalized. The plan would be financed by $3 monthly premiums from participants and by matching contributions from general federal revenues. Taxpayers of all ages were provided a tax deduction of one-half of medical insurance premiums, up to $250.

OASDI Changes -- OASDI changes were basically the same as those proposed in the Social Security law by HR 1: a retroactive 7-percent increase in retirement benefits; a new requirement that self-employed physicians and employees' tips be brought under the system and religious groups opposed to insurance (such as the Amish) exempted; liberalization of requirements for disability benefits; extension of insurance payments to certain children attending school to age 22 instead of 18. A number of minor changes were also instituted.

Kerr-Mills Expansion -- As proposed by the Administration in HR 3699, the bill Chairman Mills introduced Jan. 27 (see ACTION, above), HR 6675 brought together in one new title of the Social Security Act (XIX) all medical assistance provisions affecting the indigent aged, dependent children, blind and disabled. It extended the Kerr-Mills medical aid program for the needy aged to persons under the dependent children, blind and disabled programs. The maximum federal share of matching funds under the medical aid program was raised from 80 to 83 percent and the bill provided a more liberal "means test" to determine eligibility for the program.

Child Health, Other Benefits -- Also as proposed in HR 3699, HR 6675 increased federal funds for maternal and child health, crippled children and mental retardation programs and authorized grants to provide comprehensive health care and services for children in low-income families. It also increased the federal share for all state public assistance programs and removed the limitation on federal participation in public assistance to certain aged persons in tuberculosis and mental care hospitals.

RULE GRANTED ON HR 6675

The House Rules Committee April 6 cleared HR 6675 for floor action under a closed rule that limited debate to 10 hours and prohibited floor amendments. Reportedly, the Committee cleared the bill by a 10-5 vote with one Democrat, William M. Colmer (Miss.), voting with four Republicans against the rule and one Republican, H. Allen Smith (Calif.), voting with nine Democrats to send the bill to the floor.

House Passes Medicare for First Time in 20-Year Campaign

The House April 8 passed HR 6675 by a 313-115 roll-call vote as reported from Committee. It was the first time Social Security medical care legislation had been voted on by the House. On the passage vote, 65 Republicans joined 189 Northern Democrats and 59 Southern Democrats to vote for the bill, while two Northern Democrats and 40 Southern Democrats voted with 73 Republicans against passage. (For voting, see chart p. 950)

Before passage, the House rejected by a 191-236 roll-call vote (R 128-10; ND 3-188; SD 60-38) a motion by John W. Byrnes (R Wis.) to recommit HR 6675 to the Ways and Means Committee with instructions to substitute the text of a bill (HR 7057) introduced by Byrnes April 1.

In provisions dealing with Social Security retirement, Kerr-Mills, child health and public assistance benefits, Byrnes' bill and HR 6675 were identical. But HR 7057 contained no Social Security health care program. Instead, it proposed the voluntary, comprehensive program financed from general revenues and individual premiums that was in the bill (HR 4351) introduced by Byrnes Feb. 4. (See p. 249). The supplementary health program provided in HR 6675 was a limited version of this proposal.

During debate on the motion, Byrnes said his "primary concern" was to protect the Social Security cash-benefits system. "You can put in gimmicks that look like you are separating it, you can do all of the rationalization you want to, but you will still have them both (hospital and Social Security retirement funds) tied together," he said. Supporters of his bill also argued that it provided greater coverage than the Social Security bill (drugs and catastrophic illness) at slightly less cost.

Countering this argument, Chairman Mills April 7 said it was "beyond my comprehension that any of us today are brilliant enough to come forward with a method of providing more benefits to more people and having it cost less money." Mills also said he was "thoroughly convinced" that the hospital fund to finance the basic health program would be completely separate from other Social Security funds and that the hospital fund was actuarially sound.

Debate. In debate on the measure April 7-8, supporters said a medicare program was long overdue. They said HR 6675 provided the biggest structural changes in the Social Security program since 1950 and the most sweeping and costliest welfare program since the original Social Security law was enacted in 1935. Presiding over the House was Rep. John Dingell (D Mich.), whose late father had co-sponsored the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bills of the late 1940s. (See p. 243)

Opponents of HR 6675 gave general support to all provisions except those covering the health insurance programs, particularly the basic plan. Their chief contentions were that the plan was compulsory, would be financed by a "regressive" payroll tax and would endanger the current Social Security cash-benefits program. They also complained of what they called a "gag rule" prohibiting amendments and preventing separate votes on each section of the bill.

Highlights of debate:

April 7 -- Durward G. Hall (R Mo.) -- "The bill now before this House is a bill that was produced in executive session. No public hearings were held in the 89th Congress, thus denying the public and Members of the Congress the opportunity to become familiar with this multipaged bill."

Cecil R. King (D Calif.) -- "Protection against the health costs in old age is a logical and necessary extension of the retirement protection furnished by the present Social Security program."

Wilbur D. Mills (D Ark.) -- By give and take, the Ways and Means Committee and the Administration finally, "after all these years," were able "to develop a proposition that I could wholeheartedly and conscientiously, with every bit of the energy at my command, support. That has not been the case with reference to propositions in the past. ...I believe we have finally worked out a satisfactory and reasonable solution of an entire problem, not just a partial solution...."

Thomas B. Curtis (R Mo.) -- "The Congress in this instance is no longer a study and a deliberative body. This is a rubberstamp operation.... It is obvious that this House is not in a mood to debate and deliberate. The decision which was made outside of the well of the House, outside the deliberative process, is going to prevail."

Frank M. Karsten (D Mo.) -- "The Committee on Ways and Means in reporting this bill is carrying out the wishes of a great majority of the American people."

Jackson E. Betts (R Ohio) -- "Until now this Committee (Ways and Means) has been a bulwark which millions of people have relied on to stem the tide against oppressive increases of payroll taxes. Now that is over, and most of my constituents are fearful of the future."

James A. Burke (D Mass.) -- "The bill will... provide an immediate stimulus to the economy that will help us sustain our economic growth in the next several years."

April 8 -- House Speaker John W. McCormack (D Mass.) -- HR 6675 is an "historic measure" and "a fiscally responsible bill;" the Byrnes measure is "a fiscally irresponsible bill."

Majority Whip Hale Boggs (D La.) -- HR 6675 is "the most important piece of legislation" he had seen during his 22 years in Congress.

Martha W. Griffiths (D Mich.) -- HR 6675 is not a "rubberstamp" to the Administration but was a "better bill."

Frank T. Bow (R Ohio) -- "The good in the bill outweighs the bad."

William J. Randall (D Mo.) -- When the present opponents find out "the good things" in the bill, "they will never forgive those Members who are against the bill today."

Joe R. Pool (D Texas) -- "Let us not take this first step toward socialized medicine."

Sidney R. Yates (D Ill.) -- "If it takes a decade to perfect a medicare bill, then I say it has been a decade well spent, for the bill before us today is a remarkable example of legislative craftmanship. Perhaps the Roman poet Ovid was right when he wrote, 'Delay matures the tender grapes and ripens grass into lusty crops.' One by one, the criticisms and charges leveled against previous medicare bills have fallen by the wayside."

Tim Lee Carter (R Ky.) -- "As one of the last country doctors, I am not here to criticize medical care for the aged, but rather to support it. I ask my colleagues... to vote to recommit HR 6675, a bill which will within a few years cruelly overburden the Social Security System and the young workers with growing families, who will be forced to pay higher and higher Social Security taxes. By providing aid on the basis of need, the Byrnes proposal would assure that both federal and state dollars were providing the greatest amount of care where they are the most needed."

Provisions

As passed by the House, HR 6675 did the following (where provisions were identical in the House, Senate and final versions, details are given only in the final Provisions (p. 239):

BASIC HEALTH INSURANCE PLAN

Eligibility. Provided a basic health insurance plan for all persons 65 and older, except federal employees who retired after July 1, 1960, (and were thus eligible for the federal health program) aliens who had not been U.S. residents for 10 years and persons convicted of certain subversive crimes.

Benefits. Provided that the plan would pay:

- Inpatient hospital services for up to 60 days during each period of illness with the patient paying the first $40. Services covered would include those ordinarily furnished by a hospital for its inpatients except services of radiologists, anesthesiologists, pathologists and physiatrists.
- Post-hospital care for up to 20 days in each period of illness after at least three days in the hospital. Two additional days would be added to the 20 days for each day that the person's hospital stay was less than 60 days up to a maximum of 80 additional days. The post-hospital facility must have arrangements with a hospital for the timely transfer of patients and for furnishing medical information on the patients.
- Outpatient hospital diagnostic services with the patient paying the first $20 for diagnostic services provided by the same hospital during a 20-day period. It within 20 days after receiving such services, the individual became an inpatient in the same hospital, the $20 would be credited against the $40 he would have to pay as an inpatient.
- Up to 100 home health-care visits (such as by a nurse) after discharge from a hospital or extended-care facility and before the beginning of a new spell of illness.

Provided that the deductible amounts for inpatient hospital and outpatient diagnostic services would be increased if necessary to keep pace with increases in hospital costs but that no increases would be made before 1969.

Effective Dates. As in the final bill.

Financing. Provided a payroll tax identical to rates in the final bill.

Provided that the taxable earnings base would be increased from the existing $4,800 to $5,600 a year for 1966-70 and $6,600 in 1971 and thereafter.

Provided that general revenue would finance the plan for persons not covered by Social Security or the Railroad Retirement Act.

Provided that the payroll taxes and the general revenue for the plan would go to a separate Hospital Insurance Trust Fund in the Treasury.

Administration. Provided that the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare would have the main responsibility for administering the plan and that he would use appropriate state agencies and private organizations to assist in the administration.

Directed an Advisory Council be created to advise the Secretary on administration of the plan.

Provided for review by a hearing examiner on appeals to claims of $1,000 and more.

SUPPLEMENTARY MEDICAL CARE PLAN

Eligibility. Provided the same eligibility requirements as those for the basic plan (above).

Enrollment. Included the same provisions on enrollment as the final bill.

Provided that states could enroll and pay the premiums for their public assistance recipients.

Benefits. Provided that the plan would pay 80 percent of the costs after an annual deduction of $50 on the following services:

- Services of physicians, surgeons, radiologists, anesthesiologists, pathologists and physiatrists.
- Psychiatric services, with a 180-day lifetime limit.
- Up to 100 home health care services each calendar year.
- Other hospital medical and health services as in the final bill.

Effective Date. Provided that the benefits would be effective July 1, 1966.

Financing. Provided that enrollees would pay $3 monthly payments which would be matched by the Federal Government from general revenues. (Financing provisions were those in the final bill.)

Income Tax. Reinstituted for persons 65 or older income tax provisions limiting medical expense deductions to amounts in excess of 3 percent of adjusted gross income and drug expenses in excess of 1 percent.

Provided a separate income tax deduction for one-half of the cost of premiums on medical care insurance, with the deductions not to exceed $250 a year. (Removed the age requirement for income tax deductions on medical expenses of the disabled.)

Administration. Provided that the Secretary of HEW would contract with private carriers to carry out the major administrative functions.

KERR-MILLS PROGRAM

Provided a new title (XIX) to the Social Security Act to combine all the medical provisions for the needy that were previously in five titles of the Act.

Coverage. Extended the Medical Assistance for the Aged (MAA) program for the indigent aged to needy persons under the dependent children, blind and permanently and totally disabled programs and to persons who would become qualified for these programs. Current provisions of the Act covering medical assistance would terminate upon adoption of the new program by a state but not later than June 30, 1967.

Benefits. Required states participating in the program to provide inpatient and outpatient hospital services, laboratory and x-ray services, skilled nursing home services and physicians' service, by July 1, 1967. States could provide additional benefits. Existing law spelled out no minimum benefits.

Required that needy persons on the state programs be provided with assistance to meet the deductible amounts imposed by the federal basic health plan (see above).

Means Test. Required states to provide a "flexible" income test to determine eligibility of the needy elderly for the program. The program could not be based on rigid income standards which adversely affected persons with large medical bills.

Financing. Increased the federal share of the new program over the current MAA matching.

Provided that only states (not local communities) could put up non-federal matching funds after July 1, 1970. (Other financing provisions were the same in all versions of HR 6675.)

Administration. Provided that the new program would be administered by the same state agency administering the old-age assistance program. As under existing law, the state agency could delegate the medical aspects of the program to the state health agency.

CHILD HEALTH CARE

Increased federal funds for maternal and child health services and for crippled children's services by $5 million for fiscal 1966 and by $10 million in each succeeding fiscal year.

Authorized $5 million in fiscal 1967, $10 million in fiscal 1968, and $17.5 million in each succeeding fiscal year for grants to schools for training personnel for care of crippled and mentally retarded children.

Authorized $15 million for fiscal 1966, $35 million for fiscal 1967, $40 million for fiscal 1968, $45 million for fiscal 1969 and $50 million for fiscal 1970 for grants to states, schools and hospitals to pay up to 75 percent of the cost of programs of providing comprehensive health care services, including dental work, to children in low-income families.

Authorized $2.7 million in fiscal 1966 and in fiscal 1967 in grants to states to implement programs to combat mental retardation authorized by previous legislation.

OASDI CHANGES

Benefits. Provided a 7-percent across-the-board increase in Old-Age, Survivors and Disability Insurance benefits, retroactive to Jan. 1, 1965, with a minimum monthly increase of $4.

Permitted children's insurance benefits, for those eligible, to continue from age 18 through 21 if the child was attending school full-time after reaching 18. The provision was retroactive to Jan. 1, 1965.

Permitted widows to receive benefits at age 60, rather than 62, although at an actuarially reduced rate. The provision would be effective about two months after the bill was enacted. For 1966, it was estimated that 185,000 widows would take advantage of this provision and receive additional benefits of $165 million.

Provided that an insured worker would be eligible for disability benefits if he had been totally disabled for six consecutive months. Existing law required that the disability must be expected to result in death or be of long duration. The new provision would become effective about two months after passage. Benefits would be payable during the sixth month of the waiting period. An estimated 155,000 disabled workers and dependents would be affected by the new provision and receive $105 million in additional annual benefits.

Liberalized eligibility requirements to provide benefits to persons 72 and older with only three to five quarters of work in covered employment, instead of the existing minimum of six quarters. A worker or widow who qualified would receive a monthly benefit of $35, and a wife who qualified would get $17.50. The provision would take effect about two months after enactment.

Increased the amount an individual was permitted to earn without losing Social Security benefits. Existing law exempted the first $1,200 a year in earnings and provided a $1 deduction in benefits for each $2 of earnings up to $1,700 and $1 for $1 above that amount. The new provision would apply the $1-for-$2 ratio on earnings between $1,200 and $2,400 and the $1-for-$1 ratio to earnings above $2,400. Certain royalties from copyrights and patents would be exempted from being counted as earnings. The new provision would become effective in 1966, and would provide additional annual benefits of $65 million.

Authorized wife's and widow's benefits to a divorced wife 62 or older if she had been married to an eligible worker for at least 20 years. The provision would be effective about two months after enactment.

Coverage. Extended compulsory OASDI coverage to self-employed physicians for taxable years ending after Dec. 31, 1965, and interns beginning Jan. 1, 1966.

Provided that farmers with annual gross earnings of $2,400 (instead of the current $1,800) or less could report either their actual net earnings or two-thirds of their gross earnings. Farmers with gross earnings above $2,400 would report actual net earnings if over $1,600 (rather than $1,200).

Provided that Social Security taxes would be paid on tips received by employees, effective in 1966, unless the tips did not amount to at least $20 a month. The employer would be required to withhold Social Security and income taxes on tips and would pay to the Government his own and the employee's share of the Social Security tax.

Added Alaska and Kentucky to the list of states which may bring state and local government employees under the Social Security system. Coverage would be extended to certain hospital employees in California whose positions were removed from the state or a local government retirement system and to employees of the District of Columbia not already covered by a retirement system.

Exempted self-employed members of certain recognized religious sects -- such as the Amish -- from Social Security taxes and coverage. The sect must have been in existence since Dec. 31, 1950, and must teach conscientious opposition to acceptance of benefits from insurance or Social Security.

Financing. Increased the Social Security annual taxable earnings base from the existing $4,800 to $5,600 Jan. 1, 1966, and to $6,600 in 1971.

Increased the employer-employee tax rate from the existing 3.6 percent to 4.0 percent in 1966-68, 4.4 percent in 1969-72 and 4.8 percent in 1973.

Increased the self-employed tax rate from the existing 5.4 percent to 6.0 percent in 1966-68, 6.6 percent in 1969-72 and 7.0 percent in 1973.

PUBLIC ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS

Increased the federal share under all state public assistance programs by an average of about $2.50 a month for the needy, blind and disabled and by an average of about $1.25 for needy children, effective Jan. 1, 1966.

Extended the old-age and medical assistance programs to the needy aged and needy blind and disabled in mental or tuberculosis institutions, effective Jan. 1, 1966.

Increased earnings exemptions under the old-age assistance program so that a state might exempt the first $20 (instead of $10) and one-half of the next $60 (instead of $40) of a recipient's monthly earnings in deducting benefits. This would become effective Jan. 1, 1966, and would cost the Federal Government about $1 million the first year.

Senate Committee Holds Hearings on HR 6675 and Revises Bill

COMMITTEE -- Senate Finance.

HELD HEARINGS -- April 29-May 18 on HR 6675.

TESTIMONY -- April 29 -- Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Anthony J. Celebrezze urged enactment of HR 6675, calling it "truly a landmark bill." He said the measure would "make the most important contribution to security in old age since the Social Security program was enacted 30 years ago." Celebrezze said, "For older people, for widows and orphans, and for the disabled and their families, the payment of benefits where none is now available would turn despair into hope."

Most of Celebrezze's testimony dealt with the medical care provisions of HR 6675. He said that "despite commendable efforts by the private insurance industry," voluntary health insurance had not met the needs of the aged because "few of the aged can afford to pay the premiums which older people must be charged for broad health insurance protection." Nor, he said, did the solution lie in public assistance, which "can only provide for relief after the dependency has occurred." HR 6675, he said, "would serve as a base on which the aged could build supplementary health insurance...."

Secretary Celebrezze recommended one major change in the House bill. He opposed the House Committee's provision that transferred from the basic hospital insurance plan to the supplementary plan coverage of services furnished hospital patients by specialists in radiology, anesthesiology, pathology and physical medicine. Celebrezze said the Administration's primary concern was "that medical services furnished to hospital patients in these fields be covered under this bill in a way that is in accord with the practices that hospitals and the health professions have developed over the years." He said that services normally billed through hospitals should be covered under the hospital benefit plan, and those not paid "by or through the hospital" should be paid for under the supplementary plan.

May 3 -- Karl T. Schlotterbeck of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States endorsed provisions of HR 6675 which increased Social Security cash benefits, raised payroll taxes and extended coverage to self-employed physicians, interns and to certain employees of state and local governments. In addition, he urged Congress to extend Social Security coverage "to all employees of the Federal Government." He termed "unsound or not needed" provisions of the bill easing the requirements for eligibility for Social Security disability and retirement benefits and reducing the benefit for widows who elected to receive Social Security payments at age 60 instead of 62. With regard to the medical care provisions, Schlotterbeck said that while the Chamber of Commerce agreed that "some of the retired elderly have a problem of paying for needed hospital and related care," it opposed the methods proposed in the bill. He said that under the basic hospital insurance plan, benefits would be paid "for people 65 and over who are neither proven to be in need, nor presumed to be in need," but were "completely self-supporting...." He criticized the supplemental benefit program because "half the financial support would be financed like public relief with 'means test money'...but no means test would be applied."

Leslie J. Dikovics of the Council of State Chambers of Commerce urged the Committee to delete the medical care provisions of HR 6675. He said the provision of services rather than cash benefits for the elderly would "be deciding for these individuals how part of their monthly old age benefit must be spent." Dikovics said that improvement of existing Medical Assistance for the Aged programs and "the continuing expansion of private health insurance coverage" would make the bill's medical care proposals "unnecessary and unwise."

Unions Urge Greater Benefits

Nelson H. Cruikshank of the AFL-CIO said he "wholeheartedly" supported HR 6675, although he said improvements in the Social Security system proposed in the bill were "quite modest." He said the benefit increase "should...go much beyond the modest 7 percent provided in the bill," adding that the Advisory Council on Social Security in its 1965 report had recommended "a general benefit increase averaging 15 percent." Cruikshank also said he was concerned that the deductible provisions in the supplementary program "will, for a majority of older persons, constitute a real hardship."

Sidney Zagri of the Teamsters Union urged that aged citizens with annual incomes of $1,000 or less be excused from payment of deductible amounts under the medical care benefits proposed by the bill. Payment of these charges, he said, "will drive old people into medical indigency." Zagri also opposed administration of the medical insurance programs by voluntary associations. He said such groups were dominated by physicians, and that to appoint them administrators would be like "asking the fox to mind the hen house."

May 4 -- Sen. Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.) said he was "fundamentally opposed" to some features of HR 6675. He favored instead a bill which he had co-sponsored (S 395) which established a voluntary, state-administered health insurance program for low- and moderate-income aged persons.

Dr. W. Montague Cobb of the National Medical Assn. "strongly" endorsed HR 6675, which he said "would provide medical assistance to the elderly on the most rational and equitable basis possible." Dr. Cobb said the bill contained "adequate safeguards...against unwarranted interference by the Government" and that "the assertion that this is socialized medicine is... pure nonsense."

Julia C. Thompson of the American Nurses' Assn. supported the bill, but recommended that it be amended to provide payment for private duty nursing services. She also urged that services provided by radiologists, pathologists, anesthetists and physiatrists be included as a hospital expense under the basic plan.

May 5 -- Walter J. McNerney, president of the Blue Cross Assn., said HR 6675 was "quite complicated from a prepayment and administrative point of view," but that if the Government designated one private agency system to administer the program, "Blue Cross has the capacity to do a major job...." McNerney opposed the deductible provisions of the bill, saying there was "no substantial evidence" that they would limit hospital admissions or out-patient services. He also said past Blue Cross experience indicated that the cost estimates for HR 6675 were "near or below the minimum we would expect to occur."

May 6 -- Dr. Russell B. Carson, chairman of the National Assn. of Blue Shield Plans, urged amendment of the bill "to offer the voluntary beneficiaries a reasonable degree of choice among the major patterns of prepaid care already available to the people." He said that "people with limited cash resources...generally prefer a first-dollar, basic coverage program," and that "the aged citizen should be offered the opportunity to continue the pattern of prepayment to which he is accustomed." Dr. Carson said Blue Shield had demonstrated that it could "provide coverage, nationwide, on a uniform basis, with coordinated subscriber service and transferability of coverage from area to area."

End of Private Insurance Seen

Raymond E. King Jr. of the National Assn. of Life Underwriters objected to HR 6675 because it would "provide health care benefits to all aged individuals irrespective of their ability to finance their own health care costs." He said the supplementary program would "virtually complete the elimination of the private health insurance business from any meaningful role in the provision of health insurance for the aged," and that the bill would "set up a health care program which served little or no necessary social purpose and which would be a direct, unwarranted and completely unfair intrusion into private enterprise."

Dr. Clifford H. Keene, vice president of the Kaiser Foundation Health Plan, said the health care provisions of the bill were "a great stride forward." However, he urged amendment of the bill to permit citizens a choice "of prepaid medical coverage under our type of plan or any other voluntary health insurance plan." He also said the provisions "directed against excessive utilization...could be strengthened by adding a financial incentive for health care organizations which meet the health care needs of their memberships while achieving significantly lower use of hospitals for a comparable population group."

Dr. Carl E. Becker of the American Nursing Home Assn. urged, among other changes in the bill, that patients be permitted under the supplemental health care program to convert up to 50 home health visits into 25 additional nursing home days. He said the additional nursing home days might be necessary in "cases of a major nature." He also urged that the nursing home provisions take effect at the same time as those for hospital care, instead of six months later as provided. This gap, he said, would lead to the transfer of convalescing patients from nursing homes to hospitals, which would "greatly increase costs...and perhaps jeopardize the economic stability of some of our finest nursing homes."

Dr. Malcolm S.M. Watts of the American Society of Internal Medicine said the Society accepted "the premise that federal funds will be used to provide medical care for almost all persons over 65, whether they are in financial need or not." He recommended several amendments to the bill, including transfer of diagnostic services "ordinarily supervised by physicians" from the basic hospital care to the supplemental health care plan; extension of benefits for diagnostic services to include those offered in physicians' offices and laboratories; replacement of the supplemental plan by "a program comparable to the Federal Employees' Health Benefits Plan"; and establishment of a "governmental board or commission," composed of representatives of the Social Security system, the Department of HEW, insurance carriers and the general public, to administer the program.

AMA Criticism of Bill

May 11 -- Dr. Donovan F. Ward, president of the American Medical Assn., said the health care program established by HR 6675 would be "a Government-financed, Government-controlled and Government-oriented...system" which would represent "the first step toward establishment of socialized medicine in the United States." He said the result of such programs in other countries had been over-utilization of facilities and rising costs, and that as emphasis shifted "from quality to cost, as it must under a publicly financed program, a deterioration in the quality of care is inescapable." Dr. Ward said the AMA-supported "elder-care" program, embodied in S 820, was the only proposal before Congress which was formulated in consultation with the medical profession, and he urged its substitution for the health care provisions of HR 6675. He also urged exclusion of self-employed physicians from the Social Security system, arguing that surveys showed that more than half of the nation's doctors did not retire until age 74, and that inclusion of them under the system would force them to pay the Social Security tax beyond age 65 without receiving benefits until years later.

Representatives of the Medical Societies of Alabama, California, Florida, Pennsylvania and Illinois opposed the medical care provisions.

May 12 -- Dr. Grady V. Lake of the International Chiropractors Assn. criticized the health care provisions of HR 6675 because they did not cover chiropractic services, although 47 states legally recognized the chiropractic profession. He asked that the bill be broadened to cover chiropractors where licensed.

Dr. J. Buroughs Stokes of the Christian Science Church requested that, in addition to coverage of services in Christian Science sanatoriums already provided by HR 6675, coverage be extended to Christian Science nursing homes and visiting nurse services.

May 13 -- Paul D. Hill of the International Assn. of Health Underwriters opposed the medical care provisions as a "socialistic (program) whose avowed goal is to cover everyone, regardless of need, and whose ultimate purpose..is to make the Federal Government the prime controller of medical care in our country...for everyone, regardless of age." He said there was no "demonstrable need" for the program and that the costs of the program "are not fully known and when they are realized will be so high that they will be an intolerable burden to the wage earners of our country." Hill said the Association believed "that the present Kerr-Mills law should be expanded to every state, and that it should be broadened to cover any demonstrable and proven need for medical care among those 65 and over in our population."

Dr. Austin Smith, president of the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Assn., said that provisions of the bill specifying which drugs would be covered by insurance were "discriminatory (and) have no demonstrable basis in either good medicine or sound economics..."

Dr. Victor B. Buhler, president of the College of American Pathologists, opposed the amendment proposed by the Administration and Sen. Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) to place the fees of radiologists, pathologists, anesthesiologists and physiatrists under the basic plan rather than under the supplementary program. He said the amendment might "endanger the progress of medicine in combating cancer and other dread diseases" and that physicians would not enter these medical specialties if they were "dealt with prejudicially in a federal law."

The amendment was supported by Dr. Edwin F. Daily of the Group Health Assn. of America Inc. Daily asked that provision be made for medical insurance payments to a group practice plan and that routine physical checkups and eye examinations be covered under the supplemental plan.

May 14 -- Charles I. Schottland of the American Public Welfare Assn. supported the hospital insurance provision, but opposed the proposal for charging a deductible amount because "deductibles...create a barrier to early hospitalization for a group of persons for whom early care is essential." He also supported higher Social Security benefits than provided in HR 6675.

Irvin P. Schloss of the American Foundation for the Blind urged "substantial extension and improvement" of the crippled children provision to serve children "with all types of disabilities" and expansion of the disability insurance program to "make it possible for blind persons with at least six quarters of covered employment to become eligible for disability insurance cash benefits without regard to their ability to engage in substantial gainful employment." He said such a change would "make the disability insurance program similar to the disability compensation program for veterans...."

Dr. W. Judd Chapman, immediate past president of the American Optometric Assn., urged that the bill be clarified to show that a patient "may choose between optometrists and physicians skilled in diseases of the eye for services which an optometrist is licensed to perform."

Barbara D. McGarry of the American Parents Committee Inc. supported the child health and welfare provisions of HR 6675.

William C. Fitch of the National Retired Teachers Assn. and the American Assn. of Retired Persons urged that individuals covered by the supplementary plan be permitted "to make a selection of a private insurance carrier" from among companies approved by the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare and that the income tax provisions of HR 6675 limiting medical expenses deductions to amounts in excess of 3 percent of adjusted gross income for those 65 and over be eliminated. He also suggested numerous amendments to increase Social Security benefits and ease restrictions.

Testimony on Tips

May 18 -- Julia Algase of the New York Hotel and Motel Trades Council asked that the section defining tips as wages and providing for reporting them for Social Security purposes be retained.

Leslie W. Scott of the National Restaurant Assn. and the American Motor Hotel Assn. supported inclusion of tips as wages for Social Security purposes, but asked that the "self-employment approach" of reporting tips be used because of the "bookkeeping burdens" and inability of employers to guarantee the accuracy of reports they would be asked to make under the bill. Arthur J. Packard of the American Hotel and Motel Assn. expressed views similar to Scott's.

Hiram J. Hershey of the Old Order Amish asked that his group be exempted from Old Age and Survivor's insurance, since "To participate in the Social Security Program, would...be laying up treasures upon earth (contrary to the Lord's teachings) and would not preserve God's blessings in our church." (The Amish were exempted from coverage under HR 6675.)

George McLain of the National League of Senior Citizens proposed Social Security benefits for all over 72 years of age, lowering the age widows can apply for Social Security benefits to 60, establishment of national criteria for what constitutes a needy person under public assistance programs, gradual scaling of residence requirements for public assistance from five years down to a year, designation of a single state agency to administer public assistance, and elimination of the provision which provided that states "whose per capita income is above the national level" shall receive a lower percentage of federal public assistance funds than poorer states.

May 19 -- Frank Bane of the Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations opposed a requirement that a single state agency handle public assistance because such a requirement "imposes undue restrictions on the states in their efforts to organize the executive branch of state government in the most efficient manner." Bane recommended giving the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare authority to declare "portions" of state public assistance plans not in conformity with the act, rather than invalidating the whole plan, and creation of a Public Assistance Advisory Council of state and local officials to consult with and advise the Secretary.

E. Paul Barnhart, an independent health insurance actuary, said HR 6675 would result in the "duplication" of hospital and medical expense protection and would "damage the legal rights and equities which millions of Americans have acquired in private health insurance plans...."

William A. Callahan, president of the International Assn. of Industrial Accident Boards and Commissions, requested deletion of the section of HR 6675 relating to eligibility for Social Security disability payments. He said that "Social Security funds are not the proper source from which to make payments for occupational injuries."

Dr. William Camp of the National Assn. of State Mental Health Program Directors urged elimination of the "discriminatory" provision of the health insurance section which prohibits "benefits to aged persons treated in a mental hospital."

COMMITTEE CONSIDERS AMENDMENTS

At the close of the Finance Committee hearings, second-ranking Committee Democrat Russell B. Long (D La.) introduced a substitute for the basic and supplementary health care plans provided in the House version of HR 6675. In a statement explaining the substitute, Long said it would differentiate between those who could and those who could not meet their own medical needs and would protect against the "ravages of a long-sustained and financially exhausting illness."

The substitute provided one compulsory health program for most U.S. citizens, with no limit on length of hospital or nursing home stays or home health care visits.

Rather than the specified deductions contained in HR 6675 for all persons, Long proposed that each person pay at least 10 percent of his total medical expenses plus a deductible amount ranging from $40 to $1,000 a year, based on income. No person, however, would have to spend more than 50 percent of his annual income on medical expenses. Persons unable to pay the 10 percent and the deductible amount would be able to secure interest-free loans to be repaid from Social Security benefits, unless they were receiving public assistance, in which case the expenses would be met by the Kerr-Mills medical assistance program.

In addition to the varying deductibles, Long's plan was to be financed by a payroll tax, with the same rate and bases provided by the House bill, and by appropriations from general revenues equal to 40 percent of the receipts from payroll taxes. Over-all, Long estimated that his program would cost the Government about $560 million more than the HR 6675 programs in general revenues annually, but would save the Government about $330 million annually in public assistance medical care programs.

The Administration opposed Long's plan; reportedly, it believed it would burden the Social Security System and result in over-utilization of hospital facilities.

Committee Voting. The Finance Committee June 17 voted 8-6 to adopt the benefits provisions of the Long substitute and then voted 10-3 to adopt his proposed financing. On the first vote Sens. Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.), Albert Gore (D Tenn.), Eugene J. McCarthy (D Minn.), Vance Hartke (D Ind.), J.W. Fulbright (D Ark.), Abraham A. Ribicoff (D Conn.) and Carl T. Curtis (R Neb.) were recorded as voting with Long in favor of the amendment. However, Gore's and Fulbright's votes were cast by proxy, and it was subsequently announced that the proxies had been incorrectly used. (No proxies were cast for three other absent Senators.)

Because of the question of proxy votes, the amendments were voted on again June 23. They were defeated and replaced by an amendment by Sen. Hartke which made major expansions in the basic health care plan voted by the House. (See below for details) An amended version of the Long plan with reduced deductibles, also offered by Long, was defeated June 23.

Bill Ordered Reported. By a 12-5 vote June 24, the Finance Committee ordered HR 6675 reported with numerous amendments. Voting against approval were Committee Chairman Harry Flood Byrd (D Va.) and four Republicans: Williams (Del.), Bennett (Utah), Curtis (Neb.) and Morton (Ky.). Republicans Frank Carlson (Kan.) and Everett McKinley Dirksen (Ill.) voted to report the bill.

HR 6675 REPORTED TO SENATE

The Committee June 30 reported its version of HR 6675 (S Rept 404). While the Committee added numerous amendments to HR 6675, it made no basic revisions in the bill. The major changes included longer benefit periods under the basic health care plan (the Hartke amendment), further liberalization of earnings permitted to Social Security beneficiaries and an increase in payroll taxes to finance the health care and Social Security benefits. The programs under the Committee version were estimated to cost $6.8 billion in the first full year of operation (1967), compared with an estimated cost of $6 billion under the House version.

Majority Views. Many of the Committee statements were similar to those of the House Ways and Means Committee in its report (H Rept 213) on HR 6675 March 29.

Much of the Senate Committee's 563-page report -- as with H Rept 213 -- was devoted to a technical explanation of the bill and the Committee's reasons for its actions. The Committee discussed the health care trust fund and the existing Social Security trust funds at length and cited numerous figures and studies to show that the funds would be actuarially sound under the Committee bill and "completely separate."

Some highlights of the majority views:

- The health care programs "would encourage participating institutions, agencies and individuals to make the best of modern medicine more readily available to the aged."
- The health care programs "will assist hospitals in reducing income deficits arising out of providing hospital care to persons unable to pay" and "will appreciably reduce the need of hospitals to charge their paying... patients more than the cost of their services in order to compensate for care rendered to other patients without charge."
- "The Committee is concerned with the present lack of facilities and treatment for emotionally disturbed children.... It was impressed with that section of the report of the Warren Commission which stated that at 13, Lee Harvey Oswald was found by a child-guidance clinic to be of more than average intelligence but with a serious and deep-seated emotional problem and it was recommended that both he and his mother receive treatment." (The Committee amended HR 6675 to provide funds for the treatment of emotionally disturbed children and for research in this field. See below.)
- The Committee accepted the House provision to exempt self-employed members of certain recognized religious sects -- such as the Amish -- but "strongly recommended against any broadening of the proposed" exemption because this could lead to "widespread individual voluntary coverage" and "undermine the soundness of the Social Security program."

Individual Views. Chairman Byrd and four Committee Republicans, John J. Williams (Del.), Wallace F. Bennett (Utah), Carl T. Curtis (Neb.) and Thruston B. Morton (Ky.), opposed the basic medical care program provided in the bill. They said, "We recognize as a fact that some of our aged citizens need governmental assistance to meet the cost of adequate medical care. But we are also convinced that many of the aged are capable of meeting their medical costs without government assistance; thus the best solution has not been devised. We must oppose any legislation which would derive its financing from a compulsory tax on the first dollars of wages earned by the nation's working men and women to pay the hospital and other medical bills of the well-to-do and wealthy aged.... Such legislation produces an unequitable and unjustified tax burden on gross earnings of wage earners."

The five members said that the health care program would impair the existing Social Security trust funds, damage the private insurance industry and lead to Government medical care for other age groups.

Supplemental Views. Sens. Abraham A. Ribicoff (D Conn.) and Vance Hartke (D Ind.) called the bill "a historic, landmark measure" but complained that it "fails to take a basic step to complete insurance protection for the aged against truly catastrophic illness."

In a separate statement Sen. Long defended his amendments rejected by the Committee and said he was "viciously attacked in the press" for his proposals. However, Long said the bill, as reported by the Committee, was a good one and that he supported it.

CHANGES IN HOUSE BILL

The Committee made the following principal amendments to HR 6675:

BASIC HEALTH CARE PLAN

Eligibility. Brought under the basic plan federal employees who had not enrolled in the federal health benefits program.

Benefits. Provided inpatient hospital services for up to 120 days in each period of illness with the patient paying a deductible amount of $40 for the first 60 days plus $10 a day after the first 60 days. The House provided up to 60 days with the patient paying the first $40.

Brought the services of radiologists, anesthesiologists, pathologists and physiatrists under the basic plan when these services were billed through the hospital. The House version covered these services under the supplemental plan.

Included in the basic plan services by dental interns under approved teaching programs.

Placed inpatient psychiatric hospital service under the basic plan with a lifetime limitation of 210 days. The House version provided this service under the supplemental plan and set a lifetime limit of 180 days.

Provided post-hospital extended care for up to 100 days in each period of illness with the patient paying $5 a day after the first 20 days. The House version provided up to 20 days plus two additional days for each day the patient's hospital stay was less than 60 days up to a maximum of 80 additional days. The Committee eliminated the provision permitting unused hospital days to be converted into post-hospital days.

Made Christian Science nursing homes eligible for the extended care program.

Revised the payment of deductibles for outpatient diagnostic services.

Provided up to 175 home health-care visits after discharge from a hospital or nursing home. The House version provided 100 visits.

Financing. Provided that the Social Security annual taxable earnings base for the payroll tax would be increased from the existing $4,800 to $6,600 beginning Jan. 1, 1966. The House version increased the base to $5,600 for 1966-70 and $6,600 in 1971 and thereafter.

Set the health insurance payroll tax rate to be applied equally to employees, employers and self-employed persons at: 0.325 percent in 1966; 0.5 percent in 1967-70; 0.55 percent in 1971-72; 0.6 in 1973-75; 0.65 percent in 1976-79; 0.75 percent in 1980-86; 0.85 percent in 1987 and thereafter. The rates provided in the House version were: 0.35 percent in 1966; 0.5 percent in 1967-72; 0.55 percent in 1973-75; 0.6 percent in 1976-79; 0.7 percent in 1980-86; 0.8 percent in 1987 and thereafter.

SUPPLEMENTAL HEALTH CARE PLAN

Benefits. Provided that benefits under the supplemental plan would become effective Jan. 1, 1967, rather than July 1, 1966, as provided by the House.

Added the services of chiropractors and podiatrists and certain services of dental surgeons and optometrists to those covered by the plan.

Enrollment. Set up a new timetable for enrolling in the plan.

Financing. Eliminated House income tax provisions that permitted a deduction of up to $250 a year to taxpayers of all ages of one-half of the premiums for medical care insurance and that reinstituted for persons 65 and older the requirement limiting medical expense deductions to amounts in excess of 3 percent of income.

KERR-MILLS PROGRAM

Permitted states to choose between existing federal health programs to assist the needy (including the aid to the indigent aged, aid to dependent children, aid to the blind and aid to the permanently and totally disabled programs) and the revision proposed under HR 6675. The bill combined all federal health programs to assist the needy and disabled into one plan with simplified administration, a uniform grant formula and minimum national eligibility standards. Under the House version, provisions covering the existing health programs would terminate by June 30, 1967, and states would not be permitted to continue the individual programs.

Administration. Revised requirements for administration of the program.

CHILD HEALTH CARE

Increased federal funds for the child welfare program between fiscal 1966 and fiscal 1970, when a $10 million increase to $60 million would become permanent. The House version provided no increases for this program.

Authorized a new program of project grants for health services to emotionally disturbed children. To finance the program, increased the House authorization for each child health care services program by $5 million annually in fiscal 1968-70 and authorized $500,000 annually in fiscal 1966-67 for grants for research on mental illness in children. The Federal Government could pay no more than 75 percent of the cost of each project.

OASDI

Benefits. Provided that an insured worker would be eligible for disability benefits if his disability had lasted or was expected to last for 12 consecutive months. The House version provided the benefits after a disability of six months.

Revised provisions of the basic disability law relating to children and requiring that payments received from workmen's compensation be offset.

Exempted the first $1,800 that an individual could earn a year without losing Social Security benefits; provided a $1 reduction in benefits for each $2 of earnings between $1,800 and $3,000 and for each $1 of earnings thereafter. The provision was estimated to affect 850,000 persons and to cost $590 million the first year. The House version retained the existing exemption of $1,200 but applied the $1-for-$2 ratio on earnings between $1,200 and $2,400 (rather than the existing $1,700) and the $1-for-$1 ratio for earnings above $2,400.

Added to the bill a provision continuing benefits to widows age 60 and over and to widowers age 62 and over who remarry. The benefits for a remarried person would be 50 percent of the deceased spouse's primary insurance amount rather than the 82.5 percent received by widows and widowers not remarried.

Coverage. Extended compulsory OASDI coverage to self-employed physicians retroactive to Jan. 1, 1965. The House version included the doctors in the program after Jan. 1, 1966.

Provided that cash tips received by a worker would be covered as self-employment income. The House version provided that tips would be considered as wages, with Social Security taxes paid on them by the employee and the employer. (Continued on next page)

Financing. Increased the Social Security annual taxable earnings base from the existing $4,800 to $6,600 beginning Jan. 1, 1966. The House version increased the base to $5,600 for 1966-70 and $6,600 in 1971 and thereafter.

Increased the employer-employee tax rate from the existing 3.6 percent to 3.85 percent in 1966-68; 4.45 percent in 1969-72; 4.9 percent in 1973 and thereafter. The House version provided a rate of 4.0 percent in 1966-68; 4.4 percent in 1969-72; and 4.8 percent in 1973.

Increased the self-employed tax rate from the existing 5.4 percent to 5.8 percent in 1966-68; 6.7 percent in 1969-72; and 7.0 percent in 1973 and thereafter. The House version provided a rate of 6.0 percent in 1966-68; 6.6 percent in 1969-72; and 7.0 percent in 1973.

PUBLIC ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS

Added provisions affecting state reductions of benefits under the aid to dependent children and disability programs.

MISCELLANEOUS

Authorized an additional Under Secretary and two new Assistant Secretaries in the Health, Education and Welfare Department to help carry out the programs and changes in HR 6675. The House bill did not have this provision.

Provided that in any title of the Social Security Act authorizing benefits for services that optometrists are licensed to perform, the beneficiary may obtain the services of an optometrist or a medical specialist.

Senate Floor Action

The Senate July 9 passed HR 6675 by a 68-21 roll-call vote and sent it to conference with the House. (For voting, see charts p. 1056, 1057)

President Johnson July 9 described Senate passage of the bill as "a great day for older Americans...a great day for America." He said the bill was "sweeping in its intent and impact" and would lift "a great burden...from the shoulders of all Americans."

The Senate made 513 changes in HR 6675 as passed by the House April 8, increasing the annual cost of the House version by about $1.5 billion, to $7.5 billion. The Senate rejected other amendments -- by both Democrats and Republicans -- to expand the bill even further, and beat back proposals -- all by Republicans -- to kill the medical care programs in the bill and to cut down other benefits.

VOTING

Passage of HR 6675. Thirteen Republicans joined 55 Democrats to vote for passage of HR 6675, while seven Democrats, all Southerners, sided with 14 Republicans against the bill. The breakdown was similar to the voting earlier on a motion by Sen. Carl T. Curtis (R Neb.) to kill the Government health-care-program portions of the bill.

1964-65 Voting. Majority Whip Russell B. Long (D La.), floor manager of HR 6675, and Sen. George A. Smathers (D Fla.), assistant floor manager, were among 15 Senators who opposed the 1964 medical care amendment but supported the program in 1965. (The comparison includes pairings and is based on the 1964 "medicare" amendment to the House-passed Social Security bill -- adopted 49-44 -- and on Curtis' proposal to delete the medical care programs from HR 6675 -- rejected 26-64.) Other Democrats switching to support were Sparkman (Ala.), McClellan (Ark.), Russell (Ga.), Talmadge (Ga.) and Lausche (Ohio). Republicans switching to support were Boggs (Del.), Fong (Hawaii), Carlson (Kan.), Cooper (Ky.), Saltonstall (Mass.), Scott (Pa.), Aiken (Vt.) and Prouty (Vt.). The nine freshman Senators favored the medical care proposals 5-4, whereas their predecessors opposed the 1964 amendment 4-5.

In both 1964 and 1965, a majority of Republicans and Southern Democrats opposed the medical care proposal.

SENATE CHANGES

The Senate adopted all the amendments (about 100) recommended by the Finance Committee and 30 floor amendments.

The principal floor amendments accepted by the Senate included one by Robert C. Byrd (D W.Va.) to lower the retirement age for Social Security cash benefits to 60, two years less than the existing minimum, and one by Vance Hartke (D Ind.) to eliminate the time limit on hospital care under the basic health care plan.

The Senate also accepted amendments to eliminate the requirement under the basic plan that a person must be in a hospital for three days before becoming eligible for home health care visits; to require the Social Security office to release to state and local welfare agencies addresses of men who deserted their families; to initiate a study of the possibility of including coverage of drug costs in the supplementary health care plan; to remove ceilings on income tax deductions for medical expenses; to broaden the programs of medical aid to needy children and disability payments to the blind; and to increase the payroll taxes to finance the additional benefits. (For other floor amendments accepted, see p. 264)

DEBATE

The Senate debated HR 6675 July 6-9, with the July 9 session lasting 10-1/2 hours.

The only committee amendment that ran into opposition was the proposal that tips be considered as self-employment income for Social Security purposes. Jacob K. Javits (R N.Y.) led an unsuccessful three-day fight to retain the House provision that classified tips as wages and required the employee and employer to pay Social Security taxes on them. Javits argued that an employer benefited from tips because they permitted him to pay a lower wage and that therefore he should be responsible for matching an employee's Social Security payroll tax on tips. Sen. Long replied that it was the customer, and not the employer, who paid tips and that requiring the employer to pay the tax could lead to abuse of the system by employees.

Almost all the floor amendments adopted by the Senate were accepted by the floor managers of the bill and were approved with little discussion. The only amendment that was accepted over the leadership's opposition was one by Hartke to expand the disability insurance program for the blind by liberalizing the definition of blindness and lifting the limit on earnings by a blind recipient. The amendment was accepted by a 78-11 roll-call vote after a motion by Smathers to table (kill) the amendment was rejected by a 16-76 roll call.

Long said the House conferees would not accept the amendment "for good reasons." He said the provision "declares to be blind, persons who are not completely blind" and would pay disability benefits to persons not disabled and who were working full time.

Other debate centered on unsuccessful attempts by Curtis to base the deductible amounts in the health care plans on the patient's income, moves by Curtis and Jack Miller (R Iowa) to kill the medical care programs and an amendment by Thruston B. Morton (R Ky.) to delete the provisions extending Social Security coverage to self-employed doctors.

Curtis, arguing for deductions based on income, called the medical care program "socialism" and said the bill "would tax people who cannot afford to be further taxed...to provide benefits for individuals many of whom are well able to provide for themselves." Long, after temporarily relinquishing the floor management position, spoke in support of the amendment. Two separate amendments by Curtis proposing income-based deductions were rejected by roll-call votes.

Curtis also made two attempts to delete the medical care provisions from the bill, but both were rejected, also by roll-call votes. A similar proposal by Miller was turned down by voice vote. Curtis' second attempt was a motion to send the bill back to committee with instructions to delete the medical care provisions, report the remainder of the bill back for immediate action, and to report by Sept. 7, 1965, a proposed program patterned after the existing health care program for retired federal employees. Majority Leader Mike Mansfield (D Mont.) called the motion "a delaying action." Curtis replied that "in good conscience, I cannot support legislation...which would force the poor to pay the hospital bills and other medical bills of the wealthy."

Morton, seeking to delete Social Security coverage of doctors from the bill, said physicians generally did not retire until their 70s and that they would have to pay Social Security taxes longer than persons retiring earlier. "Certainly it would not be in the public interest to encourage physicians to retire at 65," he said. Long countered by saying, "I believe we have gone around long enough leaving the doctors not covered by Social Security benefits. This has been because the doctors do not really understand the situation. One of these days, we ought to vote for what is good for people whether they want it or not."

Coverage of Catastrophic Illnesses Debated

Unsuccessful moves to expand the bill further also brought on debate. These included a proposal by Abraham A. Ribicoff (D Conn.) to remove all time limitations on benefits and most deductions in the basic health care plan, an amendment by Miller to provide an increase in Social Security cash benefits whenever the cost of living increased and an amendment by Winston L. Prouty (R Vt.) to raise Social Security benefits by 7 to 75 percent.

Ribicoff said his amendment would cover the cost of catastrophic illnesses and would benefit about 380,000 aged persons a year. Long, supporting the amendment, said, "After all the fine campaign oratory we have heard to the effect that we shall look after those (aged) people, we shall never hear the end of it until we provide for the serious catastrophic cases." Opponents of the amendment argued that it would involve "excessive" costs and lead to abuse of hospital facilities.

General Statements on the Bill

Other highlights of the debate:

July 6 -- Clinton P. Anderson (D N.M.) -- There no longer was a question of whether Government medical care was needed because "the years have piled up evidence in support of the Social Security hospital insurance program."

July 7 -- Jacob K. Javits (R N.Y.) -- "The bill before us now represents as close as American Government can get to a consensus...."

July 8 -- Ernest Gruening (D Alaska) -- "This bill marks a milestone and a crowning achievement for the many men and women who for years have worked tirelessly for its achievement."

Thruston B. Morton (R Ky.) -- "I have always maintained that if the program is to be successful, it must... be voluntary...based on need...and must not be financed through a payroll tax."

John G. Tower (R Texas) -- "Medicare can destroy Social Security as we know it."

Gordon Allott (R Colo.) -- "I suppose that it (the bill) can be justified on a basis of 'equality' -- that is, the rich ought to be treated equally with the poor, and therefore they should be entitled to the benefits of welfare programs just as the poor are."

July 9 -- Allen J. Ellender (D La.) -- "Let us not be so naive as to believe that the medicare program will not be increased from year to year to the point that the Government will have to impose more taxes on the little man or else take the necessary money out of the Treasury."

Stephen M. Young (D Ohio) -- "The measure represents the greatest advance in social legislation ever presented to the Senate."

Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.) -- "While I personally believe that a voluntary program financed from general revenues...is preferable to the medicare program...I do believe that the time has come when we must enact legislation which will go beyond the group assisted by the Kerr-Mills act...."

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- Sept. 1 -- The Senate by voice vote passed a bill (S 2393) authorizing 100 new Government supergrade (GS 16 through 18) positions for agencies expanded after June 30, 1965. Majority Leader Mike Mansfield (D Mont.) explained that the positions were needed because of the demand for highly qualified persons to man the greatly expanded operations of the Social Security System authorized by HR 6675. The House took no action on the bill. In House debate on HR 6675 Ways and Means Committee Chairman Mills had emphasized the heavy administrative responsibilities the bill placed on the Social Security Administration and said there was need to expand its personnel.

SENATE PROVISIONS

As passed by the Senate, HR 6675 did the following (where provisions were identical in the House, Senate and final versions, details are given only in the final Provisions, p. 239):

BASIC HEALTH INSURANCE PLAN

Eligibility. Provided a basic health insurance plan for all persons 65 and older, except active or retired federal employees enrolled in the federal health benefits program, aliens who had not lived in the United States for at least six consecutive months and persons convicted of certain subversive crimes.

Benefits. Provided that the plan would pay:

● Inpatient hospital services with the patient paying a deductible amount of $40 for the first 60 days and $10 a day for all days thereafter. Services covered included those ordinarily furnished by a hospital for its inpatients, including the services of radiologists, anesthesiologists, pathologists and physiatrists when these services were billed through the hospital. Payments would not be made for private-duty nursing or hospital services of physicians, except services provided by dental and medical interns and residents under approved teaching programs.

● Post-hospital care for up to 100 days in each period of illness after at least three days in the hospital, with the patient paying $5 a day after the first 20 days. The post-hospital facilities, such as nursing homes, must have arrangements with a hospital for the timely transfer of patients and for furnishing medical information on the patients or, in certain cases, must have sought such transfer agreements with a hospital. Transfer agreements could be negotiated with hospitals outside the state. Christian Science nursing homes would be eligible for the program.

● Outpatient hospital diagnostic services with the patient paying the first $20 for diagnostic services provided by the same hospital during a 20-day period and 20 percent of the remaining costs. The $20 deduction would be credited against the annual $50 deduction required under the supplementary health care plan. (See below)

● Up to 175 home health care visits (such as by a nurse) during a calendar year.

Defined a spell of illness as beginning when a patient entered a hospital or nursing home and ending when the patient had not been an inpatient of a hospital or nursing home for 60 consecutive days.

Provided inpatient hospital and post-hospital services to tubercular and psychiatric patients. The services to psychiatric patients would have a total lifetime limit of 210 days.

Provided that the deductions required for the various services would be increased if necessary to meet rising health care costs but that no increases would be made before 1969.

Provided that payments to providers of the services would be "the reasonable cost" of the services.

Effective Date. Provided that post-hospital, extended-care benefits would become effective Jan. 1, 1967, and the other benefits July 1, 1966.

Financing. Provided a payroll tax, which would apply equally to employers, employees and self-employed persons, of: 0.325 percent in 1966; 0.50 percent in 1971-72; 0.65 percent in 1973-75; 0.70 percent in 1976-79; 0.80 percent in 1980-86; 0.85 percent in 1987 and thereafter.

Provided that the Social Security taxable annual earnings base, which also would be the base for the health insurance payroll tax, be increased from the existing $4,800 to $6,600 beginning Jan. 1, 1966.

Provided that general revenue would finance the plan for persons not covered by Social Security or the Railroad Retirement Act.

Provided that the health insurance payroll taxes and the general revenue for the plan would go into a separate Hospital Insurance Trust Fund in the Treasury.

Administration. Provided that the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare would have the main responsibility for administering the plan. However, provisions were made for the possible transfer of administration of benefits for persons under the railroad retirement system to the Railroad Retirement Board.

Provided that the Secretary would use appropriate state agencies and private organizations to assist in the administration.

Provided that an Advisory Council would be created to advise the Secretary in administration of the plan.

Provided a review by hearing examiner of appeals to claims of $100 and over.

Prohibited federal payments to hospitals not meeting state or local government standards, but permitted those that met state standards to take part in the program.

Established a committee to study extended care services with a view to making maximum use of the services.

Required personal notices to beneficiaries of the benefits under the basic medical care plan.

SUPPLEMENTARY HEALTH CARE PLAN

Eligibility. Provided the same eligibility requirements as those for the basic plan. (See above)

Enrollment. Provided that persons reaching age 65 before July 1, 1966, could enroll between April 1, 1966, and Sept. 30, 1966. Persons becoming 65 on or after July 1, 1966, could enroll during a seven-month period beginning three months before the month of reaching 65. Future general enrollment periods would be from Oct. 1 to Dec. 31 in even-numbered years. The first general enrollment period would be in 1968.

Provided that no person could enroll after three years from the close of the first period in which he could have enrolled. Persons who dropped out of the plan could re-enroll only once, and this must be done within three years after dropping out.

Provided that states could enroll and pay the premiums for their public assistance recipients.

Benefits. Provided that the plan would pay 80 percent of the costs after an annual deduction of $50 on the following:

● Services of physicians, surgeons, chiropractors and podiatrists and certain services of dental surgeons and optometrists, regardless of whether the services were provided in a hospital, clinic, office or home.

● Up to 100 home health care visits each calendar year.

● Other medical and health services. (These were the same in all three bills, see p. 240 for details.)

Directed that a report be made by June 30, 1966, on the possibility of covering prescription drugs under the plan.

Provided that payments to providers of the services would be "the reasonable cost" of the services.

Effective Date. Provided that the benefits would become effective Jan. 1, 1967.

Financing. Provided that persons enrolled in the plan would pay $3 monthly payments which would be matched by the Federal Government from general revenues.

Income Tax. Removed all ceilings on income tax deductions for medical expenses but retained the 3 percent floor under deductions for persons below age 65.

Administration. Provided that the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare would contract with private carriers to carry out the major administrative functions, such as determining rates of payments and disbursing the funds.

KERR-MILLS PROGRAM

Provided a new title (XIX) to the Social Security Act to combine all the medical provisions for the needy covered in five titles of the existing Act.

Coverage. Extended the Medical Assistance for the Aged (MAA) program for the indigent aged to needy persons under the dependent children, blind and permanently and totally disabled programs; if a state so provided, also made eligible for medical aid needy children who did not qualify for public assistance and the persons who cared for them. States would have an option to choose between existing medical assistance programs and the combined program.

Effective Date. Provided that the combined program would take effect Jan. 1, 1966.

Benefits. Required states participating in the new program to provide inpatient and outpatient hospital services, laboratory and x-ray services, skilled nursing home services and physicians' services. States could provide additional benefits. States, until July 1, 1966, could receive the increased federal funds provided in Title XIX (below) if their existing programs substantially met the objectives and requirements of the title.

Required that needy persons on the state programs be provided with assistance to meet the deductible amounts imposed by the federal basic health plan.

Stipulated that recipients should have freedom of choice in receiving benefits from any qualified provider of services.

Means Test. Required states to provide a "flexible" income test to determine eligibility of the needy elderly for the program. The program could not be based on rigid income standards which adversely affected persons with large medical bills.

Financing. Increased the federal share over existing MAA matching if current programs met the objectives of the bill.

Provided that local governments could join the states in providing non-federal funds. (Other financing provisions were the same in all versions of HR 6675.)

Administration. Provided that any state agency could be designated to administer the new program as long as the eligibility requirements were established by the agency administering the old-age assistance program.

CHILD HEALTH CARE

Increased federal funds for the maternal and child health services by $5 million for fiscal 1966 and by $10 million in each succeeding fiscal year.

Increased federal funds for crippled children's services by $5 million for fiscal 1966 and by $10 million in each succeeding fiscal year.

Authorized $5 million in fiscal 1967, $10 million in fiscal 1968, and $17.5 million in each succeeding fiscal year for grants to schools for training personnel for care of crippled and mentally retarded children.

Authorized $15 million for fiscal 1966, $35 million for fiscal 1967, $40 million for fiscal 1968, $45 million for fiscal 1969 and $50 million for fiscal 1970 for grants to states, schools and hospitals to pay up to 75 percent of the cost of programs of providing comprehensive health care services, including dental work, to children in low-income families. (These authorizations were further increased to cover projects for emotionally disturbed children -- see below.)

Authorized $2.7 million in fiscal 1966 and in fiscal 1967 in grants to states to implement programs to combat mental retardation authorized by previous legislation.

Increased authorized funds for the child welfare program by $5 million annually in fiscal 1966, 1967 and 1969 and by $10 million annually in fiscal 1968, 1970 and each succeeding year.

Authorized a new program of project grants for health services to emotionally disturbed children and for research in emotional illness in children. To finance the program, increased authorizations for child health care services by $5 million annually in fiscal 1968-70 for grants for health services to emotionally disturbed children and $500,000 annually for fiscal 1966-67 for grants for research in emotional illness in children.

OASDI CHANGES

Benefits. Provided a 7-percent across-the-board increase in Old-Age, Survivors and Disability Insurance benefits, retroactive to Jan. 1, 1965, with a minimum monthly increase of $4.

Permitted children's insurance benefits for those eligible to continue from age 18 through 21 if the child was attending school full-time after reaching 18. The provision was retroactive to Jan. 1, 1965.

Provided that a retired worker, a dependent spouse or a widow could draw benefits at a reduced rate at age 60 (rather than 62 as under existing law). The provision would become effective about two months after enactment. An estimated 900,000 persons were expected to apply for the new benefits by the end of 1966. The changes would cost about $500 million a year.

Provided that an insured worker would be eligible for disability benefits if his disability had lasted or was expected to last for 12 consecutive months. (Existing law required that the disability must be expected to result in death or be of long duration.) The new provision would become effective about two months after enactment.

Required that disabled benefits be offset by payments under workmen's compensation laws when combined payments would exceed 80 percent of the beneficiary's average monthly pay before disability.

Provided that a child who was disabled before reaching age 22 (instead of 18 as under existing law) would be eligible for disabled child's benefits if his parent died, became disabled or retired.

Provided reimbursement from Social Security funds to states providing vocational rehabilitation services to persons entitled to disability insurance benefits or a disabled child's benefits. The reimbursement funds could not exceed 1 percent of the Social Security disability benefits paid in the previous year.

Broadened the disability insurance program for the blind by liberalizing the definition of blindness, by providing benefits to a blind worker with at least six quarters of work in Social Security covered jobs (rather than five years as under existing law) and permitting a blind person to receive benefits regardless of other earnings. The provision would become effective about two months after passage and cost an estimated $287 million a year.

Exempted the first $1,800 that an individual could earn a year without losing Social Security benefits; provided a $1 reduction in benefits for each $2 of earnings between $1,800 and $3,000 and for each $1 of earnings thereafter. (Existing law exempted the first $1,200 and applied the 1-for-2 ratio to earnings between $1,200 and $1,700 and the 1-for-1 ratio to earnings above $1,700.) Certain royalties from copyrights and patents would not be counted as earnings. The new provision would become effective in 1966 and would provide additional annual benefits of $590 million to about 850,000 persons.

Liberalized eligibility requirements to provide benefits to persons 72 and older with only three to five quarters of work in covered employment (instead of the existing minimum of six quarters). A worker or widow who qualified would receive a monthly benefit payment of $35, and a qualified wife would receive $17.50.

Authorized wife's and widow's benefits to a divorced wife 62 or older if she had been married to an eligible worker for at least 20 years. This provision would be effective about two months after passage.

Continued benefits to widows 60 and over and to widowers 62 and over who remarry. (Under existing law, the benefits stopped when the survivor remarried.) The benefits for a remarried person would be 50 percent of the deceased spouse's primary insurance amount rather than the 82.5 percent received by widows and widowers not remarried.

Continued orphan's benefits to a child legally adopted by a brother or sister.

Exempted the increase in benefits from income-limit provisions on veterans' pensions.

Coverage. Extended compulsory OASDI coverage to self-employed physicians, retroactive to Jan. 1, 1965, and to interns beginning Jan. 1, 1966.

Provided that cash tips received by a worker would be covered as self-employment income, effective Jan. 1, 1966.

Provided that farmers with annual gross earning of $2,400 (instead of the existing $1,800) or less could report either their actual net earnings or two-thirds of their gross earnings. Farmers with gross earnings above $2,400 would report actual net earnings if over $1,600 (rather than $1,200).

Added Alaska to the list of states which could bring state and local government employees under the Social Security system. Coverage was extended to certain hospital employees in California whose positions were removed from the state or a local government retirement system and to employees of the District of Columbia not already covered by a retirement system.

Exempted self-employed members of certain recognized religious sects -- such as the Amish -- from Social Security taxes and coverage. The sect must have been in existence since Dec. 31, 1950, and must teach conscientious opposition to acceptance of benefits from insurance or Social Security.

Financing. Increased the Social Security annual taxable base from the existing $4,800 to $6,600 beginning Jan. 1, 1966.

Increased the employer-employee tax rate from the existing 3.6 percent to 3.85 percent in 1966-68; 4.5 percent in 1969-72; and 4.95 percent in 1973 and thereafter.

Increased the self-employed tax rate from the existing 5.4 percent to 5.8 percent in 1966-68; 6.8 percent in 1969-72; and 7.0 percent in 1973 and thereafter.

PUBLIC ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS

Revised matching formulas to increase the federal share under all state public assistance programs by an average of about $2.50 a month for the needy, blind and disabled and by an average of about $1.25 for needy children, effective June 30, 1965.

Extended the old-age and medical assistance programs to the needy aged and needy blind and disabled in mental or tuberculosis institutions, effective Jan. 1, 1966.

Increased earnings exemptions under the old-age assistance program and the aid to the permanently and totally disabled program so that a state could exempt the first $20 and one-half of the next $60 of a recipient's monthly earnings in deducting benefits. This would become effective Oct. 1, 1965.

Permitted states, in deducting benefits under the aid for dependent children program, to exempt up to $50 a month earned by any three dependent children under age 18 in the same home.

Permitted states to disregard up to $7 a month in increased Social Security cash benefits in reducing public assistance payments.

MISCELLANEOUS

Authorized an additional Under Secretary and two new Assistant Secretaries in the Health, Education and Welfare Department to help carry out the programs and changes in the bill.

Provided that in any title of the Social Security Act authorizing benefits for services that optometrists were licensed to perform, the beneficiary could obtain the services of an optometrist or a medical specialist.

Required the HEW Secretary, upon request by local or state welfare agencies or courts, to disclose the last known address of a man who failed to support his destitute wife or children.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

July 7 -- John J. Williams (R Del.) -- Provide that persons receiving aid under the federal-state medical assistance programs be afforded freedom of choice in obtaining health services from any qualified institution, agency or person. (A similar specification had been provided in the bill for recipients of aid under the two health care programs.) Voice vote.

Jacob K. Javits (R N.Y.) -- Permit local governments, at the discretion of the HEW Secretary, to share with the state government in providing the non-federal matching funds required under the medical assistance programs. (Javits said the language of the bill would allow only the state to supply the matching funds after 1970.) Voice.

Robert C. Byrd (D W.Va.) -- Lower from 62 to 60 the age at which a retired worker, a dependent spouse and a widow could draw benefits at a reduced rate. (The provision for widows was already in the bill.) Voice.

Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.) -- Eliminate the requirement under the basic medical care plan that a person must be a patient in a hospital for three days before being eligible for home health care benefits. Voice.

Frank J. Lausche (D Ohio) -- Require the HEW Secretary, upon request by local or state welfare agencies or courts, to disclose the last known address of a man who failed to support his destitute wife or children. Voice.

Javits -- Require the HEW Secretary to make a study of the possibility of providing coverage of prescription drugs under the supplementary health care plan and to submit his recommendations to Congress by June 30, 1966. Voice.

Thomas H. Kuchel (R Calif.) -- Give retroactive credit for Social Security payments by certain non-profit hospital employees who failed to file the necessary forms. Voice.

Russell B. Long (D La.) -- Permit ministers already ordained to exercise until April 15, 1966, their option of obtaining Social Security insurance coverage. (This option expired April 15, 1965. Under existing law, new ministers could sign up for coverage within two years of ordination.) Voice.

Mike Mansfield (D Mont.) -- Remove all ceilings on income tax deductions for medical expenses. (Existing law provided a $10,000 ceiling for a single taxpayer, $20,000 for a married taxpayer or a single disabled taxpayer 65 or over, and $40,000 for a married disabled taxpayer 65 or over. The House version set $20,000-$40,000 upper limits for all disabled persons regardless of age.) Voice.

Edward M. Kennedy (D Mass.) -- Permit a person receiving aid under the basic medical care plan to appeal to the HEW Secretary and the courts a disallowance of benefits when the amount of benefits in question was at least $100 (rather than $1,000 as provided by the bill). Voice.

Ralph W. Yarborough (D Texas) -- Provide that increases in federal funds for the public assistance programs be retroactive to June 30, 1965 (rather than effective Jan. 1, 1966, as provided by the bill). Voice.

Jack Miller (R Iowa) -- Exempt the increases in Social Security benefits from the income-limit requirements for payment of war veterans' pensions. (This would prevent a cut in a veteran's pension because his Social Security benefits were increased.) Voice.

July 8 -- Ernest Gruening (D Alaska) -- Provide that coverage agreements between school districts in Alaska and the Social Security Administration be considered valid. (Gruening said the Social Security Administration had ruled the agreements invalid because the school districts were not "political subdivisions" as required by law.) Voice.

Robert F. Kennedy (D N.Y.) -- Prohibit federal payments under the basic health insurance plan to any hospital not meeting the standards required by the state or local government. Voice.

Clifford P. Case (R N.J.) -- Establish an Advisory Council on Social Security to make a study of nursing homes and submit recommendations aimed at making "maximum use of such services" under the bill. Voice.

Kuchel -- Provide that states, until July 1, 1966, could receive the increased federal funds for public medical assistance programs if their existing programs substantially met the objectives and requirements of the bill; permit states to determine the federal share in the non-medical public assistance programs by using the same matching formula provided in the bill for the public medical assistance programs. Voice.

Abraham A. Ribicoff (D Conn.) -- Provide federal matching funds to states that wish to make their medical assistance programs available to needy children not eligible for assistance under existing programs. Voice.

Daniel K. Inouye (D Hawaii) -- Provide that aliens would be eligible for the two health care programs if they had lived in the United States for six consecutive months (rather than 10 consecutive years as provided by the bill). Voice.

July 9 -- Frank E. Moss (D Utah) -- Continue orphan's Social Security benefits after an orphaned child was legally adopted by a brother or sister. (Existing law covered adoption by stepparents, grandparents, aunts and uncles but not by brothers or sisters.) Voice.

Long (La.) -- Permit states to disregard up to $7 a month in increased Social Security cash benefits before reducing public assistance payments. Voice.

Eugene J. McCarthy (D Minn.) -- Insert the word "professional" in referring to the services of pathologists, radiologists, physiatrists and anesthesiologists billed through a hospital. (The insertion was requested by those specialists.) Voice.

McCarthy -- Provide post-hospital extended care to tubercular and psychiatric patients in addition to the in-patient hospital services provided by the bill. (The amendment did not change the 210-day lifetime limit on services to psychiatric patients.) Voice.

Vance Hartke (D Ind.) -- Broaden the disability insurance program for the blind by liberalizing the definition of blindness, by providing benefits to a blind worker with at least six quarters of work in Social Security covered jobs (rather than five years as under existing law) and permitting a blind person to receive benefits regardless of other earnings. Roll-call vote, 78-11.

Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) -- Insert language specifying that the services of radiologists, anesthesiologists, pathologists and physiatrists would be covered under the basic health insurance plan only when these services were billed through arrangements by the specialists with the hospital. (Douglas said such a provision already was in the bill but that the amendment would satisfy objections that the bill could be misinterpreted as requiring the services of the specialists to be covered in the basic medical care plan in all cases.) Voice vote.

Hartke-Long (La.) -- Eliminate the time limit on hospital care, providing 60 days of care with the patient paying a $40 deduction and an unlimited number of days thereafter with the patient paying $10 a day. (The bill provided the same deductions but set a 120-day limit.) Voice.

John Sherman Cooper (R Ky.) -- Direct the HEW Secretary to provide notices, by July 1, 1966, to beneficiaries of the Act explaining the benefits of the programs. Voice.

Winston L. Prouty (R Vt.) -- Permit nursing homes, in qualifying for the basic health care plan, to negotiate transfer agreements with hospitals outside the state. Voice vote.

George A. Smathers (D Fla.), on behalf of the Finance Committee -- Raise the rates of the payroll taxes to finance the increased benefits provided in floor amendments accepted by the Senate. Voice. (For a breakdown of the rates in the Senate bill, see Provisions, above.)

Jack Miller (R Iowa) -- Provide that hospital and extended care facilities certified by a state as qualified to take part in the health care programs be permitted to participate and that the HEW secretary offer the certifying state agency a hearing if the Secretary declared a facility unfit for participation. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

July 7 -- Abraham A. Ribicoff (D Conn.) -- Remove limits on the length of coverage and certain deductible amounts on inpatient hospital care, post-hospital care and home health care benefits under the basic health insurance plan. Roll-call vote, 39-43.

July 8 -- Jack Miller (R Iowa) -- Provide an automatic 3-percent increase in Social Security cash benefits whenever there was a 3-percent increase in the cost of living over the base year of 1964. Roll call, 21-64.

Hugh Scott (R Pa.) -- Provide, in place of the two health care plans, a voluntary federally administered health insurance program under which the Federal Government would pay up to $90 a year toward the premium on a qualified private policy for persons 65 and over. Voice.

Winston L. Prouty (R Vt.) -- Provide increases ranging from 7 to 75 percent in Social Security cash benefits. (The bill provided an across-the-board 7-percent increase.) Roll call, 12-79.

Carl T. Curtis (R Neb.) -- Provide that a hospital patient under the basic health insurance plan pay a deduction of either $40 or the amount of his previous year's income tax liability, whichever was greater, and that a patient under the supplementary health care plan pay an annual deduction of either $50 or the previous year's income tax liability, whichever was greater. (The bill provided only the $40 and $50 deductions.) Roll call, 41-51.

July 9 -- Miller -- Eliminate provisions covering health care plans and substitute an expanded Kerr-Mills program of medical assistance to the indigent aged with uniform eligibility requirements and with the Federal Government providing 75 percent of the funds. Voice.

Prouty, as modified -- Provide monthly payments of $35 from general revenues to all persons 72 and over not eligible for Social Security benefits. (Prouty's original amendment provided that all persons 70 and over not covered by Social Security receive the minimum benefits -- $44 a month -- provided in HR 6675.) Tabled, 55-36 roll call.

Curtis -- Delete language providing the basic compulsory health insurance plan and the supplementary voluntary health care program. Roll call, 26-64.

Thruston B. Morton (R Ky.) -- Delete language extending compulsory Social Security coverage to self-employed physicians and interns. Roll call, 41-50.

Eugene J. McCarthy (D Minn.), Hiram L. Fong (R Hawaii) -- Reduce eligibility requirements for disability benefits for a person disabled before age 31 to one-half the time between age 21 and the age at which he became disabled, or to 1-1/2 years, whichever was greater. (Existing law provided that a disabled worker must have worked five years during the 10 years preceding his disability to be eligible for disability benefits.) Voice.

Curtis -- Provide deductions, based on income tax liability, during the first five years that the two health care plans were in effect. (The amendment was identical to an earlier one proposed by Curtis except for the five-year limit. See above.) Roll call, 40-52.

Fred R. Harris (D Okla.) -- Require a deductible amount of $2.67 a day after the first 60 days in a nursing home (rather than $5 after the first 20 days as provided in the bill) and provide for payment of "the reasonable cost" for nursing home services under the Kerr-Mills program. (The bill provided "reasonable cost" payments for Kerr-Mills hospital services.) Voice.

Vance Hartke (D Ind.) -- Provide an additional $170,000 a year for the Virgin Islands' old age pension program. Voice.

Conference

REPORT -- The conference report on HR 6675 (H Rept 682) was filed July 26. Senate-House conferees had reached agreement after six meetings.

The conferees in general cut back the increased benefits voted by the Senate, but they accepted the higher taxable earnings base the Senate set for 1966-70. They rejected Senate amendments to lower the retirement age for all recipients of Social Security cash benefits from the existing 62 to 60 and to cover services of radiologists, anesthesiologists, pathologists and physiatrists under the basic (rather than supplementary) health plan.

The first full-year cost (1967) of HR 6675 under the conference version was estimated as $6.5 billion, compared with $7.6 billion under the Senate version and $6 billion under the House version. The cost would be financed by $1.4 billion in general revenues, $4.5 billion in additional payroll taxes (to finance the compulsory basic health insurance program and increased Social Security benefits) and $600 million in contributions from participants in the voluntary supplementary medical care plan.

Details of major conference decisions:

BASIC HEALTH CARE PLAN

Eligibility. The conference committee provided that federal employees who were eligible for but not enrolled in the federal health benefits program and retired before Feb. 16, 1965, would be eligible for the basic health care plan. The House excluded all persons who were eligible for the federal health benefits program, whether actually enrolled or not. The Senate brought under the basic plan those federal employees who had not enrolled in the federal health program.

Conferees excluded aliens who had not lived in the United States for at least five consecutive years. The House provided a 10-year requirement. The Senate cut this to six months.

Benefits. Conferees provided 60 days of hospital care with a $40 deduction and an additional 30 days with a $10-a-day deduction. The House provided only 60 days with a $40 deduction; the Senate added an unlimited number of additional days with a $10-a-day deduction.

The Senate provision providing 100 days of nursing home care, with a $5-a-day deduction after the first 20 days, was accepted. The House provided 20 days plus two additional days for each unused hospital day, up to a maximum of 80 additional days.

Conferees accepted the House provision that provided 100 home health-care visits after discharge from a hospital or extended-care facility. The Senate provided 175 visits a year without the requirement of hospitalization or a stay in an extended-care facility.

The conference members adopted a Senate provision providing that the patient pay a $20 deduction for outpatient diagnostic services plus 20 percent of the remaining costs and permitting the $20 deduction to be credited against the annual $50 deduction required under the supplemental health care plan. The House provided only the $20 deduction but permitted this to be credited against the $40-inpatient-hospital deduction if the person became an inpatient in the same hospital within 20 days after receiving the diagnostic services.

A lifetime limit of 190 days for psychiatric hospital care under the basic plan was agreed on. The House provided this service under the supplementary plan with a 180-day lifetime limit. The Senate moved the services under the basic plan and set a lifetime limit of 210 days.

Conferees rejected a Senate amendment to include under the basic plan extended care facilities dealing primarily in the care and treatment of mental diseases and tuberculosis.

The conference committee permitted 30 days of services in a Christian Science nursing home with a $5-a-day deduction. The House did not provide for Christian Science nursing home services. The Senate brought these nursing homes under the program but did not spell out the benefits. Both chambers covered Christian Science facilities under hospital services.

Conferees accepted the House provision covering services of radiologists, anesthesiologists, pathologists and physiatrists under the supplementary health plan.

The Senate amendment to cover the services of dental interns and residents in hospitals under teaching programs was accepted.

Administration. The conferees provided a review by a hearing examiner on appeals to claims between $100 and $1,000. The Senate provided a hearing examiner review and a judicial review on such claims, while the House provided the reviews only for claims of $1,000 or more.

The conference members accepted a modified Senate amendment that prohibited federal payments to any hospital not meeting the standards required by the state or local government.

The conference committee rejected a Senate amendment that permitted nursing homes to negotiate transfer agreements with hospitals outside the state. The committee said this amendment was not necessary since the House bill had not required the hospital to be in the same state as the nursing home.

Conferees rejected Senate amendments providing for a study and report with recommendations on extended-care facilities; providing that hospital and extended-care facilities certified by a state as qualified be permitted to take part in the program; and requiring personal notices to beneficiaries of the benefits of the basic medical care program. The conferees said they understood that the Social Security Administration would take "all feasible steps" to provide recipients with full information on benefits of the health care program.

SUPPLEMENTARY MEDICAL CARE PLAN

Benefits. The conference committee accepted the House effective date of July 1, 1966, instead of the Senate date of Jan. 1, 1967.

The committee adopted the Senate amendment to extend the program to certain dental surgery services but rejected the Senate change to add the services of podiatrists and chiropractors.

Conferees rejected a Senate amendment authorizing a study of the feasibility of extending the program to prescribed drugs.

Enrollment. The House timetable for enrolling in the plan was accepted.

Income Tax. Conferees accepted the House provision, deleted by the Senate, that limited income tax deductions for medical expenses for persons 65 and older to the amount in excess of 3 percent of adjusted gross income and for drug expenses in excess of 1 percent. (Under existing law, the limit applied only to persons under 65.)

The conference committee provided a separate income tax deduction for medical care insurance, with the deduction not to exceed $150 a year. The House provided a deduction of up to $250 a year, the Senate none.

All ceilings on income tax deductions for medical expenses were removed, as in the Senate bill.

KERR-MILLS PROGRAM

Conferees provided that existing public medical assistance programs would end Dec. 31, 1969, and that thereafter states wanting to receive federal funds for such programs would have to take part in the new combined program provided in HR 6675. The House required that the existing programs terminate July 1, 1967. The Senate gave states the option of continuing under existing law or taking part in the new program.

The conference committee accepted the Senate provision that any state agency could be designated to administer the new program as long as the eligibility requirements were established by the agency administering the old-age assistance program.

The committee accepted the Senate provision that local governments, under certain conditions, could share with the state government in providing the non-federal matching funds. The House provided that only the state could put up the non-federal funds after July 1, 1970.

Conferees rejected Senate amendments which provided that recipients would have a freedom of choice in obtaining health services from any qualified provider and which permitted states to receive increased funds for medical assistance programs if their existing programs met the objectives and requirements of the bill.

The conference committee accepted a Senate amendment providing federal matching funds to states wishing to make their medical assistance programs available to medically needy children not eligible for public assistance programs. However, the conferees rejected a Senate provision to extend this coverage to adults caring for the children.

CHILD HEALTH CARE

The conference committee accepted the Senate provision increasing authorized funds for the child welfare program.

They also accepted the Senate provision authorizing $500,000 annually in fiscal 1966-67 for grants for research in emotional illness in children but rejected the Senate provision authorizing a new program of project grants for health services to emotionally disturbed children.

OASDI

Benefits. The conference members exempted the first $1,500 that an individual could earn a year without losing Social Security benefits and provided a $1 reduction in benefits for each $2 of earnings between $1,500 and $2,700 and for each $1 of earnings above $2,700. The House retained the existing exemption of $1,200 and applied the $1-for-$2 ratio on earnings between $1,200 and $2,400 and the $1-for-$1 ratio on earnings above $2,400. The Senate exempted the first $1,800 and applied the $1-for-$2 ratio on earnings between $1,800 and $3,000 and the $1-for-$1 ratio on earnings above $3,000.

The conference members adopted the Senate amendment providing reimbursement from Social Security funds to states providing vocational rehabilitation services to persons entitled to disability insurance benefits or a disabled child's benefits.

Conferees accepted Senate amendments to provide that disabled benefits be offset by payments under workmen's compensation laws when combined payments exceeded 80 percent of the beneficiary's average monthly pay before disability; to pay 50-percent benefits to widows 60 and over and to widowers 62 and over who remarried; and to continue orphan's benefits after an orphaned child was legally adopted by a brother or sister.

The conference members adopted the Senate provision which provided that an insured worker would be eligible for disability benefits if his disability had lasted or was expected to last for 12 consecutive months. The House provided benefits after a disability of six months.

The conference committee rejected Senate provisions to lower from 62 to 60 the age at which an eligible worker could retire at reduced benefits; to extend disabled child's benefits to children disabled before age 22 (rather than the existing age of 18); and to exempt the increased Social Security benefits from the income-limit requirements for payment of war veterans' pensions.

Conferees provided that a person who became blind before age 31 would qualify for disability benefits if he had worked in Social Security jobs for at least six quarters or half the time between age 21 and when he became blind, whichever was greater. (Existing law provided that a blind person must have worked five years during the 10 years preceding his blindness to be eligible for disability benefits.) Conferees also provided that a person 55 and older who became blind would qualify for cash benefits if he was unable to work in his past occupation. (Existing law prohibited benefits to blind persons of all ages who were able to work in any substantial gainful job.) The conference members rejected a Senate amendment that liberalized the definition of blindness, provided benefits to blind persons of all ages with at least six quarters of Social Security covered work and permitted a blind person to receive benefits regardless of other earnings.

Coverage. The conference committee provided that waiters and other employees receiving tips would pay Social Security taxes -- at the employee rate -- on tips received. The employer would withhold from the employee's wages the Social Security taxes -- and income taxes -- on tips reported but would not be required to pay the matching employer Social Security tax on the tips. The House provided that both employee and employer pay taxes on tips. The Senate provided that tips be considered as self-employment income, which required a higher tax rate than that which an employee paid on his salary.

The committee accepted the Senate provision to extend OASDI coverage to self-employed doctors in 1965. The House provided the coverage to start in 1966.

Conferees accepted Senate amendments to permit ministers already ordained to exercise until April 15, 1966, their option of obtaining Social Security insurance coverage (this option expired April 15, 1965) and to validate agreements between certain school districts in Alaska with the Social Security Administration. (The House had included Kentucky as well as Alaska in the latter provision.)

Administration. The conference members modified the Senate amendment to require the Social Security Administration, upon request by local or state welfare agencies, to disclose the last known address of a person who failed to support his or her destitute children under 16. The committee modified the amendment to omit destitute wives and to provide that an actual public assistance case must be involved and that all non-disclosure provisions be complied with.

The conference committee accepted the Senate amendment to give retroactive credit for Social Security payments by certain non-profit hospital employees who failed to file the necessary forms.

FINANCING

The conference committee set rates for payroll taxes to finance the basic health care plan and increased Social Security benefits that varied between the rates provided by the House and Senate. (For separate rates, see Provisions. For the combined rates, see table on p. 241.)

Conferees accepted Senate action establishing a taxable earnings base of $6,600 a year, effective Jan. 1, 1966. The House provided an increase from the existing $4,800 to $5,600 on Jan. 1, 1966, and to $6,000 Jan. 1, 1971.

PUBLIC ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS

The conference members adopted the House effective date of Jan. 1, 1966, for increases in federal matching funds. The Senate advanced the date to June 30, 1965.

Conferees permitted states, in reducing benefits under the aid for dependent children program, to exempt up to a total of $150 a month earned by dependent children under 18 in the same family, with a $50 limit on any one child. The Senate exempted $50 a month earned by any child, limiting the exemption to three children.

Conferees accepted a Senate amendment to permit states to exempt the first $20 and one-half of the next $60 of a recipient's monthly earnings in reducing benefits under the program of aid to the disabled.

The conference committee permitted states to exempt $5 a month in additional income before reducing payments under any of the public assistance programs. The Senate provided a $7 exemption.

The committee accepted the Senate amendment to permit states to determine the federal share in the non-medical public assistance programs by using the same matching formula provided in the bill for the public medical assistance programs.

MISCELLANEOUS

Conferees rejected the Senate amendment which provided that a beneficiary could obtain the services of an optometrist or a medical specialist under any title of the Social Security Act authorizing benefits for services that optometrists were licensed to perform. This did not affect a provision under the Kerr-Mills program permitting a person to choose an optometrist for certain services.

The conference committee rejected a Senate amendment authorizing an additional Under Secretary and two new Assistant Secretaries in the Health, Education and Welfare Department to help carry out the programs and changes in HR 6675. (The additional Secretaries were dropped apparently because the Health Research Facilities Amendments of 1965 (HR 2984), cleared by Congress July 27, authorized three new Assistant Secretaries, one of whom would be the current Special Assistant to the Secretary for health and medical affairs. (See story p. 342)

ACTION -- The House July 27, by a 307-116 roll-call vote, and the Senate July 28, by a 70-24 roll-call vote, adopted the conference report and sent HR 6675 to the White House.

House. Seventy Republicans joined 237 Democrats to vote for adoption of the report, while 48 Democrats, including two Northerners, Baring (Nev.) and Jones (Mo.), sided with 68 Republicans against adoption. (For voting, see chart p. 982)

Only a few Representatives switched their positions between passage of the bill April 8 and adoption of the conference report July 27. On both votes the bulk of Republican support for the bill came from the Massachusetts, Michigan, New York and Pennsylvania GOP delegations. Minority Leader Gerald R. Ford (R Mich.) was the only member of these delegations who voted against the bill.

During a brief discussion preceding adoption of the report, Rep. Wilbur D. Mills (D Ark.), floor manager of the bill, called HR 6675 "one of the most significant and far-reaching measures which had been before this or any recent Congress." He said the conference version of the bill represented over 95 percent of the House's original version.

Rep. John W. Byrnes (R Wis.), who had led a fight against passage of the bill, said he still thought the bill was a bad one but "the die has been cast." He urged opponents "to bury...any disagreements or animosities" and "do their utmost to make the program work as well as possible." He voted for the conference report.

Senate. The vote breakdown: for the conference report, 13R, 57D; against it, 17R, 7SD. No Senator switched his position between passage of the bill and adoption of the report. (For voting, see chart p. 1062)

The Senate debated the report July 27-28. Much of the discussion consisted of Senators complaining that their amendments had been rejected in conference. Majority Whip Russell B. Long (D La.), the bill's floor manager, indicated he agreed with some of the complaints, saying, "Frankly, I have sometimes gained the impression in conference with some of the senior House Members that they would be opposed, if they had the opportunity, to the great compromise, even, that brought this Union into being and created the U.S. Senate. I have been to conference with a House bill that the Senate had amended, and the attitude of the House conferees was that we had no right whatever to amend it except...in keeping with something that the House had put in its bill in the first place."

Long said the bill "does more to meet more human problems than any other measure ever passed." Majority Leader Mike Mansfield (D Mont.) described final approval of the bill as "a new milestone in the history of American social legislation."

BILL SIGNED

President Johnson July 30 signed HR 6675 into law (PL 89-97). The signing took place in Independence, Mo., in the presence of former President Truman, who had been the first President to seek Government medical care legislation. Excerpts from the President's remarks:

"The benefits under the law are as varied and broad as the marvelous modern medicine itself. If it has a few defects, such as the method of payment of certain specialists, then I am confident those can be quickly remedied -- and I hope they will be.

"No longer will older Americans be denied the healing miracle of modern medicine. No longer will illness crush and destroy the savings that they have so carefully put away over a lifetime so that they might enjoy dignity in their later years. No longer will young families see their own incomes, and their own hopes, eaten away simply because they are carrying out their deep moral obligations to their parents, and to their uncles, and their aunts.

"And no longer will this nation refuse the hand of justice to those who have given a lifetime of service and wisdom and labor to the progress of this progressive country."

AMA STAND ON MEDICARE LAW

The American Medical Assn. House of Delegates Oct. 3 ended speculation on a possible doctors' boycott of the new federal medicare program by adopting a resolution opposing "any program of dictation, interference, or coercion, whether direct or indirect, affecting the freedom of choice of the physician to determine for himself the extent and manner of participation or financial arrangement under which he shall provide medical care under PL 89-97."

Before passage of the resolution at a special session of the AMA's House of Delegates, the AMA legal counsel, A. Leslie Hodson, advised the delegates that an organized doctors' boycott of the program would almost certainly be held a violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act. He said that if the House of Delegates were to recommend a boycott, this "would be interpreted in any court as constituting restraint of trade."

At its regular June meeting, the AMA's House of Delegates had left it up to individual physicians to determine whether they should participate in the medicare program while the AMA engaged in a further study of the boycott question. The June 20-24 convention had declined to endorse any of eight state and one individual resolutions calling for a boycott. The language it did adopt promised study of a boycott and said, "It is each individual physician's obligation to decide for himself whether the conditions of a case for which he is about to accept responsibility permit him to provide his own highest quality of medical care."

In the resolution adopted at the special October meeting, the delegates made clear that the AMA would not sponsor any organized boycott, and was permanently leaving it to each individual physician to determine whether he, personally, would participate in the medicare program.

The delegates also resolved that, in connection with the new medicare program, "the AMA shall continue to meet with representatives of agencies and departments of the Federal Government, to participate in such advisory committees which are created, and to contribute whatever advice and suggestions are deemed advisable and necessary in the formulation and revision of regulations which will help it achieve medicine's objectives on behalf of the public and the profession."

NURSERY TO GRADUATE SCHOOLS AIDED IN 1965

Congress in 1965 authorized over $2 billion for revolutionary new education programs to help students and schools at the elementary, secondary, college and graduate level. Although the first session of the 88th Congress in 1963 (labeled by President Johnson the "Education Congress") and the second session in 1964 had produced important new education legislation, the 89th Congress exceeded these, enacting controversial programs that had been deleted and rejected off and on for 20 years.

For the first time Congress approved a general aid to education bill, providing an initial $1.3 billion for the nation's elementary and secondary schools. Different versions of a general school aid program had been before Congress since World War II. Also enacted for the first time was a program of federal scholarships for college students. In the past, both of these programs had bogged down in bitter controversies, religious, racial and partisan.

In addition to these two major breakthroughs, Congress authorized more than $650 million for college aid (of which scholarships were a part) including guaranteed student loans, increased construction funds, grants for library books and materials, grants for university extension programs aimed at combating urban problems, and funds to help small colleges. It provided substantial aid for the health professions, enacted numerous smaller bills, including aid to schools in disaster areas, and established a National Foundation on the Arts and Humanities.

The President and Congress in the Higher Education Act singled out teachers for special help. The Act contained a graduate fellowship program for experienced and future teachers, and authorized a national Teacher Corps to improve classes in impoverished schools. As in the past, when conservatives regarded direct aid to teachers as a possible instrument for federal control of education, House Republicans opposed the Teacher Corps. The only part of the entire education program which was blocked, the Teacher Corps, though authorized for two years, received no appropriations in 1965.

General Aid. Before 1965, Congress enacted a number of significant education programs, but none was regarded as "general school aid." Although wide in application, these programs were designed to meet specific needs. The National Defense Education Act of 1958, with its emphasis on science, was enacted in response to the Soviet Union's success in orbiting the first man-made earth satellite; the problem of agricultural surpluses was involved in the school lunch and milk programs; and the GI Bills, by sending millions of veterans to colleges and universities, helped avoid a massive job shortage while benefiting those who had served their country. Even the 1963 college aid bill, a relatively broad program, earmarked construction grants for buildings used for special subjects such as science and mathematics. Congressmen, although willing to support these programs, were still, for a variety of reasons, against general aid.

In 1965, passage of the general aid bill, the Elementary and Secondary Education Act, was attributed to the power of the Democratic majority in Congress and the skill with which the Administration and Congressional leaders skirted the controversy over disbursing federal aid to parochial schools. Supporters of the bill successfully avoided the religious issue by emphasizing that aid would go to school children in needy areas and not to schools. The Administration's hand was also strengthened by the absence of the racial issue which had provoked additional opposition in the past. This issue had been settled by passage of the 1964 Civil Rights Act.

Much of the credit for this achievement went to the "teacher who became President." President Johnson built his education program around the theme of poverty, drawing support from public concern over the problem of the poor in an affluent society. "Poverty has many roots," the President said in his education message, "but the taproot is ignorance."

The major share of funds under the elementary-secondary bill was to be distributed according to the numbers of impoverished pupils in school districts (although 95 percent of the nation's counties were eligible). The college scholarship program was for exceptionally needy students. The preschool Project Head Start was actually part of the antipoverty program. The Teacher Corps was aimed at improving schools in impoverished areas. The aid program for small colleges was directed principally at impoverished Negro colleges.

All these funds were directed towards the poor, but the aid was general in the sense that it was not earmarked for specific purposes or specific subjects. Other aid programs which had been directed towards special needs were amended in 1965 to make them available on a wider basis, thus continuing a broadening trend begun in 1964. Both the 1963 college aid bill and the NDEA were amended in this way.

Appropriations for the Office of Education in fiscal 1966 doubled the fiscal 1965 sum, rising from $1.5 billion to $3 billion. (See chart, next page)

President's Education Requests

President Johnson Jan. 12 sent Congress his education message, recommending federal programs to aid three levels of education: preschools, elementary and secondary schools, and colleges and universities. In outlining the education needs of the country he said, "Specifically, four major tasks confront us:

- to bring better education to millions of disadvantaged youth who need it most;
- to put the best educational equipment and ideas and innovations within reach of all students;
- to advance the technology of teaching and the training of teachers;
- to provide incentives for those who wish to learn at every stage along the road to learning." (For text of his message, see p. 1374)

The education budget for fiscal 1966 contained a total of $4.1 billion, he said, of which $1.1 billion financed programs established in 1963 and 1964. The programs outlined in the 1965 message were expected to cost $1.5 billion in fiscal 1966.

The President's message contained 13 separate recommendations, all of which were enacted and most of which authorized new programs. Congress enacted the elementary and secondary school proposals with few changes. The higher education programs, for the most part, received larger authorizations than the President had requested. Following are the President's recommendations, as spelled out in two draft bills submitted by the Administration, and the action Congress took on them.

PRESCHOOL PROGRAM

Head Start. The President asked for $150 million under the antipoverty program for Project Head Start, a preschool program to help disadvantaged children before they reach elementary school. The Economic Opportunity Amendments of 1965 (PL 89-253) authorized almost $1.8 billion for poverty programs, including funds for Head Start. (See story p. 405)

ELEMENTARY AND SECONDARY SCHOOLS

Aid to Low-Income Districts. The President requested $1 billion in fiscal 1966 for a new program of aid to elementary and high schools serving children of low-income families (annual incomes of less than $2,000). The program, which applied to 95 percent of U.S. counties, was designed to provide some services to children in private as well as public schools. Funds, allotted by state agencies, could be used for a wide variety of purposes. The Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (PL 89-10) enacted this program, substantially as requested. (See story p. 275)

School Libraries and Textbooks. President Johnson requested $100 million annually in grants to the states for a new program to help buy books for libraries and for students in public and non-profit schools. The program was contained in PL 89-10.

Supplementary Educational Centers and Services. The President asked for $100 million in fiscal 1966 for community-wide centers to offer special educational services that individual schools could not provide. Among these would be courses in languages, sciences, music and art; programs for the handicapped; theaters and auditoriums; and so forth. All members of the community could participate. The plan was reportedly developed by Carnegie foundation president John W. Gardner, who later in 1965 became Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare. The program, to which HEW gave the name of PACE (Projects to Advance Creativity in Education), was authorized in PL 89-10.

Regional Education Laboratories. The President proposed amendments to the Cooperative Research Act of 1954 to establish "regional educational laboratories which will undertake research, train teachers and implement tested research findings." Under the 1954 Act four centers had been established on a pilot basis, and the amendments authorized construction and operation of new centers. President Kennedy had requested a similar expansion of the Act in 1963. The amendments were included in PL 89-10.

State Departments of Education. Mr. Johnson asked for $10 million in fiscal 1966 for grants to help strengthen state educational agencies. This request was included in PL 89-10.

HIGHER EDUCATION

Assistance to Students. The President proposed three types of student assistance:

Scholarships -- $70 million in fiscal 1966 for a new program of undergraduate scholarships to help up to 140,000 students from low-income families to attend college. The Higher Education Act of 1965 (PL 89-329) contained this proposal. (See story p. 294)

Guaranteed Low-Interest Loans -- A new program of guaranteed commercial loans with federal subsidies on the interest payments. This program for college students was included in PL 89-329. A second bill (PL 89-287) authorized a similar program for vocational students. (See story p. 309)

Work-Study Program -- $129 million in fiscal 1966 for expansion of the work-study program (established by the 1964 antipoverty bill) and transferral of the program to the Department of HEW. The program was amended to include students from middle-income as well as low-income families. PL 89-329 enacted these requests.

Aid to Developing Colleges. President Johnson requested $30 million to help small, impoverished colleges strengthen their academic programs through such means as faculty exchanges with other colleges and development of joint programs. He also recommended a fellowship program to encourage qualified young teachers to go to small colleges. PL 89-329 authorized $55 million in fiscal 1966 for this program but gave it only a one-year life. This was because the Senate insisted that junior colleges be eligible for aid, and the House was opposed.

Library Assistance. The President asked for $65 million in grants to colleges to purchase library books and materials and to support library training and research. PL 89-329 authorized this new program.

University Extension Program. The President requested $25 million in fiscal 1966 for grants to support

Appropriations for Office of Education

The following appropriations were voted by Congress for the Office of Education in fiscal 1966:

Vocational education	$ 252,491,000
Vocational education promotion*	7,161,000
College facilities construction	632,700,000
A & M colleges' endowment	11,950,000
A & M colleges*	2,550,000
Grants for public libraries	55,000,000
Payments to impacted schools	347,000,000
Construction of impacted schools	50,078,000
Defense educational activities	412,608,000
Education of the handicapped	25,500,000
Research and training	70,000,000
Educational research (foreign currencies)	1,000,000
Foreign language training and area studies	2,000,000
Salaries and expenses	29,547,000
Civil rights educational activities	5,000,000
Elementary and secondary education	967,000,000
Arts and Humanities education	1,000,000
Higher educational activities	160,000,000
Total appropriated	$3,032,585,000
Transferred from other agencies†	248,797,000
TOTAL	$3,281,382,000

* Permanent appropriations not needing annual Congressional action.

† Includes funds transferred from manpower training, antipoverty, educational television and other programs.

university extension courses concentrating on the problems of the community, such as pollution, transportation and health services. The program was to provide the help to urban areas that the land-grant colleges provided to agriculture. Mr. Johnson said, "The time has come for us to help the university to face problems of the city as it once faced problems of the farm." PL 89-329 provided $25 million in fiscal 1966 and $50 million annually in the following two years for the program.

Special Manpower Needs. The President recommended grants to colleges to train librarians, and an extension and expansion of existing programs to teach handicapped children and to train teachers of the handicapped. The library assistance provisions of PL 89-329 included authority to train librarians. Programs for the handicapped were enlarged by the Community Mental Health Centers Amendments law, PL 89-105. (See story p. 329)

PROGRAMS FOR TEACHERS

In a separate message midway through the session, President Johnson July 17 requested three additional programs: (1) a national Teacher Corps to attract new teachers to serve in impoverished areas; (2) a program of graduate fellowships for elementary and high school teachers; and (3) a program of grants to help colleges and universities improve teacher training.

The Teacher Corps, which was to be a nationally recruited and supported group of skilled teachers and teacher-interns, was first proposed by Sens. Edward M. Kennedy (D Mass.) and Gaylord Nelson (D Wis.), and was subsequently endorsed by the President. Like past proposals authorizing direct aid to teachers, it proved controversial, particularly in the House where GOP Members charged that it would lead to federal control over education. The Higher Education Act of 1965 (PL 89-329) authorized the Corps, but only for two years. And in the general supplemental appropriations bill at the end of the session, fiscal 1966 funds for the Corps were turned down by House-Senate conferees. (See story p. 182)

The Administration's graduate fellowship program, which was open to both experienced and recently graduated teachers, was aimed partly at improving the qualifications of Negro teachers who had been displaced by the desegregation and consolidation of schools under the 1964 Civil Rights Act. The program provided 4,500 fellowships in fiscal 1966 and 10,000 annually in the next two years. PL 89-329 authorized the teacher fellowships and the program of grants to colleges for teacher training. The two programs were to be coordinated.

The Higher Education Act, in addition to carrying out the President's recommendations, contained another new program and certain other provisions that were initiated by Congress. At the request of many colleges, the House doubled the fiscal 1966 authorization for construction of academic facilities from $290 million to $580 million, and the Senate added a new program of grants to colleges for laboratory and other equipment. The equipment provision authorized $37.5 million in fiscal 1966 and $5 million annually for training institutes on how to use the equipment. The Higher Education Act also contained amendments to the 1963 college aid bill and to the National Defense Education Act, including increased authorizations for two titles of the Act. (See story p. 294)

Loans for college housing were increased in the Housing Act of 1965 (PL 89-117) at Administration request, and Congress at its own initiative reduced the interest rate on these loans to a flat 3 percent. (See story p. 358)

OTHER BILLS ENACTED

Medical and Nursing Schools. Other major legislation, not included by the President in his education message, was enacted by the first session of the 89th Congress. Medical and nursing schools received substantial aid from the Health Professions Educational Assistance Amendments (PL 89-290). The Act, recommended by Mr. Johnson in his Jan. 7 health message, provided close to $800 million over a four-year period in operating and construction grants, student loans and scholarships to schools providing education for the health professions. (See story p. 333) Another bill, not requested by the Administration (PL 89-291), authorized $105 million over five years for aid to medical libraries for construction, training, books and other materials, and research. (See story p. 394)

Disaster Aid. Congress enacted a bill (PL 89-313) providing assistance to school districts affected by major disasters such as floods, hurricanes and tornadoes. Funds were authorized for construction and for operation of schools during a five-year period after the disaster. The bill, which provided disaster aid in the form of amendments to the impacted areas laws, made other changes in those laws. (For story on PL 89-313 and a related impacted areas bill, see p. 306)

Arts and Humanities. Congress established a National Foundation on the Arts and the Humanities in order to develop for the first time a national policy of support for these activities. The Act (PL 89-209) provided $20 million in fiscal 1966 to be granted to organizations and individuals engaged in the creative and performing arts, and to be granted or loaned for scholarship or research in the humanities. (See story p. 621)

Programs for the Deaf. Two new laws for the deaf were enacted: a National Technical Institute for the Deaf (PL 89-36) and a program providing new educational media for the deaf (PL 89-258). PL 89-36 authorized funds for construction and operation of a college to prepare deaf students for jobs in industry and other fields where special skills are required. PL 89-258 expanded a loan program of captioned films for the deaf to include other educational media, such as educational television with captions. (See story, p. 357)

War Orphans. Congress in HR 205 (PL 89-222) increased educational assistance allowances for orphans of war veterans from $110 to $130 a month. The Senate version (S Rept 569) increased the allowances to $150 a month, but the House (H Rept 451) insisted on $130 a month. The House version prevailed. Another minor bill, cleared Oct. 20 (HR 227 -- PL 89-349), extended the educational allowances to children of pre-World War II peacetime veterans.

Related Bills. The Appalachian Regional Development Act of 1965 (PL 89-4) authorized $1.1 billion, most of which was for highways for 12 states included in the five-year program. But $90 million was to pay part of fund-matching requirements to enable communities to receive other federal aid, including educational assistance. The bill earmarked $16 million for vocational schools. (See story p. 788)

Congress also passed amendments to the Manpower Development and Training Act of 1962 which provided training and basic education to the unemployed. The amendments (PL 89-15) authorized increased benefits for trainees and broadened the program to include professionals who need brief refresher courses to qualify for new jobs. (See story p. 810) Another measure (PL 89-14), related to the manpower amendments, enlarged the adult vocational training program for American Indians. It authorized $15 million annually for institutional and on-the-job training for Indian men and women.

BILLS LEFT IN COMMITTEE

Loyalty Oath Repeal. The House Education and Labor Committee May 28 reported an Administration-backed bill (HR 8330 -- H Rept 431) eliminating provisions of the National Defense Education Act of 1958 requiring recipients of federal funds to sign an oath of loyalty to the U.S. Constitution and to disclose all criminal convictions and charges pending against them. The bill was never cleared for floor action by the Rules Committee.

Controversy surrounded the loyalty oath provision. The original NDEA contained both the oath and a requirement that aid recipients also sign a non-Communist disclaimer affidavit. After many leading universities refused to participate in the program because of these two provisions, Congress in 1962 removed the disclaimer affidavit, but retained the loyalty oath. (1962 Almanac p. 238)

In 1965 Rep. Ogden R. Reid (R N.Y.) submitted an amendment, while the Committee was considering the higher education bill, to eliminate the loyalty oath from NDEA. Although it was approved by subcommittee May 19, it was stricken from the bill by the full Committee May 20 with the understanding it would be resubmitted as a separate bill. The Committee chose to take this approach because it expected that the college aid bill would have enough trouble on the floor without the added controversy generated by Reid's amendment. In the Committee report, eight of the 10 Committee Republicans filed minority views supporting the loyalty oath requirement.

Cold War GI Bill. A bill (S 9) to provide education and training to veterans of the cold war was passed by the Senate July 19. Like similar bills in past Congresses, S 9 was sponsored by Sen. Ralph W. Yarborough (D Texas) and had the support of major veterans organizations. However, the Veterans' Administration and the Defense Department opposed the bill. (See story p. 402)

School Construction Act. A bill (HR 9948, S 2532) to help construct schools in impoverished areas remained on the subcommittee level in both chambers.

Teachers' Sabbaticals. The House Education and Labor Committee Sept. 2 reported a bill (HR 10622 -- H Rept 954) providing grants for a sabbatical program for elementary and high school teachers who did not have a B.A. degree or needed to update their proficiency. No further action was taken on the bill.

Elementary and Preschool Child Development. A House subcommittee held hearings in October on a bill (HR 11322) to train and pay for the services of child development specialists in elementary schools. The specialists would work with disruptive children.

Income Tax Credit. Numerous bills to give income tax credit for parents paying college tuition expenses were introduced. They were strongly favored by Republicans but opposed by the Administration. The tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee took no action on the bills. In 1964 Sens. Abraham A. Ribicoff (D Conn.), former HEW Secretary (1961-62), and Winston L. Prouty (R Vt.) came close to winning Senate approval of a tax credit as an amendment to the omnibus tax bill. (1964 Almanac p. 532)

Report on 1965-66 School Year

HEW Secretary John W. Gardner Sept. 13 sent a memorandum to President Johnson summarizing federal efforts in aid to education for the 1965-66 school year.

Gardner said the "biggest news" was the way the country's schools and colleges were complying "with both the spirit and the letter" of the nondiscrimination provisions of the 1964 Civil Rights Act. (See story p. 567)

"Of almost equal importance," he said, "is the news that the rate of high school dropouts is declining, indicating an increase in the holding power of our schools. Of the class which entered fifth grade in 1957, approximately 71 percent -- an all time high -- will be graduating from high school next June. This will be a 4.6 percent increase in education's holding power over last year."

Among other figures Gardner cited were:

- New records in enrollment: almost 54.2 million in schools and colleges, broken down to 35.9 million in elementary schools, 12.9 million in secondary schools, and 5.4 million in colleges, an 8-percent increase in the latter category.
- More than 100,000 students from low-income families attending college, thanks to the antipoverty program's work-study grants. "Four out of five of these students would be unable to attend school without this assistance."
- 5.4 million children from low-income families were aided by the Elementary-Secondary Education Act.
- 7.8 million students enrolled in vocational and technical schools, a 30-percent increase over the previous enrollment, with federal funds allocated to help build 125 new vocational schools. "Approximately one of every five public high school students in the United States today is participating in a federally aided vocational program."
- 890,000 college students signed up for NDEA's student loan program at 1,700 institutions, and 5,853 graduate students receiving aid from NDEA's fellowship program, a 40-percent increase over the previous year.
- During the coming year, 460 colleges, universities and branch campuses will be building new undergraduate facilities with federal aid. When these new facilities are completed and opened, they will enroll a half-million students, who otherwise would have had no classrooms or laboratories to attend.
- In addition, 26 new community colleges and technical institutes are now under construction with the aid of federal funds. By fall of 1967 they will enroll 43,350 young people getting started on the road to higher learning.
- Federal funds helping to build over 360 public libraries serving 23 million people.
- 60 institutes training school personnel to cope with the desegregation of classrooms, with 4,500 persons from over 1,000 school systems already trained at the institutes.
- An expected enrollment of 105,000 adults in basic education classes in more than 45 states and territories under an antipoverty program run by the Office of Education.
- The federal captioned films for the deaf program serving "every one of the nation's 40,000 deaf children," and 95 percent of deaf adults "within reach" of the program.

White House Education Conference

The need for better quality teaching in American schools, a shakeup of hidebound methods and a closer link between educational programs and social problems were the major themes of the 1965 White House Conference on Education, held July 20-21 at the Statler Hilton Hotel, Washington, D.C.

The conference -- the first White House Conference on Education since 1955 (1955 Almanac p. 271) -- was attended by 650 delegates from all over the nation. The conference chairman was John W. Gardner, president of the Carnegie Corp., who was named by President Johnson July 27 to succeed Anthony J. Celebrezze as Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare.

By design of its organizers, the conference was set up in such a way as to preclude it from formally adopting any policy resolutions. Referring to this fact in a July 21 reception for the delegates on the White House lawn, President Johnson said the purpose of the conference had been to "stimulate some fresh thinking, not just talk about old ideas." The President said he planned to read the proceedings of the various panels. "I want to use your thinking" he told the delegates, "as a basis for the evolution of new programs and new actions, new legislative proposals...."

Mr. Johnson, summarizing in his address what had been the major preoccupation of the panelists, said the chief problem in American education at present was "not merely more classrooms and more teachers, although we need them and we are going to have them," but "a fundamental improvement in the quality of American education.... We are far too easily satisfied when we know that a child has a desk in a classroom with a teacher to instruct him. But it is what happens inside that classroom that really counts, and this is finally what is really important. And far too often what does happen is sadly unequal to what we have a right to expect."

Mr. Johnson's remarks came on the heels of a series of panel discussions in which there was relatively wide agreement that education in the United States, to a far greater extent than could be considered acceptable, suffered from lack of imagination, from lack of innovation and from failure to develop new methods and approaches to meet emerging social problems.

The hidebound, unimaginative quality of much of American education, many of the panelists agreed, left educators incapable of coping effectively with some of the most urgent problems of the day. The schools were said to be providing little leadership, North or South, in racial integration. They lacked both money and developed techniques for educating underprivileged and culturally deprived children in the "inner city" ghettoes. They were not doing enough for either gifted students or handicapped students.

Other general themes on which, according to observers, there appeared to be relatively widespread consensus: federal aid to education was now taken as a matter of course by most delegates, and there was general agreement that it should continue and be expanded still further, lest shortages of local funds block desired innovations; the Federal Government and various federal research programs had become a major fountainhead of new educational ideas and were leading the way in encouraging educational changes.

Despite the many failings of the schools in the United States, some observers reported that delegates to the 1965 conference were markedly more optimistic in their assessment of possible improvements than delegates to the 1955 conference had been. Several delegates who attended both conferences said the 1955 mood was one of discouragement, as if the problems then appeared almost beyond solution. They said the 1965 mood was that solutions were possible and would be forthcoming -- perhaps because, in recent years, the Federal Government had been providing leadership, research and funds, and educators as a result felt that powerful additional resources were at their command. Other delegates discounted this explanation.

THEME OF PANELS

The conference held 18 panels on various subjects. The topics were selected by a group consisting of Gardner, Harvard president emeritus James B. Conant (a vice chairman of the conference), Commissioner of Education Francis Keppel and several others on the basis of consultations with educational experts throughout the country and with government officials at different levels.

The choice of topics itself reflected the major problems and preoccupations in American education. Following are the subjects of the panels and the chairmen who summarized the panels' conclusions:

- Jobs, Dropouts, Automation. Chaired by Whitney M. Young Jr., executive director of the National Urban League.
- Skill Obsolescence, Re-Education. Chaired by Young.
- Teacher Education. Chaired by Harold B. Gores, president of Educational Facilities Laboratories in New York.
- Assessment of Educational Performance. Chaired by Gores.
- Role of the States. Chaired by Terry Sanford, former Governor of North Carolina (D 1961-65).
- Diversity in Higher Education. Chaired by Sanford.
- Overseas Programs, Foreign Students. Chaired by O. Meredith Wilson, president of the University of Minnesota.
- International Affairs Programs. Chaired by Wilson.
- Educating the Talented. Lawrence A. Cremin, professor at Columbia University.
- Educating the Handicapped. Chaired by Cremin.
- School Desegregation. Chaired by James E. Allen Jr., New York State Commissioner of Education.
- Preschool Education. Chaired by Allen.
- Innovations in Higher Education. Chaired by Ralph Tyler, director of the Center for Advanced Study in Behavioral Sciences, Stanford, Calif.
- Innovations in Elementary and Secondary Education. Chaired by Tyler.
- Research and Graduate Education. Chaired by Mary I. Bunting, president of Radcliffe College.
- Undergraduate Education. Chaired by Bunting.
- Community Extension. Chaired by Sidney Marland Jr., Pittsburgh Superintendent of Schools.
- Urban Schools. Chaired by Marland.

FIRST GENERAL SCHOOL AID BILL ENACTED

HR 2362 -- Reported by House Education and Labor Committee (H Rept 143) March 8, 1965.

- Passed, amended, by the House by a 263-153 roll-call vote March 26. (See p. 946)
- Reported without amendment by Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee (S Rept 146) April 6.
- Passed without amendment by the Senate by a 73-18 roll-call vote April 9. (See p. 1035)

PL 89-10 -- Signed into law April 11.

Congress and President Johnson in 1965 broke through the impasse that had long stymied legislation to provide federal aid to elementary and secondary schools. The Elementary and Secondary Education Act that resulted (HR 2362 -- PL 89-10) authorized the first general school aid in the nation's history.

The President's victory was made possible after he abandoned the traditional proposals -- across-the-board aid for school construction and teachers' salaries for all of the public school systems -- in favor of more specialized types of aids for districts with a number of children from low-income families. Furthermore, private schools were permitted to share in some of the federally aided services through such special programs as shared-time projects, educational television, etc. The bill gave the school districts wide discretion on how to use the funds; it required, however, that the funds be used for projects to meet the special needs of "educationally deprived" children, and that private schools be permitted to share services.

By using the "aid-to-children" approach, by providing specialized rather than across-the-board aid, and by permitting private school children to enjoy some of the benefits, the bill avoided much of the crossfire over aid to private schools that had helped kill school bills in the past. It provided enough aid for private schools so that Catholic groups were satisfied, but not so much as to stir up an insurmountable barrage of opposition. During the legislative action Catholics appeared to back the bill quietly, so as not to stir up latent opposition to parochial school aid (but they threatened opposition if a provision specifically permitting a constitutional test of such aid was added). The National Education Assn., a group of public school teachers and administrators, backed away from its old stand in opposition to any private school aid. Some Protestant and Jewish groups were opposed to the bill because it authorized aid to church-related schools, but they did not generate strong opposition in Congress.

Major Provisions. Title I of HR 2362 provided federal grants to the states (which would in turn distribute the funds to school districts) on the basis of the number of children from low-income (under $2,000 a year) families times 50 percent of each state's average expenditure per school child. If state school support rose, so would the federal aid. The school districts could spend the funds in any way approved by state and federal educational agencies, but they had to take into account the needs of low-income children who attended non-public schools. Therefore, the funds were to be used for such joint public-private services as shared time teaching or educational television. The bill did not specify whether funds could be used for private school teaching, but in House floor debate the bill's sponsor, Carl D. Perkins (D Ky.), said payment could be made for teachers in specific programs (such as guidance counseling) but not general subjects (such as English).

The program was authorized for three years. The first-year cost of Title I, based on the formula in the bill rather than on a specific authorization of funds, was initially estimated as $1.06 billion. By September, the estimate had risen to $1.175 billion. It was expected that the funds would benefit 95 percent of the nation's counties.

Four other titles of HR 2362: authorized a five-year program of grants to states for purchases of textbooks and other library materials under which some of the books would be loaned to private schools; authorized a five-year program of grants for supplementary community-wide educational centers to provide services that individual schools could not provide (counseling, remedial instruction, specialized training in advanced scientific or language subjects, provision of special teachers in art and music, etc.); expanded the 1954 Cooperative Research Act to authorize a five-year program of grants for new research and training in teaching methods; and authorized a five-year program of grants to strengthen state departments of education.

Funds ($1,016,050,000) to initiate the programs authorized in the Act were provided Sept. 23 in HR 10586, the supplemental appropriations bill for the Labor Department and HEW. (See p. 166)

Genesis of Act. The ideas for the President's 1965 education bill were contained in a report by a Presidentially appointed task force headed by John W. Gardner, then president of the Carnegie Corporation and later in the year named by Mr. Johnson to be Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare. Before the bill was sent to Congress, several Administration officials held many meetings with representatives of the NEA, the National Catholic Welfare Conference and other interested groups, in order to win their prior approval of the bill and so develop a consensus before it was sent to Congress.

This prior work was one major reason why the bill went through Congress with little difficulty. Another reason was the absence of two basic problems that previous school bills had faced -- the issue of whether segregated school systems should receive aid, and strong opposition, particularly among Republicans, to any federal school aid. The issue of aid to segregated schools had been settled by the Civil Rights Act of 1964, which forbade federal aid to any segregated institution. The sweeping Democratic victories in the 1964 elections brought many school aid proponents to Congress to replace Republican opponents.

The bill moved through the House with very few changes, and through the Senate with no change at all from the House version. This led to Republican charges that Congress was being asked to be a "rubber stamp"; the White House and the Democratic leadership, however, were anxious to avoid amendments lest the consensus behind the delicately balanced bill come apart.

Criticisms in Congress. The only major controversy the bill encountered in Congress involved the formula for providing Title I aid. (Continued on next page)

Opponents said the Administration method of multiplying half of a state's average expenditure per school child by the number of "low-income" pupils discriminated against the poorer states. They said it would be particularly hard on Southern school districts, which needed the most aid. Supporters of the Administration formula responded that it provided for larger percentage increases in Southern school budgets, and that because it was much more expensive to educate a child in the North, such a formula was necessary to properly aid Northern slum children. Members in both chambers, with the support of most Republicans, offered floor amendments to substitute a straight $200 grant for each low-income child. In the House this was defeated on a 149-267 roll-call vote, and in the Senate it lost on a vote of 38-53.

Another frequent criticism of HR 2362 during floor debate involved uncertainty about the low-income factor. While setting it at $2,000 for fiscal 1966, the bill provided that Congress would later determine the figure for succeeding years. (The level under "war on poverty" program was $3,000.) Some Members objected that this provision already indicated plans on the part of the Democratic leadership to work for a raise in the income factor in 1966.

President's Statements. Throughout the legislative action on HR 2362, President Johnson made a number of public statements on the importance of the bill and issued unusually strong praise of Congressional action. After House passage, the President said the action "represents the greatest breakthrough in the advance of education since the Constitution was written." On April 9 he told a news conference that members of the Senate subcommittee which approved the bill were "participating in one of the historic victories of the American nation.... From the very beginning knowledge for all was the key to success of the American experiment. The duty to provide that knowledge has rested on each successive generation. It weighs most heavily on us. For as society has grown more intricate the need for learning has grown more intense. And the rapid growth of the nation threatens to outdistance the capacities of the school systems we now have. The result is that millions of young Americans are denied their full right to develop their minds.... This (bill) truly is the key which can unlock the door to a Great Society."

At a Democratic dinner honoring Congress June 24, the President called the Education Act "the most important measure that I shall ever sign."

Provisions

As signed into law, PL 89-10, the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965:

TITLE I -- AID TO EDUCATIONALLY DEPRIVED CHILDREN

Extended for two years, through June 30, 1968, Title I of PL 81-874, which provided federal aid for school operations and maintenance in school districts "impacted" by the presence of federal installations.

Further amended PL 81-874 by adding a new Title II which:

Declared it the policy of the United States to provide financial assistance to local educational agencies serving areas with concentrations of children from low-income families.

Authorized the U.S. Commissioner of Education to distribute funds to state educational agencies which would in turn distribute them as basic grants to eligible local educational agencies for fiscal years 1966-68 and as special incentive grants to local educational agencies for fiscal years 1967-68.

Directed the Commissioner to reserve up to 2 percent of the funds appropriated for basic grants under this title for allotment among Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands.

Stipulated that where the Commissioner determined satisfactory data to be available (to make the following computation), the maximum basic grant to a local educational agency in fiscal 1966 would equal 50 percent of the average per-pupil expenditure in each state multiplied by the number of 5-to 17-year-old children in the school district from families with an annual income below $2,000, or with a higher income resulting from aid to dependent children relief payments. Where information was not available by school district, the maximum basic grant would be determined by county (computed in the same manner), with funds allocated among local agencies in the county in accordance with criteria prescribed by the Commissioner.

Provided that for fiscal 1967-68, Congress later would establish the percentage of the average per-pupil expenditure and the annual family income level to be used in determining the allocation of funds.

Limited basic grants for fiscal 1966 to a maximum of 30 percent of a local educational agency's budget for that year.

Stipulated that to be eligible for a basic grant, a local educational agency had to be located in a school district in which the number of school-age (5-17) children of families with incomes under the specified low-income figure ($2,000 or relief payments during the first year) totaled at least 100 or were at least equal in number to 3 percent of all of the school-age children in the district, whichever was less; in no case, however, could an agency receive a grant if it had less than 10 such children. Where information was not available on a school district basis, an agency would be eligible if there were 100 children from low-income families in the county in which the agency was located. In special cases, eligibility would be determined in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Commissioner.

Provided that each local educational agency eligible to receive basic grants in fiscal 1967 could receive a special incentive grant not to exceed an amount equal to the total number of children in average daily attendance at public schools during fiscal 1965 multiplied by the amount by which the average per pupil expenditure for fiscal 1965 exceeded 105 percent of such expenditure for fiscal 1964. For fiscal 1968, the expenditure factor required that average fiscal 1966 expenditures exceed 110 percent of expenditures for fiscal 1964. Federal funds could not be included when calculating average per pupil expenditures.

Stipulated that to receive a basic or special inventive grant, a local educational agency had to submit an application which had been approved by the appropriate state educational agency upon the state agency's determination that the application met certain criteria provided in the bill: (1) that the funds be used for programs to meet the special needs of educationally deprived children in areas with large numbers of children from low-income families;

(2) that the local agency take into account the number of such children in private schools in the area and make provision for services such as dual enrollment, educational radio and television and mobile educational services in which such children could participate; (3) that funds and property derived from funds provided under the title would be retained and controlled by a public agency; (4) that local agencies would annually evaluate and report to state agencies on programs under the title; (5) that projects be coordinated with local community action programs under the 1964 Economic Opportunity Act (PL 88-452).

Required any state desiring to participate in the program to submit through its state educational agency to the Commissioner of Education an application providing assurance that (1) payments under Title I would be used only for programs and projects approved by the state agency and that the agency would comply with the provisions of the title; (2) proper fiscal control and fund accounting procedures would be adopted; and (3) the state agency would make periodic reports evaluating the effectiveness of payments under the title and such other reports as were necessary to enable the Commissioner to perform his duties.

Directed the Commissioner, upon finding that there had been a failure to comply substantially with any assurance and after reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing to the state educational agency, to withhold further payments under Title I, or notify the state agency not to make further payments to local agencies affected by the failure.

Stipulated that the Commissioner could disapprove an application only after reasonable notice and opportunity for a hearing to the state educational agency.

Authorized the Commissioner to reimburse a state for costs of administering Title I, but the payment could not exceed an amount equal to 1 percent of the total amount of basic grants paid to the state in a year for distribution to local educational agencies.

Prohibited payments to any local educational agency for which the state agency found the combined fiscal effort, as determined by regulations established by the Commissioner of Education, of the local agency and the state to be less than that in fiscal 1964; or to any state which bases state aid to school districts on whether or not the district receives federal aid.

Provided for judicial review of the Commissioner's actions, with respect to approval of state applications or the withholding of funds, in the United States court of appeals for the circuit in which the state is located.

Directed the President, within 90 days after enactment of the bill, to appoint a 12-member National Advisory Council on the Education of Disadvantaged Children to review the operation of Title I. Directed the Council to report its findings and recommendations to the President by March 31 of each year following enactment of the bill.

TITLE II -- INSTRUCTIONAL MATERIALS

Authorized a five-year program (fiscal 1966-70) of grants for the acquisition of school library resources, textbooks and other printed instructional materials for the use of children and teachers in public and private elementary and secondary schools.

Authorized appropriations of $100 million in fiscal 1966 for the grants; specified that Congress later would provide authorizations for the following years.

Directed the Commissioner to reserve up to 2 percent of the funds for allotment among Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, with the remainder allotted to each state based on the number of children enrolled in its public and private elementary and secondary schools.

Required any state desiring to receive a grant to submit to the Commissioner a plan meeting criteria set forth in the bill.

Stipulated that federal funds be used to increase the level of state, local and private school spending for instructional materials and in no case to supplant it.

Provided that in any state in which no state agency was authorized by law to provide materials for the use of children in one or more elementary or secondary schools, the Commissioner would arrange for provision of the materials and pay the cost out of that state's allotment.

Stipulated that title to materials furnished under Title II, and control and administration of their use, would remain with a public agency.

Limited the materials made available under the title to those which had been approved by an appropriate state or local educational authority or agency for use, or were used, in a public elementary or secondary school in the state.

Prohibited the Commissioner from disapproving any state plan without reasonable notice and opportunity for a hearing.

Provided for judicial review of the Commissioner's action, with respect to approval of a state plan, in the U.S. court of appeals for the circuit in which the state is located.

TITLE III -- SUPPLEMENTARY EDUCATIONAL SERVICES

Authorized a five-year program (fiscal 1966-70) of grants to the states for supplementary educational centers and services to provide "vitally needed" educational services not otherwise available in quality or quantity and to establish model school programs.

Authorized appropriations of $100 million in fiscal 1966 for the grants; specified Congress would later provide authorizations for the following years.

Directed the Commissioner to reserve up to 2 percent of the funds for allotment among Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands.

From the remainder of funds, directed the Commissioner to apportion $200,000 to each state, with the rest apportioned (1) half according to the relative number of 5-17-year-old children in each state (compared to the number in United States) and (2) half according to the relative total population of each state (compared to the total U.S. population).

Stipulated the types of supplemental educational centers and services for which funds might be used. Among services which the bill said could be included were: counseling, remedial instruction, and health, recreation and social work services to help persons enter, remain in, or reenter educational programs; academic services and vocational guidance and counseling for continuing adult education; development of exemplary educational programs, including dual enrollment; specialized instruction and equipment for students studying advanced scientific subjects, foreign languages and other courses; provision of specially qualified personnel, including artists and musicians, for teaching on a temporary basis; development and production of educational radio and television programs; and provision of special educational services for persons in rural areas, such as mobile services and equipment, home study courses and visiting teachers' programs.

Required assurance that planning of programs would include participation by state educational agencies, institutions of higher education, non-profit private schools, public and non-profit private agencies such as libraries, museums, musical and artistic organizations, educational radio and television and other cultural and educational resources.

Required that the funds be used to supplement, and not supplant, state funds for the given purposes.

Required any local educational agency or agencies desiring to receive a grant to submit to the Commissioner an application meeting criteria set forth in the bill. Specified conditions under which the Commissioner may approve a grant request.

As one of such conditions, specified that the application provide for participation in the programs of children enrolled in non-profit private schools.

Directed the Commissioner to establish in the Office of Education a nine-member Advisory Committee on Supplementary Educational Centers and Services, with himself as chairman, to advise the Commissioner on the action to be taken with regard to each application for a grant and on general policy matters under the title.

Provided that if within 20 years after completion of a construction project (a) the facility ceased, without good cause, to be used for the purposes for which it was constructed or (b) its owner ceased to be a state or local educational agency, the Government would be entitled to recover from the applicant or other owner of the facility an amount bearing the same ratio to the then value of the facility as the federal funds bore to its original cost.

TITLE IV -- EDUCATIONAL RESEARCH AND TRAINING

Amended PL 83-531 (The Cooperative Research Act) by adding provisions which:

Authorized the Commissioner to make grants to -- or enter into contracts or jointly financed cooperative arrangements with -- universities, colleges and other public or non-profit private agencies, institutions and organizations and to individuals for research, surveys and demonstrations in the field of education and the dissemination of information derived from such research. (This provision broadened a 1954 law by providing grants as well as the other types of financial arrangements, by authorizing all types of financial assistance for dissemination of information, and by adding to colleges and universities, the other possible recipients of aid.)

Authorized the Commissioner to permit grantees to use funds to provide training in research in education, including establishing and maintaining research traineeships, internships, personnel exchanges and pre- and post-doctoral fellowships. Prohibited the use of such funds for training in sectarian instruction or work in an institution whose program was specifically to prepare students to become ministers of religion, enter another religious vocation or teach theological subjects.

Authorized the Commissioner to transfer funds to, or accept funds from, any other Government agency for use under the title.

Directed the Commissioner to transmit an annual report to Congress on the administration of the title and the recommendations made by a panel of non-Government specialists to be consulted by the Commissioner.

Authorized total appropriations of $100 million for the period of fiscal 1966-70, to remain available until expended, for construction and operation of regional centers for research in the field of education. Funds would be available for projects for which applications had been filed before July 1, 1970, and approved before July 1, 1971.

Authorized the Commissioner, when he found that the purposes of the Act could best be achieved through the construction of a facility for research and related purposes, to make a grant for part or all of the cost of such a facility to a university, college or other appropriate agency or institution, or a combination of them, or to arrange for constructing such a facility through contracts for paying all or part of the cost.

TITLE V -- STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION

Authorized a five-year program (fiscal 1966-70) of grants to stimulate and assist states to strengthen their state educational agencies.

Authorized appropriations of $25 million in fiscal 1966; specified that Congress later would provide authorizations for the following years.

Provided that 15 percent of the amount appropriated for each fiscal year would be used for grants to state educational agencies for experimental projects or the establishment of special services which, in the judgment of the Commissioner, might help solve problems common to the state educational agencies of all or several states.

From the remaining 85 percent of the amount appropriated each fiscal year, directed the Commissioner to reserve up to 2 percent for apportionment among Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa and the Virgin Islands.

From the remaining funds, directed the Commissioner to apportion $100,000 to each state, with the balance apportioned on the basis of the relative number of public school pupils in each state.

Provided that the federal share of expenditures would be 100 percent of a state's expenditures under an approved application in fiscal 1966; thereafter, the federal share would be 50-66 percent (66 percent for Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa and the Virgin Islands). Each state's share after fiscal 1966 would be an amount bearing the same ratio to 50 percent as that state's per capita income bears to the per capita income of all the states. The federal share could not be more than 66 percent or less than 50 percent.

Permitted a state to request that a portion of the amount apportioned to it be added to the sum apportioned to another state for the purpose of fulfilling the federal contribution.

Authorized the Commissioner, upon approval of a state application, to make a grant to a state educational agency equal in amount to the federal share of expenditures (see above) incurred by the agency for the purpose of the title.

Permitted the Commissioner to approve applications for grants to state educational agencies upon his determination that they met certain criteria set forth in the bill.

Provided that the grants should be used for such activities as educational planning on a statewide basis, reporting of state and local educational data, dissemination of information on state education, educational research and demonstration programs, programs to improve the competence of teacher preparation and of state or local education agency employees.

Authorized the Commissioner to arrange for assignment of officers and employees of states to the Office of Education, and of officers and employees of the Office of Education to states, for work which he determined would aid the Office in more effectively carrying out its duties. Limited the period of assignment to two years, and provided detailed pay and benefit provisions.

Prohibited the Commissioner from disapproving any application for a grant without first affording the state educational agency reasonable notice and opportunity for a hearing.

Provided for judicial review of the Commissioner's actions, with respect to approval of applications for grants, in the U.S. court of appeals for the circuit in which the state is located.

Directed the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, within 90 days after enactment of the bill, to appoint a 12-member Advisory Council on State Departments of Education to review administration of programs under the title. Directed the Council to make an annual report of its findings and recommendations by March 31 of each year, and the Secretary to transmit the report, with his comments and recommendations, to the President and Congress.

TITLE VI -- GENERAL PROVISIONS

Authorized the Commissioner to appoint a 10-member advisory council to advise and consult with him with respect to carrying out his functions under the Act.

Stipulated that nothing in the Act should be construed to authorize any Government department, agency, officer or employee to exercise any direction, supervision or control over the curriculum, program of instruction, administration or personnel of any educational institution or school system, or over the selection of library resources, textbooks or other instructional materials by any educational institution or school system.

Stipulated that nothing in the Act should be construed to authorize any payment for religious worship or instruction.

Background

REFERENCES: Federal Aid to Education (1961 Almanac p. 208; Congress and the Nation p. 1195).

General federal aid to primary and secondary schools was the most controversial issue of federal educational policy after World War II. Many bills were put forward, but questions of aid to private schools, aid to segregated schools, and arguments that federal controls would follow the aid combined to defeat the bills. Two 1950 Acts for construction and operation of schools in areas "impacted" by federal installations and consequent loss of taxes did pump money into many districts annually ($300 million in fiscal 1964), but did little to satisfy proponents of general aid, or blunt the opposition to it. Following is a chronology of Congressional action on primary and secondary school aid, 1946-64:

1946 -- A bill (S 181) authorizing a permanent program of federal grants (beginning at $150 million and going to $250 million in the third year and thereafter) to all but the wealthiest states to help equalize educational opportunities across the nation was unanimously reported to the Senate but not acted on. One of the sponsors of the bill was Sen. Robert A. Taft (R Ohio), who had previously opposed federal aid to education.

Explaining his change of position, Taft said that testimony given to the Senate committee had convinced him that in many states children were not receiving a basic education, even though some poor states were spending as high a proportion of their tax resources as the larger, wealthier ones. "Education," Taft declared, "is primarily a state function -- but in the field of education the Federal Government, as in the fields of health, relief and medical care, has a secondary interest or obligation to see that there is a basic floor under those essential services for all adults and children in the United States."

No legislative action was taken in the House. (1946 CQ Almanac p. 643)

1948 -- A bill (S 472) to appropriate $300 million a year for federal grants to the states for educational costs was passed by the Senate by a 58-22 roll-call vote. Debate on the bill centered on the fact that the states could distribute the money in the same way they already allocated their own funds and therefore private and parochial schools could get some of the federal funds. An amendment to bar such use of federal money was rejected on a 5-80 roll call, with four of the five supporters Southern Democrats. The bill was not cleared by the House Education and Labor Committee. (1948 CQ Almanac p. 146)

1949 -- A bill (S 246) similar to S 472 again was passed by the Senate on a 58-15 roll call, but school aid bills died in the House Education and Labor Committee after a bitter religious controversy. A bill (HR 4643) introduced by Chairman Graham A. Barden (D N.C.) would have restricted federal education grants to tax-supported schools (thus ruling out religious and private schools). Francis Cardinal Spellman called Barden a "new apostle of bigotry." (1949 CQ Almanac p. 266)

1950 -- The House Committee again wrestled with the Senate-passed S 246, but voted, 12-13, not to report it out, as the religious controversy continued. Before killing the bill, the Committee defeated amendments to cut aid to private schools. (1950 CQ Almanac p. 178)

The Committee then turned to bills to provide federal grants for school construction only, but shelved those and Congress passed the "impacted" areas bills instead (PLs 81-815 and 874).

1951 -- Rep. Mike Mansfield (D Mont.), later a Senator, offered an amendment to the pending "tidelands" oil bill to give the Federal Government control of the offshore lands and to put income from the mineral leases into a fund for aid to schools. The amendment was ruled out on a point of order. (1951 CQ Almanac p. 476)

1952 -- Sen. Lister Hill (D Ala.) introduced an amendment to specify that federal income from offshore lands would be used for national defense or public schools. The amendment was tabled by a 47-36 roll-call vote. (1952 CQ Almanac p. 335)

1953 -- Two submerged oil lands bills became law, but neither had an oil-for-education provision. One bill (HR 5134 -- PL 212) placed submerged lands far off U.S. shores under federal control. The Senate agreed, by a 45-37 roll call, to include the Hill amendment earmarking revenues as grants-in-aid for education. Republicans split 11 for, 30 against, while Democrats voted 34 for, 7 against the amendment. The oil-for-education amendment was deleted in conference. The other "tidelands" bill (HR 4198 -- PL 31), which gave the states claim to submerged lands within their traditional boundaries, carried no oil-for-education provision. During Senate action, an amendment by Sen. Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) to earmark revenues for aid to education was rejected on a 26-58 roll call. (1953 CQ Almanac p. 388)

1954 -- The Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee unanimously reported to the Senate a bill (S 2601) to authorize $500 million in federal aid to the states for a two-year period of emergency school construction, but no action was taken. The Eisenhower Administration opposed the legislation on the grounds that such heavy federal spending was not conducive to a balanced budget and would interfere with the maintenance of state and local control of public education. (1954 CQ Almanac p. 210)

1955 -- The House Education and Labor Committee reported a bill (HR 7535) authorizing $1.6 billion in federal matching grants over a four-year period for school construction and a $750 million federal revolving fund to buy school bonds, but the bill was not acted on. President Eisenhower asked Congress for a three-year, $1.1 billion program of federal aid for school construction, with all but about $200 million to be repaid. (1955 CQ Almanac p. 265)

1956 -- HR 7535 was killed on the House floor by a 194-224 roll-call vote after an amendment by Rep. Adam C. Powell (D N.Y.) that in effect barred aid to states operating racially segregated schools was added to it by a 225-192 roll call.

Ninety-six Republicans who voted against passage of the bill had voted for the Powell amendment, while Northern Democrats split over the civil rights issue involved. Southern Democrats voted against the Powell amendment and against passage of the amended bill. (1956 CQ Almanac p. 411)

1957 -- HR 1, a $1.5 billion compromise between Democrats' and Eisenhower Administration proposals, was killed on the House floor when a motion by Rep. Howard W. Smith (D Va.) to strike the enacting clause was adopted by a 208-203 roll-call vote. Ninety-seven Democrats and 111 Republicans voted to kill the bill; against killing it were 126 Democrats and 77 Republicans. Previously the House, by a 136-105 teller vote, had adopted a Powell-type amendment sponsored by Rep. Stuyvesant Wainwright (R N.Y.), an avowed foe of the bill. (1957 CQ Almanac p. 588)

1959 -- The Eisenhower Administration requested a program of federal payments stretched out over 30-35 years to help local school districts pay off the debt service (interest and principal) costs of $3 billion in long-term school construction bonds. Northern Democrats supported $4.4 billion annually for an indefinite period for federal grants for school construction and teachers' salaries. The House Committee reported a bill (HR 22) authorizing $1.1 billion a year for four years for school construction and teachers' salaries, but the Rules Committee refused to send it to the House floor. The Senate Committee later reported a bill (S 8) authorizing $500 a million a year for two years for school construction only. (1959 CQ Almanac p. 300)

1960 -- A general aid-to-education bill came close to passage, but was stymied when the House Rules Committee, by a 5-7 vote (D 5-3, R 0-4), refused to authorize a House-Senate conference that might have compromised differences between the House and Senate versions of the legislation. Between June 22, when the Rules Committee voted, and Sept. 1, when the 86th Congress adjourned, proponents of federal aid were unable to generate enough pressure to force final action on the legislation.

The Senate passed an amended bill (S 8) Feb. 4 by a 51-34 roll-call vote. It authorized $1.8 billion in federal grants for school construction and teachers' salaries, with payments to be spread so that poorer states would receive more money per school-age child than richer ones. Before passage, Sen. Joseph S. Clark (D Pa.), with 22 co-sponsors, offered an amendment to authorize $1.1 billion a year for an indefinite period for construction and salaries. This narrowly missed acceptance on a 44-44 roll call. A motion to table a move to reconsider the vote carried 45-44, Vice President Richard M. Nixon casting the deciding vote.

The House May 26 passed a bill (HR 10128) providing $1.3 billion in grants for school construction only, with no equalization formula. It also included a Powell anti-segregation amendment, which was adopted by a 218-181 roll call. However, a combination of Republicans and Southern Democrats was not quite large enough to kill the bill containing the Powell amendment, and it passed by a 206-189 roll-call vote (D 162-97; R 44-92).

This was the first year since 1949 in which the Senate passed a school construction bill and the first time the House had ever passed one. Even had the legislation not been balked in the Rules Committee, its provision of direct federal grants was expected to lead to a Presidential veto, as President Eisenhower was still backing a debt-service plan.

School aid and teachers' salaries became a major issue in the 1960 Presidential election, with Nixon saying salary aid invited federal control and John F. Kennedy backing the Senate-passed bill.

1961 -- President Kennedy sent Congress a program for grants of $2.3 billion over three years to be used by the states primarily for construction of elementary and high school classrooms and for boosting teachers' salaries. The bill (S 1021, HR 4970) contained provisions to extend the expiring portions of the impacted areas laws at about half existing rates. It was hoped that inclusion of this popular program would swing votes for the new school bill.

The President's message said that no general school aid funds were allocated for private schools, "in accordance with the clear prohibition of the Constitution." The Catholic Church hierarchy issued a statement that the bill should include private school loans or should be defeated. This formed the basis for the controversy that was ultimately to kill the bill.

In an effort to weaken the private school issue, the Administration and Congressional leaders decided that the Administration would send to Congress a second bill extending and expanding the National Defense Education Act of 1958. It was planned that Congress would amend the proposal to provide loans to private schools for construction of classrooms in which subjects important to national defense (science, mathematics, etc.) were taught. Thus some private school aid could be provided, but the Administration would not initiate it.

The Senate May 25 passed S 1021 on a 49-34 roll call (D 41-12; R 8-22), providing $2.5 billion in grants for public school operation and construction and for teachers' salaries. The House Education and Labor Committee June 1 reported a clean bill (HR 7300) also authorizing $2.5 billion for construction and salaries.

In the meantime Catholics, with the help of House Majority Leader John W. McCormack (D Mass.), were seeking assurances that the NDEA bill (with provisions for private school loans) would be brought to the House floor in tandem with the public school bill. They feared that otherwise Congress would pass the public school bill and then kill the private school loan section of the NDEA. The Rules Committee voted 9-6 to withhold House floor action on the public school bill until the NDEA bill was reported to it.

The Education and Labor Committee promptly reported the NDEA bill (HR 7904) with a private school construction aid provision. Nevertheless, the Rules Committee July 18 tabled (killed) 8-7 en bloc the public school bill, the NDEA bill and a college aid bill which had also been reported. (1961 Almanac p. 215)

A final abortive attempt to get some school bill through the House was made in late August, when Powell called up a one-year, $325 million, construction-only bill (HR 8890) which also extended the impacted areas programs. He brought up the bill under the seldom-used and difficult Calendar Wednesday parliamentary procedure. When he moved its consideration, the House without debate refused by a 170-242 roll-call (D 164-82; R 6-160).

1962-64 -- President Kennedy repeated his public school aid proposals in 1962 and 1963 and President Johnson supported them in 1964. However, the intensity of the 1961 fight over this request had left such strong feelings that neither the Administration nor Members of Congress made a major attempt to push general school aid during these three years. In 1962 a college aid bill (HR 8900) died at the conference level after it too became embroiled in the private school issue. (1962 Almanac p. 230, 1963 Almanac p. 188, 1964 Almanac p. 259)

THE PRIVATE SCHOOL ISSUE

The question of federal aid to church-supported educational institutions that troubled the Government over the postwar period involved old and unresolved issues. Although the Constitution, in the 1st Amendment, required that somewhere a line be drawn between church and state, a study of court decisions and precedents set by Congress produces no clear demarcation.

The 1st Amendment states: "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof...." The extent to which the authors of this amendment intended to guarantee freedom both of private worship and from a state-endowed religion, and how they envisioned the relationship between these two sections of the amendment, have long been disputed. Sanction for the existence of parochial schools rests in the freedom of religion clause; debate over federal aid to the schools revolves around the "establishment" clause.

There have been no actual court tests of the constitutionality of federal programs that grant some form of aid to religious institutions. Adjudication of them has been considered difficult because the litigant would probably have to be a taxpayer. In Frothingham v. Mellon (1923) the Supreme Court ruled that an individual taxpayer did not have enough standing, or sufficient interest, to challenge the way a federal law expended funds. (However, there is nothing barring the Court from reversing this ruling to hear a challenge to a federal law giving aid to private schools on the ground that it violated the 1st Amendment.) The cases most often cited to find precedents, therefore, were Court decisions on the constitutionality of state laws regarding religion and education. They were:

Everson v. Board of Education (1947). A New Jersey statute authorized local school districts to pay transportation expenses of children to and from all non-profit schools, with the district reimbursing parents of children who used public transit. In a 5-4 decision, the Supreme Court said that the primary purpose of the statute was public safety, not private education, and it therefore did not violate the 1st Amendment. The majority opinion, written by Justice Hugo L. Black, went beyond the immediate case to state that the 1st Amendment meant: "Neither a state nor the Federal Government can set up a church. Neither can pass laws which aid one religion, aid all religions, or prefer one religion over another.... No tax in any amount, large or small, can be levied to support any religious activities or institutions." This case is cited both by those who favor nonpreferential aid, especially that which can be cited as aiding the child, as opposed to the school, and by those who would prohibit all aid.

McCollum v. Board of Education (1948). Children in the public schools in Champaign County, Ill., were released to receive religious instruction in the religion of their choice for 30 minutes a week. The instruction was held in the schools' classrooms. The Supreme Court ruled that this violated the establishment clause because the facilities were provided by public funds.

Zorach v. Clauson (1952). The facts of this case differed from those in McCollum only in that religious instruction for which the students were released from time in public schools in New York City took place on private property, not in the schools. The New York statute was upheld. In the majority decision, Justice William O. Douglas said: "The 1st Amendment...does not say that in every and all respects there shall be a separation of church and state. Rather, it studiously defines the manner, the specific ways, in which there shall be no concert or union or dependency, one on the other. That is the common sense of the matter."

In the 1963-64 school year there were 75,538 public elementary schools in the United States and 14,321 private elementary schools, of which 13,299 were church-related. At the secondary level there were 26,278 public schools and 4,444 private schools, of which 3,595 were church-related The breakdown for colleges and universities showed there were 784 public and 1,384 private institutions, of which 877 were affiliated with a church. The figures were reported by the U.S. Office of Education in the Digest of Education Statistics.

Existing Private Aid

Despite the controversy surrounding the issue of federal aid to private and parochial schools, a number of federal programs had been enacted which extended some type of aid to private institutions. For the most part, the aid to private schools was in the form of loans, not grants, or of grants for specialized projects.

Among the programs which provided federal aid to private schools were: the "GI Bill's" direct grants of tuition expenses to schools chosen by the veterans; loans to colleges and universities for construction of dormitories; NDEA loans to private elementary and secondary schools for equipment for teaching science, mathematics, etc.; grants and loans for construction of certain college academic facilities; grants for construction of teaching facilities at medical schools; and, under the 1964

Economic Opportunity Act, "special remedial and other noncurricular educational assistance for the benefit of low-income individuals and families."

1965 Presidential Requests

President Johnson Jan. 12 sent Congress an education message containing a new program for aid to elementary and secondary schools. (For text, see p. 1374)

The message sought to end the legislative impasse over the question of federal aid to private schools by approaching it indirectly, and by shifting the focus of the program to low-income areas. The program did not provide funds for private schools directly, but it offered them some participation in the proposed program, justifying this in terms of benefit to individual students. Highlights of the message:

Preschool Program. Slum children must be helped before they enter first grade, the President said. Tests have shown that an average child from the slums is "a year behind in academic attainment by the time he reaches third grade -- and up to three years behind if he reaches the eighth grade." Yet almost half of the nation's school districts have no kindergartens and only 100 of the 26,000 districts have public nursery schools.

Mr. Johnson said $150 million of poverty program funds would be allotted to preschool projects under the community action program and that the Education Act's programs for low-income areas and supplementary educational services would apply to preschool activities.

Aid to Low-Income Districts. "The burden on the nation's schools is not evenly distributed. Low-income families are heavily concentrated in particular urban neighborhoods or rural areas. Faced with the largest educational needs, many of these school districts have inadequate financial resources," the President said.

He proposed that $1 billion in federal grants to the states be allotted to school districts where 3 percent of the elementary and high school children, or a minimum of 100 children, were from families with annual incomes under $2,000 (less than $40 a week). About 5 million of the country's 48 million school children come from such families and the President's program would apply to 95 percent of U.S. counties. Funds would be allotted on the basis of 50 percent of each state's average expenditure per school child.

Office of Education figures based on Census Bureau data showed that 29 percent of Arkansas school children were in the "disadvantaged" group, 37 percent in Mississippi, 24 percent in Kentucky, 5 percent in Chicago and 10 percent in Baltimore. School districts could receive such aid only if they complied with the requirements of the 1964 Civil Rights Act and did not reduce their own spending.

State education agencies would allot the grants to local school districts after approving their plans for special programs to aid educationally deprived students. The bill did not spell out the programs that could be undertaken; it left a wide range of possibilities, including construction of needed facilities, hiring of specially needed teachers, and services such as classes in remedial reading, educational broadcasts, mobile educational projects, and preschool or after-school programs.

The bill left up to the states the extent of the aid to be provided private school children, subject to regulations set by the U.S. Commissioner of Education. However, the school districts were required to provide some services -- such as "shared time" classes or educational broadcasts -- that would be available to children in private as well as public schools.

School Libraries and Textbooks. President Johnson recommended $100 million annually for five years in grants to the states to help buy books for elementary and high school libraries, other library materials and textbooks for children in public and private non-profit schools. Books for private schools would have to be the same as those approved for the state's public schools, and no materials purchased with federal funds could be used for sectarian instruction or worship.

The Office of Education said more than two-thirds of elementary schools had no libraries, one-fourth of the high schools do not provide free text books, the cost of books had risen over 33 percent since 1957-59, and the states spend for textbooks from $4.76 to $12.32 per student.

Supplementary Educational Centers and Services. "The educational gap we face is one of quality as well as quantity," President Johnson said. He proposed that community-wide organizations be established to coordinate and plan supplementary educational services that individual schools could not provide. Among these would be special courses in foreign languages, music and art; science laboratories; programs for the physically and mentally handicapped; guidance counseling; health and social work services. The programs could aid adults, out-of-school children and gifted children. They could be set up on a regional basis serving a number of communities.

Private school students could benefit from these programs. Their participation would generally take place at separate educational centers, mobile learning units and summer schools.

The President asked for a five-year program, with $100 million authorized for the first year.

Regional Education Laboratories. Mr. Johnson proposed amendments to the Cooperative Research Act of 1954 to establish "regional educational laboratories which will undertake research, train teachers and implement tested research findings." Under the 1954 Act four research centers had been established on a pilot basis at the Universities of Pittsburgh, Oregon, Wisconsin and Harvard. The amendments to the Act would authorize construction and operation of new centers for research and teacher training and the dissemination of information derived from research.

State Departments of Education. Mr. Johnson asked that a five-year program of grants to help state educational agencies be authorized. The grants would help the agencies' research, information and technical assistance programs, and encourage long-range planning. The first year's authorization would be $10 million.

REACTION

Catholics. The program evoked qualified support from Catholic spokesmen who previously had objected to legislation that did not provide aid for parochial schools. Msgr. Frederick G. Hochwalt, director of the department of education of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, Jan. 12 issued a statement that said, in part: "The major purpose of the President's (program) is to meet the educational needs of the children. This emphasis on the child, the student, I applaud. Priority is given to children in areas of economic distress.... I would urge, however, that consideration be given to other resources available in those areas, namely, the private, non-profit schools. It should be emphasized repeatedly that the beneficiaries of any aid program should be the children, wherever their wants are found."

NEA Position. Before submission of the education message, the National Education Assn. had begun to back away from its adamant opposition to private school aid. On Dec. 16, 1964, NEA announced support for a program of federal grants to the states for education under which each state would have the power to decide whether to assist private schools. Later, testifying on the 1965 bill, an NEA spokesman said that NEA policy "insists that legislation providing general or specific aid be consistent with the constitutional provision respecting an establishment of religion and with the tradition of separation of church and state. The President's proposals do not, in my opinion, violate these principles. In its approach and emphasis the program has the wholehearted support of the National Education Assn." (See House hearings, below)

BILL INTRODUCED

The Administration's draft of the elementary and secondary school bill was introduced Jan. 12 in the House (HR 2362) by Rep. Carl D. Perkins (D Ky.), chairman of the General Education Subcommittee, and in the Senate (S 370) by Wayne Morse (D Ore.), chairman of the Labor and Public Welfare Education Subcommittee.

House

The General Education Subcommittee of the House Education and Labor Committee held hearings on the Administration's elementary and secondary education bill Jan. 22-Feb. 2.

TESTIMONY -- Jan. 22 -- Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Anthony J. Celebrezze said the Administration's proposals, as embodied in HR 2362, "signalled a new beginning and called for a new era in education." Celebrezze said the program was a "major innovation from federal proposals and policies in recent decades." It "directs special and notable attention to the education of the children of the poor and, at the same time, enhances the quality of the whole of education." Celebrezze said the program would focus funds "where the needs are greatest," thereby helping to alleviate the "lack of adequate education for millions of our poorest young people (which) is a major factor in our present high rates of youth unemployment, delinquency and crime." With regard to concern that "federal help may result in federal control," Celebrezze said the Administration's proposals had been "specifically designed to strengthen the hand of states and communities in controlling...education."

Francis Keppel, Commissioner of Education, said the Administration's program "dramatically parts company with education proposals and policies of the past" by attacking "the most serious problem first" -- the education of children from low-income families -- instead of taking in "all the problems of American education." In this way, Keppel said, the program sought "to strengthen the quality and quantity of educational opportunity at its points of critical weakness."

In seeking "to identify areas of poverty containing concentrations of children who need compensatory programs," Keppel explained, the Administration had selected a family income level of $2,000 as one that "clearly does identify an unquestioned hard core of poverty." While the definition of "poverty" might vary depending upon geographic location, size of the family and other factors, Keppel said, "families with less than $2,000 annual income are clearly poor wherever they may live."

With regard to the question of aid to parochial and private schools, Keppel said the Administration's program "looks to the educational needs of the children of poverty -- all of them -- whether in public or in private schools." The "ills of poverty," he said, "are not confined to a particular region, or color, or faith." Interfaith cooperation "is essential...in bringing quality education to the children of our urban slums and rural depressed areas." This would be done, Keppel said, by "actively encouraging cooperative educational services at local levels, serving both public and private school students under public auspices...."

Jan. 25 -- Robert E. McKay, chairman of the National Education Assn.'s Legislative Commission, and a panel of five other NEA spokesmen, strongly supported HR 2362. McKay said the bill would attack the area of greatest need -- "a critical shortage of well-trained teachers and an alarming lack of adequate classrooms" -- by "placing the money where it is most needed, at the elementary and secondary levels, with special emphasis in areas of low economic ability and deprived cultural opportunity." McKay said the NEA insisted that federal funds be expended "only for the purposes for which the states and localities, under their constitutions and statutes, may expend their own public education funds," and that education legislation be consistent with the constitutional provision and the tradition "of separation of church and state." The Administration's proposals, he said, "do not, in my opinion, violate these principles."

John B. Carroll, vice president of the American Educational Research Assn., said he foresaw some problems in connection with establishment of educational research facilities under Title IV of the Administration's bill. Because of the "critical shortage of highly trained educational research workers," he said, funds for establishment of new educational research facilities "should not be expected to produce a large number of new centers all at once." Carroll added that there was an "extreme need for the recruitment and training of a new generation of (educational research) workers," for which "ample provision" had been made in the bill.

Catherine L. Allen, president of the American Assn. for Health, Physical Education and Recreation, supported HR 2362 but urged changes to insure "that no child be handicapped by lack of provision for his basic health needs."

HR 2362 was also supported by, among others, Edwin Castagna, president of the American Library Assn., and Dr. Harris M. Selznick, president of the Council for Exceptional Children.

Jan. 26 -- The Administration bill was supported by several local school district officials, instructional materials experts and representatives of educational broadcasting organizations, including the National Assn. of Educational Broadcasters.

Jan. 27 -- HR 2362 was endorsed by a panel of school superintendents from St. Louis, Boston, New York City and Pittsburgh and by several school librarians. It also received support from Samuel Brownell, former Commissioner of Education (1953-56), in a statement entered in the record.

CHURCH SPOKESMEN

Jan. 28 -- Rev. Richard Upsher Smith, speaking for the Executive Council of the Episcopal Church, said the Administration's proposals represented an effort to meet the nation's major educational needs "both in public and non-public schools." He said, "I believe that Episcopalians will welcome and support the purposes and program" of the Administration.

H.B. Sissel, secretary for national affairs of the United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A., said the bill "represents a fantastically skillful break in the stalemate occasioned by the church-state dilemma in previous legislative efforts." However, he objected to the "complexity, prolixity and vagueness" of some sections of the bill. He said, for example, that in providing library materials for the use of children in private as well as public schools, the bill "does not specify what agency retains title to these library resources, nor does it provide any safeguard to insure that title to them is retained by public authority."

Dr. C. Emanuel Carlson, executive director of the Baptist Joint Committee on Public Affairs, also said the language relating to the allocation of library resources to private schools was "vague enough to leave room for uncertainty and controversy." He said he was concerned about any Government policy that would undermine separation of church and state and create problems "which result from unrestrained religious majorities...." However, Carlson added that the Administration's bill "contains some creative and promising ideas. I hope that many of these are ideas...whose fulfillment can be realized by this Congress."

Philip A. Johnson, executive secretary of the Division of Public Relations of the National Lutheran Council, said his Church had "consistently opposed tax support for sectarian instruction at any level of education...." He said he was concerned that the "safeguards built into the bill under consideration" might not remain in the final version, and that administration of the bill must be "scrupulously correct in relation to these safeguards of constitutionality and the integrity of both church and state."

Jan. 29 -- Andrew J. Biemiller, director of legislation for the AFL-CIO, "emphatically" supported HR 2362, which he said was designed to meet the specific problem of educating economically deprived children. After passage of the bill, Biemiller said the AFL-CIO hoped Congress would "turn its attention to a program of general federal aid for elementary and secondary education." HR 2362, he said, was "no substitute for such a program."

Dr. Edgar Fuller, executive secretary of the Council of Chief State School Officers, generally supported the objectives of the Administration's program, but objected to two titles of the bill. He said that Title II, which provided funds for school library resources, would "use federal funds, in the face of constitutional uncertainty, to reverse most state constitutions, laws and policies in education" by allowing the Commissioner of Education to provide funds directly to school districts where state agencies were not authorized to do so. While a similar arrangement existed under the national school lunch and other programs, Fuller said, "this title appears to go further.... The council's policies do not favor direct federal-local administration in any programs...." Fuller also opposed Title III of the bill, which provided grants for community-wide supplemental educational centers. He said the broad federal administrative discretion under this title in the location, establishment, financing and operation of such centers would "vest more federal authority than is appropriate in education."

Feb. 1 -- Mrs. Harold Rosenfeld, speaking for the National Council of Jewish Women, opposed provisions of HR 2362 for shared-time programs and funds for making available educational materials to students in private schools. While stating that she did not oppose "religiously oriented education," Mrs. Rosenfeld said it should not receive "any direct or indirect state support." She added that "public education is a cornerstone of our democracy," and that such support would "ultimately weaken public education."

Dr. Francis J. Brown, of the National Assn. for Personal Rights in Education, said the Administration bill was "another federal aid to education bill almost exclusively for the state public schools," which "in its pertinent areas...denies a fair share of the education tax dollar to millions of United States citizens." He said the measure violated "both the establishment and the religious liberty clauses of the 1st Amendment by its preferential support of nonsectarian and secularistic philosophies...."

Feb. 2 -- Leo Pfeffer, professor of law at Long Island University, said the provision for shared time programs in the Administration's bill would be constitutional, but that the use of public funds for books to be used in parochial schools and for special educational centers could not be justified because funds would be channeled directly to religious schools.

Lawrence Speiser, director of the Washington office of the American Civil Liberties Union, said the Administration's bill "could authorize the most dangerous subversion of the constitutional principle of church-state separation since...1786." He also said he feared that by easing the financial burden for private schools, the bill might encourage the establishment of private segregated schools to avoid the Supreme Court's 1954 school integration decision. Speiser said the ACLU believed that "as now written, Titles II and III are clearly unconstitutional." The ACLU proposed a number of amendments to HR 2362. In part, these would have guaranteed against segregation in shared services programs under Title I; deleted the provision allowing the Commissioner of Education to provide funds for library resources or instructional materials for private schools in states where no state agency was authorized to do so; provided that title to such materials remain with a state or public agency; stipulated that no educational research or demonstration grants be made to divinity schools or theological seminaries or for religious training; provided that no administrative authority over federally financed programs be given any church or religious agency or institution; and stipulated that the Commissioner of Education should make provision to insure that no funds under Titles II, III or V be used to encourage or facilitate racial segregation in education.

SUBCOMMITTEE ACTION

The General Education Subcommittee reported HR 2362 to the full Committee with amendments on Feb. 5.

The Subcommittee approved the bill on a 6-0 vote, with only the six Democratic members of the group voting for the measure. The three Republicans did not attend the meeting. Rep. Charles E. Goodell (R N.Y.), ranking minority member on the Subcommittee, said the Republicans boycotted the meeting to protest the "hasty and superficial" consideration given the bill by the Subcommittee. The six Democratic members of the Subcommittee who voted for the bill were Perkins (Ky.), Brademas (Ind.), Scott (N.C.), Carey (N.Y.), Thompson (N.J.) and Ford (Mich.). The minority members of the Subcommittee were Goodell, Ashbrook (Ohio) and Bell (Calif.).

In an effort to meet an objection to the Administration draft bill voiced by opponents of federal aid to parochial and other non-public schools, the Subcommittee provided that state or local public educational agencies would retain title to library materials and textbooks purchased for children in non-public schools with funds provided by the bill. The materials would be loaned, rather than given, to private school students and teachers.

In other changes, the Subcommittee added a provision extending for two years, through June 30, 1968, federal aid to school districts "impacted" by the presence of federal installations; stipulated that supplementary educational centers established to serve students from both public and private schools would remain under the control of public agencies; and increased from $10 million to $25 million funds authorized in fiscal 1966 to assist state educational agencies. (In 1964 the impacted-area laws, PL 81-815, for school construction, and PL 81-874, for school operations, were extended until June 30, 1966. See 1964 Almanac p. 261. HR 2362, the 1965 school bill, extended only PL 81-874.)

FULL COMMITTEE CONSIDERATION

The full Committee marked up HR 2362 in executive sessions between Feb. 25 and March 2. On March 2 it ordered the bill reported with amendments on a 23-8 vote.

Executive sessions were marked by Republican and Southern Democratic attacks on the Administration's formula for allocating money. Under the Administration formula, a state received funds equal to half its average expenditure per school child multiplied by the number of pupils from "low-income" families. Critics of this method of allocation argued that it would benefit the wealthier states more than poorer ones. For example, Rep. William H. Ayres (Ohio), ranking Republican on the Committee, said Feb. 24 on the House floor that the bill would make "the rich get richer and the poor get very little." Ayres said an analysis showed that under the Administration's allocation formula, the nation's 10 wealthiest counties would receive $8.9 million while the poorest, with approximately the same number of impoverished children, would get only $4.5 million. He said that Montgomery County, Md., one of the nation's richest, with a median family income of $9,317, would receive $572,864, while Tunica County, Miss., with a median family income of $1,260, would get $357,283.

In response, Commissioner of Education Francis Keppel provided the Committee with figures to show that the bill was intended to aid the poorest states most, because of their larger numbers of pupils from low-income families. For example, Keppel's figures showed that under Title I Mississippi would receive a total of $44.77 per student compared with $20.61 for New York. In addition, supporters of the bill said, the allocation formula gave states an incentive to increase their spending for education.

Despite vocal criticism of the formula, attempts to amend it in committee were unsuccessful.

In other action on amendments, the Committee agreed to Subcommittee changes (above) and made relatively minor revisions in the Administration proposal. The most important of these provided that in determining the Title I federal contribution to counties or school districts, children from families that received more (as well as less) than $2,000 a year in welfare payments would be counted. This amendment was sponsored by Chicago Rep. Roman L. Pucinski (D Ill.).

BILL REPORTED

The full Committee reported HR 2362 with amendments March 8 (H Rept 143). It estimated that the bill would provide approximately $1.3 billion in federal aid to education in fiscal 1966. Of this, some $1.06 billion would go for the Title I program of aid to school districts with children from low-income families.

Majority Views. The Committee majority said the bill was intended "to meet a national problem" whose scope was reflected by draft rejection rates, the 20-percent unemployment rate of 18- to 24-year olds and the fact that "over 8 million adults...have completed less than five years of school." The solution, the report said, "lies in the ability of our local elementary and secondary school systems to provide full opportunity for a high quality program of instruction in the basic educational skills because of the strong correlation between educational underachievement and poverty."

The report said that under Title I, which provided a three-year program of federal grants to states for allocation to school districts with high percentages of poor children (see provisions below), "The schools will become a vital factor in breaking the poverty cycle by providing full educational opportunity to every child regardless of economic background." The report said that while the bill did not authorize "any grant for providing any service to a private institution," it did "contemplate some broadening of public educational programs and services in which...pupils who are not enrolled in public schools may participate." It said the Committee had adopted language to insure that such programs would be supervised by "the local educational agency" and funds and property would be administered by a public agency. It expressed hope that schools would make use of "new techniques of instruction and educational innovations" that were becoming increasingly available.

The report said that more than 53 percent of all public schools, and almost 70 percent of elementary schools, had no libraries, and that "quality in school library programs is directly related to academic achievement, to remaining in high school, and to continuing in college." In providing textbooks and library resources under Title II, the majority said it had "taken care to assure that funds provided under this title will not enure to the enrichment or benefit of any private institution...."

The report said the program authorized under Title III would "stimulate and assist local public educational agencies in the provision of supplementary and educational services that are not at present available in sufficient quantity or quality." It said that schools could offer any of a "diverse range" of programs, such as guidance counseling, school health, psychological and social work services. In addition, school districts could establish "model or exemplary educational programs designed to encourage the adoption of improved or new educational programs," such as specialized instruction and equipment for teaching foreign languages, science or other courses, as well as programs to make available "specially qualified personnel," such as artists or musicians, on a temporary basis to public and private schools and other nonprofit organizations and institutions.

The report said Title IV would fulfill the need for "a stronger and broader" cooperative research effort in education. It said that during fiscal 1965, $34 billion was devoted to education, making it "America's largest industry." Still, "during the same period, only $72 million, or one-fifth of 1 percent of total educational expenditures, was spent on research and development." The report said the Administration had budgeted $22.5 million of the total of $100 million in Title IV for appropriation in fiscal 1966, which together with $25 million available under existing law, would provide a total fiscal 1966 budget of $47.5 million for educational research.

The report said funds for strengthening state departments of education, provided under Title V, were necessary "if American education at the elementary and secondary levels is to be both free and effective...." It said the "alternative to strong state departments is an educational lag and a default of leadership which can only result in a loss to the entire nation."

Minority Views. Minority views were submitted by all Committee Republicans except Ogden R. Reid (N.Y.) and Alphonzo Bell (Calif.), who voted with the Committee's 21 Democrats to report the bill. The minority members said they were profoundly disappointed "that this bill is not designed to meet the needs of educationally and economically deprived children.... We are appalled at the lack of candor and the outright deception with respect to this bill." They said: "The one proven need and great hope for culturally handicapped children -- early childhood education -- is virtually left out of this bill.... HR 2362 feebly attempts to treat the symptoms of our educational ills but fails to attack its causes."

Summarizing the bill's "deficiencies," the minority said that: (1) the distribution of funds "would be extremely wasteful and inequitable, with the wealthiest counties in the United States receiving millions of dollars in federal aid, while some of the poorest areas would receive very little." (See Committee Consideration, above) (2) The bill "virtually...ignored" the most urgent needs of educationally deprived children; "only one of the bill's six titles even mentions deprived children." (3) The bill "is the most direct and far-reaching intrusion of federal authority into our local school systems ever proposed...before Congress." The minority report concluded that the "true purpose of this bill is to authorize general aid without regard to need, and the clear intent is to change radically our historic structure of education by a dramatic shift of power to the federal level."

Provisions of House Bill

As reported by the House Education and Labor Committee, HR 2362:

Title I. Extended for two years, through June 30, 1968, PL 81-874, which provided federal aid for operation and maintenance to school districts "impacted" by the presence of federal installations.

Further amended PL 81-874 by authorizing a new three-year program (fiscal 1966-68) of basic federal grants to the states. The funds would be allotted to school districts or counties where at least 100 school-age children, or 3 percent of the total number of school-age children, if that were less, were from families with annual incomes under an established "low-income factor," or whose income from public assistance exceeded that amount. No school district could receive aid unless it had at least 10 such children. Set the "low-income factor" at $2,000 for fiscal 1966. (Under this formula, an estimated $1.06 billion would be distributed in fiscal 1966.)

Stipulated that the grant for each district would be equal to half of the average state expenditure per pupil multiplied by the number of children aged 5 to 17 from low-income families.

Authorized incentive grants to school districts in fiscal 1967 and fiscal 1968 to reflect increases in spending per student by local educational agencies in fiscal 1965 and fiscal 1966.

Directed the President to appoint a 12-member National Advisory Council on the Education of Disadvantaged Youth to review the administration and operation of the title and to make recommendations for their improvement.

Changes in Administration Bill: The Committee added provisions to the Administration bill to (1) extend impacted-areas aid; (2) include children from families on public assistance with annual incomes over $2,000 in determining federal grants; (3) require that a public agency administer funds and property under Title I and retain title to them; (4) require Congress to fix the "low-income factor" for fiscal years 1967-68; (5) establish a National Advisory Council.

Title II. Directed the Commissioner of Education to carry out a five-year program (fiscal 1966-70) of grants for the acquisition of school library resources, textbooks and other published instructional materials. Authorized appropriation of $100 million for fiscal 1966.

Stipulated that funds would be allotted among the states based on the number of public and private elementary and secondary school children enrolled in each state. Two percent of the funds would be reserved for Puerto Rico and U.S. territories and possessions.

Provided that in states in which no agency was authorized by law to provide such materials for use in any elementary or secondary school, the Commissioner of Education could arrange for their provision and pay the cost out of the state's allotment.

Required that title to materials be retained by a public agency, and that materials made available under the title would be limited to those used, or approved for use, in a public elementary or secondary school in the state.

Changes in Administration Bill: The Committee amended the Administration bill to require that a public agency retain title to textbooks and library materials made available on a loan basis to elementary and secondary school students.

Title III. Established a five-year program (fiscal 1966-70) of matching grants to local educational agencies for supplementary educational centers and services. Authorized appropriation of $100 million for fiscal 1966.

Directed the Commissioner of Education to apportion $200,000 to each state, with the remainder of funds apportioned as follows: (1) half based on the relative number of children aged 5 to 17 and (2) half based on the relative total population of each state.

Provided that local educational agencies wishing to receive money under this title had to submit a plan which, among other things, assured that planning of the program would include participation by representatives of state educational agencies, institutions of higher education, non-profit private schools, libraries, museums and other cultural and educational resources.

Changes in Administration Bill: The Committee amended the bill to require separate authorizations for fiscal years 1967-70 and to provide the specific authorization for fiscal 1966.

Title IV. Amended PL 83-531, which authorized the Commissioner of Education to enter into contracts or cooperative arrangements with universities, colleges and state educational agencies for the conduct of educational research, surveys and demonstrations, as follows:

Authorized grants as well as contracts and cooperative arrangements for research.

Authorized grants, contracts and cooperative arrangements for the dissemination of information derived from research.

Provided that grant and contract recipients could be public or other non-profit private agencies, institutions and organizations and individuals as well as universities, colleges and state agencies.

The title authorized appropriation for fiscal 1966-70 of $100 million, to remain available until expended for projects for which applications had been filed before July 1, 1970, and approved before July 1, 1971.

Changes in Administration Bill: The Committee added language prohibiting grants to or contracts with higher educational institutions for any religious or sectarian research or teacher training.

Title V. Established a five-year program (fiscal 1966-70) of grants to assist states in strengthening their educational agencies and identifying and meeting educational needs. Authorized appropriation of $25 million for fiscal 1966. Of the funds, 85 percent would be available for apportionment to states for a variety of programs to strengthen state departments of education.

Provided that for fiscal 1966-67, the Federal Government would pay 100 percent of the cost of such programs, and that for fiscal 1968-70, the Government's share of the cost of projects would range between 50 and 66 percent, depending upon each state's per capita income relative to that of all the states.

Directed the Commissioner of Education to apportion the remaining 15 percent of the funds to state education agencies for projects dealing with leadership and problems common to state education agencies.

Changes in Administration Bill: The Committee increased the authorization from $10 million to $25 million for fiscal 1966, required Congressional authorization for fiscal years 1967-70 and eliminated the requirement that the states match federal grants in the first two fiscal years.

Title VI. Stipulated that nothing in the act authorized any Government department, agency, officer or employee to exercise direction, supervision or control over the curriculum, instructional program, administration or personnel of any educational institution or school system, or over the selection of library materials, textbooks or other printed instructional materials.

Provided that nothing in the act authorized any payments for religious worship or instruction.

Floor Action

The House March 26, by a 263-153 roll-call vote, passed HR 2362 and sent it to the Senate. The bill was passed with one minor change in the version reported by the House Committee. Democratic leaders in the House, anxious to hold down controversy on the bill, particularly on the church-state issue, succeeded in defeating all other amendments, and a motion by Majority Leader Carl Albert (D Okla.), which in effect precluded continued debate on the bill, was adopted over strong Republican opposition by a 274-119 roll-call vote. (For voting on the bill, see chart p. 946)

Passage of HR 2362 was opposed by a majority of Republicans and Southern Democrats. However, Northern Democratic support was larger than the total of all other Members voting against the bill: R 35-96; ND 187-3; SD 41-54. The bill was debated for three days, March 24-26. During this time the debate focused on three major issues: the merits of the allocation formula in Title I, the specific aid to private schools permitted by the bill, and the perennial question of the role of the states versus the role of the Federal Government in supporting primary and secondary education. Details:

Allocation Formula. As in House Committee consideration (above), the strongest criticism of HR 2362 in floor debate was directed at the method of allotment of funds to the states under the Title I program. The bill provided that a state would receive funds equal to half its average expenditure per school child multiplied by the number of pupils from low-income families. Opponents charged that this formula discriminated against the poorer states, and made several unsuccessful attempts to revise or delete it.

A leading opponent of the Administration formula was House Special Education Subcommittee Chairman Edith Green (D Ore.), who was joined by many Republican opponents of the bill. Mrs. Green March 24 offered an amendment to replace the Administration's formula in Title I with a straight $200 grant for each child from a low-income family. The income standard -- $2,000 or relief payments -- would not have been changed. This amendment was defeated March 25 on a 136-202 teller vote. Before passage March 26 a recommittal motion by Charles E. Goodell (R N.Y.) embodying the same change was rejected on a 149-267 roll-call vote. On March 25 the House by voice vote rejected a substitute for Title I offered by Albert H. Quie (R Minn.). This would have provided federal funds of $300 million a year for establishment of preschool and special educational centers for impoverished three-to-seven-year-old children. The money would have been allocated according to the number of such children from families with annual incomes below $3,000 and some state matching funds would have been required.

During the debate on the allocation formula, opponents of the Administration plan argued that there was no justification for a plan which gave the richest states the most money. Mrs. Green submitted figures showing that the bill would give Mississippi $120 per poor child and New Jersey $283 per child. She said: "I really am serious in saying to my liberal colleagues, those of you who honestly and sincerely have been terribly concerned about events in Mississippi during the last two or three years: Are you really shedding crocodile tears? Are we making pious statements about how awful things are and how we really want to do something about it, and then, when we have a bill that is before the House, we do the very least for these states of any single state in the nation?"

Supporters of the Administration formula responded that it was much more expensive to educate a child in the North than in the South, and that the bill would provide much greater percentage increases in Southern school budgets than in Northern budgets. (Rep. Carleton R. Sickles (D Md.) said HR 2362 would increase the Montgomery County, Md., budget by 1 percent but would increase the Tunica County, Miss., budget by 58 percent.) Administration supporters also said the formula was desirable because it would stimulate additional school spending by the states. They objected that the Green-Goodell substitute would not provide enough funds to aid slum children who attended schools in large Northern cities.

Private School Aid. HR 2362 provided that, to receive Title I aid, a local educational agency must make "provision for including special educational services and arrangements (such as dual enrollment, educational radio and television and mobile educational services and equipment)" in which local private school children can participate. Much of the debate on HR 2362 involved interpretation of this provision. Goodell and William T. Cahill (R N.J.) asked whether it permitted public school teachers to go into non-public schools to instruct students. Education and Labor Committee Chairman Adam C. Powell (D N.Y.) said the answer would vary "according to each area. It is up to the county and state. It is up to the local (school) board." But bill sponsor Carl D. Perkins (D Ky.) said teachers could go into private schools for "such special services as guidance and counseling" but not for "general" teaching.

On the private school aid question, Perkins also said: "I know and regret that some Members will try to revive the so-called church-state fight, though that matter is totally irrelevant since every provision of every title of this legislation has been drawn under the close scrutiny of the Department of Justice as to constitutionality and found to be totally without fault." Robert P. Griffin (R Mich.) said he did not believe the bill violated the 1st Amendment, but that the provisions of Title I "which do provide for assistance to students of private and parochial schools are poorly drafted.... The vague and indefinite language in this bill on so crucial a point is an invitation to civil war in nearly every community of this nation."

Representatives who opposed aid to church schools gave their support to floor amendments intended to guarantee a court test of the constitutionality of the bill's aid for private schools. Mrs. Green, urging that a judicial review amendment be adopted, cited letters in support of her position from the American Civil Liberties Union, the American Jewish Committee, the American Jewish Congress, the National School Boards Assn., the American Lutheran Church, the International Convention of Christian Churches, the United Federation of Teachers, and others. It was widely understood, however, that Catholic groups' support for the bill would change to opposition if a judicial review amendment were adopted, and Administration forces worked to prevent this change.

The principal amendment calling for a judicial review provision was offered by the Southerners' leader, Howard W. Smith (D Va.), chairman of the Rules Committee. His amendment provided that any portion of the Act would be subject to judicial review with respect to its constitutionality. The amendment was opposed by Emanuel Celler (D N.Y.), chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, who said it was unnecessary because judicial review was already available "under general principles of law, regardless of whether it is expressly provided for in this bill." Smith said his amendment would "allay... misgivings" about "whether there would be opportunity under the law to test...the constitutionality of this Act."

Before the House voted on Smith's amendment, a substitute was proposed by John B. Anderson (R Ill.) which specifically provided that a suit challenging the constitutionality of any provision could be brought by a state, a state or local education agency, or any affected public or other non-profit institution or agency. Anderson said that "very real doubts" existed among many Members of Congress about the meaning of the bill. The House rejected Anderson's substitute amendment by a 154-204 teller vote, then rejected Smith's proposal by voice vote.

"Federal Interference." As in much of the past Congressional debate on federal aid to education, opponents argued that the bill would permit "unwarranted federal interference" in state matters. Objection was raised particularly to the Title II provision permitting the Commissioner of Education to arrange for textbook distribution if no state agency was authorized to provide library resources. Many opponents contended that HR 2362 would eventually lead to a much larger and more expensive program. They said the provision in Title I authorizing Congress to later determine the low-income factor for grants in fiscal 1967-68 would merely provide an opportunity to raise the $2,000 annual income figure set for fiscal 1966.

Such arguments were answered with statements that federal help for increasing school needs was long overdue. Powell said HR 2362 had been drawn up so that "responsibility for determination of the program and its execution belongs entirely to the local and state educational authorities."

PROVISIONS -- See final provisions, p. 276.

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

March 26 -- Robert P. Griffin (R Mich.) -- Authorize the Commissioner of Education to appoint a 10-member advisory council with which to consult regarding his functions under the Act. (The amendment also deleted language in the bill as reported which authorized the Commissioner to appoint "an advisory council or councils" for consultation with respect to the Commissioner's functions "under this or any other law.") Voice vote.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

March 25 -- Edith Green (D Ore.) -- Delete the Title I allocation formula in the bill and provide that a state's total assistance would be determined by a straight $200 grant for each 5-17 year-old child from a family with an annual income below $2,000 or on relief. Teller vote, 136-202.

Albert H. Quie (R Minn.) -- Substitute for Title I new wording authorizing a two-year program of federal grants, up to $300 million the first year, allocated according to the number of three-to-seven year-old children from families with annual incomes below $3,000, with states required to provide $1 for each $2 of federal funds after the first year. The funds would have been used for establishment of preschool and special educational programs. Voice.

March 26 -- Quie -- Delete "textbooks" from the list of instructional materials for which Title II grant funds could be used. Voice.

Griffin -- Restrict Title II grants to areas with "large numbers of educationally and economically deprived children." Standing, 61-104.

Charles E. Goodell (R N.Y.) -- Delete Title II. Voice.

Quie -- Delete "textbooks" from the list of instructional materials which could be included in state plans for use of Title II funds. (This would have had the same effect as his earlier "textbook" amendment, see above.) Voice.

Griffin -- Stipulate that state plans for use of Title II funds take into account the need of "educationally and economically deprived" children (instead of all children), and prohibit the plans from including the needs of teachers. Standing, 65-133.

Alphonzo Bell (R Calif.) -- Require the Commissioner of Education to "allot" funds (replacing "apportion" in the bill) provided under Title III; place administration of the title under state educational agencies (instead of the Commissioner of Education), but require approval by the Commissioner of agency plans for distribution and use of funds. Standing, 47-93.

Quie -- Limit Title III grants to areas with "a high concentration of educationally and economically deprived children." Voice.

Bell -- Provide that applications for Title III grants must be approved by state educational agencies. Standing, 67-99.

John M. Ashbrook (R Ohio) -- Provide that applications for Title III grants must be found by the state educational agency to be consistent with state law. Standing, 59-107.

Goodell -- Delete Title III. Voice.

Goodell -- Delete the provision for grant applications for Title III funds. Voice.

Quie -- Delete the provision permitting the use of Title IV grants for research traineeships, internships, personnel exchanges and pre- and post-doctoral fellowships. Voice.

Goodell -- Delete Title IV. Voice.

Goodell -- Delete the requirement for approval of Title V grant applications by the Commissioner of Education; provide 100-percent federal grants the first year, with one-third matching by the states the second year and one-half matching thereafter (compared with 100-percent federal grants in fiscal 1966, and 50-66 percent thereafter, provided by the bill). Voice.

J. Arthur Younger (R Calif.) -- Substitute "Commissar" for "Commissioner" wherever it appeared in the bill. Voice.

John B. Anderson (R Ill.) -- Substitute for pending Smith amendment (below) wording to provide that a suit challenging the constitutionality of any provision of the Act may be brought by a state, a state or local educational agency, or any public or other non-profit institution or agency affected and may be brought in a three-judge district court in the state where the plaintiff was situated. Teller, 154-204.

Howard W. Smith (D Va.) -- Provide that any portion of the Act would be subject to judicial review in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia with respect to its constitutionality. Voice.

Senate

The Education Subcommittee of the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee held hearings on the Administration bill (S 370) Jan. 26-Feb. 11.

TESTIMONY -- Jan. 26 -- HEW Secretary Celebrezze, after presenting much the same testimony he gave the House Subcommittee, was questioned by Sen. Robert F. Kennedy (D N.Y.) about possible misuse of funds by local school authorities. Celebrezze pointed out that local school systems would have to have their plans approved by the state education agencies. The possibility that some school officials might not allocate the money wisely, Celebrezze said, was a "price of democracy" to keep schools under local control. He added that "in due time, the people make their own adjustments" when school affairs are mishandled.

Jan. 29 -- The Administration's bill was supported by a panel of local school superintendents and representatives of lay and Catholic educational broadcasting facilities.

Feb. 1 -- Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz called the Administration's proposals "today's necessary attack on tomorrow's unemployment." He said that S 370 "recognizes full educational opportunity as a necessary condition to high economic achievement," and was designed to "strike directly at this link between poor education and poverty." It would do this, Wirtz testified, by raising educational standards and developing "new and imaginative educational programs so that the effects of poverty and social alienation will be neutralized."

The Administration bill was also endorsed by spokesmen for the American Personnel and Guidance Assn., American Text Book Publishers Institute, National Assn. of Educational Broadcasters and the Encyclopedia Britannica.

CATHOLIC, JEWISH VIEWPOINTS

Feb. 2 -- Msgr. Frederick G. Hochwalt, director of the Department of Education of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, said "the Administration's proposals offered a workable compromise in basing its provisions on the child, the welfare of the student." He said, "We indicate our willingness to cooperate with this legislative proposal because of the assurance that all children in need will benefit from the program." Msgr. Hochwalt said it was "encouraging" that the bill "stipulates that the benefits of the program are to be provided to a notable extent to children in non-public schools," but asked if these children would "truly be recipients of the services they need? Are the benefits substantial?" He recommended "that there be consultation between public and private school educators" both to establish "shared services" programs under Title I of the bill and for the "efficient administration" of Title II, which made textbooks available to students in both public and non-public schools.

Harrison J. Goldin, speaking for the American Jewish Congress, said that while his organization favored federal aid to public schools, it was "opposed to the (Administration's) measure in its present form." He said there were "serious questions regarding the constitutionality" of the shared-time requirement under Title I, which he said would "wreak havoc with the orderly administration of the school and its curriculum" and "blur the line which separates public from parochial education." With regard to Title II, Goldin said he saw "no difference between the grant of federal funds to sectarian schools to purchase instructional and library materials and equipment, and the grant of such materials themselves." He said that both were "contrary to the constitutional principle of the separation of church and state." Goldin also opposed the provision under Title III for establishment of "consortiums" to provide supplementary educational services and grants, saying the "idea of a partnership between church and state in education is not only unprecedented in American history... but is directly contrary to the entire philosophy of the 1st Amendment."

Rabbi Morris Sherer, executive vice president of Agudath Israel of America, an Orthodox Jewish organization, endorsed S 370 as "a major step forward in meeting the educational needs of the school children of our nation." He said he was "gratified" by the awareness "that children in the religious-oriented schools are, and should be treated as, an integral part of the brotherhood of school children of our nation...."

Feb. 5 -- Sargent Shriver, director of the Office of Economic Opportunity, said that most requests for assistance made by community groups to his office were for educational programs, such as establishment of preschool centers, tutoring, remedial education and summer programs. He said that if such programs were financed by funds provided in the education bill, the OEO funds allocated for education could be put to other uses.

Rev. C. Stanley Lowell, associate director of Protestants and Other Americans United for Separation of Church and State, said that portions of the Administration's bill to provide assistance to students in parochial schools would "deteriorate our country's constitutional tradition of church-state separation."

Spokesmen for the Council of State School Officers and the National School Boards Assn. also opposed assistance for parochial school students.

Feb. 8 -- Sidney Zagri, legislative counsel of the International Teamsters Union, endorsed S 370 but said the funds it authorized would provide "a very limited approach to the problem" of education.

EISENHOWER AIDES SUPPORT BILL

Dr. James R. Killian Jr. of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, former science adviser to President Eisenhower (1957-59), endorsed S 370, particularly provisions for research "on improving the quality of the content and the process of education." He also endorsed the provision for regional educational centers and laboratories.

Feb. 11 -- Marion B. Folsom, a director of the Eastman Kodak Company and former Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare (1955-58), said the proposals contained in S 370 "are sound and will be effective in improving education...." He said that while personal traits, ill health and wage levels were contributing factors, "the underlying cause of unemployment as far as the individual is concerned is the lack of education and training." Folsom recommended that Title I of the bill be amended to require matching grants by the states. He said, "The need is much greater than can be met by the funds to be authorized in this bill, and there is no reason why states and local communities should not devote additional sums to this essential purpose." Folsom also called for additional funds for educational research and to strengthen state departments of education.

Arthur S. Flemming, first vice president of the National Council of Churches and former Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare (1958-61), said the Council supported the basic principles of the bill. He said that while a program of grants to private schools "would be opposed vigorously," the bill as written was "designed to give assistance to students as contrasted with assistance to private schools." However, he urged that the measure be amended to stipulate that ownership of library materials would remain with a public agency, and the materials would be loaned, not given, to school libraries. He also said the bill should make clear that supplementary educational centers and shared services would be "administered by public authorities...."

Andrew J. Biemiller, director of legislation for the AFL-CIO, said the Administration bill would "make a major effort once and for all to break what has until now been an unending cycle of poverty and inadequate education." He said he was concerned that the bill might not provide sufficient funds to large city school districts with high concentrations of poor children, but that changes could be made in the criteria for extending aid to such districts "if they should be needed." Biemiller said, "A major reason why we are concerned about the quality of education that young people receive is our conviction that the badly educated children of today will become the unemployed workers and the welfare cases of tomorrow. In these terms, quality education is just as important to the national interest in non-public schools as in public schools."

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (D Mass.) said the amount requested by the Administration was "modest compared to the need," but that the bill would create precedents "upon which we can build broader programs as budgets become more flexible and revenue more available."

Kennedy proposed that the bill be amended to create an American Teacher Corps, under which teachers would go into low-income rural or urban areas for one or two-year periods. Kennedy said teachers who had retired or who had served in the Peace Corps, as well as those on leave from wealthier school systems, would be available to participate in such a program. (President Johnson later requested, and Congress authorized, as part of the higher education aid bill, a National Teacher Corps. See story p. 294)

BILL REPORTED

The full Committee reported HR 2362 without amendment April 6 (S Rept 146).

Majority Views. In majority views closely resembling those of the House report on the bill, the Senate Committee said there was a "close relationship between conditions of poverty and lack of educational development and poor academic performance." The report said HR 2362 was designed "to bring better education to millions of disadvantaged youth who need it most."

The majority said it was "concerned" about "overlapping or duplication" among programs authorized by the bill and those carried out under the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964 (PL 88-452). It said that to avoid duplication would require the "cooperative efforts" of local education and community action agencies as well as "affirmative steps" by the Office of Economic Opportunity.

The majority also said it had considered the addition of an "explicit provision" to the bill "to afford judicial review of the constitutionality of the Act." It said it believed such a provision unnecessary because: past Supreme Court decisions "suggest the possibility of a test...of this Act in the absence of specific language"; the bill already contained "three specific and limited judicial review provisions"; insertion of a judicial review clause "might be construed as an invitation to a multiplicity of time-consuming suits"; and litigation raising "analogous issues" was already pending before the courts of at least one state (Maryland).

Minority Views. Minority views were submitted by the Committee's five Republicans. They said they had voted "with reservations" to report HR 2362. They said the bill was an "imperfect instrument" which had been "alternately labeled as an antipoverty and as an education measure," but which "falls short of its goals in both areas."

The minority objected strongly to the reporting of HR 2362 without amendment. Noting that 20 amendments had been rejected in committee, the Republicans said that "by decree of the President of the United States...this important and complex piece of legislation...is to pass this body without a dot or comma changed; this, by fiat from the Chief Executive." It said this was a "fetish of the unwise and unrestrained use of power" which would draw about the Senate "the strong but subtle silken threads of legislative impotence."

Individual Views. Republicans Peter H. Dominick (Colo.), George Murphy (Calif.) and Paul J. Fannin (Ariz.) said the bill "in its present form" was a "dubious approach to the needs of education in this country." They also said it failed to avoid "the very significant difficulties of the 1st Amendment and many state constitutions with respect to aid to private schools," and would "concentrate authority and responsibility for education in a single federal office -- the U.S. Office of Education."

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate passed HR 2362 April 9 by a 73-18 roll-call vote and cleared it for President Johnson's signature. During the three days of Senate debate on the bill, 11 amendments were rejected. (For voting, see charts p. 1034, 1035)

Passage of HR 2362 in the exact form it had been approved by the House avoided a House-Senate conference and any possible problems that might block enactment of the bill. In the past, general school-aid legislation had run into trouble at the conference level. During debate, Republicans objected to the Leadership's plan for passing the bill without change. They said the Senate was abdicating its legislative responsibility by "rubber-stamping" the measure. Replying to this charge, bill manager Wayne Morse (D Ore.) said he considered HR 2362 "a good bill, a sound bill, a bill that should be passed at this time without amendment...." He said the majority on the Labor and Public Welfare Committee was not urging adoption of the bill without amendments "under any dictation from the President of the United States... under any pressure...or any so-called arm twisting by the President...." However, Morse said the President agreed with the majority that the bill should be passed without amendments to avoid "the possible risks that are always involved in connection with an education bill in conference sessions." He said "the stakes are too high for the children of America for us to run the risk of jeopardizing this legislation" in conference.

As in the House, much of the floor debate centered on the formula for allocation of funds under Title I of the bill. Of the 11 amendments rejected, three would have altered the formula.

An amendment April 8 by Peter H. Dominick (R Colo.), defeated by a 38-53 roll-call vote, would have replaced the Title I allocation formula by a straight $200 grant for each school-age child from a low-income family. This basic grant would have been increased by $1 for each one-hundredth of one percent by which the ratio of a state's spending for elementary-secondary education to the total income of its residents exceeded the national average ratio.

Dominick said his amendment would "put money into the areas where there is a heavy concentration of educationally deprived children," which he said was the policy established for the bill. He said the provision for increasing grants based on state spending for education would "recognize the extra effort that some states are making on behalf of their own educational problems."

An amendment April 9 by Jacob K. Javits (R N.Y.), which was rejected on a 24-66 roll call, would have provided grants in fiscal 1967-68 under Title I, in addition to the basic grants provided in the bill, based on the number of school-age children from families with incomes between $2,000 and $3,000 times 25 percent of the average per-pupil expenditure by each state. State and/or local school districts would have been required to match the additional funds dollar for dollar, and would have had to choose whether to receive the additional grants provided by the amendment or the special incentive grants provided under Title I.

Javits said the $3,000 level for the definition of "poverty" established by his amendment would be "realistic in the big cities," which he said housed "over 70 percent of American families and...are the seat of poverty." He said the $3,000 level had been used in other education and poverty programs, while "the $2,000 level is a new arbitrary level." In reply, Morse said the major objection to the amendment was the provision for matching funds, which he said was "quite inappropriate" in legislation involving educationally deprived children.

A final effort to change the Title I allocation formula by Winston L. Prouty (R Vt.) on April 9 was rejected by a 27-63 roll call. Prouty's amendment would have increased the low-income factor in fiscal 1966 to $3,000, and reduced the percentage of state per-pupil spending the program would match to 32 percent. Prouty said that testimony indicated that $3,000 was a more desirable low-income level to use for the bill, and that "there is a strong likelihood that the Administration and its backers in the Congress will argue for a $3,000 low-income factor next year." He asked, "Why next year and not this year?"

Morse said Prouty's amendment would "amount to a reconstruction of the bill formulawise," and that it was an "11th hour" proposal on which "we do not have a hearing record in depth...."

Another major amendment, rejected April 9 by the Senate by a 32-53 roll call, was an effort by Sam J. Ervin Jr. (D N.C.) to add a judicial review provision to the bill. Ervin's amendment required the Commissioner of Education to give 30 days' notice in the Federal Register of any proposed payments under the bill, permitted any taxpayer to challenge the constitutionality of payments in the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia and directed the Commissioner to withhold any payments being challenged pending final determination of the suit. Ervin said

1 Payments are for fiscal 1966. Figures are based on amounts appropriated in second supplemental appropriation for Departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare. (Funds under Title IV are not distributed by states.)

2 Congress appropriated $775 million for Title I, but stipulated that grants be allocated on the basis of amount authorized in PL 89-10 (estimated at $1,070.7 million in April 1965; revised to $1,174.9 million in Sept. 1965).

3 Congress appropriated $17 million for grants under Title V; amount shown is less because 15 percent of total was reserved for special grants to states for experimental projects or special services.

there was "grave doubt as to whether a judicial determination" could be made of the constitutionality of disbursements "for the benefit of sectarian schools or their pupils."

In reply, Javits said the question to be resolved was whether citizens could obtain "such an adjudication without either jeopardizing the passage of this bill or delaying its effectiveness so long as to very materially defeat its total effect." Javits said he believed "they could get such an adjudication" under existing law.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

April 8 -- Peter H. Dominick (R Colo.) -- Require approval by state educational agencies of applications by local agencies for federal funds under Title III, which authorized grants for supplementary educational centers and services. Roll-call vote, 39-49.

Winston L. Prouty (R Vt.) -- Provide that after allocation of up to 2 percent of Title III funds for the U.S. possessions and $200,000 to each state and the District of Columbia (as provided in HR 2362), the remaining funds would be allocated on the basis of the number of school age children in, and the per capita income of, each state (HR 2362 allocated the remaining funds on the basis of the number of school-age children and each state's population). Roll call, 38-56.

James B. Pearson (R Kan.) -- Amend PL 81-874, which provided federal aid to school districts "impacted" by the presence of military and other federal installations, to ease the eligibility requirements for grants for districts facing the loss of aid due to the closing of an installation, such as an Army base. Roll call, 32-59.

Dominick -- Delete the Title I allocation formula in the bill and provide that a state's total assistance under the title would be determined by a straight $200 grant for each 5-17-year-old child from a family with an annual income below $2,000, or on relief, plus an additional amount based on the percentage of state funds spent for education. Roll call, 38-53.

April 9 -- Sam J. Ervin Jr. (D N.C.) -- Require the Commissioner of Education to give 30 day's notice in the Federal Register of any proposed disbursements under the Act; permit any taxpayer to bring suit in the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia challenging the constitutionality of any disbursement; and direct the Commissioner to withhold disbursements so challenged pending final determination of the suit. Roll call, 32-53.

Jacob K. Javits (R N.Y.) -- Provide that in addition to the basic Title I federal grant, and in lieu of the special incentive grant provided in the bill, a state in fiscal years 1967-68 could elect to receive an amount equal to the number of 5-17-year-old children from families with an annual income between $2,000 and $3,000 multiplied by 25 percent of the average per-pupil expenditure by the state. States and/or local school districts would be required to match the additional federal grants dollar for dollar. Roll call, 24-66.

Prouty -- Increase the annual income factor (maximum income of a family whose school-age children could be counted in the allocation of Title I aid) from $2,000 to $3,000, and decrease the percentage of state expenditures per pupil, used to compute a state's total grants, from 50 to 32 percent. Roll call, 27-63.

Prouty -- Delete the requirement that applications for Title I grants by local education agencies meet criteria established by the Commissioner of Education, and instead authorize the Commissioner to formulate "interpretive guidelines for the suggested use" of state agencies approving the applications. Roll call, 32-60.

John G. Tower (R Texas) -- Extend educational and loan benefits, similar to those extended to veterans of World War II and the Korean War, to veterans of military service in the Southeast Asian area who performed active duty beginning on or after Jan. 1, 1961. Roll call, 27-64.

Dominick -- Stipulate that nothing in the Act could be construed to authorize payments for the construction of facilities or hiring of teachers at schools or institutions where there was religious worship or sectarian instruction. (The bill prohibited the payment of funds "for religious worship or instruction.") Roll call, 20-68.

Dominick -- Stipulate that all grants made under Title III should be for supplemental educational services and centers in school attendance areas having a high concentration of educationally and economically deprived children. Roll call, 23-66.

BILL SIGNED

President Johnson signed HR 2362 into law (PL 89-10) April 11 outside the former one-room schoolhouse at Stonewall, Texas, where he first attended classes. The President said the bill represented "a major new commitment of the Federal Government to quality and equality in the schooling we offer our younger people," and predicted that Members of Congress who had supported the legislation "will be remembered in history as men and women who began a new day of greatness in American society." He said he was asking federal education officials "to move immediately to prepare the Office of Education for the big job that it has to do, just as soon as the funds are appropriated."

FUNDS PROVIDED

Mr. Johnson subsequently asked Congress for $1,345,184,000 in supplemental fiscal 1966 appropriations to initiate the programs in the Elementary and Secondary Education Act: $1,070,684,000 for grants under Title I; $100 million for textbook and other purchases under Title II; $100 million for supplementary centers under Title III; $25 million to strengthen state education departments under Title V; an increase of $45 million in his earlier $25 million request for cooperative research programs (Title IV); and $4.5 million for administration of the Act.

The supplemental appropriation bill as enacted (HR 10586 -- PL 89-199) provided $1,016,050,000, which was $329,134,000 less than the President requested. Allocations were: Title I, $775 million, with a proviso that funds could be allocated as provided in the title's formula and Congress would make up the difference in 1966 if more than the $775 million was needed; $100 million for Title II; $75 million for Title III; $17 million for Title V; the extra $45 million for research ($70 million in all); and $4,050,000 for administration. (See adjoining chart and the appropriation story p. 166)

SUITS FILED

In other developments, the American Jewish Congress April 11 and the Protestants and Other Americans United for Separation of Church and State April 12 announced that they would file suits challenging the constitutionality of those sections of PL 89-10 which provided aid for private schools.

SCHOLARSHIPS FEATURED IN COLLEGE AID BILL

HR 9567 -- Reported by House Education and Labor Committee (H Rept 621) July 14, 1965.

- Passed by the House, amended, on a 368-22 roll-call vote Aug. 26. (See p. 994)
- Reported by Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee (S Rept 673) Sept. 1.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, by a 79-3 roll-call vote Sept. 2. (See p. 1071)
- Conference report (H Rept 1178) agreed to Oct. 20 by a 313-63 roll-call vote of the House (see p. 1020) and by voice vote of the Senate.

PL 89-329 -- Signed into law Nov. 8.

With wide bipartisan support, Congress enacted the Higher Education Act of 1965 (HR 9567 -- PL 89-329) authorizing $804,350,000 in fiscal 1966 for a wide variety of major new programs to aid students and colleges. With passage of the measure, Congress took on important new responsibilities in the sphere of higher education. The bill contained eight titles, most of which were funded for three years.

HR 9567 was revolutionary in several aspects, particularly in its student aid provisions. For the first time in U.S. history Congress approved federal scholarships for undergraduate students. The $70 million authorized annually for first-year scholarships was estimated to provide 140,000 students of "exceptional financial need" with scholarships each year. Scholarships had been approved by the Senate in past years only to die in the House. When HR 9567 was first debated by the House, an amendment to remove scholarships from the bill was defeated on a 58-88 standing vote. No further efforts were made to delete the provision.

Another new aid program for college students was insurance on loans, with federal subsidies on interest payments. Federally insured loans had been proposed by President Johnson when he was in Congress, and were subsequently requested by President Kennedy in 1963. Insured loans and scholarships, combined with an expanded work-study program also authorized by the Act, were expected to help students from middle-income as well as low-income backgrounds. They were designed to supplement the first general student loan program, which was authorized in the National Defense Education Act of 1958 (NDEA). As of Oct. 31, 1965, this program had provided $619 million in loans to 750,000 students.

Five titles of the 1965 Act provided aid for colleges and universities. For the first time, funds were voted ($50 million a year) to buy library materials, including books. At the request of the colleges, Congress added two titles not included in the Administration's bill: (1) more funds ($290 million) for construction of classrooms under the 1963 college aid bill, and (2) a new program of grants to colleges for special equipment (including television) to improve the quality of instruction. Lower schools already received federal aid for equipment under NDEA.

Other college aid programs in the Act provided grants to develop university extension courses related to community problems and funds to raise the academic quality of impoverished small colleges. The latter program was authorized for only one year because the Senate insisted on making junior colleges eligible, and the House was opposed.

The 89th Congress continued a trend started in 1964 to make federal college aid available on a broad basis and avoid limitations on the use of funds. An amendment in the House removed categorical limitations tied to construction grants. They had originally been limited to buildings used for science, mathematics and foreign languages. NDEA programs of teacher training and equipment grants had also been earmarked for these subjects (because of the demands of national defense). In 1964 House Republicans fought unsuccessfully against adding history, English and other subjects. By 1965 the battle was over, and economics and industrial arts were added without opposition.

Teacher Corps. A new program called the National Teacher Corps, which stemmed from Congressional initiative, provoked the most controversy. The idea of a corps of skilled teachers to improve school education in slums and other impoverished areas was first proposed by Sens. Edward M. Kennedy (D Mass.) and Gaylord Nelson (D Wis.). President Johnson endorsed the proposal July 17 in a letter to Congress that also requested a graduate fellowship program for elementary and high school teachers.

The Teacher Corps was incorporated into HR 9567 by the Senate and a separate bill authorizing the Corps was reported to the House the same day by the Education and Labor Committee. But House Republican conferees refused to sign the conference report on HR 9567 because it included the Corps. They said it would enable the Government to exercise control over local schools.

During floor debate on adoption of the conference report Oct. 20, Albert H. Quie (R Minn.) moved to send the bill back to conference to delete the Teacher Corps provision. The motion was defeated by a 152-226 roll-call vote. The final bill authorized the Corps for two years. (For voting, see chart p. 1020)

Appropriations. After clearing HR 9567, Congress passed a supplemental appropriations bill (HR 11588) providing $160 million of the $274 million requested by the Administration for the new higher education programs. The Senate voted funds for the Teacher Corps, but the money was dropped in conference with the House. (See story p. 182)

Provisions

As signed by the President, the Higher Education Act carried these provisions:

Title I -- Community Service, Continuing Education. Authorized federal matching grants to the states to develop community service programs conducted by public or private non-profit colleges and universities. The programs were to give particular emphasis to urban and suburban problems, including housing, poverty, employment, transportation, health and other local problems.

Authorized $25 million in grants in fiscal 1966 and $50 million each in fiscal 1967-68, with the Federal Government paying 75 percent of each state's plan for community services in fiscal 1966-67 and 50 percent in fiscal 1968-70. (Authorizations for fiscal 1969-70 were left to future Congressional action.) Set minimum allotments for the states and territories, with the remainder allocated according to state population, and limited state administrative expenses to 5 percent of the costs of its program or $25,000, whichever was larger.

Required the states to draw up plans for comprehensive, statewide community service programs, to be approved by the U.S. Commissioner of Education. Permitted states to seek judicial review in federal courts of appeal if the Commissioner should disapprove a state plan.

Authorized the President to appoint a National Advisory Council on Extension and Continuing Education composed of the U.S. Commissioner, representatives of other federal agencies engaged in extension education, and 12 members from outside the Government. Directed the Council to review the administration and effectiveness of all federally supported extension and continuing education programs and to make annual reports to the President and Congress, beginning on March 31, 1967.

Title II -- College Library Assistance, Training and Research. Authorized (in Part A) $50 million annually in fiscal 1966-68 for grants to enable institutions of higher education to improve their library resources.

Earmarked 75 percent of each year's appropriation for matching basic grants, not to exceed $5,000 for each institution or branch. Required assurances that each institution would not reduce its average library expenditures for the preceding two years and would match on a 50-50 basis the basic grant it received. From sums not needed for basic grants or special purpose grants (below), authorized non-matching supplemental grants to needy institutions, not to exceed $10 for each full-time student.

Earmarked 25 percent of each year's appropriation for special purpose grants to institutions that demonstrated special needs for library resources, or plans for national or regional library and informational service programs, or joint-use facilities with other institutions. Required $1 in matching funds for each $3 provided in federal grants.

Directed the Commissioner of Education to establish an Advisory Council on College Library Resources to advise him on criteria for making supplemental and special purpose grants.

Specified that institutions would be deemed accredited if the library grants received under this title would bring them up to recognized standards.

Authorized (in Part B) $15 million annually in fiscal 1966-68 for grants to institutions of higher education to train librarians and information science specialists and for research and demonstration projects relating to the improvement of libraries, including the development of new techniques.

Repealed, effective July 1, 1967, a provision in the National Defense Education Act of 1958 authorizing training institutes for elementary and secondary school librarians.

Authorized (in Part C) $5 million in fiscal 1966, $6,315,000 in fiscal 1967 and $7,770,000 in fiscal 1968 to enable the Library of Congress to expand its centralized cataloguing service and its acquisition of scholarly materials.

Title III -- Strengthening Developing Institutions. Authorized $55 million in fiscal 1966 to raise the academic quality of developing institutions (colleges which "are struggling for survival and are isolated from the main currents of academic life").

Allocated 78 percent of the appropriation to colleges that award B.A. degrees and 22 percent to two-year institutions, including those that provide a semi-professional education of technicians in engineering, mathematical and scientific fields.

Waived accreditation requirements for schools that accept only high school graduates, are "making reasonable progress toward accreditation" and have been in existence for five years.

Authorized grants to developing institutions and other colleges or businesses for cooperative programs to strengthen the developing colleges' academic programs and administration, including the exchange of faculty or students, fellowships, work-study programs and joint use of libraries and laboratories.

Authorized "national teaching fellowships" to graduate students and junior faculty members who, at the request of a developing institution, would teach there for up to two years. Permitted a stipend of up to $6,500 for each fellowship, plus $400 for each dependent.

Directed the Commissioner to establish an Advisory Council on Developing Institutions to help him identify institutions qualifying for federal aid.

Title IV -- Student Assistance. Authorized federal scholarships ("educational opportunity grants"), federally insured loans and subsidies on interest for full-time college students, transferred the work-study program authorized in the 1964 Economic Opportunity Act and amended several sections of the 1958 National Defense Education Act (NDEA).

Scholarships. Authorized (in Part A) $70 million annually in fiscal 1966-68 for grants to institutions of higher education for first-year scholarships to full-time students "of exceptional financial need," plus whatever sums were necessary to continue scholarships beyond the first year. Made each year's appropriation available through the following fiscal year.

Limited the amount of each scholarship to the lesser of $800 or half the amount of financial aid provided the student by the college or a state or private scholarship program, including loans and scholarships under the Act but excluding aid under work-study programs. (To be eligible for a federal scholarship, a student must receive an equal amount of other financial aid.) Prohibited scholarships of less than $200. Authorized a $200 bonus to scholarship students who in their preceding college year placed in the upper half of their class.

Allocated scholarship funds among the states according to the ratio of the number of each state's college students to the number nationally.

Required colleges, in applying for scholarship funds, to make an agreement with the U.S. Commissioner of Education to review each applicant's financial need and to establish programs to encourage able but needy high school students to attend college and to continue their average expenditures for student aid in the preceding three years. Permitted colleges to make conditional scholarship commitments to high school students, with particular emphasis on students in the 11th grade or lower.

Permitted colleges to transfer 25 percent of their grants for scholarships under the Act to their NDEA student loan fund.

Authorized the U.S. Commissioner to make contracts totaling up to $100,000 per year with state, local or nonprofit private organizations to identify and encourage needy high school students to attend post-secondary schools, to publicize existing student aid programs and to encourage high school and college dropouts of demonstrated aptitude to continue their education. Authorized appropriation of necessary funds.

Insured Loans. Authorized the Commissioner (in Part B) to make repayable advances to establish or strengthen state or private non-profit student loan insurance programs. Set a $17.5 million authorization for the advances through fiscal 1968.

Required that to be eligible for advances and federal interest subsidies, state or private loan insurance must cover 80 percent of the unpaid principal, must insure loans of $1,000 to $1,500, at no more than 6-percent interest on the unpaid principal, with repayment not to begin until two months after the student completes his study, and must cover at least six years of academic study.

Established a federal loan insurance fund for students without reasonable access to state or non-profit private insurance plans. Limited insurance on new loans in any year to $700 million in fiscal 1966, $1 billion in fiscal 1967, $1.4 billion in fiscal 1968. Authorized appropriation of $1 million to the fund plus whatever else might be necessary. Permitted 100-percent insurance at a premium of one-fourth of 1 percent of the unpaid principal.

Set as conditions for federal insurance of a loan: a loan in any year cannot exceed $1,500 for a graduate student and $1,000 for undergraduates, and the aggregate of loans for a student cannot exceed $7,500 and $5,000, respectively; students must carry at least half of a full-time workload; loans are to be repaid over a 5- to 10-year period beginning 9 to 12 months after the student ceases academic study (with exceptions for those in the armed forces or Peace Corps) and annual repayments must be at least $360; maximum interest rates are to be set by the Commissioner on a regional or national basis and cannot exceed 6 percent annually on the unpaid principal except in exceptional circumstances, where it can be 7 percent.

Interest Subsidies. For students from families with adjusted annual income of less than $15,000 who have received insured or state loans, authorized the Commissioner to pay all interest charges while the student was in college and 3 percentage points of interest on the unpaid principal thereafter. Prohibited interest subsidies on loans from NDEA college loan funds.

Made eligible for the program four-year and two-year colleges, non-profit collegiate or associate degree nursing schools and one-year post-high school non-profit vocational schools meeting accreditation standards.

Permitted federal credit unions to use 10 percent of their assets to make insured loans to student members.

Directed the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare to establish an Advisory Council on Insured Loans to Students, including members of insurance programs, lending institutions and colleges, to advise the Commissioner.

Work-Study Program. Transferred to the Office of Education (in Part C) the work-study program for college students authorized in the Economic Opportunity Act (under which the Government currently paid 90 percent of the cost of part-time employment made available to students by their colleges). Removed the requirement that eligible students must be from low-income families but gave preference to such students. Permitted colleges to provide their matching share of the cost through services and equipment, including tuition and books. Authorized $129 million for the program in fiscal 1966 (including a transfer of $60 million from the antipoverty program's authorization), $165 million in fiscal 1967 and $200 million in fiscal 1968.

NDEA Amendments. Amended (in Part D) Title II of NDEA (which established low-interest loans for college students) by requiring repayment of loans to begin nine months after the recipient ceases to carry half a full-time workload, setting a minimum monthly repayment rate of $15, permitting institutions to pay half of their administrative costs from the loan fund and assess students for delinquent payments.

Permitted total loan "forgiveness" (cancellation) to students who teach in public or private non-profit elementary or high schools with high concentrations of children from low-income families eligible for federal aid under the Elementary and Secondary Education Act (PL 89-10). Set the forgiveness rate at 15 percent for each year of teaching. Allowed no more than 25 percent of a state's schools to qualify under this section.

Amended Title III of NDEA (which authorized aid to lower schools to purchase equipment for use in teaching certain subjects) by increasing the fiscal 1966-68 authorizations by $10 million (to a $100 million total) and adding economics as a subject for which equipment could be bought.

Amended Title XI of NDEA (which authorized funds to help colleges conduct advanced teacher training institutes) by increasing the fiscal 1966-68 authorizations by $17,250,000 (to a $50 million total) and making teachers of economics, civics and industrial arts eligible for the institutes.

Title V -- Teacher Programs. Directed the Commissioner of Education to establish an Advisory Council on Quality Teacher Preparation to review the effectiveness of the title's programs in attracting, preparing and retaining highly qualified elementary and secondary school teachers.

Teacher Corps. In Part B, established in the Office of Education a National Teacher Corps, headed by a Director.

Authorized the Commissioner of Education to recruit and select experienced teachers and inexperienced teacher-interns with B.A. degrees for enlistment in the Corps for up to two years. Authorized him to contract with colleges or public education agencies to train Corps members for up to three months. Authorized him to make arrangements with local school agencies to furnish Corps members to schools with concentrations of children from low-income families and to pay the local school agencies for the compensation of their Corps contingents, who were to be either experienced teachers or teaching teams made up of teacher-interns and an experienced teacher. Directed that teacher-interns be given time, while teaching, for graduate training leading to a graduate degree, if possible.

Directed the Commissioner, if the demand for Corps teachers exceeds the supply, to allocate 2 percent to Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands and the remainder among the states according to their relative number of children from impoverished families.

Permitted local school districts to use Corps members to provide educational services in which private school children may participate, as authorized in the Elementary and Secondary Education Act (PL 89-10).

Specified that Corps members were not federal employees and that experienced teachers and teacher-interns were to receive the same salaries paid teachers in the local district, but that the pay of teaching team leaders was to be set by consultation between the school district and the Commissioner. Authorized the Commissioner to pay Corps members their travel expenses, any employee benefits they would have had at an institution to which they planned to return, and stipends for initial training for the Corps.

Specified that Corps members would be under "the direct supervision" of the school agencies to which they were assigned and that the agencies could assign and transfer the members, determine what they should teach and discontinue their employment if desired.

Specified that Corps members were not to displace any teacher who would otherwise be employed by the school agency.

Authorized appropriation for Corps activities of $36,100,000 in fiscal 1966 and $64,715,000 in fiscal 1967.

Teacher Fellowships. Part C declared a need to improve the quality of education in elementary and secondary schools by providing fellowships for graduate study by teachers and strengthening universities' teacher education programs. Specified that the program applied not only to teachers and prospective teachers but also to supervisors, school librarians, social workers and the fields of guidance, counseling, educational media and special education for handicapped children.

Authorized the Commissioner to award 4,500 fellowships in fiscal 1966 and 10,000 annually in fiscal 1967-68. Authorized appropriations of $40 million in fiscal 1966, $160 million in fiscal 1967 and $275 million in fiscal 1968 plus funds to enable those who received fellowships before July 1, 1968, to complete their studies by June 30, 1970.

Specified that the fellowships were for study leading to an advanced degree other than Ph.D., were not to extend beyond 24 months, and were to be allocated equitably among the states unless the Advisory Council should propose allocations to meet "an urgent national need." (Although Senate provisions strictly earmarking the allocation of fellowships were dropped from the final Act, House-Senate conferees expressed a wish that up to 20 percent of the fellowships be awarded teachers who lost their jobs as a result of desegregation and consolidation of schools in accordance with the 1964 Civil Rights Act.)

Authorized the Commissioner to pay stipends and living allowances for fellowship recipients comparable to those paid under other federally supported programs and to pay the institution at which the recipient was studying $2,500 per academic year less fees charged the graduate student.

Required fellowship recipients to take a full-time course of study and to limit part-time employment to fields related to their training and approved by the Commissioner.

Specified that institutions' graduate programs must meet the approval of the Commissioner. Authorized him, in the interest of better geographical distribution of high-quality teacher training programs, to make grants to develop or strengthen graduate programs.

Title VI -- Improvement of Undergraduate Courses. Authorized (in Part A) matching federal grants to institutions of higher education to improve their classroom instruction as follows: for laboratory, audiovisual equipment and printed material, other than textbooks, for courses in science, humanities, arts and education, and for minor remodeling, $35 million in fiscal 1966, $50 million in fiscal 1967, $60 million in fiscal 1968; for closed-circuit television receiving equipment and minor remodeling, $2.5 million in fiscal 1966 and $10 million annually in fiscal 1967-68.

Limited the federal share of each project's cost to 50 percent unless a state commission sets the share at up to 80 percent for colleges too poor to participate otherwise.

Allocated the money among the states according to a formula based on each state's number of college students and per capita income. Required the states to draw up plans and assign priorities for grants to their colleges and permitted judicial review if the Commissioner should disapprove a state's plan.

Authorized the Commissioner to make grants to the states of $1 million annually in fiscal 1966-68 for administration of state plans.

Authorized to the Commissioner (in Part B) $5 million annually in fiscal 1966-68 for grants to colleges to conduct short-term workshops or institutes for college teachers or specialists planning to use educational media equipment. Permitted stipends of $75 per week for those attending the institutes (but not the workshops), plus $15 per week for each dependent.

Title VII -- Amendments to the Higher Education Facilities Act of 1963. Amended the 1963 college classroom construction act (PL 88-204) as follows:

Increased the fiscal 1966 grant authorization for undergraduate facilities by $230 million (to a $460 million total); permitted a college to receive a grant if it would increase its capacity to carry out on-campus extension and continuing education programs; and removed the 1963 Act's categorical restrictions on the program (which permitted aid only for science, math, modern foreign language and engineering buildings or libraries).

Increased the fiscal 1966 grant authorization for graduate facilities by $60 million (to a $120 million total).

Permitted a state to transfer allotments between junior colleges and four-year colleges if not needed for the original purpose. (The 1963 Act required that 22 percent of the appropriations go to junior colleges.)

Established a 3-percent maximum rate of interest on loans for construction of academic facilities made after enactment of the bill (the 1963 Act set the rate at one-fourth of 1 percent over the average interest rate of federal securities -- currently 3-7/8 percent.)

Title VIII -- General Provisions. Defined the term institution of higher education as including non-profit four-year and two-year colleges, business schools and technical institutions. Defined state as including the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa and the Virgin Islands.

Specified that nothing in the bill authorized any federal control over the curriculum, administration, personnel or library resources of any institution.

Specified that nothing in the bill authorized any federal control over the membership practices or internal operations of any college fraternal organization, private club or religious organization which was financed exclusively by private funds and whose facilities were not owned by the college. Exempted the service academies and Coast Guard Academy from this section.

Specified in each title of the Act that aid to any school or department of divinity or any educational activity related to sectarian instruction or religious workshop was prohibited.

Background

REFFRENCES -- Congress Enacts Broad Education Program (1963 Almanac p. 188); Congress Grants Major

Education Requests (1964 Almanac p. 259); President's "War on Poverty" Approved (1964 Almanac p. 208).

In 1963 Congress authorized more than $2 billion for five major education bills, including a college aid construction bill, a vocational education measure, and an expansion of the 1958 National Defense Education Act (NDEA) with increased funds for student loans and graduate fellowships. In 1964 Congress further expanded the NDEA and also provided adult literacy and college work-study programs in the Economic Opportunity Act (the antipoverty bill).

With passage of these and related bills (mainly in the field of health education), the two sessions of the 88th Congress enacted all of the major portions of President Kennedy's 1963 education program except general public school aid and federal guarantees of private loans for college students. The proposal for federal scholarships was dropped in the 88th Congress because partisan disputes over the issue had helped to kill previous education bills, most recently in 1962. (1962 Almanac p. 231)

PRESIDENT'S REQUESTS

President Johnson Jan. 12 sent to Congress his 1965 education message, outlining a far-ranging program of aid to education at all levels. (See text p. 1374) He estimated that the new college aid programs he sought would cost $250 million in fiscal 1966. The President said that under the college aid programs authorized by the 88th Congress, his Budget for fiscal 1966 proposed an additional $179 million for construction of college classrooms, libraries and laboratories; an additional $25 million to provide 4,500 more graduate fellowships for future college teachers; and an additional $110 million for basic research and science fellowships.

The Administration's college aid draft bill (HR 3220, S 600) called for the following new programs over a five-year period.

Student Assistance. A four-part program of student financial aid:

- Undergraduate scholarship grants of $200 to $800 a year for high school graduates from low-income families. First year authorization, $70 million.
- Establishment of a student loan insurance fund to insure loans of up to $1,500 annually and federal payment of up to 2 percentage points of the interest charge. President Johnson said this would be "a more effective, fairer and far less costly way of providing assistance than the various tax credit devices which have been proposed." (In 1964 the Senate narrowly defeated proposals for tax credits to students or their families. 1964 Almanac p. 532) Authorization for the insurance fund, $15 million.
- Transfer of the college work-study program established by the 1964 antipoverty bill from the Office of Economic Opportunity to the Office of Education, and expansion of the program to include students from middle-income families. Fiscal 1966 authorization, $129 million, including transferred funds from OEO.
- Extension of the student loan provisions of NDEA for three years, through fiscal 1971.

University Extension and Continuing Education. Grants to help universities develop more effective adult education and extension programs. These would seek solutions to community problems, particularly in urban areas, in such fields as housing, recreation, employment, health and poverty. Federal support ranged from 90 percent in fiscal 1966 to 50 percent in fiscal 1968-70. First year authorization, $25 million.

Library Assistance. Grants to help colleges purchase library books and materials, train library personnel and support library research. First year authorization, $50 million for matching grants of up to $5,000 per institution, plus supplemental grants of up to $10 per student; and $15 million for training and research.

Developing Colleges. A program to assist small colleges having trouble with accreditation to strengthen their academic programs through such means as exchanges of faculty and students with more developed colleges, introduction of new curriculums and faculty improvement programs. The Commissioner of Education was authorized to award "National Teaching Fellowships" to graduate students and teachers to encourage them to come to such colleges. First year authorization, $30 million.

House

COMMITTEE -- Education and Labor, Special Education Subcommittee.

HELD HEARINGS -- Feb. 1 - March 19 on the Administration's bill (HR 3220), introduced by Committee Chairman Adam C. Powell (D N.Y.).

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 1 -- Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare Anthony J. Celebrezze said the education programs enacted by the 88th Congress would strengthen the nation's colleges and universities, but that "there is still much to be done." By 1970, Celebrezze said, "our colleges must be prepared to add 50 percent more enrollment to their facilities which are already overcrowded." In addition, he continued, "approximately 100,000 able high school graduates each year will not go to college, if student aid opportunities are not expanded." The Administration's program, Celebrezze said, represented "an inspiring charter of education's future, in scope as well as in detail."

Feb. 2 -- Commissioner of Education Francis Keppel said the Administration's bill was designed "to continue and extend our commitment to seek both educational quality and broader educational opportunity for all of our young people." The provision for expanded university extension programs, he said, "supports the idea that university resources are particularly relevant to help meet the numerous new problems arising from increased urbanization." He said that colleges and universities could provide a basis for "long-range community planning"; help increase the ability of states, local communities and other groups "to assess contemporary problems and deal with them"; and serve as a link between the federal, state and local governments in seeking "effective and cooperative solutions to their problems." The student assistance programs, he said, would combine scholarships, loans and employment "in a way suited to the unique circumstances of each student." Such aid would become increasingly necessary, Keppel said, because the annual cost of attending public colleges had risen from an average of $730 in 1930 to a predicted $2,400 by 1980.

Feb. 3 -- A panel of four university deans and urban study center directors recommended that university extension and continuing education programs not be restricted to college-level courses.

Feb. 4 -- Alfred T. Hill, executive secretary of the Council for the Advancement of Small Colleges, said the majority of Council members "strongly" favored the Administration's proposals.

Feb. 5 -- Vice Admiral Hyman G. Rickover objected to provisions of the Administration bill for dealing with community problems in such fields as housing, transportation and land use through extension courses offered by institutions of higher education. He said that schools "have a hard enough time now with their short staffs and lack of funds.... If we cannot solve these problems ourselves, why put them into education?" Rickover also said that national standards should be established to determine educational achievement and standing of both students and high schools.

March 8 -- Edward W. Stepnick of the General Accounting Office described some difficulties found in administration of NDEA student loans.

Allen D. Marshall, president of United Student Aid Funds, a non-profit loan organization for college students, said he saw "no necessity" for the provision to insure loans of up to $1,500 annually to students, and that such a guarantee might put non-federal loan guarantee plans out of business. Marshall suggested that if the loan program were retained, it be put on a standby basis, "as a last resort if state and non-profit private guarantee programs prove insufficient."

March 9 -- A panel of officials from six universities described difficulties they had encountered in collecting repayments of NDEA loans from former students. They said the number of students who were delinquent ranged from 7 percent at the University of Maryland to 32 percent at Howard University.

March 10 -- Gerald M. Torkelson, representing the National Education Assn.'s Department of Audiovisual Instruction, urged amendment of the bill to provide for research relating to educational media and training of educational media personnel similar to provisions relating to college libraries. Torkelson said funds had been made available under the National Defense Education Act to increase the use of educational media in elementary and secondary schools, but not in institutions of higher learning, where "the teachers of tomorrow" were being taught.

Library of Congress National Catalog

William S. Dix of the Assn. of Research Libraries endorsed HR 3220 but suggested an amendment to establish a central cataloging agency to acquire, catalog and distribute books to other libraries. Dix said the Library of Congress was already "meeting over half of the need" and was "in fact already a national bibliographic center," but that its cataloging and distribution system "must be perfected." Dix estimated the first-year cost of establishing a comprehensive cataloging agency at not more than $5 million. (The proposal later was added to the bill.)

Archie McNeal of the American Library Assn. supported the Administration bill. He urged one amendment to authorize funds for library materials for use in university extension and continuing education courses.

The Administration bill was endorsed by spokesmen for the American Book Publishers Council and the American Textbook Publishers Institute.

March 12 -- Homer D. Babbidge, representing the American Council on Education and the Assn. of American Colleges, said aid to "developing institutions," which was limited to four-year colleges, should be expanded to include "two-year community and junior colleges."

Walter J. Tribbey, president of the United Business Schools Assn., said the bill's student loan provisions represented "the first national, broadly based recognition of the need for assistance to students who are not 'college bound' (but) who seek one or two years of vocationally oriented terminal training." Tribbey requested that the program of grants and contracts to support university extension and continuing education programs be "extended to include all types of post-high school institutions" and that the provisions for aid to "developing institutions" be "expanded to include institutions that offer less than a bachelor's degree." (Aid to students in post-high school technical and business schools later was provided in HR 7743. See story p. 309.)

March 16 -- Elbert K. Fretwell Jr., president of the Assn. for Higher Education joined Babbidge in urging assistance to developing two-year junior and community colleges.

Fred H. Harrington of the National Assn. of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges endorsed the bill.

(In an interview, the president of the Association supported a "limited federal scholarship program" but felt that direct aid to colleges and universities was more effective than scholarships.)

George O. McClary, president of the American School Counselor Assn., supported the bill. He said the student assistance provisions would be particularly valuable in solving problems of low-income families. He asked that the aid be made available to students attending "business, trade or other technical or vocational schools, or junior colleges," in addition to four-year colleges.

AFL-CIO Seeks Bigger Scholarships

March 17 -- Andrew J. Biemiller, director of legislation for the AFL-CIO, said higher education was "becoming more and more of a necessity for a youth," but that "the price tag on such an education keeps it out of reach for the overwhelming majority of our youth," Biemiller suggested several changes in the Administration bill, including an increase in the maximum scholarship allowance from $800 to $1,000; an increase from $70 million to $100 million in the first-year authorization for the scholarship program; and an increase from $3,000 to $5,000 a year in the maximum income of the scholarship student's family. Biemiller said the $3,000 income figure might define "poverty" under some programs, but that "$5,000 can hardly be considered as anything but 'low income' for the family attempting to put a son or daughter through college."

March 18 -- Keith G. Cone, speaking for the American Bankers Assn., supported provisions of the bill dealing with scholarship grants, work-study assistance and NDEA loans, but opposed establishment of a new program to insure private loans to college students. He acknowledged that existing loan programs did not "satisfy the total demand for student loans," but said a "recent and rapid rise" in state and private loan guarantee programs indicated "that state and private efforts will be able to meet" the demand. He said establishment of a federal program "at this time could seriously impair, perhaps displace, existing state and private guaranty programs...."

Dr. Pauline Tompkins of the American Assn. of Uniersity Women strongly supported the bill.

March 19 -- L. Quincy Mumford, Librarian of Congress, supported Title II of the bill, whch authorized grants to help institutions of higher education acquire library materials and train library personnel. Mumford also endorsed the amendment suggested by the Assn. of Research Libraries to appropriate funds to enable the Library of Congress to enlarge its book collecting, cataloging and distribution activities. (See above)

Rexford G. Moon Jr., director of College Scholarship Service for the College Entrance Examination Board, supported the student assistance provisions of the bill. He said that "much of (the) criticism" of the loan collection program under NDEA resulted from "the absence of appropriate criteria" established by previous experience "against which to judge this problem." He said, "seemingly everyone who makes loans sets different criteria as to what constitutes successful loan collection," and that according to press reports, the same data could be interpreted "to indicate delinquency as high as 16 percent and as low as 1.5 percent."

Dr. Charles Chapman, speaking for the American Assn. of Junior Colleges, endorsed the bill but suggested several amendments. He asked that Title III, which authorized a program to strengthen academic programs in smaller four-year colleges, be extended to include junior colleges as well. He also said that "greater flexibility should be allowed an institution" in establishing "packages" of assistance than seemed to be permitted in the bill, which limited student assistance to institutions participating in other student aid programs.

COMMITTEE ACTION

In the Special Education Subcommittee and the full Committee, controversy developed over the federal loan guarantees and the scholarship provisions. The Subcommittee May 18 approved a bill which included scholarships and greatly expanded funds for other programs, but which did not contain the loan guarantee provisions. The guarantee plan had been opposed by the American Bankers Assn. during the hearings, partly because it provided for federal determination of maximum interest rates. Edith Green (D Ore.), Subcommittee chairman, said testimony showed no need for the program.

Federal scholarships, at the Subcommittee level, were approved unanimously. In a break with the past, GOP members supported scholarships, on condition that they did not provide full expenses but required recipients to receive equal amounts from other sources, such as loan funds. But three days after Subcommittee approval, the full Committee May 21 struck out the scholarship provision by a vote of 13-12. The motion was made by John H. Dent (D Pa.).

The Committee, as in the past, was divided on the question of loans versus grants. The prevailing view was that if a college student received federal aid, he should be willing to repay it.

Before completing action on the bill, the Committee restored both the scholarship and the loan guarantee programs with certain modifications. Scholarships ("educational opportunity grants") were to come out of the NDEA student loan fund and go only to students with "exceptional financial needs." Additional funds ($74 million) were authorized for the NDEA loans, so that one-fourth of the fund, the amount available for scholarships, would be $64.4 million in the first year.

Revival of the loan guarantee program reportedly resulted from White House pressure. President Johnson as a Senator had sponsored loan insurance bills. He also was reported as fearing that deleting of such aid would encourage Senate passage of a tax credit plan for middle-income parents paying college tuition. The Committee amended the Administration loan guarantee plan, reducing it from a five- to a three-year program and putting it on a standby basis to be used only if state and private non-profit insurance programs were unavailable. It further encouraged non-federal insurance programs by authorizing advances to the states to help set up their own plans. The Committee retained the Administration proposal for federal subsidy of interest charges on the loans, but increased the amount the Government would pay.

Bill Reported

The Committee July 14 reported a clean bill (HR 9567 -- H Rept 621). The vote was 21-2, with the negative votes cast by two Southern Republicans, Glenn Andrews (Ala.) and Edward J. Gurney (Fla.). In addition to the scholarship and loan insurance features mentioned above, the Committee made the following major changes in the Administration draft bill:

- Added a new title, requested by the colleges, amending the 1963 college aid program by doubling the funds for construction of graduate and undergraduate facilities. The extra $290 million brought the fiscal 1966 total to $580 million. Mrs. Green said facilities were the "most critical need" of higher education.
- Doubled the funds requested for the first year of the university extension program from $25 million to $50 million, and reduced the federal share in the first year from 90 percent to 75 percent.
- Added $5 million to the $65 million requested for library assistance in order to enable the Library of Congress to establish a central cataloging service.
- Deleted the Administration provision extending the NDEA student loan program, which was due to expire in 1968. Mrs. Green said that because of the high delinquency rate on repayment of NDEA loans, the Committee would like to make a detailed study of the program in 1966. The Office of Education reported in 1965 that 2,800 borrowers with loans amounting to $1.4 million had fallen behind in their payments and had not maintained contact with their colleges.
- Amended the definition of institutions that could make NDEA student loans to include one-year post-secondary occupational schools.
- The full Committee restored the 50 percent "forgiveness" (cancellation) of NDEA loans to students who became teachers. The Subcommittee had deleted this provision from the National Defense Education Act. Members of the Subcommittee said that general scholarships were preferable to loan forgiveness for only a select group of students.

Majority Views. The majority said, "In the 10 years from 1954 to 1964 the number of college and university students climbed from 2.4 to 4.8 million -- an increase of 100 percent in one decade. It appears that this accelerated rate of growth will continue into the next decade." The report continued, "Less well known, but equally dramatic, is the increase in the number of colleges and universities. Since the war, the number of institutions of higher education in this country has risen 250 percent, from 866 to approximately 2,300." The majority said, "As existing facilities have become overcrowded and as new institutions have sprung up across the country, academic quality has often been sacrificed for the sake of growth. Inadequate library resources, a lack of qualified teachers, packed classrooms and insufficent scholarship funds characterize many of the nation's colleges and universities. This is a dangerous phenomenon and one that could persist -- the demands for growth continue unslackened."

Minority Views. In minority views, all of the Committee Republicans except Alphonzo Bell (Calif.) and Ogden R. Reid (N.Y.) expressed "reservations" about the bill, saying, "Even by the sometimes bizarre standards of this Committee, the treatment accorded this bill has been wholly unsatisfactory." The minority said that, at a June 24 meeting lasting less than 20 minutes, the Committee's majority adopted without discussion a scholarship plan in lieu of the one earlier rejected by the Committee, reinstated the loan guarantee program previously dropped, and revised it, extended NDEA loans to new categories of institutions ("an idea not previously discussed") and "approved authorizations in excess of $600 million without even having a clean print to examine." The minority said, "It is common knowledge that this unjustified action to approve a bill virtually 'sight unseen' was ordered by the White House.... (We) protest the abject surrender of legislative responsibilities, often made -- as in this case -- in response to demands from the White House (whether originating from the President or not) which border on the irrational." The minority said the provision for federal student loan guarantees was a "completely unnecessary federal intervention" and that tax credits would be "a better method to help meet college expenses." It said that when the bill reached the House floor, "We hope that enough thoughtful Democratic colleagues will conclude that the risk of impairing a great national resource like higher education is more frightening than the risk of offending the President."

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- June 23 -- The House Republican Conference unanimously endorsed a bill to provide tax credits for students, their parents or others paying the costs of higher education. As of June 28, 64 Republicans had introduced such legislation, which the Administration opposed as discriminatory and expensive. (1964 Almanac p. 532)

Major Provisions. As reported to the House HR 9567 authorized $661.5 million (excluding funds for interest subsidies) for higher education, in fiscal 1966 as follows: $50 million for university extension courses in the problems of community and urban life; $70 million in library assistance to purchase books and materials and to train personnel; $30 million to strengthen and raise the quality of teaching at developing four-year colleges; $74 million for the NDEA student loan fund, bringing it to $253,300,000, of which $64.4 million (25 percent of it) would be for scholarships; $17.5 million for advances to states to help them set up loan insurance programs, $1 million plus necessary funds for a federal loan insurance program, and necessary funds to pay the total interest on insured loans while the student was in college and 3 percentage points of interest thereafter (estimate, $42 million in fiscal 1966); $129 million for construction of graduate and undergraduate facilities.

HR 9567 also included a new title, added by the Committee, establishing an Advisory Council, appointed by the Chairman of the Committee, to make recommendations about programs affected by the Act. The report said that for years the Executive Branch had "hundreds of advisory committees and panels" and that "the Committee deems it advisable to have a professional consulting body."

FLOOR ACTION

The House Aug. 26, by a roll-call vote of 368-22, passed an amended version of HR 9567 and sent it to the Senate. (For voting, see chart p. 994)

Before passage, the House adopted six amendments to the bill and rejected three others.

Debate centered on the scholarship issue. Robert P. Griffin (R Mich.), second-ranking minority member of the Committee, offered an amendment to delete the scholarship program and use the funds to construct more community colleges. He argued that free and easily accessible junior colleges would be more beneficial to needy students than grants. The amendment was defeated on a 58-88 standing vote. Neal Smith (D Iowa) subsequently tried to insert a formula for repaying the scholarships, and his amendment was defeated by voice vote.

Edith Green (D Ore.), chairman of the Special Education Subcommittee, offered an amendment to the loan guarantee program which was accepted by voice vote. The amendment, which she said was worked out with the Administration and the American Bankers Assn., authorized federal advances (repayable grants) to help set up private as well as state loan insurance programs, deleted the bill's requirement for state matching of advances, and permitted, for two years, payment of interest subsidies on loans which did not meet all federal standards.

Another amendment, offered by John H. Dent (D Pa.) and accepted by voice vote, deleted the authorization of an Advisory Council for the House Committee. Chairman Adam C. Powell (D N.Y.) said that consultants could be hired any time by permission of the House Administration Committee.

The House also accepted without controversy an amendment by Albert H. Quie (R Minn.) amending the 1963 college construction bill by removing categorical limitations on grants for undergraduate facilities. The amendment deleted language in PL 88-204 that limited the use of construction grants to buildings for science, mathematics, modern languages, engineering or libraries. (The Senate had added these categorical limitations to the 1963 bill.) Quie said, "Efforts for categorical grants ought to cease and whenever possible, leave the the decision to the institution itself."

Debate -- Dent -- "I am in favor of scholarships but I am only in favor of them if they are given out equally to all those who qualify. For us to say that we are helping the one but that the other nine who are in the same condition have to borrow the money is wrong."

Mrs. Green -- "I do not believe there would be a single person in this House who would argue against free education up to the 12th grade. Then in the 17th grade, when a person is doing his graduate work, the Federal Government and this Congress...have been very generous in supplying graduate fellowships. Why are we unwilling to give any grant from the 13th year to the 17th year? Are you going to say you will give $1,000 or $1,100 under the Manpower Development and Retraining Act and $6,000 or $7,000 to a Job Corps enrollee but you will not give $500 in an educational opportunity grant to a high school graduate that has an IQ of 120 or above and comes from a family with a very low income?"

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Aug. 26 -- James Roosevelt (D Calif.) -- Stipulate that educational opportunity grants could not exceed one-half of the total amount of financial aid provided a student by the institution he attended plus that made available by state or private scholarship programs (instead of the limitation in the bill as reported of one-half the amount provided by the institution alone, excluding assistance under work-study programs). Voice vote.

Albert H. Quie (R Minn.) -- Require subsequent Congressional authorization for funds provided in fiscal years 1967-70 for college work-study programs. The Committee bill authorized appropriation of "such sums as may be necessary." Voice.

Edith Green (D Ore.) -- Substitute new text for Part B of Title IV, the loan insurance program, to (1) authorize advances for private non-profit insurance programs if a state did not have a program by June 30, 1968; (2) provide a two-year program of interest subsidies for students who borrowed under programs that did not meet all federal standards; (3) delete the state matching requirement for federal advances to state loan insurance programs; and make other clarifying changes. Voice.

Quie -- Remove categorical limitations on grants for construction of undergraduate facilities authorized by the 1963 Higher Education Facilities Act. Voice.

John H. Dent (D Pa.) -- Delete Title VI, authorizing an Advisory Council for the House Education and Labor Committee. Voice.

Joe D. Waggonner Jr. (D La.) -- Stipulate that no provision of any law should be construed to authorize Government direction over the membership practices or operations of any fraternal organization, private club or religious organization of any educational institution. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Aug. 26 -- Robert P. Griffin (R Mich.) -- Require state agencies to administer the programs aiding developing institutions. Standing vote, 33-59.

Griffin -- Delete provisions for scholarships and make the $74 million for the scholarship fund available for construction at public community colleges and technical institutes. Standing, 58-88.

Neal Smith (D Iowa) -- Require, and establish a formula for, repayment of scholarship grants. Voice.

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- Aug. 26 -- President Johnson hailed House passage of HR 9567. He said, "More than a million students can benefit in the next year by guaranteed low-interest loans -- a program I have urged for the past 15 years.... More than one hundred thousand students of exceptional promise and great financial need can receive opportunity grants."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Education Subcommittee, Labor and Public Welfare.

HELD HEARINGS -- March 16-June 11 on S 600, the Administration bill introduced Jan. 19 by Wayne Morse (D Ore.), chairman of the Subcommittee. Many of the witnesses were the same as those that appeared on the House side.

TESTIMONY -- March 16 -- HEW Secretary Celebrezze said the NDEA student loan program was "under strong pressures, with more than 600,000 students having borrowed approximately $453 million from the National Defense Student Loan funds set up in 1,574 colleges." (For later figures, see p. 294)

Responding to questioning by Committee members about non-repayment of student loans under the National Defense Education Act, Celebrezze replied that the situation was not "as bad as it looks." He pointed out that while approximately $3 million in payments on a total of $18 million was due, only 3 percent of the total was delinquent for more than a year.

March 30 -- Members of a panel representing the American Council on Education endorsed the bill. However, William D. Van Dusen of Wayne State University said that certain provisions of Title IV, which provided programs of student assistance, were "of concern to us." He said the provision limiting participation in the undergraduate scholarship program to institutions participating in the National Defense Student Loan and the college work-study programs would penalize institutions which did not participate but still offered "similar or, in some cases, greater benefits to their students" under private programs. Van Dusen also questioned the provision that the Commissioner of Education prescribe criteria for determining the amount of scholarships provided by the bill. He said that while the issuance of "guidelines" or a "maximum limit on the permissible stipend" would be desirable, the program should be flexible to allow for differences in need created by differences in academic preparation, "circumstances at home," or the "effort and sacrifice a family may be willing to make to support the student's education."

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- July 6 -- Sens. Ralph W. Yarborough (D Texas), Joseph S. Clark (D Pa.), Wayne Morse (D Ore.), Winston Prouty (R Vt.) and Jennings Randolph (D W.Va.), all members of the Education Subcommittee, introduced an amendment to S 600, providing matching grants to colleges for the acquisition of laboratory and other special equipment. The amendment also authorized funds for workshops to train teachers using the new equipment. Yarborough said leading educators had testified that this aid was necessary and that the program would be similar to equipment aid already provided to elementary and secondary schools under NDEA. This amendment became Title VI of the Committee bill.

JOHNSON REQUESTS AID FOR TEACHERS

President Johnson July 17 asked Congress to enact before adjournment a three-part bill, the Teaching Professions Act of 1965, to help "bring the best of our nation's talent to its schools." In a letter to Congress, which was accompanied by a draft bill, Mr. Johnson proposed (1) creation of a National Teacher Corps, which would enable "teachers with a sense of mission," and students who intended to become teachers, to serve in city slums and areas of rural poverty; (2) a program of fellowships for both students preparing to become teachers and experienced teachers seeking to "enhance their qualifications"; and (3) a program of cost-of-education allowances paid to colleges and universities for each fellowship holder and of grants for developing or strengthening teacher-training courses. The Act would authorize a fiscal 1966 appropriation of $30 million and a maximum of 3,000 fellowships. (For text of letter, see p. 1426.)

In his letter, President Johnson said he had concluded that the bill was "of sufficient urgency to justify action by this session of the Congress. The problems which face us in education do not grow smaller as time goes by; neither should our determination to attack and solve those problems."

The President had said in a July 2 speech to the National Education Assn. with respect to the teacher fellowship program, "And this program will assist teachers -- displaced by the process of school integration -- to acquire the skills that are necessary to permit them to perform new and challenging jobs in a new environment, in a new century. For you and I are both concerned about the problem of the dismissal of Negro teachers as we move forward.. with the desegregation of the schools in America."

Teacher Corps. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (D Mass.) had proposed a Teacher Corps in testimony Feb. 26 at hearings of the Education Subcommittee on the elementary school bill (S 370). When it was not included in the final version of that bill, he and Sen. Gaylord Nelson (D Wis.) proposed it as an amendment to the higher education bill.

COMMITTEE ACTION

The Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee Sept. 1 reported HR 9567 without opposition (S Rept 673). The amended bill provided specific funds for each year, totaling approximately $4.7 billion over a five-year period. It also included the teacher programs requested by President Johnson July 17, and the college equipment title sponsored by Subcommittee members. (See above)

Majority Views. Discussing the need for major programs authorized by HR 9567, the majority said the purpose of community service programs was to help solve "major community problems" by "fostering innovation and encouraging and enabling institutions of higher education to respond to the demands of the communities they serve." It said the need for student financial assistance "cannot be emphasized too strongly" and was "of fundamental importance in helping to meet current shortages and future needs." Programs to aid teachers, the majority said, were "concerned...with the backbone of American education..."

Supplemental Views. The five Republican Committee members supported HR 9567, and said they were "particularly gratified to note some of the contributions of minority members of the Committee to the bill as finally reported." They said that "where amendments have been accepted, the bill has been considerably strengthened."

Individual Views. Sen. Peter H. Dominick (R Colo.) said HR 9567 "neglects the crucial fact that a very large proportion of students pay for their postsecondary education either by part-time employment while in college or by assistance from the earnings of their parents." He urged passage of S 12, of which he was cosponsor, which would have provided a tax credit for expenditures on higher education. Dominick said, "Aside from the failure to consider a tax credit approach to higher educational support," HR 9567 was "an excellent approach to the demands placed on colleges and universities by 20th-century society."

Changes from House Bill. As reported by the Senate Committee, HR 9567 differed from the House-passed bill in the following major respects:

Whereas the House bill authorized specific funds only for fiscal 1966, with amounts in later years to be subsequently authorized by Congress, the Senate bill authorized a total of approximately $4.7 billion for fiscal years 1966-70, with specific annual authorizations.

Funds for titles I and II were slightly higher in the House bill.

Title III. Developing Colleges -- The Senate bill included two-year institutions in the group of colleges that could receive grants for development. The House bill did not. The Senate bill also authorized $55 million for these grants in fiscal 1966; the House bill provided $30 million.

Title IV. Student Assistance -- The Senate scholarship plan was similar to the Administration request: a direct authorization of $70 million for scholarships of between $200 and $800, with an extra $200 for students in the upper half of their college class. The House provision tied the program to the NDEA loan fund and permitted colleges to convert up to 25 percent of their annual NDEA funds into scholarships.

The Senate Committee added a new section to Title IV to amend the National Defense Education Act. It tightened the provisions on repayment of student loans, it permitted total loan "forgiveness" (cancellation) for persons who teach in areas with high concentrations of poor families, and it expanded NDEA programs providing aid for schools to buy equipment and for colleges to conduct teacher training institutes. The last two programs, originally limited to the teaching of certain subjects, were broadened to include economics. Civics and industrial arts were also included in the teacher institutes program. Authorizations for both programs were increased by a total of $27,250,000.

Title V. Teacher Programs -- The Senate Committee added a new title establishing a variety of programs designed to improve teaching in public schools, particularly those serving impoverished areas. It authorized $36.1 million in fiscal 1966 and $64.7 million in each of the next four years for a Teacher Corps which would permit 6,000 persons in the first year to teach in poor areas; it authorized 4,500 graduate fellowships in fiscal 1966 (15,000 by fiscal 1970 for elementary and secondary school teachers, with 20 percent reserved for teachers displaced by desegregation and consolidation of schools); and it authorized $5 million a year to help colleges improve their teacher training programs.

Title VI. Improvement of Undergraduate Instruction -- The Committee added another new title, requested by the colleges, for equipment and faculty improvement. It authorized $225 million over a five-year period for purchase of laboratory and other equipment, $2.5 million in fiscal 1966 and increased amounts thereafter for closed circuit television, and $5 million annually for workships for teachers or specialists planning to use educational media equipment.

Title VII. Higher Education Facilities -- Whereas the House bill had amended the 1963 college aid bill to authorize an additional $290 million for construction of undergraduate and graduate facilities, the Senate bill authorized an increase of only $160 million. But the Senate Committee retained a House amendment removing categorical limitations on grants for undergraduate facilities. In 1963 the Senate had insisted that grants be used only for certain subjects.

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate Sept. 2, by a 79-3 roll-call vote, passed HR 9567 with amendments and sent it to conference with the House. The only negative votes were cast by Sens. John C. Stennis (D Miss.), A. Willis Robertson (D Va.) and James O. Eastland (D Miss.). (For voting, see chart p. 1071)

Before passage, the Senate accepted five amendments to the bill, including one, offered by Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.), relating to Government control over college fraternal and religious organizations and private clubs. The Dirksen amendment, similar to the Waggonner amendment in the House, was accepted by a roll-call vote of 60-28. The other four amendments were approved by Sen. Morse, floor manager of the bill, and accepted by voice votes.

After Dirksen offered his amendment prohibiting federal control over the practices of fraternities, he accepted a modification, suggested by Sam J. Ervin Jr. (D N.C.), which limited its application to organizations whose facilities were not owned by the university and whose financing was private. The Ervin modification was expected to soften the criticism of civil rights groups. Morse had received a letter from the Washington director of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, saying that under the Waggonner amendment "it would be possible to use U.S. Government funds to build and operate racially segregated facilities on university-owned grounds."

Other amendments were offered during debate, including one by Jack Miller (R Iowa) to replace scholarships with loans and one by Vance Hartke (D Ind.) to increase the amount of guaranteed loans, but they were withdrawn at the request of Morse. An amendment by Thomas J. Dodd (D Conn.) providing tax relief for persons paying college tuition was also withdrawn.

Gaylord Nelson (D Wis.) and Edward M. Kennedy (D Mass.) described their new program, the Teacher Corps. Nelson said, "After a three months' intensive training period at a university, the young Teacher Corps interns would go in teams of about five into schools requesting them, led by an experienced teacher." Kennedy said the Teacher Corps idea was based on the success of the substitute schools in Prince Edward County, Va., where classes were taught by skilled teachers from the entire country. Public schools had closed there rather than integrate.

Provisions. As passed by the Senate, the major provisions of HR 9567 were similar to those of the final bill (see p. 294) except that in the Senate version specific sums were authorized for five years rather than three, and the aid to small colleges program and the Teacher Corps were both given a five-year life.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Sept. 2 -- Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) -- Stipulate that nothing in the bill authorized federal control over the membership practices or internal operations of any college fraternal organization, private club or religious organization if the facilities of the organization were not owned by the college and its activities were privately financed. Roll-call vote, 60-28.

Ralph W. Yarborough (D Texas) -- Excuse repayment of principal, but not of interest, on federally insured loans while the borrower was studying outside the United States or was in the U.S. armed forces or the Peace Corps. Voice.

Jacob K. Javits (R N.Y.) -- Limit the interest rate on loans for construction of academic facilities under the 1963 Act to 3 percent. Voice.

Peter H. Dominick (R Colo.) -- Permit an institution of higher education which received federal funds for scholarships to use up to 25 percent of such funds in the institution's student loan program. Voice.

Joseph S. Clark (D Pa.) -- Include state agencies among the institutions eligible for federal insurance of direct loans made for educational purposes. Voice.

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- Sept. 2 -- President Johnson praised the Senate approval of the Teacher Corps and fellowships, saying they "will mean much to schools in areas of poverty -- whose students have been the victims not only of impoverished homes but of impoverished schools."

HOUSE COMMITTEE REPORTS TEACHER PROGRAMS

The House Education and Labor Committee Sept. 2 reported a bill (HR 9627 -- H Rept 953) similar to the Administration-requested teacher programs in Title V of the Senate-passed bill. The General Education Subcommittee had held hearings July 7-15 on bills to establish a National Teacher Corps and a teacher fellowship program.

HR 9627 authorized the following appropriations: fellowships -- fiscal 1966, $40 million; fiscal 1967, $160 million; fiscal 1968, $275 million; National Teacher Corps -- fiscal 1966, $10 million; fiscal 1967, $13 million; fiscal 1968, $13 million.

The Committee said HR 9627 "would meet the great need for additional teachers with higher levels of teacher education and the equally compelling need for improved quality teacher education." No minority views were filed.

Conference

The House and Senate Oct. 20 adopted the conference report on HR 9567 (H Rept 1178) and sent the bill to the White House.

House approval came on a 313-63 roll-call vote after a Republican motion to send the bill back to conference for deletion of the Teacher Corps section was defeated by a 152-226 roll call. (For voting, see chart p. 1020)

Senate action was by voice vote, without opposition.

HR 9567 contained eight titles, authorizing for fiscal 1966 $804,350,000 plus an estimated $42 million in interest subsidies on insured loans for college students. Most of the programs in the bill were authorized for five years with specific funds authorized for three, but the Teacher Corps was given only a two-year life and the title authorizing aid to impoverished small colleges covered only one year. (This program was cut in conference because of Senate insistence that aid be given to two-year as well as four-year colleges.)

House Republican conferees refused to sign the conference report on the Higher Education Act because it included the Teacher Corps; they promised a floor fight.

In debate on the conference report Oct. 20, Rep. Robert P. Griffin (R Mich.) asserted that "a federally selected, federally trained and federally assigned corps of teachers would give federal officials a powerful additional lever of control and direct influence over local schools." Albert H. Quie (R Minn.), charging that the proposal had been rushed through the Education Committee, warned Members, "you are being asked to buy a pig in a poke." Quie offered the motion to delete the program.

Replying to the Republican charges, Committee Chairman Adam C. Powell (D N.Y.) said "no school district will receive a single (Corps) teacher unless that school district requests such teachers" and districts will have "absolute, exclusive authority to assign the teachers within their systems, to determine the subject matter they will teach," and to fire them if they want. A Corps of 6,000 was cited as the goal.

Charles E. Bennett (D Fla.) said there was "great need" for the Corps "because of the unfortunate displacement of many Negro teachers" thrown out of jobs by the desegregation and consolidation of schools. (The bill's provision for graduate fellowships was aimed partly at increasing Negro teachers' educational qualifications.)

On the 152-226 roll-call vote that in effect upheld the Teacher Corps, Republicans voted 111-7 to delete the Corps while a majority of Northern and Southern Democrats opposed the motion, 41-219.

COMPROMISES REACHED

The final bill was similar in most major respects to the Senate bill. House conferees accepted, with minor changes, new titles added by the Senate providing the Teacher Corps, fellowships for teachers and programs to improve college instruction. The Senate provision for direct scholarships (not tied to the NDEA loan fund) was also included, but under the House designation of "educational opportunity grants." Funds were voted for three years, a compromise between five in the Senate bill, and one in the House bill.

Title I. Conferees deleted a Senate amendment reserving 20 percent of university extension funds for experimental projects.

Title II. They retained a Senate provision requiring that colleges match one dollar for every three federal dollars for special purpose library grants.

Title III. The House bill provided $30 million in the first year to improve small four-year colleges; the Senate authorized $55 million for both junior and four-year colleges. The final version followed the Senate language, but reserved 78 percent of the funds for four-year and 22 percent for two-year colleges. Because of the controversy over junior colleges, only a one-year authorization was made.

Title IV. Conferees accepted the Senate scholarship program of $70 million annually, but they dropped a Senate provision giving preference to students beginning their first year of college or transferring from two-year to four-year colleges. They included a House stipulation that no grant should be more than half the total financial aid provided to the student, but if a student was in the upper half of his class, he could receive an additional $200 over the regular $800 limit (a Senate amendment). A Senate provision permitting 15 percent of a state's allotment to be used for a state scholarship program was dropped.

Conferees accepted Senate NDEA amendments on repayment of loans, cancellation of loans to teachers in impoverished areas, and new categories for equipment and teacher training programs.

Title V. The Teacher Corps and teacher fellowship programs were accepted without major change. Conferees followed the intent of the Senate provision by saying they expected that "up to 20 percent of the fellowships will be awarded to persons...displaced" by the desegregation of schools. The separate $5 million authorization for teacher training was omitted, and the program was combined with the fellowship program.

Title VI. Programs to improve college instruction, added by the Senate, were approved by conferees without major change.

Title VII. As in the House bill, funds for construction of college facilities were doubled from $290 million to $580 million in fiscal 1966, $230 million for undergraduate, and $60 million for graduate facilities.

Title VIII. In the general provisions, the conference report stated that the Government should not control the activities of any fraternal organization or club "financed exclusively by funds derived from private sources and whose facilities are not owned by such institution." (The word "exclusively" was added by conferees to the Senate amendment.)

PRESIDENT SIGNS BILL

President Johnson Nov. 8 signed the Higher Education Act of 1965 into law (PL 89-329). The ceremony was held at Southwest Texas State College in San Marcos, from which Mr. Johnson graduated in 1930. In his remarks he said that of the 2.7 million who were graduated from high school in 1965, there were 1.3 million who did not go to college that fall. The President said, "This bill... would provide scholarships and loans and work opportunities to 1 million of that 1.3 million that did not get to go on to college.... In the next school year alone, 140,000 young men and women will be enrolled in college who, but for the provisions of this bill, would have never gone past high school."

APPROPRIATIONS

The day after clearing the conference report on HR 9567, Congress passed a general supplemental appropriations bill (HR 11588) providing funds to begin the programs authorized in the Act.

The supplemental bill carried $160 million of the $274 million requested by the Administration for college aid. Although the Senate voted funds for the new Teacher Corps, the money was dropped in conference with the House. (See story p. 182)

The following table shows fiscal 1966 funds authorized in the Higher Education Act, the supplemental appropriations requested by the Administration and the funds approved by Congress in HR 11588 as enacted.

	(in millions)
	Authorized	Requested	Granted
Community Services	$ 25	$ 15	$ 10
College Libraries	70	2.5*	0
Developing Colleges	55	0*	5
Scholarships	70	70	60
Loan Insurance	17.5	10	10

TOTAL	$785.3†	$274.0	$160

The request for $92.5 million was not specifically allocated but was expected to be divided among these programs.

*The Act did not authorize a specific sum for interest subsidies but the estimated first-year cost was $42 million.

†Does not include $60 million transferred from the antipoverty program and $1 million to start the student loan insurance fund.

DISASTER AREA SCHOOL AID

HR 9022 -- Reported by House Education and Labor Committee (H Rept 587) July 1, 1965.
- Passed by the House on a 305-37 roll-call vote Aug. 30. (See p. 994)
- Reported, amended, by Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee (S Rept 783) Sept. 28.
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote Oct. 1.
- House by voice vote agreed to Senate amendments with an amendment Oct. 13.
- Senate by voice vote agreed to House amendment Oct. 15.

PL 89-313 -- Signed into law Nov. 1.

Congress enacted an uncontroversial bill, the School Disaster Aid Act, providing federal aid for construction and temporary operation of public schools damaged by a major disaster. The disaster aid came in the form of amendments to the impacted areas laws of 1950 which provided funds to communities "impacted" by federal installations. A second amendment authorized continued aid to six impacted school districts which had planned construction but were scheduled to lose their federal funds following a Nov. 19, 1964, announcement that nearby military bases would be closed. A third amendment to the impacted areas laws made school agencies in large cities eligible for federal aid if 3 percent of their students had parents who lived or worked on federal property, rather than 6 percent as required under existing law. This change was expected to bring a number of large cities under the impacted areas program.

The bill also amended the elementary -- secondary school aid bill (PL 89-10) which had been enacted earlier in the year as an amendment to the impacted areas law. HR 9022 authorized a minimum of $75,000 to each state for the administration of PL 89-10 and authorized grants to schools for handicapped children which were operated or financed by the state on a non-school district basis. PL 89-10, as passed, provided funds only for schools operated on a local school district basis.

The cost of the final bill was estimated at about $40 million in fiscal 1966, half of which was to go to schools for the handicapped.

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law, HR 9022 amended the impacted areas laws as follows (provisions relating to construction were amendments to PL 81-815; those concerned with operations were amendments to PL 81-874):

School Disaster Aid. Authorized the U.S. Office of Education to provide financial aid, in the form of grants or repayable advances, to repair or rebuild public elementary and secondary schools damaged or destroyed by a federally recognized major disaster. Limited the aid to the difference between the cost of repair and the amount state, local and other federal agencies could provide. Pending an appropriation for disaster aid, the Office could use funds appropriated under PL 81-815 for construction in federally impacted school districts.

Stipulated the disaster must have occurred between Aug. 30, 1965, and July 1, 1967.

Authorized additional federal funds to help operate school programs for up to five years in each case at a level of education equivalent to that maintained during the last fiscal year preceding the disaster. Provided that the amounts allocated for the second, third and fourth fiscal years would be based on a graduated 75-50-25 percentage of the first appropriation.

Permitted use of operational funds to purchase equipment and materials, including textbooks, and to lease temporarily needed school facilities. Pending a disaster appropriation, funds for continuing a school program could be drawn from appropriations made under PL 81-874 for operating school programs in federally impacted areas.

Permitted private school students to attend classes in public institutions until their facilities were back in operation.

(The cost of the disaster aid provisions was estimated at $1,250,000 to $1,500,000 annually.)

Base Closings. Authorized continued school construction funds under PL 81-815 for certain impacted school districts which, except for the closing of nearby military bases announced Nov. 19, 1964, would have been eligible. (The total cost for six districts affected was about $295,000.)

Impacted Area Eligibility. Provided that all school agencies were eligible for federal aid to school operations if 3 percent of their students were federally connected (thus eliminating the current 6-percent requirement for local school agencies whose enrollment exceeded 35,000 pupils). (The cost for the 12 large city school districts likely to be affected was estimated to be $18.6 million in fiscal 1966.)

Authorized the Commissioner of Education to waive the requirement in existing law (PL 815) that school districts contain at least 20 federally connected students to be eligible for PL 815 funds for school construction in impacted areas.

Low-Income Families. Amended Title II of PL 81-874 as follows (Title II was added to existing law by the enactment in April 1965 of President Johnson's proposals for aid to elementary and secondary schools, PL 89-10; Title II provided federal aid to areas which had large concentrations of low-income families. See story p. 275):

- Authorized grants under PL 89-10 to state-operated and state-supported schools which provided, on a non-school district basis, free education for handicapped children. (Estimated fiscal 1966 costs: $20-25 million.)
- Authorized annual payments of at least $75,000 to a state and $25,000 to a U.S. territory for administering the provisions of PL 89-10. (Estimated fiscal 1966 costs: $700,000.)

Background

The impacted areas laws, enacted by Congress in 1950, were designed to aid school districts financially burdened ("impacted") by the presence of tax-free federal installations. Under the laws, the Government pays part of the cost of constructing (PL 81-815) and operating (PL 81-874) schools on behalf of the children whose parents either work or live on federal property, with a consequent loss in local taxes. (Another section of the same program, covering children of parents who both live and work on federal property, is permanent law.) The popular impacted areas program affects 315 Congressional districts, and in fiscal 1966 provided them an estimated $279,555,000. (1964 Almanac p. 261)

In 1964 both laws were extended for two years, through June 30, 1966. In 1965 the elementary-secondary school aid bill (PL 89-10) extended PL 81-874, the operation program, for two additional years and amended it to provide extensive federal assistance ($1 billion in fiscal 1966) to school districts "impacted" by children from low-income families. (See story p. 275)

House

COMMITTEE -- Education and Labor, General Education Subcommittee.

HELD HEARINGS -- May 18-26 on a variety of bills providing federal aid to school districts in major disaster areas and helping school districts affected by military base closings. The Subcommittee June 15 approved a clean bill (HR 9022), introduced by William D. Ford (D Mich.), which combined both purposes.

ACTION -- The full Committee July 1 reported HR 9022 (H Rept 587) with no opposition. The bill amended the two impacted areas laws to: (1) provide federal grants for construction and operation of public elementary and high schools in areas affected by major disasters; (2) continue aid for school construction already planned in six school districts whose aid would otherwise be withdrawn as a result of the Defense Secretary's Nov. 19, 1964, announcement closing certain military bases (1964 Almanac p. 160); and (3) make school agencies in large cities eligible for impacted areas aid if 3 percent of their students were federally connected, instead of 6 percent as currently required.

Majority Views. The report said that pending specific appropriations for disaster aid, funds for construction could be taken from appropriations made under PL 81-815, and funds for operations from PL 81-874 appropriations. Eligible districts could receive school operation help for five years, with a 25-percent reduction in each of the second, third and fourth years that aid was provided. Private school students were permitted to attend these classes until their schools were back in operation. The estimated cost of the two programs was $1,250,000 to $1,500,000 annually.

The Committee said the provision of the bill to provide funds for school districts that had suffered military base closings would affect school districts in Lincoln, Neb.; Sun Prairie, Wis.; Waco, Texas (two school districts); Amarillo, Texas; and Glasgow Air Force Base, Mont. It said the total cost of the provision would be $295,465.

The Committee said that elimination of the special eligibility requirement under PL 81-874, that local educational agencies whose enrollment exceeded 35,000 pupils must have at least 6 percent federally connected students, would make the requirement 3 percent for agencies of any size. It said the estimated cost of the change would be $9.6 million for 11 school agencies, not counting New York City, or $18.6 million for 12 agencies, counting New York City, a borderline case. The other cities that could be affected were: Atlanta, Ga.; Dade County, Fla.; Boston, Mass.; Baltimore, Md.; St. Louis, Mo.; Richmond, Va.; Memphis, Tenn.; Los Angeles, Calif.; New Orleans, La.; Houston, Texas; and Kansas City, Mo.

As of Nov. 23, none of these cities had yet been designated as eligible under the 3-percent provision. An Administration spokesman said there might be 20 cities eligible when all requests were filed. Funds would be granted retroactively to the start of the school year.

21-Day Rule

When the Rules Committee failed to clear HR 9022 for debate, the House Aug. 24 by voice vote, with no opposition, adopted a special rule for debate (H Res 480). It was filed by Adam C. Powell (D N.Y.), chairman of the Education and Labor Committee. This technique, known as the 21-day rule, may be used when the Rules Committee takes no action on a bill that has been before it for 21 days. (See story p. 585) When Powell was aked why the special rule was used, he said it was "solely because of the emergency" need for the bill, with schools needing to prepare their budgets for the coming school year.

Powell filed H Res 480 July 15 along with three other resolutions to bring up bills pending before the Rules Committee under the 21-day rule. In general, the Rules Committee was acting slowly on bills from the Education and Labor Committee. The 21-day rule was first used on the bill to repeal right-to-work laws, also reported from Powell's Committee.

FLOOR ACTION

The House Aug. 30 passed HR 9022 by a roll-call vote of 305-37 and sent it to the Senate. There were no amendments to the bill. (For voting, see chart p. 994)

HR 9022 had widespread support on the House floor. Explaining the disaster provisions, Carl D. Perkins (D Ky.) said that "when a disaster strikes a community, it strikes to the very root of the financial resources of schools -- the property on which local communities throughout the nation obtain their school revenues." While local agencies and the Government's disaster organization, the Office of Emergency Planning, can provide emergency services, Perkins said, it takes years to rebuild the property tax base. The OEP has authority to do only temporary repair work on schools and no authority to help finance school operations. Under HR 9022, he said, the Office of Education estimated that its aid to a disaster-stricken school need extend for only two years in most cases and would average about $1.5 million a year for the entire disaster program.

William H. Ayres (R Ohio) supported the provisions to make cities with 3 percent of their children federally connected eligible for impacted area aid. He said it was unjust to set the 3-percent rate for school districts with less than 35,000 pupils while requiring a 6-percent rate for larger districts. In cities, he said, "the costs tend to be higher and the problems more complicated, and it is inexcusable that they should suffer any discrimination in the allocation of federal aid to schools."

PROVISIONS -- For major provisions of the House-passed bill, see the Committee story above.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Labor and Public Welfare.

ACTION -- Sept. 28 reported HR 9022 (S Rept 783) with amendments. The cost of the Committee bill in fiscal 1966 was estimated at more than $35 million.

Changes in House Bill. The Senate Committee made Aug. 30, 1965, rather than the date of enactment, the effective date of the bill in order to include areas affected by the September 1965 hurricanes. The Committee amended the construction program for disaster-stricken schools to enable the Commissioner of Education to make repayable advances to school districts. The House bill provided only grants. (Continued on next page)

Another amendment authorized the Commissioner of Education to waive the requirement in existing law (PL 81-815) that school districts contain at least 20 federally connected children to be eligible for PL 815 funds for school construction.

The Committee amended Title II of PL 81-874 as follows (Title II was added to existing law by the enactment in April 1965 of President Johnson's proposals for aid to elementary and secondary schools, PL 89-10; Title II provided federal aid to areas which had large concentrations of low-income families. See story p. 275):

- Authorized grants under PL 89-10 to state-operated public schools which provided, on a non-school district basis, free education for handicapped children. Schools for the handicapped that were operated by the state were not included under the provisions of PL 89-10. As a result, only schools for the handicapped operated on a local school district basis were eligible for federal grants. Institutions for the handicapped with the largest enrollments were operated on a state rather than local basis. This program was estimated to cost $15,000,000-$25,000,000 a year.
- Authorized annual payments of at least $75,000 to a state and $25,000 to a U.S. territory for administering the provisions of PL 89-10. (Existing law limited grants to a state for administrative expenses to one percent of the state's total Title II allocations.)

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate Oct. 1 passed HR 9022 by voice vote.

During debate, J. Caleb Boggs (R Del.) said that the amendment providing a minimum of $75,000 to each state to administer the new elementary and secondary education bill was "extremely important" to small states. He said it ensured that 14 states would have no less than that minimum figure to "carry out the enormous amount of planning and oversight which these new...programs will require."

Before passage of the bill, the Senate rejected by voice vote an amendment by Frank E. Moss (D Utah) to permit school agencies not to repay any overpayments of PL 81-874 funds for school operation in "impacted" areas which they had received prior to the bill's enactment. Moss said it was "unfair and completely unrealistic to ask a school district anywhere in the country to return to the Federal Government moneys allocated to it." The Department of Health, Education and Welfare, in a statement, said the amendment would be "extremely difficult to administer and would seem to establish an undesirable precedent" which could encourage school districts to be "extra liberal or optimistic in their estimates of federally connected children...." The amendment would have relieved the Box Elder County School District in Utah from returning $28,819.29 to the U.S. Office of Education, Moss said.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Oct. 1 -- Frank E. Moss (D Utah) -- Permit a local educational agency which received overpayments of PL 81-874 funds before enactment of HR 9022 not to repay the overpayments. Voice.

Final Action

The House Oct. 13 by voice vote agreed to the Senate amendments but added new language to the Senate provision on schools for handicapped children. The Senate language, which allowed PL 89-10 funds to go to free schools for the handicapped which were directly operated by a state agency, was altered to permit funds to go to free schools for the handicapped which received state financial aid. The House addition was designed to accommodate states which provide public funds to private institutions.

The Senate Oct. 15 by voice vote concurred in the House change and sent the bill to the White House.

President Johnson Nov. 1 signed HR 9022, the School Disaster Aid Act (PL 89-313), into law. He congratulated Rep. William D. Ford (D Mich.) who, he said, "as a freshman member of the House of Representatives, was the original sponsor of HR 9022." Mr. Johnson added that the entire impacted areas program was being reviewed in the light of a recent study made by Stanford University. Congress called for a study of the program in the 1964 education bill. (1964 Almanac p. 261)

IMPACTED AREAS AMENDMENTS

The President July 21 signed a bill (HR 5874 -- PL 89-77) authorizing three Administration-requested amendments to the impacted areas laws (PLs 81-815 and 81-874). The major provisions of HR 5874:

- Amended PL 81-815 to authorize construction of school facilities on federal property in Puerto Rico, Wake Island, Guam or the Virgin Islands to meet the needs of children of federally employed parents not residing on federal property if no local agency could provide suitable free education and if English was not the primary language of instruction in the local schools. Existing law permitted school construction only for children of parents residing on federal property.
- Amended PL 81-874 to authorize employment of teachers in impacted-areas schools in the United States without regard to the employment statutes covering other federal employees.
- Deleted from PL 81-874 a provision added by the 1965 Elementary and Secondary Education Act (PL 89-10) which prevented duplication of payments to schools under Title I (based on the number of federally connected children) and Title II (based on the number of children from low-income families). The amendment enabled schools on Indian reservations (federal property) to receive aid under both impacted areas and low-income family programs, if their family incomes met Title II specifications (earning less than $2,000 a year). The Department of Health, Education and Welfare said that Indians would have been the only group affected by the bar to double-coverage.

BACKGROUND -- As reported March 11 (H Rept 164) by the House Education and Labor Committee and passed March 15 by the House, HR 5874 contained only the construction provision. The Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee June 9 reported the bill (S Rept 311) after adding the employment provision and repealing the payment duplication provision at the request of the Health, Education and Welfare Department. The Senate report said new construction was necessary, particularly in Puerto Rico, to accommodate rising numbers of children not living on federal property who were eligible under PL 81-874 to attend federal schools. It said the costs would be less than $2 million initially and $100,000 annually "for the next several years."

The Senate June 11 passed the amended bill, and the House July 6 agreed to the Senate amendments.

VOCATIONAL LOAN INSURANCE

HR 7743 -- Reported by House Education and Labor Committee (H Rept 308) May 6, 1965.
- Passed by the House by a 300-0 roll-call vote June 21. (See p. 972)
- Reported, amended, by Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee (S Rept 758) Sept. 21.
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote Sept. 28.
- House agreed to Senate amendments by voice vote Oct. 8.

PL 89-287 -- Signed into law Oct. 22.

Congress in 1965 enacted an Administration-backed bill providing insured loans and federal interest subsidies for students in post-secondary business, trade, technical and other vocational schools. The bill was designed to encourage state and private efforts to insure loans for students in public and private vocational schools and to provide federal insurance if no local programs were available. In addition, it authorized direct federal loans for post-secondary vocational students who could not otherwise obtain loans at reasonable interest rates. The plan was identical to the college loan insurance feature of the higher education bill. (See story, p. 294)

In its major provisions, HR 7743 authorized $1,875,000 for advance payments to enable states and non-profit organizations to set up loan insurance programs; established a federal student loan insurance fund from which the Commissioner of Education could insure up to $75 million in any one year in new loans by certain state, private non-profit or commercial institutions if they did not have reasonable access to a state or non-profit insurance program; and authorized partial federal payment of interest on loans for students from families with adjusted income of less than $15,000 annually. The bill also authorized $1 million for direct federal loans to eligible students who were unable to obtain local loans at reasonable rates of interest (6 percent). Students could receive up to $1,000 a year for two years.

The vocational loan insurance proposal was originally part of the Administration's higher education bill (HR 9567), but was treated separately. As first introduced, it set up a federal insurance fund and authorized interest subsidies, but did not include advances to the states or a program of direct loans. The House Committee struck out the federal interest subsidies and added the direct loan provision, and the House unanimously approved this version.

The Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee rewrote the bill to conform to the college loan insurance provisions of the higher education bill. The Committee bill changed the emphasis of the legislation by authorizing advances to state and non-profit groups to help them set up their own loan insurance programs. The federal program was put on a standby basis, to be activated only if other plans did not meet the requirements of the bill. The Senate Committee also added the federal interest subsidy which had been deleted in the House. This version of the bill passed the Senate and was accepted by the House.

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law, the National Vocational Loan Insurance Act of 1965:

Declared the purpose of the Act was to encourage state and private non-profit institutions to establish loan insurance programs for post-secondary vocational students, to provide federal loan insurance for students who do not have access to an adequate local program, and to pay part of the interest on federal, state or private loans covered by the Act.

Insured Loans. Authorized the Commissioner of Education to make repayable advances to establish or strengthen state or private non-profit student loan insurance programs. Set a $1,875,000 authorization for the advances through fiscal 1968.

Provided that funds be allotted among the states in proportion to their population aged 18 through 22, but that each state would receive a minimum of $10,000.

Required that to be eligible for advances and federal interest subsidies, state or private loan insurance must cover 90 percent of the unpaid principal, must insure loans of $1,000 per year at no more than 6-percent interest on the unpaid principal, with repayment not to begin until nine months (but no later than one year) after the student completes his study, and must cover at least two years of academic study. Permitted prepayment without penalty.

Established a federal student loan insurance fund, with an original allotment of $250,000, and more as needed, for insuring loans by state, private non-profit, or commercial institutions that do not have reasonable access to insurance programs.

Permitted federal insurance of $75 million in loans in any one year of the three-year program -- fiscal years 1966-68.

Permitted 100-percent federal insurance of principal at a premium of one-fourth of 1 percent.

Set as conditions for federal insurance of a loan: a loan in any year cannot exceed $1,000, and the aggregate of loans for a student cannot exceed $2,000; students must carry at least half of a full time workload; loans are made without requirement of security; loans are to be repaid over a 6- to 9-year period beginning 9 to 12 months after the student ceases the minimum required academic study (with exceptions for those in the armed forces or Peace Corps) and annual repayments must be at least $360; maximum interest rates cannot exceed 6 percent annually on the unpaid principal except in exceptional circumstances, where they can be 7 percent.

Defined "eligible institution" for which a student could obtain an insured loan as an accredited post-secondary business, trade, technical or vocational school, private or public, and not confined to non-profit; required that the school must have been in existence for two years, or specially accredited by the Commissioner.

Interest Subsidies. For students from families with adjusted annual income of less than $15,000 who have received loans insured under the Act, or eligible state loans, authorized the Commissioner to pay all interest charges prior to beginning of the repayment period and 3 percent on the unpaid principal thereafter.

Direct Loans. Permitted the Commissioner to make direct loans to eligible students unable to obtain loans at the rate of interest prescribed by the Commissioner for the geographical area. Provided that the direct loans should conform as nearly as practicable to the terms and conditions of insured loans. Authorized $1 million a year for direct loans for fiscals 1966-70.

Other Provisions. Permitted federal credit unions to use 5 percent of their assets to make insured loans to student members.

Directed the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare to establish an Advisory Council on Insured Loans to Vocational Students, including members of state loan insurance programs, lending institutions and colleges.

Background

REFERENCE -- Vocational Schools, NDEA (1963 Almanac p. 201)

The Federal Government provides grants to the states for a variety of vocational education programs. Prior to 1963, training in occupations such as farming and home economics was stressed. In 1963 Congress, responding to President Kennedy's requests, greatly expanded these programs and also provided new vocational aid for developing industrial and technical skills. The bill authorized $731 million over a five-year period, the majority of which was allotted to programs for youths.

Other vocational education assistance is provided under the Manpower Development and Training Act, the Economic Opportunity Act, the Public Welfare Act, the Public Welfare Amendments of 1963, the Trade Expansion Act and the vocational training program for Indians. None of this legislation provides loans for students attending vocational schools.

House

The vocational loan insurance proposal (HR 6468), originally included in the Administration's 1965 higher education bill (HR 9567), was introduced separately March 18 by Rep. John H. Dent (D Pa.).

The Select Subcommittee on Education of the Education and Labor Committee held hearings April 5-7 on HR 6468, during which the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, the National Assn. of Trade and Technical Schools, the United Business Schools Assn. and the American Vocational Assn. testified for the bill.

The bill, as introduced, authorized the Government to insure loans made by state or private institutions to vocational students. The amount of new loans was not to exceed $15 million for the first and second years, and $30 million in subsequent years. It authorized federal subsidies on interest payments.

The Subcommittee amended the bill to: increase the amount of new loans which could be insured to $75 million; authorize direct federal loans for students unable to borrow locally at a reasonable rate of interest; and establish eligibility criteria for institutions providing the vocational training (they could be private or public). The Subcommittee deleted the federal subsidies on interest.

The full Committee May 6 reported a clean bill (HR 7743 -- H Rept 308) containing the Subcommittee amendments. The bill provided $250,000 and more if necessary for the insurance fund to cover $75 million in loans, and authorized $1 million for the direct loan program.

Majority Views. The report noted that less than half of the nation's youth went to college and that students in post-high school vocational education had been largely neglected. The report said, "The student who attends this school is usually one who knows exactly what he wants as regards education.... There is nothing inferior or substandard about this desire; it is, in fact, more strongly motivated than are most other educational goals."

FLOOR ACTION. The House June 21 passed HR 7743 by a 300-0 roll-call vote and sent it to the Senate. There were no amendments to the bill. (For voting, see chart p. 972) Rep. Silvio O. Conte (R Mass.) said the bill would not only help solve the unemployment problem by improving workers' skills, but also would help solve the problem of over-crowded colleges by enabling students who do not belong in colleges to obtain the type of training they need.

John H. Dent (D Pa.), sponsor of the bill, said that there were approximately one million students currently enrolled in vocational schools. He said that the public expenditure for each student attending a public institution was $900, and that HR 7743 would save the Government money by "fostering attendance in private as well as public institutions."

Senate

The Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee Sept. 21 reported an amended version of HR 7743 (S Rept 758). The report said that loan insurance programs should be the same for vocational and college students. The bill was amended to make it as similar as possible to the loan insurance program of the higher education bill.

The Committee changed the emphasis of the insurance program by placing primary responsibility on the states. The federal program was placed on a standby basis, only to be activated if local programs failed to meet requirements. Furthermore, in order to assist state and private non-profit loan insurance programs, the amended bill authorized federal advances to state and non-profit groups to aid in establishing new loan insurance programs. (Currently only one state, New York, had a loan insurance program which included vocational students.) The bill authorized $1,875,000 for the advances.

The second major amendment restored the federal interest subsidy which the House Committee had deleted. The amendment authorized federal payment of all interest on insured loans while the student was studying and 3 percent interest on the unpaid principal thereafter for families with an adjusted income of not over $15,000 a year. Families with higher incomes would be eligible for insured loans, but would pay the total interest. The Committee also reduced the limit on a student's annual loan from $1,500 to $1,000 and his total loan outstanding from $3,000 to $2,000. The maximum interest rate was set at 6 percent, except in certain circumstances when it could be 7 percent.

FLOOR ACTION. The Senate Sept. 28 passed HR 7743 by voice vote and returned it to the House.

Sen. Joseph S. Clark (D Pa.) said that unlike other legislation designed to provide job training, such as the Job Corps program and the Manpower Development and Training Act, HR 7743 was primarily for people from middle-income backgrounds and not for the poor.

PROVISIONS -- The Senate-passed bill was identical to the final version. (See p. 309)

The House Oct. 8 agreed to the Senate amendments by voice vote and sent the bill to the President.

In signing the bill into law (PL 89-287) Oct. 22, President Johnson said, "The $1,875,000 allotted to the states for insured loan programs under this Act will make possible almost $19 million in loans. We estimate that in the first year as many as 25,000 young people -- receiving grants of up to $1,000 -- will enjoy its benefits."

SENATE HOLDS HEARINGS ON BIRTH CONTROL

Congress in 1965 for the first time turned its attention to the controversial issue of birth control, acknowledging the recent wide public awareness of population problems. The Congressional hearings were intended to pave the way for an open dialogue on the problems posed by the worldwide population explosion and on the possible responsibility of governments to hold down population expansion.

Extensive hearings by the Senate Government Operations' Subcommittee on Foreign Aid Expenditures were intended to gather information about and focus attention on the subject of birth control. The hearings related to legislation introduced in the Senate by Subcommittee Chairman Ernest Gruening (D Alaska). The bill (S 1676) proposed establishment of Offices for Population Problems in the Department of State and the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to collect and disseminate, upon request, information on family planning programs and population growth. S 1676 also called for a White House Conference on Population, to be preceded by state conferences. The bill would not impose any federal controls on population matters.

The hearings covered family planning as it related, in the United States and abroad, to poverty, health, educational needs, quality of life, responsible parenthood, broken homes, national economy, natural resources and crime and juvenile delinquency.

President Johnson added his support to the public dialogue. In several speeches he urged the nations of the world to seek answers to the "profound challenge" of the "explosion in world population."

The Roman Catholic church also expressed concern that world population would outstrip food production but its position in opposition to artificial birth control methods did not change. At the Senate hearings the spokesman for the U.S. Catholic hierarchy condemned all government support of birth control programs.

Background

Recent statistical studies predicted explosive population growth rates. The United Nations Population Commission in 1965 predicted that world population could, at the current rate of growth, more than double by the year 2000 -- rising from 3.3 billion to 7.4 billion. The Commission estimated that in 1964 world population had increased by 2.1 percent, the largest increase in history. In the less-developed countries, the increase was approximately 2.5 percent, a rate which, if it remained constant, would double the population every 28 years.

The Population Reference Bureau in 1965 estimated that U.S. population, currently at 194.5 million and growing at a 1.5-percent rate annually, would reach 245 million by 1980 and 338 million by the year 2000. A May 1965 report by the National Academy of Sciences on "The Growth of U.S. Population" contrasted the U.S. family in the 1930s and the 1950s. "By the 1930s, the spread of family limitation in the American population had reached the point where, on the average, women were bearing only a little more than two children," the report said. By the 1950s, the average family size had increased by 50 percent, to more than three children per family. The report assigned two reasons for this increase: a preference, among couples who plan their families, for moderate-size instead of small families; and "the lack of effective limitation of family size among the underprivileged, relatively impoverished and less-educated Americans" of all races.

PRESIDENTIAL STATEMENTS

In 1965 Mr. Johnson became the first President to indicate that federal support of population control was under consideration. In his Jan. 4 State of the Union Message he said, "I will seek new ways to use our knowledge to help deal with the explosion in world population and the growing scarcity of world resources." He went further in a June 25 speech marking the 20th anniversary of the United Nations, when he appealed to the UN to "face forthrightly the multiplying problems of our multiplying populations and seek the answers to this most profound challenge to the future of the world. Let us act on the fact that less than $5 invested in population control is worth $100 invested in economic growth."

In an Aug. 30 letter to UN Secretary General U Thant, the President pledged the Government's support of the Second United Nations World Population Conference, held in Belgrade, Yugoslavia. Mr. Johnson supported conference efforts "to achieve a better world through bringing into balance the world's resources and the world's population."

The President's position was buttressed by former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, who conceded a change of position on birth control in 1965.

In 1959, President Eisenhower had said that he could "not imagine anything more emphatically a subject that is not a proper political or governmental activity or function or responsibility." However, in a June 18, 1965, letter to Sen. Gruening, Gen. Eisenhower said that the population problem had "serious portents" at home and abroad and "if we now ignore the plight of those unborn generations which, because of our unreadiness to take corrective action in controlling population growth, will be denied any expectations beyond abject poverty and suffering, then history will rightly condemn us."

President Kennedy, the first Catholic U.S. President, had said in 1963 that Government-sponsored studies in reproductive biology were "important" and information on the subject should "be made available to the world so that everyone can make their own judgment...."

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT PROGRAMS

Before 1965 the Federal Government participated in birth control programs on an indirect basis. Federal funds and technical assistance, both at home and abroad, went for research and training in demography and reproductive biology rather than for information on birth control and actual provision of contraceptive materials. During 1965, the Government took a more active, though largely indirect, role in domestic family planning programs, notably through the federal antipoverty program. At the same time, the Interior Department became the first federal agency to offer birth control advice and services.

Foreign Assistance. In 1965, as in past years, the Agency for International Development (AID) helped foreign countries in demographic research and techniques (such as census taking). AID also responded to requests for assistance in surveys on social attitudes, including attitudes on family planning, and suggested possible sources of information, such as the United Nations or private agencies, on means for dealing with population problems. According to an AID spokesman, numerous AID missions abroad in 1965 had an official who, among other duties, was responsible for "population activities" such as surveys on population growth related to economic problems.

Dr. Philip R. Lee, director of health in the AID Office of Technical Cooperation and Research, March 11 stressed that AID "does not advocate family planning or any method of family planning.... Requests in this field...will continue to be considered only if made or approved by appropriate host government authorities.... We are prepared to entertain requests for technical assistance (and)...for commodity assistance (office equipment, etc.). The AID will not consider requests for contraceptive devices or equipment for manufacturing contraceptives." In March AID granted $45,000 to the Jamaica Planning Assn. to buy vehicles and other equipment for a birth control education campaign.

Actual provision of contraceptive materials and information to foreign countries continued in 1965 to come mainly from private sources, such as the International Planned Parenthood Federation, which comprised 38 national member organizations including the United States, and the Population Council, supported by the Ford and Rockefeller Foundations, and other philanthropic organizations.

U.S. Surgeon General Luther L. Terry, head of the Public Health Service, May 12 urged the World Health Organization, a UN agency, to adopt "a clearcut policy" on birth control. "The United States believes it is of utmost importance that WHO proceed as rapidly as feasible...in devising programs related to the health and medical aspects of population growth," Terry said. The organization May 21 agreed to conduct "studies on medical aspects of sterility and fertility control methods" and to supply "technical advice" on reproduction to member countries requesting it, but not to engage in "operational activities."

Domestic Programs. The Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO), as part of its "war on poverty" campaign, indicated willingness early in 1965 to provide funds for local birth control projects if recommended by local organizations and approved by general community consensus. By the end of November 1965, the OEO had approved 17 grants for family planning services -- 11 grants totaling approximately $500,000 for services established as part of local community action programs and six grants for services set up as component parts of OEO-funded health programs. Funds were used for information campaigns, mobile clinics and medical supplies (including contraceptives). OEO policy stipulated that projects must: assist married women only; include information on all types of birth control, consistent with a person's conscience and religious feelings; and provide services on a strictly voluntary and unconditional basis.

The OEO officially rejected Sept. 21, 1965, a $50,000 application from Milwaukee, Wis., for funds to operate birth control clinics in the area. Roman Catholic officials, headed by Archbishop William E. Cousins, opposed the proposed family planning projects, which were to have been run by the local chapter of the Planned Parenthood Assn.

The Department of the Interior June 19 announced that three departmental agencies would offer guidance on family planning and birth control to certain groups under the Department's jurisdiction. The groups included American Indians on reservations, natives of the Pacific Trust Territory and Indians, Eskimos and Aleuts in Alaska. Interior Secretary Stewart L. Udall said physicians employed by the Office of Territories would offer the services, consistent with "the patient's culture and conscience."

The Health, Education and Welfare Department also participated in support of local birth control services through grants to state and city hospitals and clinics. Such family planning services generally operated as part of maternal and child care programs. Katherine B. Oettinger, head of the Children's Bureau in HEW, said that birth control services should be available to all parents as a matter of "right." Mrs. Oettinger said "the conviction has grown that education and instruction in effective family planning should be an essential component of both the health and welfare agencies responsible for the payment of health services for dependent families." She said HEW was the appropriate federal agency to carry forward research, training and service programs in family planning.

In August 1965, HEW's Public Health Service announced that Princeton University, under a $377,238 contract with the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, would conduct a national survey of the family planning practices of married American women. A grant from the Institute also helped establish a Division of Population Dynamics at the Johns Hopkins University School of Hygiene to train doctors, scientists and social workers to deal with problems of "excessive population growth."

The Institute of Child Health and Human Development, which is one of the National Institutes of Health (NIH), and NIH's Division of Research Facilities and Resources are the main sources of federal grants for research and training in reproductive biology. Individual projects often relate to aspects of birth control.

STATE AND LOCAL PROGRAMS

State and local governments, through their health departments and hospitals, entered the birth control field long before the Federal Government. Many made a practice of referring patients to local clinics of the Planned Parenthood Federation of America. In the 1940s they began to set up public birth control services. Their efforts were aimed primarily at promoting family planning among welfare recipients and low-income families.

By the end of 1963, according to Dr. Alan F. Guttmacher, president of the Planned Parenthood Federation, there were 21 states, mostly in the South, offering some publicly financed birth control help to low-income families. In 1964, the number rose to 35. Since mid-1963, the number of local health departments with family-planning services rose from 18 to 716, according to Dr. Leslie Corsa Jr., chairman of the Committee on Population and Public Health of the American Public Health Assn. However, Guttmacher said May 8 that despite expansion of local birth control services, "nine of 10 poor women in this country were still without medical family-planning service."

Between January and July 1965, 11 states -- California, New York, Illinois, Michigan, Colorado, Kansas, Indiana, Iowa, Minnesota, Florida and Ohio -- had either repealed anti-birth control laws, which prohibited either selling, dispensing, advertising or possessing contraceptives and/or information about them, or had set up family planning services.

Supreme Court Ruling. In a 7-2 ruling June 7, the Supreme Court struck down an 1879 Connecticut law which prohibited the use of, and distribution of information on, contraceptive devices. The case arose when Estelle T. Griswold, executive director of the Planned Parenthood League of Connecticut, offered birth control counselling to married couples in a deliberate effort to test the validity of the law. She was convicted and fined $100.

In Griswold v. Connecticut, the Court held the state law to be unconstitutional and in violation of the right to privacy of married couples. Speaking for the majority, Justice William O. Douglas said the 1st Amendment had a "penumbra where privacy is protected from governmental intrusion."

Constitutional lawyers were uncertain about the decision's effect on other state birth control laws because it dealt only with use of and distribution of information on contraceptive devices and did not pass on the legality of laws prohibiting the manufacture or sale of contraceptives.

PUBLIC ATTITUDES

In its May report the National Academy of Sciences said a 1960 sample survey of American couples showed that 95 percent favored the idea of family planning and 86 percent used, or expected to use, contraceptives. Among Catholic couples, the survey found, 80 percent intended to plan the size or spacing of their families. The lowest use and knowledge of contraceptives was found among the least educated. Among couples who tried to limit the size of their families, however, some 20 percent were unsuccessful, the survey found.

Catholic Church. The Roman Catholic church approves of family planning, but only by continence; it prohibits the use of mechanical or chemical means of birth control. A papal commission charged with re-examining this position was reported late in 1965 to have been unable to reach agreement. This was underlined when Pope Paul VI, in his Oct. 4 speech to the United Nations, urged the member nations to ensure an abundance of food in the world "and not to favor an artificial control of birth, which would be irrational...."

The possibility of a relaxation of this position in the future, however, was seen by some interpreters of language included in the Ecumenical Council's Dec. 7 pastoral constitution on "The Church in the Modern World." In a section on marriage and the family, the church document placed equal values on conjugal love and family welfare as on the procreation of children, and in defining "responsible parenthood" it declared that parents should consider their capacity to care for and educate their children.

In the United States the Catholic clergy continued to oppose repeal of state laws against contraceptive devices and spoke out strongly against government involvement in birth control. In an Aug. 29 sermon, the Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington, said government had "no business...intruding in the private lives of citizens" with programs of birth control information and services. The prelate said federal involvement in birth control "opens the door to influencing the free decisions of its citizens." Criticizing population control programs as "negative," he urged concentration on programs of job training, industrial decentralization and better use of space.

The Rt. Rev. John C. Knott, director of the Family Life Bureau of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, Sept. 28 denounced the "devastating ills" incident to the use of birth control pills. Father Knott said the rhythm system was the best method of birth control and was "just as effective as the pill." He reported that more than 50 family planning centers had been set up under Catholic auspices to disseminate knowledge of the rhythm system.

Birth Control Lobby. U.S. birth control groups early in 1965 formed the Population Crisis Committee to carry out lobbying activities while the long-established organizations continued their education work in behalf of birth control. The Committee's legislative purpose was given on its lobby registration form as, "support of bills and appropriations encouraging wider federal participation in research, training and operational programs to deal with the population crisis."

Ex-Sen. Kenneth B. Keating (R N.Y. 1959-65) April 20 became national chairman of the Population Crisis Committee and registered under the Lobbying Act. In November he was elected to the New York state court of appeals and was succeeded as national chairman by William H. Draper Jr. In 1959 Draper, as head of a Presidential advisory committee on the military foreign assistance program, recommended that the Government aid foreign countries which requested assistance in dealing with rapid growth of their populations.

Senate Hearings

The Subcommittee on Foreign Aid Expenditures of the Senate Government Operations Committee held hearings from June 23-Sept. 22 on a bill (S 1676) to establish Offices for Population Problems in the Departments of State and Health, Education and Welfare.

S 1676 was introduced April 1 by Subcommittee Chairman Ernest Gruening (D Alaska), a graduate of Harvard Medical School, though never a practicing doctor, and a longtime supporter of birth control. By the time the hearings recessed in September, S 1676 had 12 cosponsors, including Roman Catholic Philip A. Hart (D Mich.).

PROVISIONS -- S 1676 proposed the following:

Create in the State Department an Office for Population Affairs to be supervised by an Assistant Secretary for Population Affairs appointed by the President. The Assistant Secretary would devise and recommend to the Secretary of State areas in all countries in which the Government could exchange or make available information, education and research on international population matters, such as demography and medical aspects of population growth.

Create in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare an Office for Population Affairs supervised by an Assistant Secretary for Health, Medical Services, and Population Affairs appointed by the President. The Assistant Secretary would be authorized to collect and disseminate in the United States data and information on domestic population growth and family planning programs. The bill would authorize the Secretary of the Department to make "policy determinations" in the field of family planning and population growth and to cooperate with public and private institutions, groups or individuals in carrying out programs in this field.

Direct the President to convene a White House Conference on Population in January 1967 to develop recommendations for further research and actions related to population problems.

Authorize states to apply for up to $15,000 in funds for conducting state conferences on population prior to the White House Conference.

House Bills. Six bills identical to Gruening's were introduced in the House. They were referred to the House Government Operations Committee, which took no action on them in 1965.

Rep. James H. Scheuer (D N.Y.) May 25 introduced bills (HR 8440, HR 8451) which he said would repeal "archaic federal laws" which restrict the importation, interstate transportation and transportation through the mails of contraceptive devices, information and advertisements. No action was taken on them.

Testimony

June 22 -- In an opening statement, Subcommittee Chairman Gruening explained that what he wished to do was "to help our nation and all other nations determine the extent of the population problem, to inaugurate meaningful programs, and to provide man with the technical, medical and sociological knowledge for implementing self-determined policies." He concluded that "our approach at federal, state and local levels must be positive, not permissive."

Gruening read to the Subcommittee a June 18 letter from former President Eisenhower, who said he had reversed his position of 10 years before and now favored Government action on population control. Gen. Eisenhower said he had joined former President Truman as co-chairman of the honorary sponsors of Planned Parenthood -- World Population "in order to demonstrate my recognition of the urgency of the entire problem and the alarming consequences that are certain to follow its neglect." He urged Congress to authorize the Government to cooperate with private organizations in programs for "slowing down and finally stabilizing the growth in the world's population."

Rep. Paul H. Todd Jr. (D Mich.), sponsor of a House bill (HR 7072) similar to Gruening's, called the Subcommittee hearing "a landmark in history" because it was the first time the Senate "has felt able to discuss its proper responsibility in meeting the population crisis." "Nothing this Congress talks about has a greater potential for increasing human happiness," he said.

Rep. Morris K. Udall (D Ariz.), sponsor of the House companion (HR 7073) to Gruening's bill, said the world was confronted with a "population revolution, diluting the effects of economic progress, creating new problems of housing, food, welfare, education, and employment." He said he had received an "overwhelmingly favorable" response to his advocacy of federal population control legislation.

Sen. Joseph S. Clark (D Pa.), a longtime advocate of birth control legislation, said his position was "largely ignored" by constituents, despite a large Catholic population in his state. Clark suggested that the federal agencies which should deal with population problems were the Agency for International Development (AID) and the Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO).

Sen. Frank E. Moss (D Utah), a co-sponsor of Gruening's bill, said that "to postpone action in this vital area of human procreation is to invite, indeed even to push, disaster onto the shoulders of those who follow us. Inaction of this generation might well force future generations to live and respond as animals caught in a labyrinth of too many numbers in too little space with too few resources to sustain life with dignity."

Rep. D. R. (Bill) Matthews (D Fla.) stressed the need for population control throughout the world to meet the problems of providing sufficient food and an adequate standard of living. Matthews said that in Florida, 49 out of 67 counties offered family planning services through health departments. He urged the Federal Government to take a "more active role in gathering and disseminating to all interested parties...the latest information and opinions regarding...population control."

Sen. Ralph W. Yarborough (D Texas), a co-sponsor of S 1676, emphasized the "tremendous problems" in Latin America, which had an "extremely rapid population growth" of 2.5 percent a year. This added more than 5 million people to the population each year, he said. S 1676, Yarborough stated, would "arm the Federal Government with the forces to go out and meet this threat head on."

June 23 -- Sen. Joseph D. Tydings (D Md.), co-sponsor of S 1676 and a member of the Senate District of Columbia Committee, told the Subcommittee that there were many women, mothers of illegitimate children, on relief in the District who did not understand conception. Tydings said it was "essential that we give all segments of our society the opportunity to exercise birth control." "In our society," he added, "there is no effective solution to the crime and delinquency problem which does not include prevention of the births of unwanted children."

Rep. James H. Scheuer (D N.Y.) said recent polls showed that "an overwhelming majority of Americans of all religious persuasions are in favor of the distribution of birth control information."

ACADEMY OF SCIENCE REPORT

Dr. Frederick Seitz, president of the National Academy of Sciences, said that for several years scientists had been urging broader knowledge of population control and family planning. The May report on Growth of U.S. Population issued by the Academy recommended increased research and medical training on improved methods for controlling fertility and said family planning "should be an integral part" of public health and welfare programs and individual medical care. It recommended that the Federal Government, possibly through a designated high official, take the lead in promoting such programs.

June 29 -- William H. Draper Jr., a vice chairman of Planned Parenthood -- World Population, said that unless the population growth rate were slowed, "our children will suffer grave consequences and our grandchildren may well find life on this planet intolerable." He recommended that birth control facilities be established in every tax-supported hospital and health clinic in the United States, and that foreign aid activities "stress much more than now the problems caused by excessive rates of population growth."

Dr. John Rock, a Catholic gynecologist, a developer of the birth control pill, and the author of "The Time Has Come," a book calling on Catholics to accept various birth control methods, called Gruening's bill "an essential first step toward the efficient integration of our vast and as yet but haphazardly activated healthful resources." Asked whether he expected the Catholic church to change its position on birth control, Rock said he had "complete confidence in my church" taking eventual action. "They're in the habit of moving slowly," he added.

George B. Kistiakowsky, former special assistant to President Eisenhower for science and technology, said war would be "inevitable" unless the population problem were solved. He endorsed Gruening's bill.

July 9 -- Dr. Alberto Lleras Camargo, former President of Colombia and a former Secretary General of the Organization of American States, described the population growth rate in Latin America as "beyond manageable proportions...breeding misery, revolutionary pressures, famine, and many potentially disastrous problems in proportions that exceed our imagination even in the age of thermonuclear war." Any legislation, he said, "that seeks to develop practical approaches to population control is beneficial" and the results and practical applications of demographic studies "should be made available to any nation that asks for assistance in this matter."

July 21 -- Chairman Gruening read a letter from Saul D. Alinsky, noted organizer of slum-dwellers' action groups, which described S 1676 as "the most far-reaching and constructive in terms of our foreign policy and the future welfare of the United States."

Former Senator Kenneth B. Keating, currently chairman of the Population Crisis Committee, supported the objectives of S 1676 but stressed that family planning should be coordinated with and supervised by other health services. "The time has come," he said, "for our Government to stop treating population issues and family planning like the unwanted stepchildren of medical practice. The time has come to establish a full-fledged program with federal support." Keating urged establishment of a Bureau of Family Development and Planning Services under the Assistant Surgeon General "as a vital part" of the Public Health Service. Information and teaching of birth control methods would thus be subject to skilled medical supervision.

Rep. John Conyers Jr. (D Mich.), a Negro and sponsor of a House bill similar to S 1676, stated that availability of birth control information was "vital if we are to stop the breakdown of the Negro family structure." Conyers said that poverty-stricken Negro families often found it impossible to stay together "when there are more children than the parents can properly support and supervise."

George J. Hecht, chairman of the American Parents Committee Inc., publisher of Parents' Magazine, attributed the large growth rate in the United States to a "social attitude" which made a family of four children or more a "status symbol in many well-to-do communities." Hecht urged that the Federal Government's antipoverty program work to motivate the poor to have "no more than two or three children."

John B. Martin, chairman of the Republican party in Michigan and legal counsel to the Planned Parenthood Assn. of Kent County, Mich., emphasized that lack of family planning know-how led to the birth of emotionally rejected children, "the stuff of which juvenile delinquents are made," and to an increasing number of illegitimate births and criminal or self-induced abortions. Martin urged public health facilities to follow the example of the Michigan Health Department which, since December 1964, had furnished advice and assistance to all clients requesting it, married or not. The Department also authorized welfare workers to initiate family planning discussions among welfare recipients.

Representing the Unitarian Universalist Assn., Dr. Gertrude S. Friedman told the Subcommittee that the Assn. since 1930 had advocated the "moral necessity" of providing all parents with access to birth control information and in recent years had initiated family planning programs abroad. Dr. Friedman said the Assn. "would endorse almost any step leading to further government activity in the population area."

Mrs. Gladys A. Tillett, U.S. representative to the United Nations Commission on the Status of Women, said the Government should make information about family planning "freely available."

July 28 -- Chester Bowles, Ambassador to India, said that India was "ready to move" on a federal birth control program. The population growth rate, Bowles said, could be reduced from 2.4 percent to the Indian Government's goal of 1 percent in perhaps 15 years, now that India had the device (the intrauterine loop), the means and "the people generally are for it."

John D. Rockefeller III, chairman of the board of the Population Council, Inc., stressed that the population problem in the United States expressed itself not so much in terms of hunger and want but in terms of the "quality of life which should be afforded to all citizens." He said that U.S. population pressures diluted efforts to provide better hospitals, schools, housing, recreation and cultural opportunities.

TESTIMONY OF INTERIOR SECRETARY

Aug. 10 -- Secretary of the Interior Stewart L. Udall testified that if the population growth continued at the present rate, "most of the crucial problems that now confront the human race will simply become insoluble." Udall discussed how the expanding population was related to natural resources and to a "desirable environment." (In July his Department initiated a birth control information program.)

Dr. Alan F. Guttmacher, president of the Planned Parenthood Federation of America, told the Subcommittee that an estimated 4.5 million women in poor families did not have freedom of choice in planning their families because they were denied birth control advice. Dr. Guttmacher also estimated that 1 million illegal abortions were performed each year in the United States and that most cases involved married women who "feel the family unit cannot sustain another child."

Aug. 11 -- Dr. Murray Grant, the District of Columbia health director, told the Subcommittee that although the District's voluntary family planning program had not been able to keep up with requests for assistance, the program had been successful in winning public acceptance.

Aug. 17 -- Dr. Andre E. Hellegers, associate professor of obstetrics and gynecology at Johns Hopkins University, and a Catholic, said that birth control "methods which are acceptable to Catholics...are poorly taught in medical school, if at all, poorly understood by physicians, if at all, and until such time as this is corrected... Catholics could not be completely served in accordance with the dictates of their conscience."

Aug. 18 -- Dr. Leslie Corsa Jr., chairman of the Committee on Population and Public Health of the American Public Health Assn., said there was widespread public acceptance of birth control throughout the United States. He said the number of local health departments with family planning services had risen from 18 to 716 since mid-1963.

Aug. 24 -- William B. Ball, general counsel to the Pennsylvania Catholic Conference, condemned all Government support of birth control programs. Ball testified that he was speaking with the endorsement of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, the official agency in the United States of the Roman Catholic hierarchy. Ball said the Catholic Church feared that a Government role in the promotion of birth control programs would pose a threat to civil liberty. "If the power and prestige of Government is placed behind programs aimed at providing birth control services to the poor, coercion necessarily results, and violations of human privacy become inevitable," he said.

Rev. Dexter L. Hanley, Jesuit law professor at Georgetown University, said he could support a Government program to distribute birth control information as long as it permitted "each citizen a fully free moral choice" and still maintain his basic moral position as a Catholic.

Aug. 31 -- Former director of the U.S. Bureau of Prisons James V. Bennett supported the bill because, he said, it would open the way for research on the relationship between crime trends and overpopulation. "Let's face the fact," he said, that "a little knowledgeable and sympathetic birth control advice to the parents" of unwanted children turned juvenile delinquents "would have been far more effective as a crime deterrent than any penal sanction we could devise."

Dr. Mary S. Calderone, former medical director of the Planned Parenthood Federation of America and director of the Sex Information and Education Council, stressed that governmental agencies concerned should not think of population control in terms of "numbers," but in terms of individuals themselves, and not in terms of family "limitation" but planning for the family.

Sen. Milward L. Simpson (R Wyo.) stated the Government "clearly" was not doing enough to promote population control. Public health officials, Simpson said, should "fully utilize the devices and information that are now available." There was a "direct relationship between poverty and high birth rates," he said and added, "No religious group opposes family planning or planned parenthood" but only disagrees on an acceptable method.

METHODIST BISHOP SUPPORTS BILL

Sept. 8 -- Chairman Gruening read an Aug. 27 telegram from Methodist Bishop John Wesley Lord supporting S 1676 and asking to testify when hearings resumed in 1966.

Clifford C. Nelson, president of the American Assembly of Columbia University, said, "The time is ripe for the full attention it deserves." He said he believed that the "American people are ahead of many of their institutions, including their government," on the matter of birth control. Nelson also reported a "resounding success" at the Pan-American Assembly on Population, which was held in Colombia in August 1965 and was attended by "virtually" all Latin American countries except Cuba. He said the Assembly had recommended that all American governments "make family planning services accessible to the people who desire them and educate the people to their availability."

Sept. 15 -- A Sept. 8 letter to Gruening from the legislative director of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States said that the population question "deserves serious consideration, and needs to be brought to the attention of the public."

Harold O. Swank, director of the Illinois Department of Public Aid, said it was "imperative" to launch immediately coordinated federal, state and local government programs of family planning aid to the poor and disadvantaged. Swank said that persons administering welfare programs "had to take the leadership in helping the poor on our rolls to contain the sizes of their families" and that tax money must be used in this area "if we are to have any success at all in eliminating poverty."

Wallace Kuralt, director of the public welfare department in Mecklenburg County, N.C., said there was a need to educate families on birth control before they became overburdened and trapped in a cycle of dependence on public welfare. "Our homemakers have been knocking on doors in poor areas and asking if they want to know about spacing children. No one has slammed a door yet," he said.

Sept. 22 -- Bernard Berelson, vice president of the Population Council, New York City, cited findings that: (1) married couples wanted fewer children than they would have; and if all couples were able to do what they said they wanted to do, "this would mean a decline of, say, 10 points in the birthrate of the typical developing country"; (2) about one-half to three-fourths of people in the developing world wanted no more children; (3) "substantial proportions" of married couples approved of family planning in principle and wanted the Government to carry out family planning programs; and (4) by the time parents have had three or four children, especially if one of them was a son, over two-thirds wanted no more children.

The solution to the population problem "rests mainly on the people in this room," Berelson told the Subcommittee members. He added that the first International Conference on Family Planning Programs, held in August 1965 in Geneva, was a "historic milestone in birth control progress."

Dr. Irene B. Taeuber, senior research demographer in Princeton University's Office of Population Research, called the year 1965 "a notable one" which marked the transition from viewing population growth "with awe and a sense of doom" to viewing it as a "difficult but soluble problem." Dr. Taeuber said that studies "in country after country" indicated that families wished for children "but only those (children) for whom they can provide adequate living, school and economic future." Increasing numbers of governments recognized the economic and welfare problems involved, she said.

Oscar Harkavy, director of the population program of the Ford Foundation, said a five-point reduction in birthrates in the next four years was a "reasonable" goal in countries with combined public and private family planning programs. The Ford Foundation had spent $45.5 million on population work overseas, he reported.

Dr. Jack Lippes, a Buffalo, N.Y., gynecologist who developed the intrauterine device ("Lippes Loop") to prevent conception, reported that the government programs in Korea, the Republic of China, Pakistan, Tunisia, Turkey and India used his device.

LITTLE ACTION TAKEN ON CONSUMER LEGISLATION

Congress in 1965 took little action on consumer legislation bearing on prices, business malpractices and frauds. Administration-endorsed "truth in lending" and "truth in packaging" proposals did not clear either chamber; nor did a wide variety of proposals for the creation of special councils and study groups on consumer interests clear either chamber.

A bill extending the National Food Marketing Commission another year was passed by Congress, however, and some administrative actions benefitting consumers were taken by federal regulatory agencies.

Although Mr. Johnson did not submit a special consumer message to Congress in 1965, as he had the previous year, he did endorse the concept of "truth in lending" and "truth in packaging" legislation in his Jan. 28, 1965, Economic Report. But some observers said the President did not convey to Congress any sense of urgency for passage of these measures, for fear -- it was alleged -- of provoking business community hostility.

Although Congress did little on bills to help force down consumer prices and give consumers better product information and clearer bases for choice between products, it did act on related proposals in the field of consumer product safety, notably control of harmful barbiturates, amphetamines and counterfeit drugs. It also passed legislation dealing with pesticide research, cigarette health labeling and automobile exhaust.

Action on specific measures in 1965 is outlined below.

Background. President Kennedy focused attention on consumer problems in a March 14, 1962, message to Congress calling for a wide range of legislation and administrative actions to aid the consumer. The Kennedy Administration July 18, 1962, also established a President's Consumer Advisory Council of 12 persons which, on Oct. 8, 1963, submitted a list of recommendations for consumer legislation. President Johnson followed up these actions with a Feb. 5, 1964, message on consumer legislation and with the appointment Jan. 3, 1964, of a President's Committee on Consumer Interests, composed of representatives of federal agencies and members of the Consumer Advisory Council set up by Mr. Kennedy in 1962. Mr. Johnson named Assistant Secretary of Labor Esther Peterson as his Special Assistant for Consumer Affairs and said she would chair the new Committee on Consumer Interests.

During the 1962, 1963 and 1964 sessions of Congress, some actions were taken by Congress approving consumer legislation. But a substantial portion of the recommendations made by the Consumer Advisory Council and Presidents Kennedy and Johnson failed to be enacted. (For summary of action, see 1962 Almanac p. 392; 1963 Almanac p. 214; 1964 Almanac p. 255.)

ACTIONS TAKEN IN 1965

Food Marketing Commission. The President May 15 signed an Administration-backed bill (HR 5702 -- PL 89-20) extending for one year, to July 1, 1966, the scheduled date of the final report of the National Food Marketing Commission. The Commission was created in 1964 to study, among other things, the reasons why retail prices of farm goods were so much higher than the prices received by farmers. (See p. 131)

Barbiturates, Amphetamines. Congress passed legislation (HR 2 -- PL 89-74) that complied with President Johnson's Jan. 7 request for stronger controls over the illegal sale of barbiturates, amphetamines, other psychotoxic drugs and counterfeit drugs. (See p. 352)

Pesticide Research. Funds for Interior Department research into the effect of pesticides on fish and wildlife were increased from an authorization of $2,565,000 a year to $3.2 million for fiscal 1966 and $5 million a year for the following two years in an Administration-backed bill (S 1623 -- PL 89-232). (See p. 137)

Cigarettes, Health Labeling. Congress passed a mild cigarette health labeling bill (S 559 -- PL 89-92). But most consumer spokesmen considered the bill a victory for the cigarette industry because the measure forestalled the imposition of far stronger administrative regulations. (See p. 344)

Excise Tax Cut. President Johnson, in an Oct. 15 message to the President's Consumer Advisory Council, said the 1965 excise-tax cut bill (HR 8371 -- PL 89-44) was a major boon to consumers. (See p. 835)

Automobile Exhaust. The President Oct. 20 signed a bill (S 306 -- PL 89-272) authorizing the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare to set standards limiting air pollution from automobile exhaust. (See p. 780)

Administrative Actions. Auto Safety -- In an administrative action, the General Services Administration Jan. 26 published a list of 17 auto safety devices to be required on new cars purchased by the GSA. The action was taken under a 1964 law. The requirements included seat belts, padded dashboards, impact-absorbing steering wheels, recessed steering columns, and similar features. (1964 Almanac p. 273; this volume, p. 391)

New FTC Division -- The Federal Trade Commission Oct. 14 announced the creation of a new Federal-State Relations Division to "develop programs of effective cooperation between the FTC and agencies of the 50 states responsible for enforcing state antitrust, deceptive practice and consumer protection laws." In another action, the FTC July 19 set up an office of consumer complaints (the first) in the District of Columbia to handle consumer complaints in that locality.

Presidential Remarks -- In his Oct. 15 message to the President's Consumer Advisory Council, President Johnson said he would "continue to support the Congress in its move toward more adequate consumer legislation.... Greater truth in packaging will help protect consumers. More disclosure of facts in lending will help consumers to more easily compare costs of credit and thereby help avoid the personal tragedy of being overburdened with debt." Mr. Johnson said one goal of the Consumer Advisory Council should be to improve consumer education in the nation's schools. He listed the following major administrative actions helping consumers since the Council was established in 1962:

- The Office of Economic Opportunity, administrator of the 1964 anti-poverty law (1964 Almanac p. 208), had made 17 grants totaling $893,000 for consumer education programs.
- "The Federal Power Commission not only stemmed the rising cost of natural gas, it retroactively reduced rates." Over $650 million had already been refunded, "and there is now an annual reduction of $130 million in natural gas costs to the consumer." Mr. Johnson was referring to rebates ordered by the FPC in a series of cases from late 1961 to early 1965 involving the rates charged by interstate gas pipeline companies. (See p. 895 for an additional important natural gas ruling in August 1965.)

Moreover, the 1964 National Power Survey had shown that "by 1980, as much as $11 billion a year can be saved in the cost of electricity for Americans." (1964 Almanac p. 495)

● Reductions in air fares ordered by the Civil Aeronautics Board would eventually save over $50 million a year for consumers.

MEASURES NOT ENACTED IN 1965

"Truth in Lending." In his Jan. 28 Economic Report, the President endorsed the concept of "truth in lending" legislation (requiring a full statement of interest charges on loans). But there was no 1965 action whatever in either the House or Senate Banking and Currency Committees on "truth in lending" bills (S 2275, HR 111, HR 155, HR 8332) introduced by Sen. Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.), Reps. Abraham J. Multer (D N.Y.), Leonor K. Sullivan (D Mo.), William F. Ryan (D N.Y.) and others. (For Economic Report text, see p. 1359)

"Truth in Packaging." There were Senate hearings, but no action. (See hearings, below, for details.)

Automobile Safety. Aside from the automobile exhaust legislation and the GSA safety-device requirements for automobiles described above, there was no favorable action in 1965 on bills to improve automobile safety. The Senate Commerce and Senate Government Operations Committees held hearings on several automobile safety measures, but none were reported. These were: S 1643, relating to tire safety; S 2231, authorizing a National Highway Traffic Safety Center to conduct research on highway safety; S 1251, permitting the Federal Government to impose requirements for safety devices on all cars sold in interstate commerce; and S 2162, authorizing $5 million for the GSA to design and build test automobiles incorporating safety features. (For hearings, see p. 391)

Moreover, an amendment by Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff (D Conn.) to make part of the federal excise tax cut on cars contingent on installation of safety devices was dropped in the House-Senate conference on the excise tax bill (HR 8371). (See story p. 835)

Non-Prescription Drugs. In his Jan. 7 health message, President Johnson asked Congress to amend the Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act of 1938 in order to impose stronger federal regulation over "non-prescription drugs, medical devices, cosmetics and food." However, the Administration never sent a draft bill on this subject to Congress and there was no action. Nor was there action on bills (HR 1235, S 2350), covering the same subject, introduced by Rep. Leonor K. Sullivan (D Mo.) and Sen. Harrison A. Williams Jr. (D N.J.). (For health message, see p. 1383)

"Quality Stabilization." The 1965 version (S 1484, HR 7841) of the perennial fair-trade bill, permitting manufacturers to fix retail price minimums on their goods, was opposed by the President's Consumer Advisory Council as anti-consumer, and received no action.

Consumer Councils. A number of bills were introduced in both chambers in 1965 proposing to establish either an independent governmental agency for consumers or a joint Senate-House committee to deal with consumer problems. Sen. Philip A. Hart (D Mich.) and Rep. Benjamin S. Rosenthal (D N.Y.) Feb. 9 introduced companion bills (S 1052, HR 4652) to establish a permanent Office of Consumers as an independent federal agency to represent consumer interests within the Government and before the courts. Three resolutions (H Con Res 28, H Con Res 58, H J Res 27) were introduced in the House to establish a joint Senate-House committee on consumers. Rep. Abraham J. Multer (D N.Y.) introduced a bill (HR 48) to place the House Banking and Currency Committee in charge of consumer interests. Sen. Jacob K. Javits (R N.Y.) introduced a bill (S 84) to establish a select Senate committee on consumers. None of the above measures won favorable action.

Trading Stamps. Rep. Lester L. Wolff (D N.Y.), on his own initiative, held five days of meetings from July to September on the impact of trading stamps on consumer prices. Food chain spokesmen appeared at the meetings, held in federal buildings in New York and Washington, D.C., but trading stamp representatives refused to appear. No legislation resulted.

"Truth In Packaging" Hearings

The Senate Commerce Committee held intermittent hearings from April 28 to May 18 on an Administration-backed bill (S 985), sponsored by Sen. Philip A. Hart (D Mich.), to curb deceptive packaging. The President in his Jan. 28 Economic Report endorsed the concept of "truth in packaging" which was the main objective of S 985, and Administration witnesses at the hearings testified for S 985 (with proposed amendments). But some observers said President Johnson did not indicate to Congress any real urgency for passage of the measure, for fear of antagonizing the business community.

Following the hearings, the Commerce Committee took no action on S 985. The Committee, according to reports received by Congressional Quarterly, was divided 9-9 (D 9-3; R 0-6). Those in favor of reporting were said to be Sens. Magnuson (D Wash.), Pastore (D R.I.), Lausche (D Ohio), Bartlett (D Alaska), Hartke (D Ind.), McGee (D Wyo.), Hart (D Mich.), Cannon (D Nev.) and Neuberger (D Ore.). Those opposed or undecided reportedly were Sens. Cotton (R N.H.), Morton (R Ky.), Scott (R Pa.), Prouty (R Vt.), Pearson (R Kan.), Dominick (R Colo.), Monroney (D Okla.), Brewster (D Md.) and Bass (D Tenn.).

There was no House action on related House bills (HR 7493, 7534, 7600, 7619, 8475).

BACKGROUND

1961-62. The Senate Judiciary Antitrust and Monopoly Subcommittee held hearings in 1961-62 on deceptive packaging, and Hart introduced a bill in 1962 (S 3754) to curb the practice. President Kennedy mentioned deceptive packaging in his March 14, 1962, consumer message. But there was no further action. (1962 Almanac p. 392-94)

1963. The Subcommittee held hearings in 1963 on a similar Hart bill (S 387) and approved it June 13, 1963, by a 5-3 vote. The bill was endorsed by the President's Consumer Advisory Council in its Oct. 8, 1963, consumer legislation recommendations. There was no further action in 1963. (1963 Almanac p. 509)

1964. In 1964, President Johnson endorsed the idea of federal "truth in packaging" legislation in his Feb. 5 consumer message to Congress. However, the only action on S 387 before the 88th Congress expired was the issuance of a report Nov. 11, 1964, by the Antitrust and Monopoly Subcommittee.

Subcommittee Report -- In its Nov. 11, 1964, report, the Antitrust and Monopoly Subcommittee majority said S 387 would permit the Food and Drug Administration (for foods, drugs, medical devices and cosmetics) or the Federal Trade Commission (for other products) to prohibit deceptive illustrations on packages and "cents-off" and "economy-size" designations; to establish standards for the location and size of quantity statements; and to bar other deceptive packaging practices. The majority said the bill would classify as restraint of trade "unfair, confusing or deceptive methods of packaging and labeling (which) have made it extremely difficult or impossible for buyers to compare prices."

Sens. Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) and Roman L. Hruska (R Neb.) opposed S 387 in individual views. Dirksen said it was "contrary to the true concept of antitrust" and would reduce competition, lead to standardization, cause higher prices and reduce Government income "through greater (tax) deductions caused by increased manufacturing costs." He said "a variety of interests" opposed the bill. Hruska said S 387 "replaces judicial flexibility with administrative rigidity" and "it replaces the will and wisdom of the people with....inefficient Government planning."

1965 COMMITTEE HEARINGS

In 1965, Hart again introduced a "truth in packaging" bill (S 985), and President Johnson in his Jan. 28 Economic Report endorsed the concept of "truth in packaging" legislation.

After S 985 was introduced in the Senate, a dispute developed over which Senate committee should consider the bill. Senate Minority Leader Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) argued that S 985 should be sent to the Judiciary Committee, which had considered the earlier bill, because it had "antitrust characteristics." Hart said that S 985 should be sent to the Commerce Committee because it would not "amend the antitrust laws in any respect" but had "to do with standards for labeling and packaging of goods in interstate commerce." By voice vote, the Senate Feb. 19 agreed to refer S 985 to the Commerce Committee.

Major Provisions. S 985 authorized the Federal Trade Commission and the Food and Drug Administration to issue regulations to: require prominent statements of net quantity on packages and reasonable standards for weights, quantities, sizes, shapes and dimensions of packaging for retail commodities, on a product-by-product basis; and to prohibt any statement on a package or label offering a product at less than the customary retail price (such as "cents-off" promotion) and deceptive pictures on packages.

Controversial Provisions. The provision of S 985 which received the most opposition from witnesses representing the packaging, food and grocery industries was section 3(c), which would have the effect of granting to the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare (in effect, to the Food and Drug Administration) and the Federal Trade Commission discretionary authority to set product-by-product standards for weight, measures, packaging sizes, definitions of a "serving" of a food product and information on the ingredients or composition of a product. The purpose of the regulations would be "to establish or preserve fair competition between or among competing products by enabling consumers to make a rational comparison with respect to price and other factors, or to prevent the deception of consumers." Before either agency could set such standards, it would have to make a finding of need and provide for a hearing and appeal.

Many witnesses also objected to a provision which prohibited manufacturers from placing labels on packages employing "cents-off" advertising on package labels. The bill forbid manufacturer's labeling which implied that the product was being offered for "retail sale at a price lower than the ordinary or customary retail price." But it did permit the retail seller to offer commodities at special retail prices.

TESTIMONY -- April 28 -- Mrs. Esther Peterson, Special Assistant to the President for Consumer Affairs, said the 1964 regional conferences held by the President's Committee on Consumer Interests had indicated "wide support...for some action to end the particular difficulties which buyers encounter because of some types of packaging and labeling." She said that although some firms had voluntarily improved their packaging and labeling, legislation was needed to help "maintain the ground rules which enable the best practices of a free competitive market to flourish." Mrs. Peterson suggested that the Committee amend S 985 to make the "cents-off" provision discretionary rather than mandatory "to eliminate the abusive cents-off promotions while allowing legitimate cents-off promotions to continue." She also suggested that the Committee consider ways to permit businesses to obtain clearance of new packages and labels prior to release and to make the Government's decision "binding unless and until the applicant obtains a reversal after a formal hearing procedure."

George P. Larrick, Commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration, strongly supported S 985 but suggested the following changes in the bill: addition of criminal penalties for violations, elimination of the "trade secrets" exemption from contents requirements for cosmetics or requirement that ingredients potentially harmful to purchasers be noted on cosmetic labels, and a broadening of the label provision to cover material used to advertise or promote sales of products.

D. Beryl Manischewitz, chairman of the Marketing Committee of the National Association of Manufacturers, said that S 985 was not necessary because similar provisions were contained in the Federal Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act and the Federal Trade Commission Act. He said in light of present laws the new legislation would "create vast confusion" and also "inhibit packaging innovations... (and) efforts to educate and inform consumers," and be difficult to administer "in any evenhanded manner."

April 29 -- Paul Rand Dixon, chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, endorsed S 985 but asked that the FTC be given sole responsibility for policing packaging and labeling practices under the bill. Dixon said the FTC had "long experience in the prevention of unfair and deceptive practices, and in the administration of the consumer labeling laws requiring helpful disclosures informative to the purchasing public.... We are dealing here not with matters of fraud or danger to health or safety but simply with selling practices that are deceptive or confusing."

Max Banzhaf, representing the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, opposed the bill and said it would "seriously harm American consumers rather than protect or help them."

Paul S. Willis, president of the Grocery Manufacturers of America Inc., said his organization opposed S 985 because "present laws...already provide adequate protection to the public"; the grocery industry voluntarily complys with current laws; and the bill would "materially increase the cost of production." Willis said a recent national survey, conducted by the Opinion Research Corporation, Princeton, N.J., had indicated that "the majority of consumers in this country are now satisfied with the packages and labeling information."

April 30 -- John T. Connor, Secretary of Commerce, expressed support for S 985, but suggested several changes similar to those proposed by Mrs. Peterson. Connor called for modification of the "cents-off" provision to provide a "flexible administrative authority which would be directed to the prevention of abuses and deception," and also an "advance clearance procedure" for approval of new packages and labels. He suggested clarification of the bill's language to state that consideration would be given to any standards regarding weight and quality issued by the Secretary of Commerce which were relevant to the bill's regulations. Connor also expressed the wish that the Committee report would make clear that a provision prohibiting the establishment of standards for commodities in amounts of less than two ounces was intended "to deny authority to establish standards of weight and measure for commodities offered in amounts less than two ounces rather than to forbid producers and distributors to package and sell commodities in quantities less than two ounces."

Albert N. Halverstadt, vice president for advertising of the Procter & Gamble Co., testified in opposition to S 985 which he said would result in higher prices and less value to consumers.

Harrison F. Dunning, president of Scott Paper Co., also opposed the bill for similar reasons.

May 3 -- Representatives of United Biscuit Co., and the Kellogg Co. opposed S 985.

Lee S. Bickmore, president of National Biscuit Co., said the bill would "not be in the best interests of consumers," and would increase costs to manufacturers "which would weigh more heavily against small manufacturers than large ones," and cause prices to rise.

May 4 -- Evelyn Dubrow, legislative representative of the AFL-CIO, gave a strong endorsement of S 985.

W. B. Murphy, president of Campbell Soup Co., said the bill would "substitute a form of centralized and rigid government control over the present system which prohibits any deception or abuse but otherwise allows free play for individual ingenuity and initiative."

May 5 -- R. L. Chaney, executive director of the Glass Container Manufacturers Institute, said his organization opposed the provisions permitting the FDA and FTC to set packaging and other standards for products "because they are wholly unnecessary to protect against deception...., are not administratively feasible...., would penalize rather than benefit consumers...(and) would work unnecessary hardship on package users and package manufacturers."

Ernest Giddings, legislative representative of the National Retired Teachers Assn. and the American Assn. of Retired Persons, endorsed S 985.

May 6 -- Genevieve Blatt, Pennsylvania Secretary of Internal Affairs, said S 985 would give the consumer protection which "will go much further" than the states can "effectively or legally go."

Fred J. Greiner, chairman of the Dairy Industry Committee, opposed the bill.

Edward Brown Williams, counsel for the National Assn. of Frozen Food Packers, said the Association had already taken steps to aid consumers by issuing in 1963 a manual on labeling practices which made suggestions which "go well beyond legal requirements in order to encourage informative labeling to familiarize purchasers with the frozen product and the manner of its use." Williams said the product standards section would grant "a power to standardize containers and the weights and quantities of their contents -- qualitative and quantitative standardization" which would "outlaw or curb nonprice competition."

Lloyd E. Skinner, president of the National Small Business Assn., argued that the bill "would put federal bureaucracy in complete control of the size, the weight, the pictorial matter and the copy on every food package."

May 7 -- Edwin W. Rawlings, president of General Mills Inc., said, "The provisions of this bill will tend to impose upon our industry a standardization, uniformity and drabness which neither our general public nor I... would consider desirable."

May 17 -- Blue Carstenson, a spokesman for the National Farmers Union, testified in favor of S 985, which he said would "help curb some but not all the excesses and frauds now being carried out within the food industry." Carstenson said, "The same giants and generals of the food industry which are squeezing out the family farmer by unethical practices are also gouging the consumer."

Theodore R. Gamble, president of the Pet Milk Co., said if enacted S 985 would be to the "distinct disadvantage" of the consumer. Opposing any package standardization, he said, "consumers want different packaging because it adds interest and variety to their shopping and because it has values to them over and above the mere containment of a product." Gamble said his company would be willing "to risk a substantial investment in a new product only if we are reasonably confident that we can enter the market with a sufficiently superior product and superior packaging so that we can compete successfully and earn a satisfactory return on our investment." He said the pre-market clearance procedure for new packages necessitated by the bill would involve "far too great" a risk to the competitive advantage of a new product. Gamble said existing laws against deceptive marketing practices were "adequate" and instead of new legislation more funds and personnel should be provided to insure adequate enforcement of existing law.

Robert Fay, of the National Paper Box Manufacturers Association Inc., testified, "Our very existence on the packaging scene is contingent upon the opportunities of designing and producing boxes of unique shape, appealing design, and affording at the same time the protection necessary to the packaged product....Any type of standardization or restrictions as to design or individuality would conceivably destroy our market."

Ellen-Ann Dunham, vice president of General Foods Corp., said, "One of the great weaknesses of S 985...is that it assumes that the homemaker shops by price alone, or that, if she doesn't, she should. There would surely not be 8,000 different items on the shelves of the average supermarket if there were not enough consumers who prefer each of them for reasons other than price per ounce."

Douglas Fraser, member of the executive board, United Automobile Workers (AFL-CIO), endorsed S 985 as "a modest, first step toward protecting millions of American consumers who are today the unsuspecting victims of costly deception in labeling and packaging."

CONGRESS ACHIEVES SUBSTANTIAL HEALTH RECORD IN 1965

The record of Congress in 1965, President Johnson said Oct. 22, "is impressive in every field -- and monumental in the field of health."

Signifying the priority he attached to health legislation, the President sent his health proposals to Congress Jan. 7 -- preceding all other messages except the traditional State of the Union report. The message said that "our first concern must be to assure that the advance of medical knowledge leaves none behind. We can -- and we must -- strive now to assure the availability of and accessibility to the best health care for all Americans, regardless of age or geography or economic status." The President added that "our advances, thus far, have been most dramatic in the field of health knowledge. We are challenged now to give attention to advances in the field of health care -- and this is the emphasis of the recommendations I am placing before you." (For text, see p. 1383)

The President's message consisted of five parts:
-- removing barriers to health care,
-- strengthening the nation's health facilities and services,
-- manpower for health services,
-- health research and research facilities,
-- health grants and protection measures.

Topping the list of recommendations, as well as the list of achievements, was the medical-care-for-the-aged program to be financed under the Social Security system -- a plan sought and denied for 20 years prior to 1965. The "medicare" bill also carried additional aged health care programs not proposed by the President, and a wide range of child health care programs, most of which were requested by Mr. Johnson.

In addition, the message included a variety of proposals, sought previously but denied, which were enacted in 1965: scholarships for needy medical and dental students, grants for initial staffing of community mental health centers, and the first overhaul of the vocational rehabilitation program since 1954.

There were also some new proposals. The President asked authority to launch a nationwide attack on heart disease, cancer and stroke -- the major killers in the United States -- in regions throughout the country. And he asked Congress to enlarge the federal effort to control the illicit distribution and use of psychotoxic drugs. Congress responded favorably.

Finally, there were proposals for extensions, and often substantial expansions, of existing programs -- vaccination of pre-school children against childhood diseases, health care services for domestic migratory workers, grants to encourage cures for mental retardation, programs under the Health Research Facilities Act and the Health Professions Educational Assistance Act (including scholarships), and grants for general and special health programs. All these were enacted.

Only a few requested programs failed of enactment: new requirements for labeling of hazardous substances and for pre-marketing examination of the safety of cosmetics and therapeutic devices; an increased federal share for specialized national or regional research facilities; funds to increase the modernization of older hospitals; direct loans and loan guarantees for constructing and equipping group practice facilities; and a variety of pesticide control measures.

Congress generally acted favorably on requests for funding both old and new health programs. In a few cases -- notably the National Institutes of Health -- the budgeted amounts were increased by Congress. (NIH funds exceeded $1 billion, for the first time, in fiscal 1966.) In other cases, most cuts were minimal.

Over-all health appropriations reached an all-time high. Among major programs funded at a higher level in fiscal 1966 than in fiscal 1965 were several which Congress expanded in 1965 -- drug control activities, vocational rehabilitation, communicable disease prevention, air and water pollution control, mental health and retardation prevention activities, and new programs for prevention of heart disease, cancer and stroke. (For comparisons of funds, see box p. 322)

Health Message Requests

Medical Care for the Aged. The President requested a hospital insurance program for the aged, financed under the Social Security system, which would: provide protection against the costs of hospital and post-hospital extended care, home nursing services and outpatient diagnostic services; provide similar protection to those not covered by Social Security through payment of the costs from the administrative budget; and clearly indicate that the plan would not interfere with the patient's complete freedom to select his doctor or hospital.

In PL 89-97, Congress granted these requests, as well as a variety of measures not mentioned in the message but included in the Administration draft bill, and a number of additional programs added on the initiative of Congress. (See story p. 236)

Children's Health. In addition to requesting the medical care program for the aged, Mr. Johnson proposed a wide range of programs primarily to promote the health of children, with particular emphasis on the needy and disabled. He specifically asked Congress to increase authorizations for maternal and child health and crippled children's services, earmark funds for project grants to provide health screening and diagnosis for children of pre-school age, provide for treatment and follow-up care services for disabled children and youth, provide funds to help defray the operational costs of university-affiliated mental retardation clinical centers, provide for training of personnel to operate medical facilities for children, and permit specific federal participation under the public assistance program in paying costs of medical and dental care for children in medically needy families.

In PL 89-97, Congress granted these requests and, in addition, extended the existing Medical Assistance for the Aged program to needy dependent children currently under the Aid to Dependent Children program and, if states agreed, to needy children who did not qualify for public assistance; and authorized funds for grants for research on emotional illness in children. (See story p. 236)

Also at the request of the President, Congress in PL 89-109 extended for three years and enlarged two other

Major HEW Health Funds

Following is a breakdown of funds appropriated for fiscal 1965 and 1966 for the major health activities of the Health, Education and Welfare Department: (For details of all health appropriations, see stories p. 161, 166, 182 and 1964 Almanac p. 175, 181)

	Fiscal 1965	Fiscal 1966
Food and Drug Administration	$ 51,245,000	$ 58,799,000
Vocational Rehabilitation Administration	146,397,000	191,890,000

Regional medical programs	--	25,000,000
TOTAL, major activities	$2,007,560,000	$2,462,281,000

programs benefitting children. One was the program of grants for vaccination of pre-school children against polio, whooping cough, diphtheria and tetanus, which was expanded to include vaccination against measles. The other was the program of grants for family health services and clinics for domestic agricultural migratory workers and their children. (See story p. 331)

Regional Medical Programs. The President asked Congress to authorize a new five-year program of project grants to develop multipurpose regional medical complexes for an all-out attack on heart disease, cancer, stroke and other major diseases. The complexes were to be affiliated with medical schools, teaching hospitals and medical centers, be supported by diagnostic services in community hospitals, provide diagnosis and treatment of patients, together with research and teaching in a coordinated system, and permit clinical trial of advanced techniques and drugs.

The program authorized by Congress, in PL 89-239, was more cautious than the attack requested by the President. Over three years, the Act authorized funds to encourage establishment of a limited number of regional cooperative arrangements among existing facilities, to fight these diseases. The arrangements were to serve as demonstration models which Congress could study during the three years as it determined what further steps would be taken. (See story p. 324)

Vocational Rehabilitation. In order to provide vocational rehabilitation services for "at least 200,000" each year, Mr. Johnson requested authority for project grants to help the states expand their services, special federal matching so as to provide services to a greater number of mentally retarded and seriously disabled individuals, and programs for construction and modernization of workshops and rehabilitation centers.

In PL 89-333, Congress authorized these programs and every other provision of the Administration's draft bill. (See story p. 337)

Mental Health, Retardation. President Johnson repeated a request, denied President Kennedy in 1963, for a program of grants for the initial costs of personnel at community mental health centers offering comprehensive services. Congress granted the request in PL 89-105. (See story p. 329)

The President also requested, and was granted in PL 89-97, extension for two additional years of federal grants to states for planning and initiation of programs to combat mental retardation. (See story p. 236)

Health Manpower. The President requested amendments to the 1963 Health Professions Educational Assistance Act to: authorize formula grants to help cover basic operating costs of health profession schools to permit them to significantly expand their capacities and the quality of their educational programs; authorize project grants to enable the schools to experiment and demonstrate new and improved educational methods; and authorize a new program of scholarships for medical and dental students who would otherwise not be able to enter or complete such training. In addition to extending the basic Act, Congress in PL 89-290 granted these requests for new authorities. (See story p. 333)

Health Research Facilities. The President requested a five-year extension of the Health Research Facilities Act and an increase in the federal share for specialized research facilities of a national or regional character. Congress extended the Act for three years in PL 89-115, but it denied the specialized facilities request, largely because the regional medical centers bill was under separate consideration. (See story p. 342)

Community Health. In order to permit a thorough study of the existing programs of general and special purpose health grants, the President requested a one-year extension of both. Congress consented in PL 89-109. (See story p. 331)

Health Facilities Modernization. Mr. Johnson renewed requests denied President Kennedy in 1963 for funds for increased hospital modernization and for expansion of the number and quality of nursing homes. In PL 89-156, Congress denied the hospital modernization request because it had no authority to provide the funds, but it appropriated the nursing-home funds. (See story p. 161)

Consumer Health Protection. The President asked and was granted (PL 89-74) expansion of federal controls over abuses of psychotoxic drugs and authority for the Food and Drug Administration to seize counterfeit drugs at their source. (See story p. 352)

His other requests -- to require adequate labeling of hazardous substances and to require the FDA to examine the safety of cosmetics and therapeutic devices before they were marketed -- were not followed by submission of a draft bill and received no action.

Group Practice Facilities. Renewing a request made annually since 1962, the President asked for authority to provide direct loans and loan guarantees to assist voluntary associations in the construction and equipping of facilities for comprehensive group practice. The House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee held hearings but took no further action.

Environmental Health. In his Health Message, the President promised to outline proposals to deal with environmental pollution. The proposals came in his Feb. 8 Message on Natural Beauty and dealt with air pollution and pesticide controls.

The only Congressional action on air pollution control was approval of a non-Administration bill (PL 89-272) directing the Government to establish standards to control exhaust from new motor vehicles and engines. (See story p. 780)

Congress enacted legislation (PL 89-232) to raise the ceiling on funds for pesticides research (but not eliminate it, as the President requested), but it took little or no action on other Presidential requests for pesticide controls. (See story p. 137)

Other Actions

Cigarette Labeling. Although the Surgeon General's Advisory Committee on Smoking and Health warned in 1964 that "cigarette smoking is a health hazard of sufficient importance...to warrant appropriate remedial action," the President offered no guidelines for Congressional action in 1965. Congress approved a bill (PL 89-92) which required a health-hazard warning on cigarette packages, but it also prohibited other warning requirements and prohibited for three years any requirement that cigarette advertising include a similar warning. (See story p. 344)

Veterans Hospitals, Nursing. Congress succeeded in drastically modifying Administration plans to close 11 Veterans Administration hospitals as an economy move. After Congressional disapproval was made known, the VA agreed to close only six. (See story p. 395)

In other actions on veterans health care, Congress provided statutory authority (PL 89-311) for the VA Administrator to establish and operate not less than 125,000 hospital beds and made it clear that the 4,000 nursing-care beds which he was already authorized to establish must be in addition to the 125,000 hospital beds. (See story p. 399)

Birth Control. Lengthy hearings were held by the Senate Government Operations Subcommittee on Foreign Aid Expenditures on a bill (S 1676), sponsored by Sen. Ernest Gruening (D Alaska) and 11 cosponsors, to establish an Office of Population Problems in the Health, Education and Welfare Department and a similar office in the State Department. No further action was taken. (See story p. 311)

Animal Welfare. The House Agriculture and Forestry Subcommittee on Livestock and Feed Grains held hearings Sept. 2 on a bill (HR 9743), by Joseph Y. Resnick (D N.Y.), to make it unlawful for medical and research laboratories to buy pets from unlicensed dealers and to authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to set standards governing the handling and transportation of pets by dealers.

White House Conference

President Johnson invited 850 health specialists to a Nov. 3-4, 1965, White House Conference on Health. Major preliminary recommendations:

Health Professions Education. Find new methods to develop medical manpower. Establish pilot projects in hospitals and universities to explore and demonstrate solutions to health problems and to serve as centers for community education and continuing education of health personnel. Subjects should include: (1) providing incentives to attract personnel, especially the under-privileged; (2) analyzing needs for health personnel and then tailoring education programs to meet them; (3) developing guidelines for financing services provided by medical schools, such as free care for indigents, with a view toward making support of "education for health manpower... an integral part of the cost of health care"; (4) expanding use of physician assistants (human and electronic).

Health Care. Assure dissemination of the results of health research. Require every medical school to plan for delivery of health care services, using the community as a laboratory for research and demonstration of comprehensive health care. Encourage group practice, to stabilize costs without curtailing services. Expand health insurance to cover comprehensive care wherever needed -- "at the hospital, outpatient clinic, office or home."

Health Protection. Eliminate additional waterborne, foodborne, animal and communicable diseases, including those caused by open dumps, junkyards and solid wastes. Provide for surveillance and testing of drugs before merchandising. Prevent fatalities and injuries in industrial and residential accidents. Improve driver training, set higher driver licensing standards, improve highway design and build more crashworthy vehicles with restraining devices, stronger door locks and safer steering assembly and interior surfaces. Prevent "alcohol-related" fatalities. Prevent (rather than cure) mental illness. Increase commitment of public and private resources to providing family planning services, as a routine part of medical practice, for those who desire them.

REGIONAL HEART, CANCER, STROKE PROGRAMS APPROVED

S 596 -- Reported, amended, by Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee (S Rept 368) June 24, 1965.

● Passed by the Senate by voice vote June 28. (For roll-call vote on tabling of amendment, see p. 1053)

HR 3140 -- Reported, amended, by House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee (H Rept 963) Sept. 8.

S 596 -- Passed, amended, by the House by voice vote Sept. 24.

● Senate by voice vote agreed to House amendments Sept. 29.

PL 89-239 -- Signed into law Oct. 6.

S 596, the Heart Disease, Cancer and Stroke Amendments of 1965, authorized a new three-year program of federal grants to encourage and aid localities in planning and establishing regional medical programs throughout the country for a specialized attack on heart disease, cancer, stroke and related diseases. The bill authorized appropriations totaling $340 million over fiscal years 1966-68.

The legislation was an initial step to implement President Johnson's 1965 Health Message statement that "our advances, thus far, have been most dramatic in the field of health knowledge. We are challenged now to give attention to advances in the field of health care."

The regional medical programs contemplated by S 596 were intended to serve as a framework for dissemination of the most advanced medical knowledge throughout the country to practicing physicians and their patients who were suffering from heart disease, cancer and stroke -- the major killers in the United States. The programs were to provide for research and training and for demonstrations of patient care related to the research and training.

The broad aim of the legislation was eventually to save lives by providing higher-quality diagnosis and care for heart, cancer and stroke patients. The immediate objectives of the bill were (1) to improve the nation's health manpower by training new specialists in heart, cancer and stroke problems and by providing for continuing education of medical personnel; (2) and to upgrade heart, cancer and stroke health facilities by encouraging renovations and replacement of obsolete equipment.

The federal grants authorized in S 596 were to cover up to 100 percent of the costs of local planning for establishment of coordinated arrangements -- among existing local institutions (medical schools, research institutions, hospitals) -- for research, training and patient-care demonstrations in the fields of heart disease, cancer and stroke. Once the plans for such regional medical programs were drawn up, additional federal grants would be available for actual establishment and operation of the regional programs, including grants covering up to 90 percent of the costs of alteration, major repair, remodeling and renovation of existing buildings and replacement of built-in equipment.

JOHNSON PROPOSALS MODIFIED. The final bill was a modified version of legislation proposed by President Johnson to implement recommendations of the President's Commission on Heart Disease, Cancer and Stroke. The Commission concluded that "by bringing to all the people the full benefit of what is now known of prevention, detection, treatment and cure, we could save each year a number of lives equal to the population of a major city."

The Commission recommended establishment of 450 "stations" across the country to provide such services as screening, diagnosis and outpatient care and training of physicians, and 60 regional medical centers for more complex research and treatment of patients. The cost of the five-year program recommended by the Commission was $2.94 billion.

The Administration draft bill did not include the "stations." Instead, it proposed grants for planning and establishment of an unspecified number of regional medical "complexes" affiliated with medical schools, hospitals and medical centers, to provide for diagnosis and treatment of patients along with research and training. The grants could be used for construction of new facilities if necessary to achieve a coordinated program. The bill proposed a five-year federal grant program. Total contemplated authorizations for grants were not stated directly in the bill, but had previously been estimated by the Public Health Service at $1,150,000,000 over the five-year period ($50 million the first year, $100 million the second, $200 million the third, and $400 million each the fourth and fifth years).

The Senate version of S 596 was similar to the Administration bill except that it limited authorizations to $650 million over four years (fiscal 1966-69) and eliminated authority for the construction of wholly new facilities. The House (and final) version further limited the program, providing authorizations over three years (fiscal 1966-68) totaling $340 million (about the same amount as for the first three years of the Administration and Senate proposals), and making certain other changes which gave the final legislation the character more of a pilot program than of a permanent long-range program. In contrast to the original Administration proposal, which had envisioned a large-scale construction program, the final bill was designed primarily to encourage a start on local planning of regional medical programs and to get pilot projects underway, so that at the end of three years Congress could study the results and determine whether to go ahead with a broader type of program, such as proposed by the Commission and the Administration. The final bill was expected to cover about 25 projects during the first three years.

In the General Supplemental Appropriations bill for fiscal 1966 (HR 11588), Congress provided $25 million to start the grants authorized by S 596. Earlier, in a bill providing supplemental 1966 funds for health programs (HR 10586), Congress appropriated $42,920,000 to implement recommendations of the President's Commission that could be carried out under existing authorizations. (See stories, p. 182, 166)

AMA POSITION. The most significant opposition to establishment of the regional medical complexes came from the American Medical Assn. and resulted in the extensive amendments which reduced the scope of the legislation.

At its June 20-24 national convention, the AMA adopted a resolution opposing those portions of the report of the President's Commission which proposed creation of the regional medical centers. The resolution said

"immense strides" had been made under "existing patterns of research and medical practice."

Late in August, after the Senate had passed S 596, the AMA requested President Johnson to defer action on the bill until 1966 "because the likelihood of its passage was jeopardizing AMA's attempts" to cooperate with the Health, Education and Welfare Department in implementing the newly enacted medical care for the aged bill (PL 89-97), which the AMA had also opposed. (See story p. 236)

The President refused to delay the bill. However, he directed the new HEW Secretary, John W. Gardner, to work with an AMA committee to develop amendments to make the bill less objectionable to the AMA. Subsequently, the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee adopted numerous amendments which became part of the final bill. Several were amendments worked out at meetings between the HEW and AMA spokesmen. Others were added by the Committee on its own, or suggested by other groups. Although the Administration did not like all the changes, it accepted them as the price of getting the legislation enacted. The AMA Sept. 2 said it could still not support the bill, but the changes "certainly make the bill much less objectionable."

The House Committee, in adding a provision which strengthened a Senate-inserted ban on construction of wholly new facilities, said the provision was designed to make absolutely clear that the bill was not intended to finance a massive federal construction program of medical complexes, but only to help existing local hospitals, medical schools, etc., to coordinate their efforts. The Committee said the ban on wholly new construction resulted from the fact that "many persons (particularly the AMA, CQ learned) have expressed...the fear that this program may involve, ultimately, construction of large federal facilities scattered throughout the United States, staffed with federal employees, thereby downgrading local hospitals and local medical facilities."

PROVISIONS

As signed into law S 596:

Declared that the purposes of the legislation were: to encourage and assist, through grants, in the establishment of regional cooperative arrangements among medical schools, research institutions and hospitals for research and training (including continuing education) and related demonstrations of patient care in the fields of heart disease, cancer, stroke and related diseases; to enable the medical profession and medical institutions to make available to their patients the latest advances in the diagnosis and treatment of these diseases; to improve generally the health manpower and facilities available to the nation; and to accomplish these ends without interfering with existing patterns of methods of financing patient care or professional practice or with administration of hospitals, and to accomplish them in cooperation with practicing physicians, medical center officials, hospital administrators and representatives from appropriate voluntary health agencies.

Authorized the Surgeon General to make grants, on the basis of applications from local groups, to assist public and nonprofit private universities, medical schools, research institutions and other public and nonprofit private institutions and agencies in planning, conducting feasibility studies and operating pilot projects for the establishment of regional medical programs to implement the purposes of the Act. Directed that the grants could cover up to 100 percent of the costs of planning and could cover up to 90 percent of the costs of construction or providing built-in equipment (see definition, below).

Stipulated that the grants would not be used to pay the cost of hospital, medical or other care of patients except when such care was incident to research, demonstration or training activities. Stipulated that no patient would be furnished such care unless he had been referred to the facility by a practicing physician.

Authorized a total of $340 million over fiscal years 1966-68 for the grants, broken down as follows: $50 million in fiscal 1966, $90 million in fiscal 1967 and $200 million in fiscal 1968.

Defined a regional medical program as a cooperative arrangement among a group of public or nonprofit private institutions or agencies engaged in research, training, diagnosis and treatment relating to heart disease, cancer, stroke and, at the option of the applicant for the grant, related disease or diseases. (The definition was designed to emphasize that the new regional medical programs would be limited in scope and intended primarily to facilitate arrangements among existing institutions.) Stipulated that the group must meet these requirements: be situated in a geographic area composed of any part or parts of one or more states which the Surgeon General determined was appropriate; consist of one or more medical centers, one or more clinical research centers and one or more hospitals; and have in effect cooperative arrangements among its component units which the Surgeon General determined would effectively carry out the purposes of the Act.

Defined a medical center as a medical school or other medical institution involved in postgraduate medical training and one or more hospitals affiliated with the school for teaching, research and demonstration purposes.

Defined a clinical research center as an institution (or part of an institution) whose primary function was research, training of specialists and demonstrations, and which provided specialized, high-quality diagnostic and treatment services for inpatients and outpatients.

Defined a hospital to include a general, tuberculosis or other type of hospital or another health facility in which local capability for diagnosis and treatment was supported and augmented by the program established under the Act.

Defined a nonprofit institution or agency as one owned and operated by one or more nonprofit corporations or associations whose net earnings did not inure, or could not lawfully inure, to the benefit of any private stockholder or individual.

Defined construction as alteration, major repair, remodeling and renovation of existing buildings (including initial equipment of the buildings) and replacement of obsolete, built-in equipment of existing buildings (thereby prohibiting any new construction during the three years of the program authorized by the bill).

Established a 13-member National Advisory Council on Regional Medical Programs, chaired by the Surgeon General, to advise and assist the Surgeon General in preparation of regulations and policy for the programs and to review and make recommendations on applications for grants. Required that the members be leaders in the fields of the fundamental sciences, the medical sciences or public affairs and stipulated that at least two members must be practicing physicians, and at least one must be outstanding in the study, diagnosis or treatment of heart disease, one in cancer and one in stroke. Authorized appointment of the members for staggered four-year terms by the Surgeon General, subject to the approval of the Secretary.

Required the Surgeon General, after consultation with the Council, to prescribe general regulations for approving grant applications and for coordination of programs assisted by the grants.

Stipulated that planning grants could be made only on approval of applications by the Surgeon General on the recommendation of the Advisory Council and that an application could be approved only if it contained or was supported by reasonable assurances that: the federal funds would be used only for the purposes for which they were paid; the applicant would comply with fiscal control and accounting procedures prescribed by the Surgeon General; the applicant would make reports and keep records required by the Surgeon General; and that the applicant had designated a local advisory group to assist in implementing the plan which had a membership that included practicing physicians, medical center officials, hospital administrators, representatives from appropriate medical societies and voluntary health agencies, representatives of other organizations, institutions and agencies concerned with activities under the program, and members of the public familiar with the need for the services provided under the program.

Stipulated that grants for establishment and operation of the programs could be made only on approval of applications by the Surgeon General on the recommendation of the Advisory Council. Provided that an application could be approved only if approval was recommended by the local advisory group and if the application contained or was supported by reasonable assurances that: federal funds would be used only for the purposes for which they were paid and would not supplant funds otherwise available for establishment or operation of the regional medical program for which the grant was made; the applicant would provide for fiscal control and accounting procedures prescribed by the Surgeon General; the applicant would make reports and keep records required by the Surgeon General; and laborers or mechanics employed for construction financed under the Act would be paid prevailing wages under the Davis-Bacon Act.

Directed the Surgeon General to establish and maintain on a current basis a list of facilities in the United States equipped and staffed to provide the most advanced methods and techniques in the diagnosis and treatment of heart disease, cancer or stroke, along with other information including the availability of advanced specialty training in such facilities, and to make the list and information readily available to licensed practitioners and others. Directed him to consult from time to time with interested national professional organizations in order to make the information most useful.

Required the Surgeon General, by June 30, 1967, to submit to the HEW Secretary for transmission to the President and then to Congress a report on activities under the program along with recommendations for its extension or modification.

Required grant recipients to keep records prescribed by the Surgeon General and authorized the HEW Secretary and the U.S. Comptroller General to audit and examine the records.

Background

President's Commission. President Johnson March 7, 1964, announced establishment of a 28-member Commission on Heart Disease, Cancer and Stroke, headed by Dr. Michael E. DeBakey, chairman of the Department of Surgery at Baylor University College of Medicine in Houston, Texas. The President said he had asked the Commission "to recommend steps that can be taken to reduce the burden and incidence of these diseases."

The Commission's report, made public Dec. 9, 1964, said the Commission "recognizes that there is a gap between discovery and application of health knowledge. It recognizes that medical miracles are in many instances available only to the fortunate few who can get to the unique medical institution or specialist who can perform that miracle. The report declares that these benefits should and must be available to people where and when they need them."

The Commission recommended creation of 450 "stations" throughout the country (150 for heart disease, 200 for cancer, 100 for strokes) to provide such services as screening of cases, diagnosis, emergency and outpatient care, training of physicians and health education of the public. For more involved treatment, the Commission recommended establishment of 60 regional centers for research and treatment (25 for heart disease, 20 for cancer, 15 for strokes). It recommended federal payment of 100 percent of the costs of any construction necessary to establish the centers, as well as an unspecified part of the operating costs.

Johnson Requests. Based on these recommendations, President Johnson in his Jan. 7, 1965, Health Message recommended legislation authorizing a five-year "program of project grants to develop multi-purpose regional medical complexes for an all-out attack on heart disease, cancer, stroke and other major diseases." (For text, see p. 1383)

The Administration draft bill was introduced (HR 3140, S 596) Jan. 19 by Rep. Oren Harris (D Ark.) and Sen. Lister Hill (D Ala.). The bill authorized the Surgeon General to make grants for (1) planning the development of regional medical complexes for research and treatment of heart disease, cancer, stroke and other major diseases which he determined to be of major significance to the nation's health, and (2) establishment and operation of the complexes, including construction and equipment of related facilities. The bill authorized $50 million in fiscal 1966 and did not specify any amounts for the following four fiscal years, but Administration sources said a total federal outlay of $1,150,000,000 previously was estimated over the five-year period. The bill permitted federal payment of 100 percent of the costs of planning, but limited federal participation to 90 percent of the costs on construction.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Labor and Public Welfare.

HELD HEARINGS -- Feb. 9-10 on S 596.

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 9 -- HEW Secretary Anthony J. Celebrezze said the complexes would bring together "the worlds of medical practice, medical research and medical training, region by region across the nation" with three principal benefits: "full and efficient application of existing health manpower and facilities to critical problems associated with heart disease, cancer and stroke"; development, where needed, of new manpower and facilities "for the most advanced patient care and research in these fields"; and "the upgrading of all medical services" because each component of the network "would serve as a point of transmission of the latest developments in scientific medicine." He emphasized that the bill would not permit use of federal funds for physicians' fees or any type of patients' expenses.

Dr. Edward W. Dempsey, Special Assistant to the HEW Secretary for Health and Medical Affairs, said the legislation was necessary because "the three faces of medicine -- teaching, research and patient care -- must coalesce into one image if the full potential of each is to be realized."

Dr. Murray M. Copeland, president of the American Cancer Society, said the legislation should: provide methods of strengthening the existing National Cancer Institute programs; place sole emphasis on conquering heart disease, cancer and stroke "until the parameters of the present recommended program are established and progress in the control of the three great killers is apparent"; include all existing major medical facilities in the complexes, including non-medical-school-connected categorical hospitals and tumor institutes; give priority to providing new personnel; and permit the Centers to provide for prevention, as well as treatment of cancer, including establishment of smoking control clinics.

Marion B. Folsom, director of Eastman Kodak Co. and former HEW Secretary (1955-58), said there was "a real need for better community-wide planning of all health facilities and services." He suggested that the bill should specifically provide for inclusion of state and local health departments in the local councils which would supervise the program, and indicate that the 10 percent local contribution required for construction grants was intended "as a minimum and that greater local contribution is contemplated in most cases."

Spokesmen for the Assn. of American Medical Colleges and the American Heart Assn. testified in favor of S 596. Statements in support of S 596 were submitted by the American Hospital Assn., the American Dental Assn. and the American Public Health Assn.

Bill Reported

The Labor and Public Welfare Committee June 24 reported an amended version of S 596 (S Rept 368). The only major amendments changed the appropriations authorizations to a total of $650 million over the four fiscal years 1966-69, and barred construction of wholly new facilities.

Majority Views. The Committee said the Surgeon General had advised it that if the bill were enacted, the National Institutes of Health would be responsible for administration of the program. The Committee noted "with satisfaction that it is the general policy of (HEW) that the results of federally financed research...be made widely, promptly and freely available to the scientific community and to the public by publication and by royalty free licensing or dedication of inventions made in the course of such research." It said, however, that it would "pay close attention to any developments which might necessitate additional legislation to safeguard the rights of the public to widespread low-cost availability of medical innovations developed through Government expenditures."

Individual Views. Ralph W. Yarborough (D Texas) said the "bill would be greatly improved by the inclusion of a requirement that the results of research which is financed by public funds authorized under this Act be made freely available to the general public."

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate June 28 passed S 596 by voice vote without floor amendments, authorizing $50 million in fiscal 1966, $100 million in 1967, $200 million in 1968 and $300 million in 1969 -- a total of $650 million.

Before passing the bill, the Senate adopted by a 55-36 roll-call vote a motion by John O. Pastore (D R.I.) to table (kill) a proposed amendment by Russell B. Long (D La.) to limit the Government's freedom to waive patent rights on inventions and processes developed through research financed by funds provided in S 596. The amendment would have prohibited the expenditure of any money under the bill for research or development activity unless the expenditure was based on the condition that the results of the work "would be freely available to the public." Under certain conditions, a person who had contributed to the work could obtain an exclusive patent on the resulting product or process for up to three years. (For voting, see chart p. 1053)

There was no opposition expressed to S 596. The entire debate centered on the Long amendment. Under existing Health, Education and Welfare Department policy, the results of research financed by HEW were made available generally to the scientific community and the public, but HEW could retain title to an invention and grant exclusive commercial rights to it without charging a fee. Other agencies which financed research through grants or contracts established their own policies. Beginning in 1960, Long had offered amendments to various bills to protect the Government's investment in research on products developed under federal grants or contracts.

Long June 25 contended that "perhaps it is justifiable for companies to receive product patents on products developed by their own research, but what we are talking about today is handing over of the exclusive rights to private contractors on processes and products which are developed with public funds." He aimed his attack primarily at drug manufacturers, saying that "the difference between having drugs developed so that they are immediately available to the public and letting them be sold under a patent monopoly when the Government has paid for the entire research results in a difference in price of about 30 to one." This kind of "price gouging by the drug monopolies is scandalous even when they spend their own funds on research to develop the products," he said, but "it is beyond all standards of decency and morality when the money for the research comes from the Government." Ralph W. Yarborough (D Texas) June 28 added that "in the case of new cancer discoveries, many lives might be lost by the delay in announcing a new discovery. The obtaining of monopolistic patent rights is always a cause of long delay."

Long contended that "when a new research program is started, that is the time to say whether the patents shall be private patents or not." He charged that obtaining a uniform policy of federal retention of patent rights would be impossible because "both large political parties depend for financial support upon people connected with big business and such people are numerous in both parties .... Under those circumstances we shall not be able to pass a law because there will be too many friends of those people voting on their side."

Pastore and many other opponents of the Long amendment voiced support for its objectives, but said piecemeal amendments on patent policies were undesirable and should be held in abeyance, because the Senate Government Operations Patents, Trademarks and Copyrights Subcommittee had started hearings on patent issues and was expected to report out legislation establishing a uniform Government-wide patent policy. (The Subcommittee held hearings in 1965, but took no further action. See story, p. 887)

AMENDMENT REJECTED

June 28 -- Russell B. Long (D La.) -- Limit the waiver of patent rights on inventions and processes developed through research financed by funds provided in the bill. Tabled, 55-36 roll-call vote.

House

COMMITTEE -- Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

HELD HEARINGS -- July 20-23, 27-30 on HR 3140. In addition to the witnesses heard earlier in the Senate hearings, the Committee received AMA testimony:

July 27 -- Dr. James Z. Appel, president of the AMA, said the AMA "simply cannot agree that patients are deprived of the latest and best medical care because of a serious lag between the discovery and application of the advances of medical research. Nor can we agree that this legislation will provide the practicing physician with any opportunity to enhance his professional skills not now available to him." He said coordinated arrangements for diagnosis and treatment of heart disease, cancer and stroke were already in existence, and the practice of referring patients to medical centers had been "operating for many, many years."

Appel listed these other basic objections to HR 3140: there was insufficient manpower to meet the needs of the proposed medical complexes; the creation of the complexes would "discourage physicians from locating in suburban or rural areas"; the bill would not "improve communication of new diagnostic and therapeutic discoveries to the practicing physician"; the complexes would have "an adverse effect on hospitals which do not become a part of the medical complex"; establishment of the complexes would have "a detrimental effect on those medical schools which are not given a leadership role in the complex"; enactment of the bill "could overburden the physical capabilities of available medical manpower and facilities, particularly when it is considered that this new experiment would be added to another new broad program -- medicare"; and even without HR 3140, "the present system of distribution of medical care, medical education and research is attacking heart disease, cancer and stroke."

ACTION -- The Committee Sept. 8 reported HR 3140 (H Rept 963) after adding numerous amendments, several of which had been worked out in meetings between the Administration and AMA spokesmen and were designed to reduce AMA objections. (For details of negotiations, see "AMA Position," p. 324.)

Changes in Senate Bill. Major differences between the Committee bill and the Senate-passed S 596:

- In order to "emphasize the local nature" of the program, "its limited scope, and the fact that (its) primary thrust will be to facilitate arrangements among existing institutions," the Committee substituted the phrase "regional medical programs" for the Senate's "regional medical complexes."
- The Committee strengthened the Senate provision barring grants for construction of wholly new buildings. It did, however, permit alteration, major repair, remodeling and renovation of existing buildings and replacement of obsolete, built-in equipment in existing buildings. It said the Administration had specifically requested that it retain authority for new construction, but the lack of authority would "create no serious problems" for the first three years of the program, after which the Committee would review the need.
- The Committee limited the program to combatting heart disease, cancer, stroke and "related diseases" instead of "other major diseases," as in the Senate bill.
- Instead of the Senate's $650 million over four years, the Committee authorized $340 million over three.
- To assure that the conventional role of the practicing physician would not be impaired under the bill, the Committee stipulated that patients would receive treatment at facilities only if referred by a practicing physician; that local advisory groups which the bill required as a prerequisite for approval of a grant application would include practicing physicians; and that at least two of the members of the National Advisory Council must be practicing physicians.

Committee Views. The Committee said its version of the bill would "still carry out the basic objectives of the introduced legislation (but)...without interferring with the patterns, or the methods of financing, of patient care or professional practice or with the administration of hospitals."

FLOOR ACTION

The House Sept. 24 passed HR 3140 by voice vote with two minor amendments. It then substituted the provisions of HR 3140 for those of S 596 as passed by the Senate, and passed the amended Senate bill by voice vote.

Floor manager Oren Harris (D Ark.) indicated that the bill as passed by the House was acceptable to the Administration, despite the changes from the original Administration recommendations. Harris said the three-year authorization would provide for about 25 programs, which were "supposed to be pilot projects in order to demonstrate throughout the country...what can be done, so that similar programs will be encouraged." He said sufficient planning had already taken place to make possible establishment "in the fairly near future" of programs in Iowa, Missouri, North Carolina, Ohio, Vermont, Virginia and Wisconsin.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Sept. 24 -- H.R. Gross (R Iowa) -- Require grant recipients to keep records prescribed by the Surgeon General and authorize the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare and the U.S. Comptroller General to audit and examine the records. Voice vote.

Richard C. White (D Texas) -- In the definition of a medical center, include a medical school "or other medical institution involved in postgraduate medical training." Voice.

FINAL ACTION. The Senate Sept. 29 by voice vote concurred in the House amendments, clearing S 596 for the President's signature.

FUNDS PROVIDED FOR STAFFING MENTAL HEALTH CENTERS

HR 2985 -- Reported, amended, by House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee (H Rept 248) April 15, 1965.

- Passed by the House by a 389-0 roll-call vote May 4. (See p. 958)
- Reported, amended, by Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee (S Rept 366) June 24.
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote June 28.
- Conference report (H Rept 678) agreed to by voice vote of the Senate July 26 and by a 414-0 roll-call vote of the House July 27. (See p. 982)

PL 89-105 -- Signed into law Aug. 4.

HR 2985, the Administration-endorsed Community Mental Health Centers Act Amendments of 1965, authorized a new seven-year (fiscal 1966-72) program of grants to public or nonprofit private organizations or agencies to help pay the initial costs of professional and technical personnel at community mental health centers. The grants were to be available during the first 51 months of operation of a new center or of new services in existing centers. They could cover a portion of the staffing costs ranging from 75 percent during the first 15 months to 30 percent in the final 12 months. After the end of the 51 months, the full staffing costs were to be borne by the local community.

The staffing grants were sought by President Johnson in his Jan. 7 Health Message. A similar program had been sought by President Kennedy in 1963 as part of the Community Mental Health Centers Act (PL 88-164), but Congress denied his request.

The bill made specific authorizations of $19.5 million in fiscal 1966, $24 million in fiscal 1967 and $30 million in fiscal 1968 for initial staffing grants to eligible centers. After fiscal 1968, no additional centers could receive staffing grants, but those centers which had received grants during the first three years would be eligible to receive follow-up grants to cover staffing during the remainder of the full 51 months. The bill authorized appropriation of whatever amounts were necessary during fiscal 1967-72 to finance the follow-up grants. The estimated total cost of all the initial and follow-up grants from fiscal 1966-72 was $224,175,000.

Explaining why Congress had approved the staffing grants in 1965 although it had denied them in 1963, the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee said experience since 1963 had indicated that the community mental health centers covered by the 1963 legislation could not get underway properly without financial aid for staffing from the Federal Government.

In addition to authorizing the staffing grants, HR 2985 extended for three years, with increased authorizations, existing programs (1) for training of teachers of mentally retarded and other handicapped children; and (2) for otherwise improving educational opportunities for these children through grants for research and demonstration projects.

Congress in HR 11588, the General Fiscal 1966 Supplemental Appropriations bill, appropriated the full $19.5 million requested for the staffing grants. Funds for the two handicapped children programs amended by HR 2985 were provided, up to the full amounts authorized for fiscal 1966, in the regular appropriations bill for the Health, Education and Welfare Department (HR 7765) and in HR 11588. (See stories p. 161, 182)

Commenting on the bill Jan. 19, 1966, Rep. John E. Fogarty (D R.I.) said that many members of the National Assn. for Mental Health had been "in direct touch with their Congressmen" in a "highly effective" campaign to obtain passage of HR 2985.

PROVISIONS

As signed into law, HR 2985 contained the following provisions:

Mental Health Staffing. Amended the Mental Retardation Facilities and Community Mental Health Centers Act of 1963 (PL 88-164) to authorize the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare to make grants for the compensation of professional and technical personnel in community mental health centers.

Limited the grants to the first 51 months of operation of a new center or of new services in existing centers; and to 75 percent of staffing costs in the first 15 months, 60 percent in the subsequent 12 months, 45 percent in the next 12 months and 30 percent in the following 12 months.

Directed the Secretary, in making the grants, to take into account the relative health and financial needs and the populations of the states.

Provided that grants be made only upon application by public or nonprofit private agencies or organizations, and in accordance with specified criteria.

Directed the Secretary, after consultation with the National Advisory Mental Health Council, to prescribe regulations for the determination and approval of grants.

Limited grants after June 30, 1968, to facilities which had received an initial grant on or before that date.

Authorized appropriations of $19.5 million in fiscal 1966, $24 million in fiscal 1967, and $30 million in fiscal 1968 for initial grants under the program, and of such sums as were necessary for fiscal years 1967-72 for grants to centers which had previously received initial grants.

Teacher Training. Amended PL 88-164 to extend from fiscal 1966 through fiscal 1969 the program of grants to states and higher education institutions for training teachers of mentally retarded and other handicapped children. Authorized $29.5 million in fiscal 1967, $34 million in fiscal 1968 and $37.5 million in fiscal 1969 (in addition to the existing authorization of $19.5 million for fiscal 1966).

Expanded the existing definition of a state to include Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, the District of Columbia, Guam and American Samoa.

Education of Children. Amended PL 88-164 to extend from fiscal 1966 through fiscal 1969 the program of grants to states and public and private colleges and universities for research and demonstration projects to improve educational opportunities for handicapped children.

Increased the existing fiscal 1966 authorization for this program from $2 million to $6 million and authorized $9 million in fiscal 1967, $12 million in fiscal 1968 and $14 million in fiscal 1969.

Amended PL 88-164 to authorize the Commissioner of Education to make grants to institutions of higher education for the construction, equipping and operation of a facility for research and demonstration in the field of education of handicapped children. (No decision as to the site or design of this facility had been reached through Feb. 1, 1966.)

Special Fund. Established in the Treasury a special account without fiscal year limitation into which the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare could pay sums set aside for certain grants and from which he could make payments of the grants as needed.

Background

1963 Legislation. In 1963, Congress enacted legislation (PL 88-164) authorizing federal grants to help states and localities construct community mental health and retardation facilities. A section providing federal assistance in staffing community mental health centers was included in the Senate version of the bill but was deleted in the House and final versions. (1963 Almanac p. 222)

PL 88-164 also authorized, through fiscal 1966, a program of federal grants to states and institutions of higher learning for training teachers of mentally retarded and other handicapped children, with a $19.5-million authorization in fiscal 1966. In addition, it authorized, through fiscal 1966, a program of $2 million a year in grants to states and public and private colleges and universities for research and demonstration projects to improve educational opportunities for handicapped children.

1965 Johnson Requests. In his Jan. 7, 1965, Health Message, President Johnson requested a five-year program of grants for the initial staffing costs for personnel at community mental health centers. In his Jan. 12, 1965, Education Message, the President requested extension and expansion of the teacher training grant program. (For texts, see p. 1383, 1374)

Administration Bills. The Administration proposals were embodied in two draft bills:

- HR 2985 (S 513) authorized whatever sums were necessary in fiscal 1966 and subsequent years for grants to cover staffing costs of community mental health centers, with the grants limited to the first 51 months of a center's operation. The matching requirements were the same as in the final bill. After fiscal 1970, grants could only be made to facilities which had already received initial grants before that date.
- HR 6881 extended the teacher training program for handicapped children through fiscal 1971 and authorized an additional $5 million for fiscal 1966 (for a $24.5 million total) and whatever amounts were needed for the grants in the following five fiscal years. It also extended through fiscal 1971 the program of grants for research and demonstration projects to improve educational opportunities for handicapped children and authorized whatever sums were necessary for the grants. Finally, it established a special fund in the Treasury for HEW grant money.

Hill Bill. Sen. Lister Hill (D Ala.) March 8 introduced his own bill (S 1400), which was later accepted by the Administration, covering the same two programs as HR 6881. S 1400 extended the teacher training program through fiscal 1971 and authorized an additional $5 million for fiscal 1966 plus $29.5 million in fiscal 1967, $34 million in fiscal 1968, $37.5 million in fiscal 1969, and $40 million each in fiscal 1970 and 1971.

The bill also extended through fiscal 1971 the program of grants for research and demonstration projects. It increased the fiscal 1966 authorization from $2 million to $6 million and authorized $9 million in fiscal 1967, $12 million in fiscal 1968, $14 million in fiscal 1969, $17 million in fiscal 1970 and $22 million in fiscal 1971. It also authorized grants for a facility for research and demonstration in the field of education of handicapped children and established a special HEW grant fund in the Treasury.

House

COMMITTEE -- Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

HELD HEARINGS -- March 2-5 on HR 2985 and other Administration health bills. Highlights:

March 2 -- HEW Secretary Anthony J. Celebrezze said initial construction grants for community mental health centers had been highly successful in stimulating community mental health programs, but "staffing grants are urgently needed to provide the initial stimulus which is necessary if a great many states and communities are to establish and maintain community mental health centers." He emphasized that the grants would cover a center's staffing costs only for the first few years.

March 3 -- A spokesman for the National Assn. of State Mental Health Program Directors supported HR 2985. An American Medical Assn. spokesman, however, suggested that "if the community cannot, or will not, support the program from its beginning years, it is not likely to do so later."

Bill Reported

The Committee April 15 reported HR 2985 (H Rept 248), dealing only with mental health center staffing, with amendments which placed specific dollar limits on initial-grant appropriations for fiscal 1966-68 (1966, $19.5 million; 1967, $24 million; 1968, $30 million); which authorized follow-up grants for staffing in fiscal 1967-1969; and which limited grants after fiscal 1968 (instead of 1970) to facilities which had received a grant on or before that date.

Committee Views. The Committee said that at the time of passage of PL 88-164, "it was not clear that the problems of funds for initial staffing would represent a critical factor in getting (community mental health) centers underway." It said that "questions on the critical need for staffing grants have been answered by subsequent experience. Federal funds are necessary to enable communities to provide desperately needed services while permanent sources of financial support are developed."

The Committee said it did not intend that the Federal Government would assume "the traditional responsibility of the states in this field." It said the principal non-federal sources of support would be community taxes and voluntary funds, state funds and patient fees.

The Committee said it was estimated that "during fiscal 1966 approximately 65 centers will receive staffing grants."

FLOOR ACTION

The House May 4 passed HR 2985 without floor amendments by a 389-0 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart p. 958)

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Labor and Public Welfare.

HELD HEARINGS -- May 17 on HR 2985 and S 1400. Statements in support of the legislation were submitted by the American Psychiatric Assn., American Psychological Assn., National Assn. of Retarded Children, Council on Exceptional Children, American Federation of Teachers, Alexander Graham Bell Assn., American Foundation for the Blind, Conference of Executives of American Schools for the Deaf, National Assn. for Mental Health and American Speech and Hearing Society.

Bill Reported

The Committee June 24 reported HR 2985 (S Rept 366), with amendments which (1) changed the House's staffing provisions to authorize follow-up grants through fiscal 1972 (instead of only through 1969); and (2) added the provisions of S 1400, the Hill bill, authorizing funds for the two programs involving education of the handicapped (see above for provisions).

Committee Views. The report said that authorizing the grants for continued staffing through fiscal 1972 rather than 1969 would permit appropriation of funds to finance the full 51 months of support provided for in the bill. It said that to meet the special needs of handicapped children, about 300,000 special education teachers would be needed by 1970 and there were currently only 60,000. "To provide the teachers required to meet this shortage by 1970," the Committee said, "it would be necessary to train a minimum of 52,000 of them in each of the next five years." In support of expanding research and demonstration grants, the Committee said that "at the present time there is little objective evidence concerning the most effective methods for meeting the needs of handicapped children and youth. Research is necessary to describe and define the intellectual, emotional, social and physical needs of these children." The Committee said construction of a facility for such research "will bring about a systematic attack on major problems which are now being approached by isolated researchers on a piecemeal basis." It suggested that the facility be located "in or near a metropolitan center where reasonably large numbers of handicapped children are available for study."

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate June 28 passed HR 2985 by voice vote with the committee amendments.

Conference

● REPORT -- The conference report (H Rept 678) was filed July 23. The final bill was the same as the Senate version with these exceptions: (1) funds for teacher training were authorized only through fiscal 1969 and the existing $19.5 million authorization for fiscal 1966 was retained, and (2) funds for the grants for research and demonstration projects were authorized only through fiscal 1969.

● ACTION -- The Senate July 26 by voice vote and the House July 27 by a 414-0 roll-call vote agreed to the conference report and sent HR 2985 to the President. (For House vote, see chart p. 982)

COMMUNITY HEALTH PROGRAMS

S 510 -- Reported, amended, by Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee (S Rept 117) March 10, 1965.

● Passed by the Senate by voice vote March 11.

HR 2986 -- Reported, amended, by House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee (H Rept 249) April 15.

S 510 -- Passed by the House by voice vote after HR 2986 had been passed by a 347-0 roll-call vote May 3. (See p. 958)

● Conference report (H Rept 676) agreed to by voice votes of the Senate July 26 and the House July 27.

PL 89-109 -- Signed into law Aug. 5.

S 510, the Administration-requested Community Health Services Extension Amendments of 1965, extended the life of four federal health grant programs.

PROVISIONS -- As signed by the President, S 510:

Immunization Grants. Extended for three years, through June 30, 1968, the existing program (PL 87-868) of grants to the states and local communities to buy vaccine to immunize children against polio, diphtheria, whooping cough and tetanus. Added to the diseases covered, measles and any other infectious diseases which the Surgeon General decided represented a major public health problem. Authorized appropriations of $11 million in each of the fiscal years 1966-68. Permitted use of the grants for purchase of vaccines for all preschool age children (rather than only for children under five).

Migratory Workers Health Services. Extended for three years, through June 30, 1968, the existing program (PL 87-692) of grants to public and nonprofit private agencies for health services to domestic migrant workers. Authorized $7 million in fiscal 1966, $8 million in fiscal 1967 and $9 million in fiscal 1968. Included hospital care for migrant workers and their families among the other benefits financed with federal aid under the program.

Public Health Grants. Extended for one year, through June 30, 1967, the existing program (PL 87-395) of matching grants to the states to provide general public health services. Within the existing over-all $50 million annual authorization, increased from $2.5 million to $5 million the appropriations authorization for grants to schools of public health.

Community Health Services. Extended for one year, through June 30, 1966, the existing program (PL 87-395) of grants to states, local communities and nonprofit private organizations for studies, experiments and demonstration of new methods of out-of-hospital care.

Total New Authorizations. For all four programs, added a total of $117 million in appropriations authorizations over fiscal 1966-68, as follows (in millions of dollars by fiscal year):

	1966	1967	1968
Immunizations	$11	$11	$11
Migrants Health	7	8	9
Public Health	1	50	--
Community Health	1	10	--
Total	$18	$79	$20

BACKGROUND. President Johnson requested the extensions in his Jan. 7 Health Message. (For text, see p. 1383)

The President's requests were embodied in a draft bill (HR 2986, S 510) which extended and amended existing health programs as follows:

- PL 87-868, enacted in 1962, authorized grants to the states and local communities, through fiscal 1965, to buy vaccine to immunize all children under five years of age against polio, diphtheria, whooping cough and tetanus (1962 Almanac p. 221). HR 2986 (S 510) extended the program through June 30, 1970, with no fixed limit on the annual appropriations for the program (the 1964-65 authorization had been $11 million a year); included all preschool children; and added to the disease categories measles and any other infectious diseases that the Surgeon General found represented a major public health problem.
- PL 87-692, enacted in 1962, authorized $3 million annually in fiscal 1963-65 for grants to public and nonprofit agencies for health services to domestic migrant workers (1962 Almanac p. 124). HR 2986 (S 510) extended the program through June 30, 1970, with no fixed limit on annual appropriations.
- PL 87-395, enacted in 1961, raised to $50 million annually through fiscal 1966 an existing program of matching grants to the states to provide general public health services including mental health, radiological health, health services for the chronically ill or the aged and dental public health services. Within the $50 million, $2.5 million could be used for grants to schools of public health. (1961 Almanac p. 201) HR 2986 (S 510) extended the program for one year, to June 30, 1967, with a $50 million authorization for the year.
- PL 87-395 also authorized $10 million annually through fiscal 1966 in federal grants to states, local communities and nonprofit organizations for studies, experiments and demonstration of new methods of out-of-hospital care, particularly for chronically ill or aged persons. S 510 extended the program for one year, to June 30, 1967, with a $10 million authorization for the year.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Labor and Public Welfare.

HELD HEARINGS -- Jan. 27 on S 510. Supporting the bill were spokesmen for the Health, Education and Welfare Department, the Assn. of Schools of Public Health, the American Public Health Assn., the State and Territorial Health Officers Assn., the American Dental Assn. and the American Assn. of Dental Schools.

ACTION -- March 10 reported S 510 (S Rept 117) with amendments. As reported S 510: (1) extended the vaccination program through fiscal 1970, with the new preschool and infectious disease provisions, but set a ceiling of $8 million annually on authorizations; (2) extended the migrant worker program through fiscal 1970, but added hospital care and set ceilings of $7 million in fiscal 1966, $8 million in fiscal 1967, $9 million in fiscal 1968 and $10 million in each of fiscal years 1969 and 1970; (3) extended the $50 million annual public health grant program to June 30, 1967, and also increased from $2.5 million to $5 million the authorization for grants to schools of public health (within the existing over-all ceiling of $50 million); and (4) extended the $10 million annual community health grant program to June 30, 1967.

Committee Views. The Committee said that between 1962, when the vaccination program was initiated, and 1964, "the number of cases of polio was reduced from 910 to 121; diphtheria from 444 to 306; and tetanus from 322 to 271," and this progress justified extension of the program for five more years. It said that since 1962, an effective measles vaccine had been developed, and it was worthwhile to include measles under the program because the number of deaths from measles was higher than that from any of the other diseases covered. As for the migratory health services, the Committee said the Dec. 31, 1964, termination of the Mexican farm labor program would increase the demand for additional domestic migratory workers, which in turn would increase the demand for health services for them. (See story p. 132)

The Committee said the general public health and community health grant programs had been extended for only one year, as requested, because major studies were being carried out by the Assn. of State and Territorial Health Officers and National Commission on Community Health Services which might lead to proposals for revision of the two programs.

FLOOR ACTION. The Senate March 11 passed S 510 by voice vote without amendments.

House

COMMITTEE -- Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

HELD HEARINGS -- March 2-5 on HR 2986, others.

ACTION -- April 15 reported HR 2986 (H Rept 249) with amendments which (1) extended the vaccination program, with the new preschool and infectious disease provisions, but limited the extension to three years (fiscal 1966-68) and set an $11 million annual ceiling; (2) extended the migrant health program (without adding hospital care), but only for three years (1966-68) and only at $3 million a year; (3) extended the general public health grants for one year (to June 30, 1967) at $50 million, as requested; (4) and extended the $10 million annual community health grants for one year (to June 30, 1967), as requested, while retaining the existing $2.5 million limit on grants to public health schools.

FLOOR ACTION. The House May 3 passed HR 2986 by a 347-0 roll call. Then, by voice vote, the House substituted the language of HR 2986 for that of S 510 and passed S 510. (For voting, see chart p. 958)

Conference

- REPORT -- The conference report (H Rept 676), filed July 23, (1) accepted the House provision extending the vaccination program for three (instead of five) years at $11 million each year; (2) agreed to the House's extension of the migrant workers health program for three (instead of five) years but accepted the Senate's authorization of $7 million, $8 million and $9 million in fiscal years 1966-68; and (3) agreed to the Senate's increase from $2.5 million to $5 million annually in the authorization for public health schools.
- ACTION -- The Senate July 26 and the House July 27 agreed to the conference report by voice votes.

MEDICAL PROFESSIONS TRAINING AID

HR 3141 -- Reported by House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee (H Rept 781) Aug. 12, 1965.

- Passed by the House on a 340-47 roll-call vote Sept. 1. (See p. 994)
- Reported, amended, by Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee (S Rept 789) Sept. 28.
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote Sept. 30.
- House, by voice vote, agreed to Senate amendments Oct. 11.

PL 89-290 -- Signed into law Oct. 22.

At the request of President Johnson, Congress in 1965 enacted amendments to the Health Professions Educational Assistance Act, extending two old programs and establishing two new programs to aid schools and students of medicine, dentistry and other specified health fields. The legislation, like the original 1963 Act, was designed to increase the number of students in these professions as well as improve the quality of their education.

The bill (HR 3141) authorized a new four-year program of scholarships for students of medicine, dentistry, osteopathy, optometry, pharmacy and podiatry, and established a new four-year program of "improvement grants" to professional schools to help pay their basic operating expenses and improve teaching. It extended (fiscal 1967-69) and expanded existing programs of student loans and federal construction grants to help schools increase their student capacity.

The final bill, similar in its major provisions to the Administration request, provided specific authorizations of $480 million for construction grants; $76.5 million for loans to students and institutions; $200 million for improvement grants; nearly $27 million for scholarships; and $4 million for operation, review and record-keeping.

President Johnson, in his Jan. 7 health message to Congress, outlined the need for the legislation, saying that, "In all sectors of health care, the need for trained personnel continues to outstrip the supply.... To begin to meet the nation's health needs, the number of new physicians graduated each year must increase at least 50 percent by 1975, and the output of new dentists by 100 percent."

Emphasizing the need for scholarships, the President Oct. 22 said, "Forty-nine percent of medical students come from families with annual incomes of $10,000 or more; almost 30 percent come from families making $15,000 or more per year." The President added, "More than four out of five students in science receive grants to assist their study, yet less than one-third of American medical students receive such aid. The needy student, looking toward the long years of financial hardship in obtaining a medical education, frequently turns to graduate study in science simply because the opportunities for financial assistance are greater."

President Johnson said the improvement grants were needed because many existing schools could not meet their operating costs and that many had "borne heavy financial burdens at the expense of academic standards." "Today at least 10 medical schools are too poorly financed to continue providing acceptable education without assistance; at least three dental schools are on probationary status, in danger of losing their accreditation. Two schools of optometry also face loss of accreditation," he said.

The new improvement grants program, providing $200 million over a four-year period to help professional schools cover their operating costs, was the only program which provoked opposition. It was opposed by the American Medical Assn. and the Republican Policy Committee in the House, the latter charging that it was "outright federal subsidy" for almost any school, instead of the "selective assistance" provided in the past. During floor debate in the House, Albert H. Quie (R Minn.) attempted to strike out the improvement grants, but the motion was defeated on a 21-69 standing vote. There were no further efforts to delete the provision.

Provisions

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law, HR 3141 amended the 1963 Health Professions Educational Assistance Act (PL 88-129) as follows:

Quality Improvement Grants. Authorized a new four-year program of grants, beginning in fiscal 1966, to assist non-profit schools of medicine, dentistry, osteopathy, optometry and podiatry in improving the quality of their educational programs. Authorized $200 million as follows: $20 million in fiscal 1966, $40 million in fiscal 1967, $60 million in fiscal 1968 and $80 million in fiscal 1969.

Authorized part of these funds for basic improvement grants. Limited the grants for each school in fiscal 1966 to $12,500 plus $250 times the number of full-time students, and in fiscal 1967-69 to $25,000 plus $500 times the number of full-time students. Prohibited grants to a school unless its application contained reasonable assurances that, during the period for which it would receive grants, the first-year enrollment of full-time students would exceed the highest first-year enrollment at the school during the period July 1, 1960, through July 1, 1965, by at least 2-1/2 percent or by five students, whichever was greater. Permitted the Surgeon General to waive this requirement if it would so crowd the school's physical facilities as to impair the quality of training.

Authorized use of the additional funds not required for basic improvement grants for special improvement grants. Stipulated that grants to any school for special improvements could not exceed $100,000 in fiscal 1966, $200,000 in fiscal 1967, $300,000 in fiscal 1968 and $400,000 in fiscal 1969.

Provided that, to receive a special improvement grant, a school would guarantee to expend non-federal funds equal to the average amount spent during the previous three years; and required that the grant be recommended by the National Advisory Council created by the bill.

Established in the Public Health Service a 12-member National Advisory Council on Medical, Dental, Optometric and Podiatric Education to advise the Surgeon General on policy and administration of the two new programs -- scholarships and improvement grants.

Scholarships. Authorized a new four-year program of scholarship grants to schools of medicine, osteopathy, dentistry, optometry, pharmacy and podiatry.

Limited the total scholarship grants to any school to $2,000 times one-tenth the number of full-time: first-year students in fiscal 1966; first-and second-year students in fiscal 1967; first-, second- and third-year students in fiscal 1968; and total students in fiscal 1969. Authorized sufficient grants in fiscal 1970-72 to enable a school to continue scholarships to students receiving them prior to fiscal 1970.

Authorized the scholarships for first-year students in fiscal 1966, first- and second-year students in fiscal 1967, first-, second- and third-year students in fiscal 1968 and first-, second-, third- and fourth-year students in fiscal 1969.

Directed that the scholarships be awarded to students from low-income families who otherwise could not pursue the course of study. Stipulated that a scholarship could cover the portion of a student's tuition, fees, books, equipment and living expenses which his school determined he needed, but not more than $2,500.

Construction Grants. Extended for three years, through fiscal 1969, the existing program of federal grants for construction and rehabilitation of teaching facilities for training physicians, pharmacists, optometrists, podiatrists, professional public health personnel or dentists.

Authorized $480 million for the grants over fiscal 1967-69 but stipulated that not more than $160 million would be available for grants before July 1, 1967, and not more than $320 million would be available before July 1, 1968.

Student Loans. Extended for three years, through fiscal 1969, the existing program of loans for students of medicine, dentistry, osteopathy or optometry and allowed it to be phased out in the following three fiscal years. Made eligible for the loans, in addition, full-time students of podiatry, pharmacy and surgical chiropody.

Increased the maximum amount of a loan from $2,000 to $2,500 per student each year.

Authorized $25 million in each of fiscal years 1967-69 and such sums as were necessary in fiscal 1970-72 for completing the loan program.

Authorized forgiveness of up to 50 percent (10 percent annually) of student loans (plus accrued interest) for medical, dental, or optometric students subsequently practicing in an area certified as having a shortage of health personnel under regulations drawn up by the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare.

Provided that the interest rate on the first loan received under the Health Professions Educational Assistance Act or the Nurse Training Act of 1964 (PL 88-581) would apply in the case of all subsequent loans made to the student.

Authorized up to $1.5 million to enable the Surgeon General to make loans to schools to establish loan funds.

Nurse Training Amendments. Amended the Nurse Training Act to provide that nursing schools would be eligible for grants for expansion and improvement and for assistance to nursing students if they were, as under existing law, approved or accredited by a recognized body approved by the Commissioner of Education (currently, only the National League for Nurses was so recognized) or were accredited directly by the Commissioner of Education.

Background

REFERENCE -- Medical Training Aid (1963 Almanac p. 216); Optometry Students' Aid (1964 Almanac p. 267); Nurse Training Act (1964 Almanac p. 244).

Congress in 1963, at the request of President Kennedy, enacted the Health Professions Educational Assistance Act (PL 88-129). Similar programs to expand teaching facilities and enlarge enrollments in the nation's medical and related professional schools had been before Congress every year since 1951, but had never cleared both chambers.

The 1963 Act authorized $175 million over a three-year period (fiscal 1964-66) in matching grants for constructing and rehabilitating facilities at schools of medicine, dentistry, osteopathy, pharmacy, optometry, podiatry, nursing and public health. (The Nurse Training Act of 1964, which provided separate programs for nurses and nursing schools, removed nursing schools from eligibility under the 1963 Act. See 1964 Almanac p. 244)

The 1963 Act also authorized $30.7 million over the same three years in loans (up to $2,000 per student per year) for students of medicine, dentistry and osteopathy, and sufficient funds in the following three years to enable the students receiving help to complete their education. Repayment of loans was to begin three years after completion of full-time study, an advantage over the one-year requirement in the graduate loan provisions of the National Defense Education Act. (See 1958 Almanac p. 213) President Kennedy in his 1962 health request had asked for scholarships for medical students, but the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee substituted loans, and in his 1963 request the President dropped the scholarship recommendation in favor of loans. Both loans and scholarships were opposed by the powerful American Medical Assn. lobby.

In 1964 Congress amended the Act to include optometry students in the loan program. President Johnson signed the bill into law (PL 88-654) in spite of the opposition of the Budget Bureau and the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. They opposed the bill because of the "relatively lower cost of education to optometry students" compared to medical and dental students.

Loan Forgiveness. Originally included in the 1963 bill was a provision authorizing "forgiveness" (cancellation) of up to 50 percent of student loans for physicians, dentists and osteopaths who practiced in an area in which there was a certified shortage of health personnel. The bill called for cancellation of 10 percent of a loan plus accrued interest for each year of practice in a shortage area, for up to five years. The provision, which was supported by the HEW Department, was deleted on the House floor. It was then passed separately by the Senate Dec. 9, but rejected by the House Sept. 3, 1964, on a 140-161 roll-call vote. (1963 Almanac p. 221, 1964 Almanac p. 241)

Early in 1965, the Senate Jan. 28 passed a new loan forgiveness bill (S 576) by voice vote. Bill sponsor Norris Cotton (R N.H.) said there were 99 U.S. counties "today in which not a single doctor lives or practices medicine," and a recent HEW study had found that "there were three times as many doctors per 1,000 people in metropolitan counties" as there were in isolated rural areas. S 576 was subsequently included in HR 3141.

PRESIDENT'S REQUESTS

In 1965 Mr. Johnson, in his health message, requested a new five-year program of grants ($20 million in fiscal 1966 and such sums as were necessary thereafter) to help schools of medicine, dentistry, and osteopathy cover their operating costs. The operating grants were divided into two categories: "basic improvement grants," allotted to a school on the basis of the number of students in the school; and "special improvement grants" to enable schools to improve their courses and teaching methods. Both programs were designed to raise the quality of education at the schools, as well as to help them expand.

The President also requested a new five-year program of scholarships for medical and dental students, particularly those from low-income families. The Administration draft bill (HR 3141) authorized for each eligible school by 1969 $2,000 times one-tenth the number of full-time students. A student could receive up to $2,500 per year, the same amount other graduate students can receive under the National Science Foundation and NDEA (National Defense Education Act) fellowship programs.

Other provisions of the draft bill extended for five years (fiscal 1967-71) and authorized necessary funds for the construction and student loan programs authorized by the 1963 Act (PL 88-129), and increased the maximum amount of a student loan from $2,000 to $2,500 (the same as the NDEA graduate loan). HR 3141 also created in the Public Health Service a National Advisory Council on Medical and Dental Education to advise the Surgeon General on the implementation of the new scholarship and improvement grants programs. In addition, HR 3141 authorized up to $2.5 million for loans to schools to help finance deposits required at institutions which establish student loan funds. The 1963 Act had authorized loans for deposits, but set no ceiling on them.

House

COMMITTEE -- Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

ACTION -- Aug. 12 reported (H Rept 781) an amended version of HR 3141, the Administration bill, which had been introduced Jan. 19 by Oren Harris (D Ark.), chairman of the Committee. The Committee June 8 and 9 held hearings on the bill.

The reported bill was different from the draft bill only in detail. It included the new scholarship and improvement grants programs, but authorized them for four (fiscal 1966-69) instead of five years. The construction and loan programs were extended for three (fiscal 1967-69) instead of five years. The Committee also authorized exact amounts where the Administration bill had not been specific: $200 million over four years for improvement grants; $480 million over three years for construction; and $25 million annually for loans. Other provisions of the Committee bill tightened eligibility requirements for the improvement grants, and expanded the loan, scholarship and improvement grants programs to include other areas of medical training.

Majority Views. The Committee report said that in 1963 there were approximately 149 physicians for every 100,000 Americans, and, in order to maintain that ratio, medical schools would have to increase the number of graduates from 7,500 to 11,000 per year by 1975. The report said that construction funds provided under the 1963 Act during fiscal 1964 and 1965 had created a total of 2,279 new first-year places in eligible schools. According to Public Health Service estimates, the new bill, providing $160 million annually in construction funds, would create in the next three years 6,000 new first-year places, including 2,000 for medical students and 1,200 for dental students.

HR 3141 increased student loan funds from $10.2 million in fiscal 1965 and $15.4 million in fiscal 1966 to $25 million annually. The report said that in fiscal 1965 nearly one-fourth (10,577 out of 48,273) of all the students in the eligible schools received loans under the program, but that more funds were needed to satisfy the demand.

The Committee said that the improvement grants would not only aid schools in bad financial straits but, by supporting new teaching methods, would also serve to restore the balance between teaching and research at many educational institutions. This balance, it said, had been disturbed "because of the impact...of federal research programs."

The report said that because of the high cost of medical education -- $20,000 to $30,000 over an 8- to 12-year post-high school period -- a disproportionate number of students was drawn from high-income families. It said that whereas 81 percent of students in the life sciences received scholarships (partly through the federal NDEA and NSF programs) with the average grant being $2,700, less than one-third of the medical students received scholarships, and the average grant was $760. Only 15 percent of dental students received scholarships and these averaged $425.

Changes in Administration Bill. In addition to the changes in length of authorization and amount of funds mentioned above, the Committee: extended the scholarship and basic improvement grants, both of which were limited to schools and students of medicine, dentistry and osteopathy, to optometry; extended the loan program to students of pharmacy and podiatry; required that a school, to be eligible for basic improvement grants, expand its first-year enrollment by 2-1/2 percent or by 5 students, whichever was greater; stipulated that no special improvement grants should be awarded to a school unless recommended by the National Advisory Council set up by the bill, and unless the school spent non federal funds equal to the average amount spent during the previous three years; and reduced the ceiling on federal loans to finance deposits on institutional student loan funds from $2.5 million to $1.5 million. The Committee also loosened nursing school accreditation requirements by allowing nursing schools that were part of a college or junior college to be accredited by a state agency. Under the 1964 Nurse Training Act, the Commissioner of Education was responsible for accreditation and chose a professional organization to carry it out. The Administration opposed this amendment.

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- Aug. 31 -- The Republican Policy Committee adopted a statement supporting extension of the construction and student loan programs, but opposing the new basic and special improvement grants. The statement said, "For the first time, the Federal Government may assume the responsibility for providing a portion of the operating funds of every school of medicine, dentistry, osteopathy, and optometry in this country.... This is a dramatic shift from the present program of selective assistance to one of outright federal subsidy. Furthermore, there is no participation or coordination by a state agency. All payments flow from the Surgeon General to the recipient school. Certainly these grants are significantly different from the brick and mortar grants and the specific grants that have until now constituted the federal assistance to higher education."

FLOOR ACTION

The House Sept. 1 passed HR 3141 by a roll-call vote of 340-47 and sent it to the Senate. (For voting, see chart p. 994)

Before passage the House rejected two attempts to remove key sections of the bill. By voice vote, it rejected an amendment by Albert H. Quie (R Minn.) to delete the new program of improvement grants, and on a 21-69 standing vote it rejected a proposal by Paul C. Jones (D Mo.) to eliminate the scholarships. The House also rejected, by voice vote, an amendment by William T. Cahill (R N.J.) to establish a national commission to set forth criteria for recipients of scholarships.

The House accepted by voice vote an amendment by Quie to require that the scholarships be awarded only to students who would be unable to pursue their education without federal aid. Also by voice vote, it accepted an amendment by James C. Cleveland (R N.H.) permitting "forgiveness" (cancellation) of up to 50 percent (10 percent annually) of student loans for students subsequently practicing in an area in which there was a certified shortage of health personnel. A similar loan forgiveness proposal was defeated by the House in 1964, but again passed the Senate in 1965. (See Background, above)

In proposing to eliminate the scholarships, Jones said that anyone wanting to enter the medical professions would be willing and able to repay a loan, and to offer a scholarship would destroy "initiative and self-respect." Quie and Cahill did not object to scholarships as such, but felt the bill should establish criteria for recipients.

The improvement grants were attacked by Quie because they established "a new precedent" in providing funds for current operating expenses of schools which should be studied separately by Congress.

Although no effort was made on the floor to remove the nurse-training school accreditation provision, it was bitterly attacked during two days of debate. Under existing law, a school had to be accredited by a body designated by the Commissioner of Education; the bill allowed state agencies to accredit nursing schools which were part of colleges and junior colleges. The effect of the amendments was to clear the way for accreditation of junior college nursing programs which could then receive construction and student loan grants. Glenn Cunningham (R Neb.) Sept. 1 said, "a state agency is not equipped or qualified to accredit a school of nursing, a highly technical school." He said "informed professional medical groups" believe the change would weaken "nationwide efforts...to strengthen and improve the quality of nurse training."

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House, HR 3141 was similar in major respects to the final bill. (See p. 333)

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Sept. 1 -- Albert H. Quie (R Minn.) -- Require that scholarships be awarded only to students from low-income families who could not pursue the course of study without financial aid. Voice vote.

James C. Cleveland (R N.H.) -- Permit forgiveness of up to 50 percent of student loans (plus accrued interest) for students subsequently practicing in an area with a shortage of health personnel. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Sept. 1 -- Albert H. Quie (R Minn.) -- Delete provisions authorizing grants for improvement of health training programs. Voice vote.

Paul C. Jones (D Mo.) -- Delete provisions authorizing scholarships. Standing, 21-69.

William T. Cahill (R N.J.) -- Establish a national commission to establish standards for scholarship recipients and require that the recipients subsequently practice in areas of personnel shortage. Voice.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Labor and Public Welfare.

ACTION -- Sept. 28 unanimously reported (S Rept 789) an amended version of HR 3141. The Committee had held hearings on the bill Sept. 8.

There were no major changes in HR 3141. The Committee amendments: (1) modified the House requirement that in order to qualify for an improvement grant a school must give reasonable assurances that its first-year enrollment would increase, to permit the Surgeon General to waive the requirement if it would result in a decrease in the level of the quality of training; (2) authorized improvement grants to schools of podiatry (in addition to other schools mentioned in the House bill); (3) made students of pharmacy and podiatry eligible for scholarships; (4) added to the House's provision for forgiveness of portions of student loans for students subsequently practicing in shortage areas designated by state health authorities, a requirement that the areas conform to regulations prescribed by the HEW Secretary; (5) extended the loan forgiveness to optometrists; (6) substituted for the House's nurse-training school accreditation provision, language permitting designation of a recognized body or bodies approved by the Commissioner of Education as the accrediting agent or permitting the Secretary to accredit a program himself for the purposes of the Act; (7) to simplify administration, provided that the interest rate on the first loan received under the Health Professions Educational Assistance Act or the Nurse Training Act would apply in the case of all subsequent loans made to the student.

In a Sept. 8 letter to the Committee, the Department of HEW supported the House version of HR 3141 but urged changes that were implemented by the Committee's first, fourth, sixth and seventh amendments.

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate Sept. 30 passed HR 3141 by voice vote and returned it to the House. There were no floor amendments to the bill.

PROVISIONS -- The provisions of the Senate-passed bill were identical to those of the final version.

FINAL ACTION. The House Oct. 11 agreed by voice vote to the Senate amendments on HR 3141. The action cleared the bill for the President's signature.

In signing the bill into law (PL 89-290) Oct. 22, President Johnson outlined the shortages in the health professions, and said that HR 3141 would "spur the attack on these serious shortages."

EXPANSION OF VOCATIONAL REHABILITATION AUTHORIZED

HR 8310 -- Reported by House Education and Labor Committee (H Rept 432) May 28, 1965.

- Passed by the House by voice vote July 29.
- Reported, amended, by Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee (S Rept 806) Sept. 30.
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote Oct. 1.
- Conference report (H Rept 1204) agreed to by voice votes of the Senate Oct. 21 and the House Oct. 22.

PL 89-333 -- Signed into law Nov. 8.

HR 8310, the Vocational Rehabilitation Act Amendments of 1965, made the first major changes since 1954 in the 45-year-old federal-state vocational rehabilitation program for the general civilian population. The amendments were intended to produce a dramatic increase -- from 120,000 to 200,000 -- in the number of physically and mentally handicapped individuals who would be rehabilitated annually and permitted to pursue a useful and gainful vocation. The bill was also designed to improve the quality of services provided and to encourage rehabilitation of new groups of disabled persons, with particular new emphasis on the mentally retarded and severely handicapped.

The main approach of the bill was the enlargement -- both in dollar amounts and in scope -- of several existing federal grant programs for vocational rehabilitation, and the creation of several wholly new grant programs as well. The major new activities for which the bill provided financing were: development of new rehabilitation methods and of new or expanded services for the severely handicapped; special programs to increase the number of persons rehabilitated; planning for development of programs aimed at making services available to all handicapped individuals in a state by 1975; training and traineeships for rehabilitation personnel in a variety of new fields and for longer periods of study; construction of workshops and facilities; initial costs of staffing rehabilitation facilities; determination of future state needs and planning to meet them; training in occupational skills and allowances for trainees; and projects to analyze and improve the professional services of workshops. In addition, the bill specifically permitted rehabilitation services for extended periods of time for mentally retarded or other handicapped individuals if necessary to determine their rehabilitation potentials.

HR 8310 was a modified version of legislation requested by President Johnson in his Jan. 7 Health Message. As enacted, it contained every major provision of the Administration draft bill. In addition, however, it included a number of new financing provisions added by the House which, in general, eased state matching requirements, set dollar ceilings on most of the existing and new programs, and provided spending authorizations only for fiscal years 1966-68. The existing programs had been permanent since 1958, with spending limited only through the Congressional appropriations process and by the states' abilities to match federal funds. The Administration had proposed to limit most of its new grant programs to five years (through fiscal 1970) but had set no appropriations ceilings.

HR 8310 authorized a vast enlargement of federal spending for vocational rehabilitation. Federal expenditures for the vocational rehabilitation program in fiscal 1965 totaled $137 million. HR 8310 authorized federal spending of $388.25 million in fiscal 1966, $477.25 million in fiscal 1967 and $549.25 million in fiscal 1968, for a total of $1,414,750,000 over the three-year period. State and local matching contributions would push over-all expenditures substantially higher. In addition, HR 8310 authorized $1.5 million over fiscal 1966-68 for the President's Committee on Employment of the Handicapped.

As in the past, members of both parties in both chambers expressed strong support for the vocational rehabilitation program.

The total funds authorized by HR 8310 were divided as follows, by fiscal year, in millions of dollars:

	1966	1967	1968
Grants for Services	$300.0	$350.0	$400.0
Grants for Innovations	5.0	7.0	9.0
Special Projects	80.0	104.0	117.0
Workshop Construction, Staffing	1.5	7.0	9.0
Workshop Improvement	1.5	9.0	14.0
Architectural Barriers Commission	0.25	0.25	0.25
Information, Research	*	*	*
TOTAL, Rehabilitation	$388.25	$477.25	$549.25
President's Committee	$0.5	$0.5	$0.5

Such sums as necessary.*

PROVISIONS

As signed into law, HR 8310 amended the Vocational Rehabilitation Act as follows:

Grants for Services. Replaced the existing open-end authorization for grants to the states for vocational rehabilitation services with a specific authorization of appropriations for the grants in fiscal 1966-68. Authorized $300 million in fiscal 1966, $350 million in fiscal 1967 and $400 million in fiscal 1968.

Retained the existing formula for allotments to a state on the basis of its population and the square of its allotment percentage (based on per capita income) in relation to the total population and allotment percentages of all the states.

Stipulated that no state's allotment under the formula could be less than its fiscal 1965 allotment.

Grants for Innovation of Services. Replaced the existing open-end authorization for grants to states for extension and improvement of existing projects with a specific authorization of appropriations for grants to states in fiscal 1966-68 to cover part of the costs of projects under the state plan which (1) provided for development of methods which were new in the state for providing services for handicapped individuals or (2) were specially designed for development of new or expanded vocational rehabilitation services for groups of handicapped individuals with catastrophic or particularly severe disabilities.

Provided for allotments to a state on the basis of its population in relation to the population of all the states. Stipulated that no state's allotment could be less than $5,000.

Permitted payments for any approved project for up to five years after it was started. Limited the federal share of the cost of the project to 90 percent in the first three years and 75 percent in the following two years.

Authorized $5 million in fiscal 1966, $7 million in fiscal 1967 and $9 million in fiscal 1968 for these grants.

Special Projects. For expanded programs of grants (enumerated below) to states and public and nonprofit organizations and agencies for special vocational rehabilitation projects, authorized $80 million in fiscal 1966, $104 million in fiscal 1967 and $117 million in fiscal 1968. These included the previously authorized grants to cover part of the cost of projects for research, demonstrations, training and traineeships and projects for establishment of special facilities and services which the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare determined would make a substantial contribution to solution of vocational rehabilitation problems common to all or several states.

In addition to the grants for these purposes, authorized use of the grants for paying part of the cost of planning, preparing for and initiating special programs to expand vocational rehabilitation services which the Secretary determined would yield a substantial increase in the number of persons vocationally rehabilitated.

In addition, authorized use of the grants to pay up to $100,000 per state per fiscal year for the full cost of planning for development of a comprehensive vocational rehabilitation program in the state aimed at making services available to all handicapped individuals in the state by July 1, 1975.

Expanded the definition of training and traineeships for which grants could be made under existing law to include those in physical medicine and rehabilitation, physical therapy, occupational therapy, speech pathology and audiology, rehabilitation nursing, rehabilitation social work, prosthetics and orthotics, rehabilitation psychology, rehabilitation counseling, recreation for the ill and handicapped and other specialized fields contributing to vocational rehabilitation. Authorized the grants for up to four years of study (instead of two).

Workshop Construction, Staffing. Authorized a new program of grants, on the basis of applications approved by the Secretary, to pay part of the costs of construction of public and nonprofit workshops and rehabilitation facilities. Required that an application for a construction grant: (1) contain or be supported by reasonable assurances that the project would be used as a workshop or rehabilitation facility for at least 10 years after construction was completed and that sufficient funds would be available to meet the non-federal share and to run the facility; (2) be accompanied by plans complying with minimum construction, equipment and safety standards established by the Secretary; (3) be approved by the appropriate state agency; and (4) contain or be supported by reasonable assurances that laborers or mechanics employed for construction would be paid prevailing wages in accordance with the Davis-Bacon Act.

Permitted the states to adopt as the federal share of the grants (1) a flat 50 percent, (2) a percentage between one-third and two-thirds based on the state's per capita income level or (3) a variable percentage based on economic differences in regions of the state.

Authorized a new program of grants to pay the initial costs of compensation of professional and technical personnel at any workshop or rehabilitation facility constructed after enactment of the bill (whether constructed with federal aid or not). Limited the grants to 75 percent of staffing costs in the first 15 months, 60 percent in the subsequent 12 months, 45 percent in the next 12 months and 30 percent in the following 12 months.

Authorized a new program of grants to states to meet part of the cost of determining a state's needs for workshops and rehabilitation facilities, and to public and nonprofit agencies, institutions or organizations for planning such facilities and the services they would provide.

For all three sets of grants, authorized $1.5 million in fiscal 1966, $7 million in fiscal 1967 and $9 million in fiscal 1968. Made the funds available for construction projects approved or initial staffing grants made before July 1, 1970.

Workshop Improvement. Authorized a new program of grants, between July 1, 1966, and June 30, 1971, to states and public and nonprofit organizations and agencies to pay 90 percent of the costs of projects for providing training services to handicapped individuals in public or nonprofit workshops and rehabilitation facilities. As part of the training services, authorized payment of allowances to trainees for up to two years of up to $25 a week plus $10 for each dependent, up to a maximum of $65.

Authorized a new program of grants, during fiscal 1966-70, to workshops to cover part of the costs of projects to analyze, improve and increase their professional services and other operations affecting their capacity to provide employment and services to the handicapped.

For the two workshop improvement grant programs described immediately above, authorized appropriation of $1.5 million in fiscal 1966, $9 million in fiscal 1967 and $14 million in fiscal 1968.

Authorized the Secretary to provide technical assistance to workshops, either directly or by contract.

Established in the HEW Department a 12-member National Policy and Performance Council to advise the Secretary and make recommendations on workshop improvement policies.

Definitions. Amended the existing definition of vocational rehabilitation services to include reader services for the blind and interpreter services for the deaf; to delete a requirement that most services be provided only to people in need of economic assistance; and to permit not only acquisition of vending stands and initial stocks for businesses operated by the handicapped, but also provision of management services and supervision by a state agency.

Further amended the definition to permit services for up to 18 months for a mentally retarded individual and for six months for an individual with any other disability if the Secretary determined services for these lengths of time were necessary to ascertain the individual's rehabilitation potential.

Defined the term federal share as 75 percent (unless a different percentage was specified), beginning in fiscal 1967, following a transitional period in fiscal 1966 during which the federal share would be equal to a state's fiscal 1965 federal share plus half the difference between that figure and 75 percent.

Throughout the Act, removed the term "physically" where it preceded the work "handicapped."

Miscellaneous. Expanded existing provisions for state supervision and administration of vocational rehabilitation plans to permit states to designate for those purposes either a state vocational, educational or rehabilitation agency (as in existing law) or a state education agency or other agency which included two or more organizational units administering one or more of the major public education, public health, public welfare or labor programs of the state.

Authorized such sums as were necessary for the Secretary to conduct -- directly or by contract -- research, studies, investigations and demonstrations on the abilities and capacities of handicapped individuals and development of their potentialities and their use in gainful and suitable employment, and to operate an information service to make available information on rehabilitation resources.

Authorized the Secretary to waive existing requirements that state plans be in effect in all political subdivisions of a state, if he determined the waiver would promote rehabilitation of larger numbers of people or of individuals with particular types of disabilities.

Established in HEW a National Commission on Architectural Barriers to Rehabilitation of the Handicapped to study existing problems and make proposals for achieving ready access to and full use of facilities in buildings by the handicapped. Required the Commission to submit to the Secretary, the President and Congress by Jan. 1, 1968, a final report and recommendations. Authorized appropriation of $250,000 in each of fiscal years 1966-68 for the Commission.

Increased from $400,000 to $500,000 the existing authorization for the President's Committee on Employment of the Handicapped.

Background

REFERENCES -- Vocational Rehabilitation (1954 Almanac p. 213; Congress and the Nation p. 1216).

Efforts of the Federal Government to aid in rehabilitation of handicapped civilians through grants to the states began with the passage of the Vocational Rehabilitation Act of 1920 (PL 66-236). Until 1943, services were confined chiefly to occupational training and counseling programs. Congress in 1943 (PL 78-113) broadened the program to permit state rehabilitation agencies to provide to handicapped persons limited medical and vocational diagnoses to determine their rehabilitation potential, hospitalization for limited periods, corrective surgery, training supplies and tools and equipment. Congress in 1954 authorized further expansion of the program (PL 83-565).

President Kennedy in 1963 and President Johnson in 1964 requested changes in the program but Congress took no action on the proposals. In his Jan. 7, 1965, Health Message Mr. Johnson again requested additional expansion of the program. He said the existing program was rehabilitating about 120,000 persons a year (compared with 55,000 in 1954), and the goal of expanded programs should be at least 200,000. An Administration draft bill was introduced (HR 6476, S 1525).

House

COMMITTEE -- Education and Labor.

HELD HEARINGS -- April 13, 14, 28 and 30 on HR 6476. Testimony was similar to that presented in Senate hearings (see below).

ACTION -- May 28 reported a clean bill (HR 8310 -- H Rept 432) in place of the Administration bill. HR 8310 contained all the programs proposed in HR 6476 but made the following basic changes, most of which resulted in increased federal costs:

Made the federal share of all basic grants to the states for services 75 percent instead of a variable percentage (50 to 70 percent) for services to previously eligible persons and 75 percent only for expanded services for the severely disabled and mentally retarded. The result was an increased federal cost for all basic grants. The Administration's objective had been to provide a special incentive to states, through a higher federal share, to provide expanded services to determine the rehabilitation potentials of the mentally and severely disabled. These groups often did not receive services under the existing basic grant program because rehabilitation potentials had to be determined in a single diagnostic session. Although the Committee denied the special incentive of a higher federal share, it specifically permitted extended diagnostic period for these groups.

Also changed the formula for allotments to states under the above basic grant program, resulting in a smaller portion of the total funds for low-income states.

Authorized a new program of grants to states for developing new rehabilitation methods or for new or expanded services (including evaluations of rehabilitation potential) for groups with catastrophic or particularly severe handicaps. (The Administration proposal had provided a similar new grant program, but primarily for improved evaluation of rehabilitation potential of the severe handicapped.)

Permitted use of staffing grants for initial staffing of all workshops built after enactment of the bill, rather than solely for workshops constructed with the bill's construction grants.

Provided only 50 percent grants for workshops construction, instead of a variable formula.

Made the federal share of the costs of training servcies 90 percent instead of 75 percent. (90 percent was the federal share of training under the Manpower Development and Training Act. See story p. 000).

Limited authorizations for appropriations for most programs to three years (fiscal 1966-68) and set specific dollar limits (which were retained in the final bill).

FLOOR ACTION. The House July 29 passed HR 8310 by voice vote without floor amendments and without any opposition expressed.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Labor and Public Welfare.

HELD HEARINGS - March 29-30 on S 1525.

TESTIMONY -- March 29 -- Wilbur J. Cohen, Assistant Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare for Legislation, said HEW had "given this bill high priority and I hope this committee will find it possible to do the same." He said the provision improving rehabilitation evaluations for the severely disabled was essential because "many disabled people have such severe handicaps, or have so many complications surrounding their disability, that immediate prediction (of their potential capabilities) is impossible." He said because much construction of rehabilitation facilites had been carried out under the Hill-Burton hospital construction program, "it has been directed primarily to meeting the needs for medical types of facilities," while "there has remained a continuing and largely unmet need for vocational types of rehabilitation centers and for modern workshops" which the proposed amendments would meet.

March 30 -- A.P. Jarrell, president of the National Rehabilitation Assn., "enthusiastically" endorsed S 1525.

Dr. Howard A. Rusk, chairman of the department of physical medicine and rehabilitation at the New York University Medical Center, recommended speedy enactment of the bill. He "strongly" supported the proposed amendment to allow extended rehabilitation evaluation services for the severely disabled. He said existing law required rehabilitation counselors to decide on the basis of a brief examination "whether or not the person will be able to get and hold a job at some time in the future when the rehabilitation program has been completed." He said that "because of this, large numbers of severely disabled people who might be helped must be turned away by the state vocational rehabilitation agencies before they even begin a program of rehabilitation services." He said new workshops and rehabilitation centers were "an urgent unmet need." Rusk strongly endorsed establishment of a National Commission on Architectural Barriers to Rehabilitation of the Handicapped.

Irvin P. Schloss, spokesman for the American Foundation for the Blind, endorsed the bill and recommended amendments to increase the federal share of the cost of services to 100 percent for the most severely disabled and at least 75 percent for others.

Mrs. Fitzhugh W. Boggs, representing the National Assn. for Retarded Children Inc., supported S 1525 and suggested amendments to permit federal payment of 90 percent of training services; delete the word "physically" before the term "handicapped individual" in both the old and new legislation; and permit staffing assistance in all workshops, whether federally financed or not.

Bill Reported. The Committee Sept. 30 reported HR 8310 (S Rept 806), amended to replace the House version with the provisions of the Administration bill with minor changes.

In separate views to the report, GOP Sens. Jacob K. Javits (N.Y.) and George Murphy (Calif.) supported the House version as "generally...superior." They said the House's revised state allotment formula was "more just and wise," and the increased federal share was necessary to bring the program in line with related manpower programs and to enable all states to participate in view of their "increasing difficulties in meeting their share . . .under the existing formula."

FLOOR ACTION. The Senate Oct. 1 passed HR 8310 by voice vote without floor amendments.

Conference

● REPORT - The conference report (H Rept 1204) was filed Oct. 21. The provisions of the conference version were identical to those of the House bill with only a few exceptions. The major exception was that under the basic existing grant program, the bill retained the current allotment formula which placed more weight on a state's per capita income than did the House version. This benefitted low-income states. In other decisions, conferees adopted the Senate's variable matching formula for workshop construction grants instead of the House's 50 percent; and the House version of a new program of aid for those with catastrophic or particularly severe illness.

In adopting the House's provision allowing use of grants for initial staffing of all workshops and facilities constructed after enactment of the bill, the conferees said it "might be appropriate" to give preference to facilities constructed with assistance under the Act where funds were insufficient to staff all new facilities.

● ACTION -- The Senate Oct. 21 and the House Oct. 22 adopted the conference report by voice votes.

RAILROAD RETIREMENT

HR 3157 -- Reported, amended, by House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee (H Rept 379) May 26, 1965.
- Passed by the House by a 323-0 roll-call vote June 7. (See p. 966).
- Reported, amended, by Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee (S Rept 645) Aug. 25.
- Passed, amended, by the Senate by an 88-0 roll-call vote Sept. 1. (See p. 1070)

HR 10874 -- Reported by House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee (H Rept 976) Sept. 10.
- Passed by the House by voice vote Sept. 14.
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote Sept. 15.

PL 89-212 -- Signed into law Sept. 29.

Congress in 1965 passed an Administration-accepted bill (HR 10874) amending tax and other provisions of the Railroad Retirement Act. HR 10874 was enacted in place of a similar but Administration-opposed bill (HR 3157) passed earlier in the session by the House and Senate in different forms.

Major Provisions. As signed by the President, HR 10874, effective Jan. 1, 1966, raised the maximum creditable and taxable compensation (wage) base for the Railroad Retirement System from $450 to $550 a month. The effect was to place the Railroad Retirement System's wage base at the same $6,600-a-year level as had been set for the Social Security System by the medical care-Social Security bill (HR 6675 -- PL 89-97) approved earlier in 1965. (See p. 236) The higher wage base would result in higher revenues for the Railroad Retirement System.

HR 10874 also reduced the railroad retirement tax rate for employers and employees from 7-1/4 percent each to 6-1/4 percent each during the period Oct. 1 to Dec. 31, 1965, in order to soften the immediate tax burden resulting from the increase in the taxable wage base. However, the bill provided that the tax rate would later be restored to 7-1/4 percent by annual increases of one-quarter of 1 percent -- the first to become effective Jan. 1, 1966, the last Jan. 1, 1969.

One eventual effect of the increase in the maximum creditable and taxable compensation base for the Railroad Retirement System would be to increase monthly retirement benefits, which are calculated on the basis of monthly creditable earnings.

HR 10874 also extended to railroad employees, beginning in 1966, the right to count tips totalling over $20 a month as wages for the purpose of calculating employee tax payments and Railroad Retirement System benefits (thus yielding a higher retirement benefit). Only the employee would pay the taxes on such tips, not the employer. (Similar rights were granted for non-railroad employees in the 1965 Social Security amendments.)

Finally, HR 10874 permitted the spouse of a retired railroad employee to receive, simultaneously, both the spouse's retirement annuity, and also Social Security or railroad retirement benefits earned in his or her own right, without a reduction in the spouse's annuity. Under the previous law, the spouse of a retired railroad worker received a monthly annuity equal to 50 percent of the retired husband's or wife's annuity, up to a maximum of $69.90. However, this annuity was reduced by amounts equal to payments of Social Security and railroad retirement benefits earned by the spouse. A bill to change this provision was passed by the House in 1964, but died upon adjournment of the 88th Congress. (1964 Almanac p. 240)

Highlights of Action. Except for the provision revising railroad retirement tax rates, HR 10874 was identical to the Senate-passed version of HR 3157. As originally passed by the House, HR 3157 had included only the provisions relating to the wife's annuities. However, the Senate, following enactment of the Social Security amendments (PL 89-97), attached to the House-passed HR 3157 the provision increasing the taxable compensation base, as well as the provision allowing railroad employees to count tips as wages for retirement purposes. Senate action on the compensation-base provision was taken despite objections that it was unconstitutional for the Senate to attach a revenue provision to a nonrevenue bill. Because of House insistence that any revenue measure should originate in the House, HR 3157 was dropped and HR 10874, which included the railroad employee-backed temporary reduction in the retirement tax rate, was then introduced and passed by both chambers.

The net financial effect of 10874 was to increase the annual actuarial deficit of the railroad retirement fund from approximately $20 million to $29.5 million. (See explanation in Senate and House Committee action.)

Action on HR 3157

HOUSE COMMITTEE. The House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee May 26 reported HR 3157 (H Rept 379), to permit the spouse of a railroad employee to receive without reduction both his or her retirement annuity as a spouse, and also Social Security and railroad retirement benefits earned in his or her own right. (Widows and retirees already had this right.) The bill benefitted nearly 41,000 spouses (the vast majority women).

In letters to the Committee, the Railroad Retirement Board and the Budget Bureau opposed the bill, principally because it would add $14 million a year to the current annual $20-million actuarial deficit of the railroad retirement fund.

HOUSE FLOOR ACTION. The House June 7 passed HR 3157 by a 323-0 roll-call vote without floor amendments. (For voting, see chart p. 966)

SENATE COMMITTEE. The Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee Aug. 25 reported HR 3157 (S Rept 645), amended. The Committee version retained the House provision relating to spouse annuities, but included a new provision raising the maximum creditable and taxable compensation (wage) base for the railroad retirement system from $450 to $550 a month, the same level set for the Social Security System by PL 89-97, signed into law July 30.

The Committee said the principal reason for increasing the wage base was to make it coincide with or exceed the level set for the Social Security System, otherwise the railroad retirement fund would incur an additional annual actuarial deficit of approximately $28 million (not counting the $14-million additional deficit which would result from enactment of the spouse annuity provisions of HR 3157). This additional deficit would occur, the report said, due to financial interchange and other links between the Railroad Retirement System and Social Security System. (See explanation, below) Another reason for the revision, the report added, was that, under a provision of the Social Security amendments bill (PL 89-97), if the wage bases did not coincide, administration of the hospital insurance provisions of PL 89-97 for railroad beneficiaries would fall to the Health, Education and Welfare Department, rather than to the Railroad Retirement Board.

Note: The Railroad Retirement Act provided that, if a railroad worker died or reached retirement age with less than 10 years of service, his railroad retirement credits would be transferred to the Social Security System and treated for retirement and survivor benefit eligibility purposes as if they had been earned in employment covered by that system. To make this linkage financially sound, the Social Security System and Railroad Retirement System were required by law to undertake an annual financial interchange, designed to put the Social Security Trust fund in the same financial position it would occupy if railroad employee taxes and benefits were covered by the Social Security System instead of by a separate Railroad Retirement System. This required annual calculation of the amount of taxes that would be collected and benefits that would be paid by Social Security System if it covered railroad employment. According to the Committee, the maintenance of a proper and equitable financial interchange relationship between the Social Security and Railroad Retirement Systems required the taxable wage bases to be the same for both systems.

The Committee said its proposed increase in the railroad retirement wage base would keep the annual actuarial deficit on the railroad retirement fund at an acceptable $24 million, compared with $20 million at present. The Committee explained that, as a result of various factors, the annual costs of the Railroad Retirement System would rise substantially beginning in 1966. The costs would rise (on an annual level-payment basis) $14 million through increased payments under the spouse's provision of HR 3147; $1 million as a result of certain costs connected with the hospital-insurance-for-the-aged provisions of the Social Security bill (PL 89-97) applicable to railroad workers; and still another $28 million because of increases in certain railroad retirement benefits which were automatically required to be made to keep pace with Social Security benefit increases provided in PL 89-97. (Under the Railroad Retirement Act, beneficiaries were required to be paid benefits no less than 110 percent of what they would have received if covered by the Social Security System. As a result when Social Security benefits were raised by PL 89-97, the Railroad Retirement Board automatically was required to raise some of its own benefits.) Finally, increases in the wage base in HR 3147 would result in eventual benefit increases for an estimated 487,000 railroad workers, at an annual actuarial cost of $48 million.

The sum of all the above increases, added to the existing $20 million annual actuarial deficit, would have produced an annual actuarial deficit exceeding $100 million. However, the increased wage base provided by HR 3157 not only would block the potential $28 million loss under the financial interchange with the Social Security System, but would also increase net revenues $87 million a year, offsetting nearly all the increased costs and leaving an annual actuarial deficit of only $24 million.

The bill was opposed by the Railroad Retirement Board and the Budget Bureau, principally because it would still add to the deficit of the railroad retirement fund. Both, however, said that if any bill were passed, it should include the wage base increase and thus help reduce the actuarial deficit. The bill as reported was opposed by the Assn. of American Railroads and supported by the Railway Labor Executives Assn.

SENATE FLOOR ACTION. The Senate Sept. 1 passed HR 3157 by an 88-0 roll-call vote, after adopting the committee amendment increasing the wage base. (For voting, see chart p. 1070)

When the amendment was brought up for consideration, however, Russell B. Long (D La.) made a point of order, objecting that it was unconstitutional because it was a tax provision on a nonrevenue bill and did not originate in the House. To support his position, Long referred to Article 1, Section 2 of the Constitution, which states: "All bills for raising revenue shall originate in the House...; but the Senate may propose or concur with amendments as on other bills." Claiborne Pell (D R.I.) and Wayne Morse (D Ore.), on the other hand, argued that the phrase "all bills for raising revenue" applied only to bills "that levy taxes in the strict sense of the word, and...not bills for other purposes which may incidentally create revenue." They cited several Supreme Court decisions supporting their position. The Senate by a 41-44 roll-call vote refused to sustain Long's point of order. The committee amendment then was adopted by a voice vote.

Prior to final passage, the Senate adopted by voice vote an amendment by Vance Hartke (D Ind.) to allow railroad employees to count tips as wages for retirement benefit purposes. Hartke said his amendment would afford railroad employees the same treatment currently afforded tip employees under Social Security.

Action on HR 10874

HOUSE COMMITTEE. The House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee Sept. 10 reported HR 10874 (H Rept 976), which included the provisions of the Senate version of HR 3157, and added a new one temporarily reducing from 7-1/4 to 6-1/4 percent the railroad retirement tax.

The Committee held one day of hearings on HR 10874 Sept. 8. Railroad Retirement Board Chairman Howard H. Habermeyer said that the Board now supported HR 10874 because the good features in the new bill outweighed the bad. Similarly, the Assn. of American Railroads, which had opposed the Senate version of HR 3157 because it would have increased retirement taxes, supported HR 10874 due to inclusion of the revised tax-rate provision. The Budget Bureau also removed its opposition to the bill.

According to a Committee aide, HR 10874 would generate enough additional revenue to keep the annual retirement fund deficit at a "tolerable" $29.5 million.

HOUSE FLOOR ACTION. The House Sept. 14 passed HR 10874 by voice vote. The House the same day also adopted by voice vote a resolution (H Res 578) returning HR 3157 to the Senate on the ground it "contravenes" the House's constitutional privilege to initiate tax measures.

During brief debate, Committee Chairman Oren Harris (D Ark.) said, "It is well known that...any provision for a tax should initiate in the House of Representatives." Upon introducing HR 10874 Sept. 3, Harris also had indicated that many railroad workers objected to the Senate version of HR 3157 because it increased the taxable compensation base without providing relief from the initial additional tax burden imposed.

SENATE FLOOR ACTION. The Senate Sept. 15 passed HR 10874 by voice vote, clearing the bill for the President's signature. The bill went directly to the floor; the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee took no action on the new measure.

During debate, Morse and Pell said Senate acceptance of HR 10874 did not imply that the Senate had acted unconstitutionally in attaching to HR 3157 a provision "incidentally" raising revenue.

HEALTH RESEARCH FACILITIES

HR 2984 -- Reported, amended, by House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee (H Rept 247) April 15, 1965.
- Passed by the House on a 333-4 roll-call vote May 10. (See p. 960)
- Reported, amended, by Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee (S Rept 367) June 24.
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote June 28.
- Conference report (H Rept 677) agreed to by voice votes of the Senate July 26 and the House July 27.

PL 89-115 -- Signed into law Aug. 9.

The Health Research Facilities Amendments of 1965, (HR 2984--PL 89-115) extended and expanded the existing program of matching grants for construction of health research facilities at medical schools, universities, hospitals and other institutions. The existing program, with a $50 million annual authorization, was scheduled to expire at the end of fiscal 1966. HR 2984 authorized appropriations for construction totaling $280 million in fiscal 1967-69.

In addition, the bill provided a three-year (fiscal 1966-68) authorization for the Public Health Service to enter into research contracts. Since 1957, the PHS had received temporary research contract authority from language inserted in annual appropriations bills: HR 2984 wrote this authority into the basic PHS organic Act. No limit was set on funds, which were expected to increase to $94 million in fiscal 1966.

Finally, HR 2984 authorized appointment of three additional Assistant Secretaries of Health, Education and Welfare. Another was authorized later in the year in the Water Quality Act of 1965 (PL 89-234), bringing the total to seven. Funds to permit the four new appointments were appropriated in the General Fiscal 1966 Supplemental Appropriations bill (PL 89-309). (See stories p. 182, 743)

Expansion of the health research facilities construction program was requested by President Johnson in his Jan. 7 Health Message. He also asked special authority to construct and operate specialized national or regional health research facilities, but this was denied by the House and in the conference version of HR 2984.

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law, HR 2984:

Amended the Public Health Service Act to extend the existing program for construction of health research facilities for three years, from fiscal 1967 through fiscal 1969, and authorize appropriations totaling $280 million for grants for the program.

Authorized the Public Health Service to enter into contracts for research during fiscal 1966-68.

Authorized the President to appoint three additional Assistant Secretaries of Health, Education and Welfare (for a total of six). Abolished the existing office of Special Assistant to the Secretary of HEW for Health and Medical Affairs.

BACKGROUND. The Health Research Facilities Act (PL 84-835) became law in 1956, under a $30 million annual authorization. Congress in 1961 extended the Act until June 30, 1966, and increased the authorization to $50 million a year (PL 87-395). (1961 Almanac p. 202)

In his Jan. 7, 1965, Health Message President Johnson requested extension of the Act for five years and authority to provide for specialized research facilities of a national or regional character. (For text of message, see p. 1383) The Administration's draft bill (S 512-HR 2984) extended the Act for five years and authorized the Surgeon General to provide for construction and operation of specialized regional or national research facilities; permanently authorized the PHS to enter into contracts for research; and provided for three new Assistant Secretaries of HEW.

House

COMMITTEE -- Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

HELD HEARINGS -- March 2-5 on HR 2984 and other Administration health bills. Highlights of testimony on HR 2984:

March 2 -- Edward W. Dempsey, Special Assistant to the HEW Secretary, said HR 2984 would assure that construction of health research facilities kept up with expanded research programs. He said additional authority was needed for construction of facilities "beyond the scope, capability or function of individual institutions," such as facilities for studies of aging, toxicology and pharmacology, and facilities which "could serve as a research resource for a number of institutions within a region." He said the bill would provide broad research contract authority essential in permitting HEW to "make broad use of the competency of industry in expanding research and development in emerging new areas important to our health programs."

March 3 -- Dr. James Z. Appel, president-elect of the American Medical Assn., supported the Health Research Facilities Act and its increased authorization. However, he questioned the advisability of a new program of specialized regional or national facilities for health research. He said "the country will best be served through the utilization of the experience and knowledge of institutions which are currently engaged in medical research," and there was "no reason for beginning a new program which would require many months or years and large sums of money, and which would compete for scarce skilled research manpower."

Bill Reported. The Committee April 15 reported HR 2984 (H Rept 247) with amendments which (1) limited extension of the construction program to three years and $280 million; (2) limited the PHS contract authority to three years and set a $43 million annual limit on the amount of the contracts; and (3) deleted authority for construction and operation of regional or national research facilities.

The Committee said it had placed the limits on PHS contract authority because of "some criticism of the research contract mechanism" used by PHS. It cited a conclusion of the Wooldridge Committee, in its report made public March 19, that "a substantial fraction of the contract work on the program was of lower scientific quality and showed evidence of inadequate central supervision." (For details on Wooldridge Committee report, see story p. 161)

FLOOR ACTION. The House May 10 passed HR 2984 by a 333-4 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart p. 960)

During brief debate on the bill, Oren Harris (D Ark.), chairman of the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, noted that the $43 million ceiling on PHS research contract authority was based on inaccurate information. He said one part of PHS, the National Institutes of Health, entered into contracts totaling $46.3 million in fiscal 1964 and expected to increase the total to $60 million in 1965. For the entire Public Health Service, contracts in 1964 totaled $57.4 million and were expected to exceed $90 million in fiscal 1966. Harris said the bill's limit would be changed when more information became available.

There was little opposition to the bill. Voting against it were H.R. Gross (R Iowa), James B. Utt (R Calif.), Joe D. Waggonner Jr. (D La.) and Prentiss Walker (R Miss.).

AMENDMENT REJECTED

May 10 -- H.R. Gross (R Iowa) -- Delete the provision authorizing three additional Assistant Secretaries of Health, Education and Welfare. Voice vote.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Labor and Public Welfare.

HELD HEARINGS -- Jan. 27 on S 512. Representatives of the American Assn. of Medical Colleges, the Assn. of Schools of Public Health, the American Dental Assn. and the American Assn. of Dental Schools supported the bill.

ACTION -- June 24 reported HR 2984 (S Rept 367), amended to include the Administration bill's provisions for regional and national research facilities and unlimited contract authority for PHS.

The Committee said the regional and national facilities authorized in the bill would meet "urgent" research needs "which are beyond the scope or capability of individual non-federal institutions." It suggested that among the "high priority" needs to be filled by the facilities would be research on aging, on toxicology and pharmacology and on dental diseases. The Committee said it had removed the House's limitations on PHS contract authority because they "would have the very serious effect of preventing the most productive pursuit of some of the exciting prospects for the application of scientific knowledge to the reduction of human death and suffering," and would "practically eliminate further involvement of industrial firms" in health-related programs. It said HEW had advised the Committee that $79 million in fiscal 1965 and $94 million in fiscal 1966 would be obligated by the PHS through negotiated contracts.

In individual views, Ralph W. Yarborough (D Texas) said the bill "would be greatly improved by the inclusion of a requirement that the results of research which is financed by public funds authorized under this Act be made freely available to the general public."

FLOOR ACTION. The Senate June 28 passed HR 2984, with the Committee amendments, by voice vote and sent it to conference with the House.

Conference

The conference report (H Rept 677), filed July 23, dropped the Senate provision authorizing the Surgeon General to provide for construction and operation of specialized regional or national research facilities. On the provisions for PHS research contract authority, conferees retained the House's three-year limitation on the authority and the Senate's unlimited fund authorization.

The report was adopted by voice votes of the Senate July 26 and the House July 27.

HEALTH WARNING REQUIRED ON CIGARETTE PACKS

S 559 -- Reported, amended, by Senate Commerce Committee (S Rept 195) May 19, 1965.

HR 3014 -- Reported, amended, by House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee (H Rept 449) June 8.

S 559 -- Passed by the Senate on a 72-5 roll-call vote June 16. (See p. 1050)

- Passed by the House, amended, by voice vote June 22.
- Conference report (H Rept 586) agreed to by voice vote of the Senate July 6 and by a 286-103 roll-call vote of the House July 13. (See p. 978)

PL 89-92 -- Signed into law July 27.

S 559, the Federal Cigarette Labeling and Advertising Act, required that as of Jan. 1, 1966, all cigarette packages and cartons sold in the United States and its possessions must bear the following statement: "Caution: Cigarette Smoking May Be Hazardous to Your Health." The bill applied to imported as well as domestically produced cigarettes.

The bill was Congress's response to the conclusion of the Jan. 11, 1964, Surgeon General's report on smoking and health that cigarette smoking was "a health hazard of sufficient importance in the United States to warrant appropriate remedial action."

Although it required a health-hazard warning on cigarette labels, S 559 specifically prohibited until July 1, 1969, any requirement by any government agency, whether federal, state or local, that cigarette advertising include a similar statement. It also prohibited any government agency from imposing any health labeling requirement other than that contained in S 559.

While the new health-hazard warning on cigarette packages was the first ever required by Congress, spokesmen for some major health and consumer organizations actually considered S 559 a victory for the cigarette industry because the bill superseded far stricter health warning regulations promulgated in 1964 by the Federal Trade Commission. The FTC regulations, which were nullified by S 559, would have required that as of July 1, 1965, both cigarette packages and cigarette advertising on radio, television, newspapers and other media carry a health-hazard warning.

The industry had threatened court suits challenging the FTC's authority to issue such regulations, but in the meantime it took its case to Congress. In S 559, the industry was granted exactly what it sought from Congress: a uniform federal labeling requirement which precluded a multiplicity of similar requirements by federal, state or local bodies and was not expected to have a serious effect on sales, and provided protection for four years at least from any advertising requirements, which clearly would have been more harmful to the industry economically.

The industry's success was due in part to the failure of the President to make any personal endorsement of the proposed FTC regulations or any similar strong regulatory proposals, and to the failure of the pertinent Executive agencies to agree on a suitable, uniform formula for action.

But it was also the result of an effective lobbying campaign which deemphasized the possible connection between smoking and illness and, instead, attempted to win the support of individual Congressmen by pointing up the alleged economic and ideological dangers of the proposed FTC advertising regulations. Industry spokesmen stressed the lack of scientific evidence for the conclusion that smoking was a major cause of disease; raised the possibility that the FTC regulations could set a precedent for other regulatory actions by the Government in other fields; and emphasized the potential economic impact of the regulations not only on the entire tobacco industry but on the advertising industry and others heavily dependent on advertising revenues, and on governments at all levels which obtained revenues from tobacco taxes.

The news and broadcasting industries, which received nearly $260 million in advertising revenues from tobacco companies in 1964, supported the tobacco industry's position in opposition to the FTC advertising regulations. Their argument was that free speech would be violated. But some observers charged their real fear was loss of advertising revenues. According to several sources, pressure from the broadcasting and news industries had a substantial influence on the votes of some Congressmen dependent on the news media in their election campaigns.

Also bolstering the industry's cause was its voluntary imposition of a ban on certain types of cigarette advertising that might encourage young people to smoke or contain health claims not supported by valid scientific data. The code took effect Jan. 1, 1965.

In passing S 559, the House and Senate were essentially in agreement on the provisions of the bill. The major difference between the two versions was that the House permanently prohibited any requirement for a health-hazard warning in cigarette advertising, while the Senate banned it for only three years. The final version compromised on a four-year ban.

President Johnson signed the bill into law July 27. He made no statement. White House Press Secretary Bill D. Moyers read an announcement saying the bill made "a real contribution to the efforts to bring to the attention of all smokers and potential smokers the scientific and medical data indicating the health hazards in cigarette smoking." Moyers said that after considering both the bill and the reports of his advisers, the President had decided that "the benefits of the bill far outweighed any deficiencies or disadvantages." Moyers did not indicate whether the President looked with favor or disfavor on the nullification of the FTC regulations. Several Members of Congress had asked him to veto the bill as too weak.

The FTC July 28 announced it had cancelled its regulations requiring a health-hazard warning in cigarette labeling and advertising. It said, however, that during the four-year moratorium on advertising regulations, it would continue to monitor cigarette advertising and promotion and take any action consistent with the provisions of S 559 to prohibit any advertising which it deemed unfair or deceptive.

The only other action taken by Congress in this field in 1965 was appropriation of funds to establish a National Clearinghouse on Smoking and Health in the Public Health Service. Congress had denied the funds in 1964. In 1965, in the bill providing funds for the PHS (HR 7765), it voted the full $2 million requested. (See story, p. 161)

Surgeon General Luther L. Terry formally established the Clearinghouse Sept. 29. He said it would continue research currently underway on the behavioral aspects of smoking, and would undertake new functions including collection and distribution of all available materials on the subject, consultation with other federal agencies and private professional organizations, and additional behavioral studies designed to determine methods of helping people resist pressures to smoke.
